Story.

The Old Clock's Secret.

"You shall marry Godfrey Marsh, Marcia," Mrs. Stanhope said, setting her teeth together, in that grim fash-ion of hers, which told that her mind was fully made up. "He is rich. He can give you a home second to none in all the country round. He can give you position and influence."

"I don't want a home, if I have got to marry for that, and nothing else," answered Marcia, bitterly. O. O. F.-The regular moetings of don't care for all the position and influence Godfrey Marsh can give me. if I have got to accept him with them. I hate him. If I married him I would not live with him a year."

"You are a foolish girl. There isn't another girl in Hilbury that wouldn't jump at the chance you have. And I don't believe you will let it slip out of your hands when you think it over as a sensible girl should." "I shall never change my mind," answered Marcia. "Never." "You are thinking of Dick Gresham, of course. He is a much more desirable fellow than Godfrey Marsh, I suppose. I infer that you would not hesitate to accept the position and influence he can give you, as Mrs. Gresham," sneered her mother "I have never said anything of the kind. He has never asked me to say anything of the kind, and I certainly shall wait till I am asked. Dick Gresham is an honest, respectable man, and the peer of Godfrey Marsh in every way. Godfrey Marsh's money I count out of the question entirely," answered Marcia, with a flush.

"I understand how the case stands. have told you before, and I repeat it again, that you may understand me fully-never, with my consent, shall you marry Dick Gresham. I don't believe he cares half as much for you as you do for him. If he does, he doesn't show it as most men are apt to do, and you will save a good deal of gossip if you keep your fancy for him a little more to yourself. People are not blind," said Mrs. Stanhope,

And then Mrs. Stanhope went out, and Marcia sat and thought. Those last words of her mother's might hold a good deal of truth in them. She had sometimes wondered if Dick Gresham did care for her as she acknowledged to herself that she cared for him? He was not like most men. It was not in his nature to be demonstrative. Perhaps he was waiting to be sure of his own heart and of her regard for him. . She had been with him a good deal. She had wondered more than once if he loved her. If he did, he had never told her so. She believed that he did, however. There was a rattle of carriage wheels at the gate. She looked out with a frown gathering on her face. She knew who was there, well enough. "Is Marcia at home?" she heard Godfrey Marsh ask her mother. "If she is, I should like to take her out for a drive this afternoon."

"Yes, she'll be delighted to go. I'll call her," she heard her mother say. "I won't go," she thought, hurried-Iy, with a little angry gesture. Then she thought better of that decision. It would offend her mother if she refused, and their life was not a very harmonious one of late. And perhaps Gresham might see them, and conclude to speak out.

So she got ready and went. While she was gone, Dick Gresham came to see her. Mrs. Stanhope met | force of habit than anything else. him coldly but politely. He inquired for Marcia.

but, if I can't do that I'll have to do the next best thing." He wrote down what he came to say to Marcia, and scaled it in an en-

"I have a right to know, according to his own admission," Mrs. Stanhope said, and tore away the envelope. She read the letter through care-

"I think fate is playing into my hands. It will be quite a long time before your letter is answered, if I am not mistaken, Dick Gresham," she said grimly.

She went to the old clock in the corner, opened it, and dropped the letter down into its mysterious depths. "There! that is disposed of safely, I think," she said, shutting the door

The next morning she spoke up suddenly to Marcia, as they were at work in the kitchen together.

"Dick Gresham was here yesterday to see you. He said he was going away last night, and didn't know how far he was going, nor how long he should be gone. He has joined the engineering party going from Hilbury to the West. He told me to tell you good-bye for him."

"That was all?" Marcia said it

It was a pleasant afternoon in Octo ber when Mrs. Stanhope died. The sky was full of dreamy vagueness-a haze through which the sunshine filtered goldenly, and hid the mountains far off, and made the hills near by seem like the hills of some ghostly land. The leaves of the old chestnut by the door were dropping softly and with a slow rustle that kept time to the ticking of the old clock in the cor-

Mrs. Stanliope had been failing slowly for years. Her life had faded as the day fades; you scarcely can tell that the light is going out, but the first you know it is gone. It is so with her. The light was almost gone out, now. It only flickered for a moment; then there would be dark-

"There is something I want to tell you. Dick Gresham left a letter for you when he went away. I read it, and hid it in the old clock. It is there yet. When I am gone, find it and read it. But not till then, Marcia." She looked up pleadingly into

never woke again. The funeral was over. And then came that awful sense of desolation which follows after a burial. Whoever has passed through this experience of life can never forget the dreary lonesomeness, the solemn silence that is about the house. The world seems to have stopped for a little time.

Tick, tick! the old clock kept repeating that night, and Marcia went to it to solve the mystery it held. She

She read it through with a curious plending of pleasure to know that Dick had loved her, and bitter regret for what she lost. If she had only. known then? Now her life must go on as it had gone so long, but she should have it to think of that he had loved her!

She laid her head down against the old clock and cried softly. His love would have been so sweet. It would have made life so pleasant. But it was lost. It had been lost for fifteen vears.

She got up hastily, and went to admit her visitor, hardly conscious of what she was doing, but acting more from A man stood on the threshold.

woman, whose years were thirty-five, and out of whose heart you would have supposed all girlish romance had fled, grew suddenly hot with sweet shawe to think of what her words meant.

"God sent me, I guess," he said, with a great gladness in his face, and he caught her to his heart, and kissed "I was sure you loved me, Marcia, but the letter I looked for never came, and I thought your mother had got you to thinking as she did. So I gave up hoping for that which I took it for granted I had lost, and I stayed away because there was nothing to draw me back. A month ago I got it into my head that I wanted to see Hilbury again, and I came back.— They told me that you were Marcia Stanhope yet, and I think that set me to know. Marcia may tell you," he to hoping a little. You see, it's hard said, laying it down on the table by to give up hoping, in the first place, and it don't take much to set a man to hoping again, after he thinks he's given it up, for he can't forget."

And so, after fifteen years, the old clock gave its secret up, and two hearts came together to never be parted more.

Music Hath Charms.

The following was related to me by one who was an eye witness—an old man now, but with this scene as vividly fixed in his memory as though it. occurred only yesterday. In the year 1838, a man named

Tappan moved with his family, from New York to the remote Western country, said family consisting, besides himself, of a wife and six daughters. He had failed in business; was broken in spirit, his children he thought needed fresh air; so he accepted as a gift from his brother, a large tract of landupon the edge of the wilderness, and settled thereon. Very soon enterprising people began to settle beyond him, and there came to be much travel past his door; and as an act of humanity, he frequently entertained wayfarers. As these called upon his hospitality became more and more frequent, he enlarged his house to meet the requirements of a comfortable inn, and put up the usual inn-keeper's

Not long after this a party of young men, eight or ton in number, well mounted, were returning by a roundabout way from an electioneering expedition. They had stopped at every tavern on their route and toward the middle of the afternoon they reined up before Tappan's door, pretty well under the various kinds of fiery fluid, and having dismounted and secured their horses, they entered and noisily demanded whisky.

Now it so happened that Mr. Tappan and his wife were both away, and only his daughters were in charge; and it also happened the host, being a rigid teetotaler, had never kept any spirituous liquors in the house. Of this fact they were informed by the oldest daughter, a handsome, intelligent girl of eighteen. But the riot ously-inclined invaders had no care just then for female beauty, nor were they moved by the fear and distrust of the frightened girls; but they still demanded whisky, and when they had become assured that they could not have it, they resolved they would cut down the sign before the door, and the leader so informed the young lady.

"You must do as you please, gentlemen," she said, shrinking, while her little sisters gathered around her for protection; "I cannot prevent "A tavern-sign and no whisky! Such a sign is a base fraud." "Have-down with it!" "Where is your axe?"

"You will find it somewhere by the wood-pile, sir." Three or four of the party made a rush for the wood-pile, cursing as they went, while the leader of the gang, a young man who would have been decidedly handsome if he had been himself, with others of his companions. took a notion to overhaul the house, insisting that there must be "a drop of something" somewhere. And we may here say that the whole party considered themselves gentlemen. They were well dressed, and respectably connected. In a small, well-furnished apartment, apart from the guests', room, was found a pianoforte.

"Hullo!" cried the leader, "who plays on this? Can you?"
"It is mine, sir," answered the girl thus addressed. ."Can you play?"

"Will you sing and play for me?" "With pleasure, sir." She opened the piano, and sat down and played and sang "The Maiden's Prayer." Her voice was clear and musical, and sweetly rich, and the accompaniment was played with rare skill and grace. The little sisters gathered in a semi-circle close around the instrument and the heretofore riotous-but riotous no more-drew nearer and nearer upon the outside. Some of them had never heard a piano before, but not one of them had heard sweeter music. After a pause, at the conclusion of the piece, the leader

"I wanted to see her very much. I am going away this evening and I do not know how long I shall be gone, nor how far I shall go. I wanted to say something to her before I went."

from before the throne of a monarch. A year after this event Mr. Tappan chanced to be in Jacksonville on business, where he was introduced to Phillip St. Clair, a rising young lawyer of the place.

"Is this Mr. Tappan who, one year ago, kept a public-house on the Cloud Hill road?" asked St. Clair. "The same, sir."

"And I, sir," pursued the lawyer, "was the leader of that party of riotous men who so shamefully frightened your daughters. I suppose they told you of the circumstanco?" "Well Mr. Tappan, from that day I have not touched, as a beverage, any intoxicating drink. I would like to see your eldest daughter, and tell her of the blessing her sweet music bestowed upon me.' Mr. Tappan knew St. Clair well by reputation, and cheerfully invited him to call whenever he could make it St. Clair once more visited the wayside inn, the result was, that in less than another year the sweet songstress had become his wife. "My blessed angel," he said, clasping her to his bosom when she was his own to cherish and protect, "never, never can I sufficiently thank heaven for the providence that led me within your saving influence in that dark hour of my life."

He was condemned to be hanged in the fish market at Vienna. and in due order received the holy sacrament. A. Jesuit stood by, and, with a view of consolation, put a crucifix in his hands. The condemned asked if there was any earthly hope. The Jesuit answered there was none. Then the condemned threw the crucifix on the stone floor of the fish-market and smashed it, and told the people present that he had only adopted the Christian faith for reasons of political convenience. The horrified Jesuit reminded him that he had just partaken of the holy eucharist. "Into my mouth," he replied; "but thence immediately into my handkerchief, and thence';—elsewhere. "Search," he added, "and you shall find." Subsequently investigation proved his assertion correct. The Jews suffered; their shops were pillaged, and themselves stoned and wounded, their money taken from them, and their rings, together with their fingers, if they could not be taken without. The hapless Ferdinand Francis had pieces pinched out of him with tongs at a white heat, was drawn through the town tied to a horse's tail, and had physicians touching the patient in any his tongue amputated. He was roasted before a slow fire, and a couple of fierce dogs, one on each side, tore him from time to time. "Yet," says the good though naturally indignant Wagenseil, "not one cry of pain was uttered by this -'fur, trifur, trifurcifer." He only muttered his father's prayers, the precautions should be maintained and, when his right hand was hewn until the peeling off of the cuticle, or off, said it deserved such pain for having subscribed the Christian faith. As long as life lasted he beat his bosom with that maimed hand, and cried as well as his mutilated tongue would let him, "May my death be the expiation of my conversion." His ashes were cast into the Danube, 20th of August, tioned where a piece of flannel worn around the neck of a scarlet fever patient, was picked up and used two years after and developed a fresh case of the disease. In a certain instance of an outbreak of scarlet fever over a wide neighborhood, it was ascertained that in every instance this took place in families that had been supplied with milk by the same milkman. On inquiry, it was found that persons connected with the farm from which milk was supplied had been infected with scarlet fever. The precautions to be taken, according to Mr. Lennox, after the disease has made its appearance, are, in the first place, to isolate the patient, at whatever trouble or expense, preventing the approach of any one excepting then urse and the physician. With this, disinfectants must be used with the utmost freedom, whether they be carbolic acid, permangantes of soda and potash, chloride of zinc, chloride of aluminum, chlorinated lime or soda, sulphate of iron, etc. These should be employed in and around the patient. All his discharges and excretions should be immediately disinfected, and all bed clothing and linen worn by the patient treated with the same care. Nurses in attendance, and way, should also wash their hands in disinfecting solution defore leaving the room. Woolen clothing that cannot be washed should be exposed to a heat of at least 212°, this temperature having the property of destroying the poisonous germs. Even after the patient has apparently recovered,

EDITOR OF BERRIEN COUNTY RECond:-As the Record continues to give the Greenback Club of this place the benefit of its flattering notices, I thought I would give you a little information on that subject, of which you seem to stand in sore need. In answer to your inquiry for the "where abouts of that four hundred," I would refer you to your subscription list, where you will find most of the names. That is, where they are now. In relation to the "speaker" at the Greenback Club last week, stating, that there were twenty members of the Club who could make better specches on the finances than could Senator by Mr. Townsend, (Rep., Pa...) making Sherman, I would say, that of course silver com exchangeable for United States the editor of the RECORD is not included in that statement, as he is not a member of the Club. But the Club don't meet every day, and of course it is out of the question to comply with your request. In regard to Senator Sherman's speech, let me say, that I have read it and know something about it. I consider it the best speech I have heard or read on the bondholder's side of the question. But where the best is so weak, what must the poorer be? I will give you two samples of Sherman's speech, and see if one such about once a week would not answer your present needs. First, he says, the plentier money is, the higher the rate of interest. Pennsylvania Republicans, who last year went over to soft-money, but won the election after all, because the

up to 2:30 passed off very quietly and orderly. About this time some trouble occurred between two negroes, in front of No. 79 Second Street, and they went into a vacant lot to settle the dispute. After one or two had been thoroughly pounded a settlement was reached and they came out to the street. Here it seems one of the nigs took exception to something said by a white man and "basted" him. The white man was fast obtaining the best of the darkey, when two or three of his color saw fit to take a hand in and did so, one of them striking a white man on the head with a club and bringing him down. This was the signal for the whites to waltz in, and snatching stakes from drays and trucks, stove and four-foot wood, they sailed in and proceeded to lay about them, right and left. Men of both color went down with the rapidity of thought. Blood flowed like water, and the air was filled with revolvers and knives. Mitcheon (colored) was finally cast upon a wood pile a bloody mass of mangled flesh. Up and down Second street, between Main and Sycamore, the mob, numbering hundreds, cursing, yelling, and brandishing clubs &c., surged, ever growing fiercer and wilder. The police were powerless, and loudly called for assistance. Finally the concentrated wrath of the mob turned upon the only remaining darkey-theothers having been pounded down or put to flight. This darkey, Curtis, flew for his life, hotly pursued by the howling hundreds, dashed through the alley to Front Street, down to Sycamore past the first ward polls. Here a team was hitched; this the darkey undertook to cut loose, but the crowd were pressing him too closely, with cries of "catch him." "kill him," etc. Up Sycamore street he dashed, hatless and coatless, and upon arriving at the residence of Dr. A. J. Mead, flow up the steps and into the house, with the mob at his heels. Now Mrs. Mead jammed the door to and barred out the maddened and blood-thirsty throng. Sheriff Weimer sprang up the steps, and presenting his revolver, swore he would kill the first person attempting to interfere with the officers, or by laving hands upon the negro. Chief Police Chambers and two patrolmen had gained entrance to the house, and soon appeared with the darkey. The crowd again rushed forward en masse. Weimer placed his revolver under the nose of one of the main movers and informed him that another move would cause his death. This threat coupled with the brave and undaunted action of the sheriff, kept the mob at a respectful distance, while the officers surrounding the poor darkey, started calabooseward, escorted by hundreds, still clamoring for the fellow's death. At last the cooler was reached, the door hastily unlocked, the man quickly jerked inside, thrust into a cell, and for a time safe within its stone walls from the shameless would-be murderers. Mayor Graves addressed the crowd, calling on all good citizens to stand firm to put down this lawless mob. Some twenty-five or thirty special policemen were badged and a large number of specials from the military and business men were appointed. The darkey was quietly removed from his cell and secreted. A branch riot was organized at the depot, and Frank Langston (white), one of the ring in the down town affair, was pounded to a jelly by a lot of negroes. Here also they were dispersed at the mouth of the revolver. As a result road is to be completed by the 1st of of these disgraceful fracases, we find December, 1877. The company will one negro fatally injured, four or five others terribly cut and mangled, about ten or fifteen whites with broken scalps and out features, one white named Bohn, dying at the time of writing, windows smashed and several in the cooler. It is utterly impossible to convey to you by letter even the least idea of the scenes as they occurred, nor of the fearful excitement they created. This article does not occupy one-half of the space the subject is capable of filling. Suffice it to say that for utter depravity, lawlessness and disgracefulness such another time was never known or witnessed in the State. All of the better class of citizens unite in pronouncing it a terrible blight upon our city, and from the curse of which it will take many a day to recover. their advertising agency in New York City. Five years ago they absorbed the business conducted by Mr. John Hooper, who was the first to go into this kind of enterprise. Now they have the satisfaction of controlling the mest extensive and complete advertising connection which has ever been secured, and one which would be hardly possible in any other country but this. They have succeeded in working down a complex business into so theroughly a systematic method that no change into newspaper system of America can escape notice, while the widest information upon all topics interesting to advertisers is placed readily at the disposal of the public.

Tuesday. [Berrien Springs Journal.]

It is proposed by some of the citizens of Berrien Springs to give five hundred dollars toward building the railroad now under contemplation, if twenty mon can be found in the village who will do the same. This is a fair proposition coming from men who are not the most wealthy in the place by any means, and sounds more like business than anything we have heard in this direction. If twenty men can be found who will give their note for five hundred dollars, payable when the iron is on the road, three men who will give twenty-five hundred, two men who will give two thousand, and twenty five men who give one hundred, in this village, we will have just twenty-four thousand dollars to start on, and will insure the building of this road just as certainly as it is certain that the county seat will be removed if we do .not get a railroad through this point, and as it is certain that when the county seat is removed, and all hope of get-

has become a very important instituceedings.

It is customary for men to run for office. It is also customary, when a man is a candidate before a caucus, for him to supply the tickets to those whom he expects to vote for him.

In this case there can be no inform al ballot, nor any second choice-both of which are essential to a free ex-

one ticket and another office on the other. And these men were not so few. Now

if they had had one office at a time, brought distinctly before the mind, with the chance of an informal ballet so as to give them a second and perhaps a third chance, instead of judg-ing of the whole batch at once with hardly a first choice, who cannot see

Now in the manner of voting the whole ticket at once, how is he to do this? He might, perhaps, write out as many as he would want to use with his own name on them, but no one would vote one of these tickets, and vote for any body else: But if he undertakes to write out the whole ticket, whose name shall he put on? If he consults with a few other sup posede andidates and a ticket is then gotten up, then you have a young caucus hatched out already, and the party, so acting, would much prefer to have them printed than to write them out by hand, so the whole ticket, in a printed form, is brought to light. Opposing rivals will pursue the same course. Now when the people come together in caucus, their choice of candidates is practically confined to those two or three tickets, gotten up by perhaps less than a dozen persons. True a person may scratch off and put on whom he pleases, but this will not be apt to be the case to any expression of preference. But there is ting the road forever gone, property in a far greater objection to the new and around Berrien Springs will descheme yet. The mind of the person preciate at least forty per cent. voting is not brought to a judgment on each person voted for separately but more on the ticket as a whole This, of course, does not apply to all, but it does to many. At our last caucus some were heard to say "There are some on the ticket I don't care to vote for but I guess I won't scratch any." There were a class of these. One man going to deposit his ballot was asked if he had the right ticket? "Yes, I guess so," said he, "I've got the Alexander ticket?" This might be all right for "Alexander" but how was it for the rest? Upon being shown the difference he soon changed his ticket. Another honest voter was Dragging Out Existence The nervous, weakly invalid does not enjoy life, but merely "drags out existence," as the phrase is. Unfitted for the active pursuits of life, and incapable of partaking of its pleasures, to which health alone can give zest; disinclined to social intercourse, and a prey to melancholy, the valetudinarian is indeed an object of pity. Yet there is nothing in all this that cannot be remedied by that genial alterative tonic and nervine. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which supplies deficient stamina, braces the nervous system, and overcomes these bodily irregularities to which nervous weakness is most frequently attributable. Diseases of the kidney and bladder, imperfect digestion and uterine troubles are fertile sources of debility. It seems that the memory of this woman, like that of her renowned husband, is likely to be kept alive to the end of time. She is said to have possessed a very irritable temper, and her name has become a synonym of "vixen," or "scold." It is more than possible, however, that the judgment passed upon her by mankind has been too severe. A more charitable disposition would andoubtedly have discovered in her, many good qualities, and have attributed her failings more to physical infirmities than to moral obliquity. The party most intimately acquainted with her, and therefore best able to form a correct opinion, gives her credit for many damestic virtues. It is now well known that many of the diseases to which women are subject, have a direct tendency to render them irritable, peevish, cross, morose, unreasonable, so that they chafe and fret over all those little ills and annoyances that a person in health would bear with composure. It is fair to infer that most of the tantrums of Xantippe were due to these causes alone: and could Socrates, as he returned from the Senate, the Gymnasium, or the Atheneum, have stopped at Pestle & Mortar's Drug Store and carried home a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, now and then, no doubt he might have evaded many a 'curtain lecture," allayed many a "domestic broil," made it much pleasanter for the children, and more enjoyable for himself, and resqued his wife's name from the unenviable, world-wide, and eternal notoriety it has attained. Thousands of women bless the day on which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was first made known to them. A single bottle often gives delicate and suffering women more relief than months of treatment from their family physician. Freedom from Disease. A CARD FROM Dr. FRAZIER. A CARD RIGHT Dr. FRAZIER.

Having suffered more or less for years with Weakness of the Lungs, and a scrotulous disease which appeared on my face in pimples and blotches, and after dectoring with the best physicians, and trying many kinds of advertised remedies (including Sarsparlia,) without finding any permanent cure. I experimented by compounding voots, using the medicine thus obtained. I fortunately discovered a most wonderful Blood Scarcher or Medical Bitters, which not only gave me great relief, but after a few week's time effected a radical cure. I then prepared a quantity of the Root Bitters, and was in the habit of giving them away to the stee. I found the medicine possessed the most wonderful healing virtues, effecting cures of all diseases originating from bad blood or weakness of the system, as it by magic. Multiplied cures increased the demand, and the name of frazier's Root Bitters has now become a household word all over the land.

creased the demand, and the name of Frazier's Root Bitters has now become a househeld word all over the land.

The largest and shrewdest dealers in medicines in all the principal cities applied for the agency, and I was induced to establish a labratory for preparing my Root Bitters in Clevelland, from which I am, now sending out lin suswer to orders from all parts of the Union, the packages which make countless numbers sharers in this great blessing that came to my knowledge through the visitation of disease.

Root Bitters are strictly a Medical Preparation, such as was used in the good old days of our ferefathers, when people-were cured by some simple roof or plark, and when calomel and other peisons of the minoral kingdom were unknown. For Scrofula, Consumption, Eruptions, Rheumatism, Pits, Heart Disease, Dizziness, Liver Complaint, Kidney and Urluary Diseases, Ever and Agne, Dyspepsia, Lost Vita'iry, and Broken Dawn Constitutions, these Boot Bitters are universally admitted to be the most wonderful discovery in the world. Their scarching, healing properties penetrate every portion of the human frame. For weakly, nervous young men, suffering from loss of memory, etc., caused from abuses in carly life, and to delicate females, these Root Bitters are especially recommended. Root Bitters are surjected the world should receive the blood, and strengthening the system; hence they must reach all diseases by partification and nourishment. No medicine ever had such a success. It is my desire that the suffering all over the world should receive the benefit of my remedy, and particularly such persons as have given up all hope of ever being cared.

Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice, not one of experiment, but founded on the laws of Nature, with lars of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, makesick to make well; no harsh treatment, no trilling, no flattering. We know the cause and the consedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement withouts prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, datin not to know everything, or to care everybody, but do claim for reason and common some. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call, investigate before they abundon hope, make interrogations and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is tree. Visits maderegularly.

The reputed scarcity of young men at the watering-places last summer is confirmed by the testimony of the young men themselves. One of them says he entered a hotel at Long Branch under the fire of thirty or forty pair of covetous female eyes. other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicity known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the publicinary rely for full protection. By curing Couglis, the forerunners of more scrious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, Cherry Pegroral is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It sets speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured. they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.
