STORY.

LOVE, OR MONEY?

"Of course I have not married him because I was in love with him," said May Harriot, with a light laugh. She was sitting in a gold and diamond boudoir, hung with silken, fluted draperies, and carpeted in pale grey Aubusson, bordered with scarlet. The windows were full of flowering plants—an exquisite statue of Hebe occupied a marble pedestal in the middle of the room, and the panels of the walls filled in with mirrors, reflected the young bride's every motion a score of times.

Mrs. Harriot was dressed in a Watteau wrapper of rose colored silk, which fell around her in pink clouds—pale Neapolitan corals, carved so delicately that a magnifying glass would not have put them to the blush, hung from her delicate ears, and clasped the folds of tulle at her throat—diamond glittered on her fingers, and the tiny handkerchief peeping from her pocket was edged with lace that would have made a princess's ransom! And May's face, all lilies and roses, with the glory of golden hair floating away from it, was a jewel well worth all this expensive setting.

"Well, then," said she, "why did you marry him?" "Because I was poor and he was rich—because I was tired of teaching, and he offered me all this!" And May glanced around upon the luxuries that surrounded her. "Nobody could be foolish enough to suppose it was a love-match," said she. "He's ever so much older than I am, and not at all my ideal! But I couldn't drudge on forever in my profession, and I thought I'd make a lucky exchange."

"I should have known this before," he said to himself, with a pale face and trembling limbs. "I should have divined that spring and autumn were unsuited. So—she has married me for my money!" "May," he said that evening, "I have tickets for the opera to-night. Would you like to go?" "No, I don't think I care about it," said May, listlessly. "Then we will remain at home, and I will read you that new poem," suggested the husband.

Macaulay's Method of Work.

As soon as Macaulay had got into his head all the information relating to any particular episode in his history (such, for instance, as Argyl's expedition to Scotland, or the attainder of Sir John Fenwick, or the calling in of the clipped coinage), he would sit down and write off the whole story at a headlong pace; sketching in the outlines under the genial and audacious impulse of a first conception; and securing in black and white each idea and epithet and turn of phrase as it flowed straight from his busy brain to his active fingers.

A "Curious" Case.

As the night-blooming cerus blooms only at long intervals of years, displaying then a beauty and fragrance that repays for its delay, it is very natural that people who own the rare treasure should put it on exhibition at flowering time. An invitation to such a show, says the Portland Times, created an amusing blunder in one instance.

Modern Apothegms.

Be honest and you will be poor. Be virtuous and you will be suspected. Be prosperous and you will have enemies. Be unfortunat and you will have friends. Be an evil for good, for this is the way of the world.

Art of America in Architecture.

Future-writers and thinkers in Europe write in the belief that the time is far distant when America will exercise an influence which will be felt in the architecture of the world, and that if any distinctly new ideas are to appear that they will originate here. We have no grand old buildings in America to educate our popular taste, so the popular taste, as we all know, is to a great extent uneducated.

Fashion Items Explained and Annotated.

To the ordinary and especially masculine mind, fashion items are not usually intelligible. A key is necessary to their proper understanding. An attempt has been made to put a key to the following batch of fashion notes. "Cream color is on the wane." That accounts for its scarcity "on the milk."

Lace Industries in Europe.

From the fourteenth to the eighteenth century the art of lace-making continued to increase and spread in all the countries of Europe. It would be impossible to enumerate all the different points that are spoken of in the histories of lace that have come in the inventories and wardrobe of kings and queens, priests and prelates, in those five centuries.

Without Heels.

Children, both boys and girls, must wear shoes without heels: So fashion demands, and all who desire the healthy physical development of the rising generation will rejoice in the comfortable and sensible mandate. This fashion prevails abroad, and mothers who have lived or traveled in European countries see the advantage of it, and almost invariably adopt it for their children.

An Invaluable Book Agent.

A certain physician on the public square has a large card hung up in his office with these words printed thereon: "Book agents and peddlers charged $5 an hour for conversation." The other day a book agent came and just beginning a ramble about "the latest and best work on"—when the physician pointed to the card. He read the words over but once, when he handed the physician a $5 bill, and was about to commence operation again, when the man of medicine said: "Take a chair, please, and keep your money. Hand me your subscription book." He has now brought a brace of derringers.—Cleveland Herald.

Quick Work.

Charles C. Chapman, a young mechanic of Larifville, Ct., recently accomplished the following feat, doing the whole in 12 minutes: He walked 1 mile forward, then walked 1 mile backward, then hopped 75 yards on one foot, then with 15 eggs placed two feet apart in a row, he picked them all up separately in his mouth without touching his knees to the ground, and deposited each in a basket two feet from the starting point; and lastly, 15 lemons having been placed in the same relative position as the eggs, these were each picked up separately by hand, given back to the starting point with each one.

Apple Butter.

Apple Butter.—Fill a large preserving kettle with apples, pared, quartered and cored. Add cloves, allspice and cinnamon, not too strong. Cover with good cider and boil slowly, mashing with a wooden spoon till all becomes a thick brown jam, with no more juice than suffices to keep it soft and buttery. Several hours are required to cook it. Peach butter is made in the same way.

Sunday Reading.

CHOICE LITERARY SELECTIONS. "SUCH ARE THOUGHTS." Heat soon seen, with flash incessant, bubbles gliding underfoot...

"A HUNDREDDAYS TO GO." We all within our graves shall sleep, a hundred years to come; No living soul to weep...

Rev. Charles Beard, of England, casting his bright eyes along the other day, boldly said: "This pulpit in which I stand will be open to any godly man, no matter of what creed or church, who is willing henceforth to preach the Gospel; and in all works of humanity there is no believer or unbeliever with whom you will not strike a hand of alliance."

A truly conscientious and wise man is always humble, and even self-distrustful. He is humble, because he knows what infinite and complex things truth and right are; he is self-distrustful, because he knows how liable every man is to err in his judgment of truth and right.

Wise Sayings. Religion is the best armor in the world, but the worst cloak. Temptations are a file which rub off much of the rust of our self-confidence.

It is the bright day that brings forth the adder, and that craves wary walking. Revelation gives nothing to mankind which human reason, if left to itself, would not attain.

Show me a people whose trade is dishonest, and I will show you a people whose religion is a sham.

What is defeat? Nothing but education, nothing but the first thing to something better.

The language of the heart—the language which "comes from the heart"—is always simple, always graceful and full of power.

If there are men in whom the ridiculous have never appeared, it is because they have never been well searched.

At a recent "reunion" of the Cumberland, an old song, "Put your armor on, my boys," which was sung, was a great favorite with the girls.

A colored preacher, in translating to his hearers the sentence, "The harvest is great, the season is ended, and thy soul is not saved," put it, "De corn has been cribbed, de season ain't no more work, and de debil is still foolin' wid dis community."

"There's something in this cigar that makes me sick," said a pale little boy to his sister. "I know what it is," responded the little girl; "it's tobacco!"
