now—it was you, Mr. Hardin." "I judged not," he said with the same horrid grin on his face. "I've only got a word to add. When you go traveling through Texas learn who your pardner is. Don't talk so free about your betters. Good day, sir." And he wheeled off to the left, while I took the right. He spared my life that morning merely because the whim happened to take possession of him, for a more heartless desperado and a more deliberate murderer never lived. When Hardin was yet a boy he began the amusement of shooting negroes. He and one or two reckless companions would visit a picnic, create a disturbance, and then begin shooting right and left. When they were out of ammunition or the signs were unpropitious they would mount their horses and dash away. Again, they would gallop through a company of negroes with the object of seeing who could kill the most, with the mustangs at full speed. But shooting of "nig-gers" became monotonous to Hardin

Jewelry& Book Store and began picking off those of his own race. About five years ago a noted bully below Austin shot a young man on the Watches, Clocks, Silver street one evening while he was promenading with a young lady to whom Ware, Books, Stationery, he was engaged. It was done in pure wantonness, and, of course, the fellow Musical Instruments, never was punished by the law, but a brother of the victim was so infuriated over the deed that he caught up a double-barreled shot-gun and started out for the murderer. Hardin asked him what he intended to do and was Good Goods told. Hardin laughed and warned him that it would be sure death for him to attempt any such thing. But the young man would not be dissuaded. LOWEST PRICES. He meant to shoot down like a dog the wretch who had done the same to his brother. SPECIAL ATTENTION GIVEN TO

"Very well," said Hardin, "I will go along and see fair play." The young man caught sight of the wretch for whom he was looking on the opposite side of the street, and deliberately raised his gun and took aim. Just as he pulled the trigger the crim-

and walk off with the contents. Did the officer do it? Not by any means. He simply took the one, all-sufficient glance and passed by and out of sight. In a desultory talk with the station agent, who was also the telegraphist near by, the officer learned that Sam Jones was accustommed once a week about twelve miles above, where he was paying his addresses to some lady The officer made some arrangement by which the agent agreed to telegraph him at the upper station whenever the mythical Sam Jones should board the train. Having done all he could the detective took the cars to the station above, where he spent several days in lounging about and smoking bad cigars while waiting for the dispatch. At the end of three days it came:

Jones has just boarded the train; sits in last car; man with him; nobody else in car. ———, Agent. The officer had just enough time in which to complete his arrangements. It was a warm, sultry day, even for that season, when the little locomotive came wheezing into the depot. The next minute two other men, fully armed, boarded the rear platform and entered the door. At the same ined the front door and moved carelessly down the aisle in the direction of the two passengers. The latter glanced up sharply, but saw nothing to cause misgivings, and continued talking. The next moment the officer reached a point in the isle directly opposite the couple. Stopping suddenly, he exclaimed: "How are you, John Wesley Hardin?" As quick as lightning the desperado threw his hand back to his hip to draw his revolver. As he did so one of those behind him grasped his arm, and fight began. The two strange men precipitated themselves upon Hardin, aisle, when they finally overpowered and put the nippers on him. While they were doing this the other two officers were engaged in a deadly struggle with the other desparado, who showed an overweening ambition to mingle in the business. The only way

One of my boys took a swig of it one day, by mistake, and when he died in the fall we found him choke full of splinters. Killed him."

"Yes, yes," murmured old Daddy Wotherspoon, streaming at every pore. "We used to hang meat and vegetables down my well, and they were cooked in ten minutes by the watch," and the ancient gentleman regarded his antagonist with some triumph. "We tried that," said old Uncle Lin-

kinbotham, "but the heat melted the wires the grub was hung on and the works of the clock run all over the floor, so we couldn't tell how long it did take to cook, and we used ice-water to do our b'iling with." "Where'd you get your ice?" demand-ed old Daddy Wotherspoon, tying a handkerchief around his head to keep his ears warm. "We just poured water on the fire and the fire was so much cooler than the atmosphere that the water froze in a minute. That's how we got our ice. Don't you want to go and drink something to warm you up?"

"If we can get a little good, old bran-dy, I'd like it replied old Daddy Wotherspoon, with pale lips and clenched ist. "I'll take some proof brandy." "Come along then," retorted old Un cle Linkinbotham contemptuously "You may be able to stir your blood with that tipple, but this weather and the recollection of May, '22, makes me want some hot spiced rum and a fur overcoat. To-morrow I'm going to put on extra flannels." And the two old liars almost killed themselves that afternoon with hot drinks rather than admit that the Almighty could do things as well now as He did when they were boys.—Chicago T'imes.

remains are cut up, the leg bones are sold to make knife handles, etc., and the coarser, the ribs, the head, etc., are converted into animal black and glue. The first are calcined in cylinders, and the vapors when condensed form the chief source of carbonate of ammonia, which constitutes the base of nearly all ammonical salts. There is an animal oil yielded which makes a capital insecticide and a vermifuge. To make glue the bones are dissolved in muriatic acid, which takes away the phos-phate of lime; the soft residue retaining the shape of the bone is dissolved in boiling water, cast into squares, and dried on nets. The phosphate of lime, acted upon by sulphuric acid and cal-cined with carbon, produces phosphorus for lucifer matches. The remaining flesh is distilled to obtain the carbonate of ammonia; the resulting mass is pounded up with potash, then mixed with old nails and iron of every description; the whole is calcined and yields magnificent yellow crystals-prussiate of potash, with which tissues are dyed a Pruissian blue, and iron transferred into steel; it also forms

A mother living not very far from the post office in this city, tired with watching over a sick baby, came down stairs for a moment the other day, for a few second's rest. She heard the voice of her little four-year-old girl in the hall by herself, and curious to know with whom she was talking, stopped a minute at the half-open door. She saw that the little thing had pull-ed up a chair in front of the telephone ed up a chair in front of the telephone and stood upon it, with the ear piece pressed against the side of her head. The earnestness of the child showed that she was in no playful mood, and this was the conversation the mother heard while the tears stood thick in her eyes, the little one carrying on both sides as if she were repeating the an-swers: "Hello!" "Well, who's there?" "Is God there?" "Yes." "Is Jesus there?" "Yes." "Tell Jesus I want to speak to him." "Well?" "Is that you, Jesus?" "Yes; what is it?" "Our ba-by is cick and we want you to let it by is sick, and we want you to let it get well. Won't you, now?" No answer, and statement and question again repeated, finally answered by a "yes." The little one put the ear piece back on its hook, clambered down from her chair, and with a radiant face went for her mother, who caught her in her arms. The baby whose life had been despaired of began to mend that day and got well.—Elmira Free Press.

A Good Method.

A school superintendent was asked how he managed to advance his pupils in all their studies so much more rapidly than his predecessor had done. His reply is worthy of special note: "I make it a point to bring them along as rapidly as possible in reading. In the primary grades I give more time to this exercise than is customary in other schools, and I persuade or entice the pupils of the higher grades to read books, newspapers, magazines, any-thing wholesome that will give them practice, and at the same time instruct them. Every day we spend from fif-teen to twenty minutes asking and answering questions about what we have read. To excite curiosity, we post the most important caption-lines from the columns of the newspapers. citement that the arrival of that lonely piano caused. By the next morning was known that the instrument was to grace a hurdy-gurdy saloon, owned by Tom Goskiu, the leading gambler in the place. It took nearly a week to get this wonder on its legs, and the owner was the proudest individual in the State. It rose gradually from a recumbent to an upright position, amid a confusion who could play upon the instrument. Goskin began to realize that he had a losing speculation on his hands. He had a fiddler and a Mexican who thrammed upon a guitar. A pianist would have

"knock any amount of music out of a piano, if he only had it alone for a few hours to get his hand in." The report spread over the camp, but on being ques-tioned he vowed that he didn't know a note of music. It was noted, however, as a suspicious circumstance, that he often hung about the instrument, and looked upon it longingly, like a hungry man gloating over a beefsteak in a res-taurant window. There was no doubt that this man had music in his soul, perhaps in his fingers' ends, but did not lare to make a trial of his strength after the rules of harmony had suffered so many years of neglect. So the fiddler kept on with his jigs, and the greasy Mexican pawed his discordant guitar, but noman had the nerve to touch that piano. There were doubtless scores of men in the camp who would have given ten ounces of gold dust to have been half an hour alone with it, but every man's nerve shrank from the jeers which the crowd would shower upon him should his first attempt prove a failure. It got to be generally understood that the hand which first essayed to draw music from

It was Christmas eve, and Goskin, according to his custom, had decorated his gambling house with sprigs of mountain cedar, and a shrub whose crimson berries did not seem a bad imitation of English holly. The piano was covered with evergreens, and all that was want-ing to completely fill the cup of Goskin's contentment was a man to play that piano.

"Christmas night and no piano pound-er," he said. "This is a nice country for a Christian to live in."

and though the inscription glared at the frequenters of the room until midnight, it failed to draw any musician from his shell.

So the merrymaking went on; the hilarity grew space. Men danced and sang to the music of the squeaky fiddle and worn out guitar, as the jolly crowd within tried to drown the howling of the storm without. Suddenly they became aware of the presence of a white-haired g near the fire-place. His
