was nearly at the further end of the camp I ordered my men to catch their horses and mount. But there was much confusion. The women and children were trying to catch their horses and get out of the way, and my men were hurrying to go and help those that were fighting. When the fighters saw that the women and children were safe, they fell back. By this time my people went to help them, and the less able warriors and women caught horses and got them ready, and we drove the first attacking party back, and that party retreated to a high hill. Then I told my people not to venture too far in pursuit, for fear of falling into an ambush. By this time all the warriors in our camp were mounted and ready for fight, and then we were attacked on the other side by another party. They came on us like a thunderbolt. I never before nor since saw men so brave and fearless as those white warriors. We retreated until our men got all together, and then we charged upon them. I called to my men, 'This is a good day to die; follow me.' We massed our men, and that no man should fall back, every man whipped another man's horse and we rushed right upon them. As we rushed upon them the white warriors dismounted to fire, but they did very poor shooting. They held their horses' reins on one arm while they were shooting, but their horses were so frightened that they pulled the men all around, and a great many of their shots went up in the air and did us no harm. The white warriors stood their ground bravely, and none of them made any attempt to escape or get away. After all, but a few of them were killed; I captured two of their horses. Then the wise men and chiefs of our nation gave out to our people not to mutilate the dead white chief, for he was a brave warrior and died a brave man, and his remains should be respected. Then I turned round and went to help fight the other white warriors who had retreated to a high hill on the east side of the river. (This was Reno's com-mand.) I don't know whether any white men of Custer's force were taken prisoners. When I got back to our camp they were all dead. Everything was in confusion all the time of the fight. I did not see Gen. Custer. I do not know who killed him. We did not know till the fight was over that he was the white chief. We had no idea that the white warriors were coming until the runner came in and told us. I do not say that Reno was a coward. He fought well, but our men were fighting to save their women and children, and drove them back. If Reno and his warriors had fought as Custer and his warriors fought, the battle might have been against us. No white man or Indian ever fought as bravely as Custer and his men. The next day we fought Reno and his forces again and killed many of them. Then the chiefs said these men had been punished enough, and that we ought to be merciful, and we let them go. Then we heard that another force was coming up the river to fight us (Gen. Terry's command), and we started to fight them, but the chiefs and wise men counseled that we had fought enough and that we should not fight unless attacked, and we went back and took our women and children and went away. Having heard Low Dog's story of the fight I concluded I would try and | when he does his wife is always want-

Long Hair sent us word that he was coming to fight us, and we had to defend ourselves and our wives and children. If this command had not been given we could have cut Reno's command to pieces, as we did Custer's. No warrior knew Custer in the fight. We did not know him, dead or alive. When the fight was over the chiefs gave orders to look for the long-haired chief among the dead, but no chief with long hair could be found." (Custer had his hair cut short before starting on this march.) Crow King said that if Reno had held out until Custer came, and then fought as Custer did, they would have whipped the Indians. The Indians would then have been compelled to divide to protect their women and children, and the whites would have had the advantage. He expressed great admiration for the bravery of Custer and his men, and said that the fight impressed the Indians that the whites were their superiors, and it would be their destruction to keep on fighting them. Both he and Low Dog said they did not feel that they would be blamed for the Custer fight or its results. It was war; they were attacked; Custer tried to kill them; they killed him. Crow King said he had two brothers killed in the fight; that from thirty to fifty Indians were killed, and a much larger number who were wounded died afterward.

The Small Boy's Explanation.

It was Sunday evening. Angelica had invited her best young man to the evening meal. Everything had passed off harmoniously until Angelica's sev-en years old brother broke the blissful silence by exclaiming: "Oh, ma! yer oughter seen Mr. Lighted the other night, when he called to take Angie to the drill; he looked so nice sittin' 'long side of her with his arm—" "Fred!" screamed the maiden, whose face began to assume the color of a well-done crab, quickly placing her hand over the boy's mouth. "Yer oughter seen him," continued the persistent informant, after gaining his breath, and the embarrassed girl's hand was removed; "he had his arm-"Freddie," shouted the mother, as in frantic attempts to reach the boy's auricular appendage she upset the contents of the full teapot in Mr. Lighted's lap, making numerous Russian war maps over his new lavender pantaloons.

"I was just goin' to say," the half frightened boy pleaded, between a cry and an injured whine, "he had his arm—"

"You boy!" thundered the father, 'away to the woodshed!" And the boy made for the nearest exit, exclaiming as he waltzed out, "I was only goin' to say Mr. Lighted had his army clothes on, and I leave it to him if he didn't." 🕚

And the boy was permitted to re-turn, and the remainder of the meal was spent in explanation from the family in regard to the number of times Freddie had to be talked to for using his fingers for a ladle.

"But this one at twenty dollars might possibly do," she went on, "although your wife's position in society would only permit her to wear it for second best. Just wait and I'll show you something for twenty-five dollars which will charm you."

"I won't! I'll be hanged if I wait a minute!" he exclaimed as he rose up. I don't feel very well, and I've also agreed to meet a man at the City Hall at three o'clock. Martha, you go ahead and pick out a bonnet."

"One for-for-for-four dollars, she whispered.

"Four be-hangs! Who said anything about four dollars? If you can make one for twenty dollars do you, I'd take it; .but if you look better in one for twenty-five dollars, you can have it sent up. What I was scolding about this morning was the shape of your bonnet-not the cost. I still hold that the shapes are outrageous; but you've got to have one all the same." And when he got out doors and around the corner, he struck the air with his cane and yelled:

Hartmann.

NEW YORK, August 18.-Leo Hartmann, the Russian nihilist, appeared in the superior court clerk's office this morning, and, renouncing his allegiance to the emperor of Russia, filed a declaration of his intention to become a citizen of the United States.

In the interview Hartmann said: "I am only in fear of kidnapping, and believe that I can best avoid it by giving my quarters, intentions and movements the greatest publicity. I have been constantly shadowed since I came here, and from the numerous attempts made to dispose of me in London and Paris, I do not doubt that some such course has been thought of, for I am positive that I cannot be extradited by any international arrangement. It is acknowledged that in my attempt on the life of the Czar I did not seek the murder of the man Alexander Romanoff, I sought only the destruction of this vital exponent of wrong principle. This is proved by the fact that while an attempt at murder is punished by the Russian government with penal servitude not exceeding fifteen years, one made upon the life of the Czar is inevitable death. This recognizes a political complexity of crime. Even if in that railroad explosion many persons had been killed and wounded, this aspect of affairs would have remained unaltered. Yet facts prove that no one was wounded, so you see that I seek an asylum in this country as a right. In this view I am supported by Wendell Phillips, Victor Hugo, Swinten, and other men of intelligence and judgment. I want to mold popular sentiment in favor of the nihilists. I want to show the people of this country what the condition of Russia really is. In no civilized country of the world is Russia so little understood as in the United States. How do I propose to gain this end? By lectures, articles, newspapers, any means that are offered. The moral support, and possibly the material, that sympathy will give the popular movement in Russia may have its weight on those who are struggling and watching and waiting for the end which must some

He had a through ticket to Sioux City, D. T., a sackel full of food, and a big coffee pot. Not knowing what to do with the young traveler, he was handed over to Sergeant Kemp, who kept him at the station house for the night. Yesterday morning he was taken to the Postmaster's office, when it was learned through an interpreter that the lad's name was Christian Andrew Larsen, and that his parents resided at Hjorning, Denmark. He is on his way to his uncle, Christian Larsen, who resides at Danville, Dakota. He said that he had been well treated on his journey, and had had plenty to eat. Besides food he had $3 in money. Japan's National Flower.

The cherry blossom is the national flower of Japan, as the rose is of England, the lily of France, the thistle of Scotland, and the shamrock of Ireland. On the milkado's flags, pages, and car-riages, and on the soldiers' caps and uniforms, you will see the open chrysanthemum. But the flower of the people and the nation is the flower of the blossoming cherry tree. The Japanese cultivate all over Japan the sakura tree, which is valued only for the beauty of its blossoms. From an entire tree you could not get ripe cherries enough to make a pie; but the blossoms are massed together on the boughs like clouds, and the blooms are often as large as a rose. Picnics in Japan are called "going to see the lowers." In June millions of people go out to sing and sport and laugh and play under the cherry trees, or to catch "the snow showers that do not fall from the skies." Some people become so enchanted with the lovely blossoms as to even worship the famous old trees.

The Coldest Spot on Earth.

It is in Siberia, and its name is Werkhojansk. Here, it is said, the "culminating point of excessive climate in all the world is reached." In other words, it is the pole of the greatest cold in the known northern hemisphere. The coldest recorded temperature ever observed in the highsst arctic latitude, is that noted by Sir George Nares at Floburg Beach, which was 74° below the zero of Faerenheit. For a long time it was supposed that Yakutsk, 300 miles distant from Werkhojansk was the coldest spot on earth. The soil of these places is frozen 380 feet deep. The cold in these regions

The doctors who have the President's case in charge are truly a cool set of fellows. They have seen "no cause for apprehension" every day since the President was shot. They probably believe there is no danger of a man dying so long as he breathes. There appeers to be a great difference in people about being satisfied with the progress of this case.

The Chinese commissioners deny that the withdrawal of the young Chinamen who were sent here to be educated has any unfriendly significance, but that the boys have been here a long time, and the government thinks that if they are ever to be of any use to their own country it is about time. He says it is probable that another lot will be sent here in a short time.

If reports are true, President Garfield will need all of that subscription fund raised for him among the New York merchants. It is now current that the doctors propose to charge $100 per day, each, for their services, and Dr. Agnew wants $1,000 for every time he rides from Philadelphia to Washington to visit the distinguished patient. Cash will be a very necessary article when settling day comes.

The news from the President were very discouraging Sunday, he having passed a very restless night, and suffered from a severe inflammation of the perotid gland, and a weakness of the stomach, that rendered it wholly inactive. The report for Monday was better, however, and he was able to retain a small amount of liquid nourishment on his stomach. The doctors are confident and silent by turns, and the quietude of the public changes inversely with that of the doctors. The more they are silent the less the people are disposed to be. The patient still lacks considerable of being past danger.

Another freak of Guiteau's character was shown by his attempt to murder his guard, McGee, with a knife, of the kind known as the "cheeser," made from a bit of steel spring. The handle made by wrapping one end with twine and cloth, and sharpened by rubbing against the stone walls of his cell. It is thought that this weapon was left concealed in the cell by the prisoner who occupied it before Guiteau. A hole was cut through the guard's coat to the skin. The object of the prisoner is as much of a mystery as is his assault upon the President. His escape | the authority of law, and the law does could not possibly have been effected had he succeeded in murdering McGee.

JEPPY, the eight-months-old son of Jeppy and Fanny Delano, the comedians, was buried at Niles on Wednesday, the stricken parents having arrived from New York the day previous. It seems they almost had a prophecy of the sad event. One evening after their usual appearance, as Fannie was removing a cluster ring from her finfier, she said to her husband: "See, one of the diamonds are gone; we shall hear some bad news." It is certainly a remarkable fact that a man can state in the city of New York truly and openly that he has deliberately planned and accomplished the murder of innocent persons in Russia, and yet that he is entirely safe from any other penalty than the moral condemnation of the community. William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass. says: "In the tail of 1876 I was taken with a violent bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hos pital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope but a friend told me of Dr. Wm. Hali's Bal sam for the lungs. I got a bottle, when to my surprise and gratification, I commeuced to feel better, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have in the past three years. A Queer Notion.

Many people think it cheaper to buy 25 cent sizes of a proprietary medicine But they make a mistake. For instance, Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry contains about eight times the quantity of ordinary 25 cent cough balsams. Besides it takes a less quantity of Wistar's Balsam to cure a cold. A single dose is often sufficient. For deep seated Colds and Consumption it has proven itself to be the best and quickest cure ever discovered.

Don't Make a Mistake.

Why will you use salves and lotions, and other outward applications for the cure of skin diseases? The relief thus obtained can only be temporary. Why not strike at the root of all skin diseases by getting your blood and liver in a healthy, vigorous condition? This can only be done effective ly and thoroughly by the use of Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.

Noticing that the sides of the summit vere strewed with boards, beams, and debris of all sorts, my guide explained that what I saw was the result of the great January gale which had demol-ished the large shed used as an enginehouse, scattering the loose fragments far and wide. I begged him to give me his recollection of it.

During the forenoon preceding the gale we observed nothing very unusual; but the clouds kept sinking and sinking nntil the summit was quite above them. Late in the alternoon my comrules, Ser-Sergeant M-, came to where I was lying abed sick, and said: 'There is go-ing to be the devil to pay, so I guess I'll make everything sung.' "By nine in the evening the wind had increased to one hundred miles an hour, with heavy sleet. At midnight the ve-locity of the storm was one hundred and twenty miles, and the exposed thermometer recorded twenty degrees below zero. With the stove red, we could hardly get it above freezing inside the house. Water froze within three feet of the fire-in fact, where yon are now sitting. "At this time the noise outside was deafening. About one o'clock the wind rose to one hundred and fifty miles. It was now blowing a hurricane. The wind, gathering up all the loose ice of the mountain, dashed it against the house with one continued roar. I lay wonder-ing how long the building would stand this when all at once came a crash. M-shouted to me to get up, but I had tumbled out in a hurry on hearing the glass go. You see, I was dressed, to keep myself warm in bed. "Our united efforts were hardly equal to closing the storm shutters from the inside, but we finally succeeded, though the light went out when the the wind came in, and we worked in the dark."

He rose to show me how the shutters, of thick oak, were first secured by an iron bar, and secondly by strong wooden buttons firmly screwed in the window-

"We had scarcely done this," resumed Doyle, "and were shivering over the fire, when a heavy grist of wind again burst open the shutters, as easily as if they had never been fastened at all. We sprang to our feet. After a hard tussle we again secured the windows, by nailing a cleat to the floor, against which one end of a board was fixed, using the other end as a lever. You undertand. ?" I nodded. "Well, even then it was all we could do to force the shutters back into place. But we did it. We had to do it. "The rest of the night was passed in momentary expectation that the building would be blown into Tuckerman's, and we with it. At four o'clock in the morn-ing the wind registered one hundred and eighty-six miles. It had shifted then from east to northeast. From this time it steadily fell to ten miles, at nine o'clock. This was the biggest blow ever experienced on the mountain.

Suppose the house had gone, and the hotel stood fast, could you have effected an entrance into the hotel?" I asked. "We could not have faced the gale."

"Not for a hundred feet? not in a matter of life and death ?"

"Impossible. The wind would have lifted us from our feet like bags of word. We would have been dashed against the rocks and smashed like egg-shells," was the quiet reply. "And so for some hours you expected to be swept into eternity?"

"We did what we could. A CELEBRATED CASE. the Most Famous Eank Robberies on Record.

When Jonathan Edwards was preaching the doctrine of original sin in the quiet and peaceful town of Northampton, Mass., says the Detroit Free Press, he probably little dreamed, in spite of his doctrine, that in less than century and a half one of the most skillful and daring robberies would be committed in that town, forming "a celebrated case" in the annals of crime, throwing final suspicion upon the bank managers, some of whose ancestors, in all probability, listened to the famous New England divine. The bank itself, a massive building, is the receptacle of the surplus money in its solid vault. To unlock the outedoor of the vallt several keys are re-quired, and these keys were distributed the bank also the obstacles to burglary seemed insuperable. There were two inner doors, each with its combination of four sets of figures; there was a new and solid safe with double doors, each also with its combination of four tigures: finally, a watchman stationed within the bank kept guard until after 4 o'clock each morning. People believed in it, as the Israelites believed in the ark of the covenant. What, then, was the consternation of this community when one morning it was announced that securities and cash, to the extent of a o'clock in the morning, January, 1876, visited Whittlesey's house, bound and terrorized him and his whole family, he being ordered at the point of the pistol to surrender the numbers of the compinations. He gave wrong numbers,

But the thieves were more cunning. After taking down the numbers and proceeding to converse on other subjects, they suddenly ordered him to repeat the figures. He could not recall them, and was pounded, kicked and choked until he furnished the correct ones. After the watchman had left the bank at 4 o'clock in the morning, the robbers proceeded thither, opened the vaults, took away the booty and escaped from town. It took twelve hours to open the locks, which the robbers had damaged, the unsuspected Edson being employed for the purpose. Search was made everywhere, including Northampton itself, for the missing bonds. The school-house where the robbers had concealed themselves, and where they left their lantera and remnauts of their luncheon, was explored-all but the platform on which the children stood at the blackboard. The bonds and securities were lying there while the searchers were in

One That Must be Got Rid of to Insure Good Health.

The greatest part of the disease that afflicts civilized mankind during the winter months is unquestionably due to the fact that all fresh air is carefully excluded during the night hours, and sometimes with the coming of winter the windows are securely fastened and not opened until spring. Many people seem to think the house is sufficiently ventilated if the windows of the sleep ing rooms are left open for a few minutes during the day, but almost every-body is convinced that night air is injurious to health. In this connection, Dr. Felix L. Oswald says in the Popular Science Monthly : "Beware of the night wind; be sure and close your windows after dark !" 11 other words, heware of God's free air; be sure and infect your lungs with the staguant, azotized and offensive a masphere of your bedroom. In other word-, beware of the rock spring; stars to sewerage. Is night air injurious? is there a single tenable pretext to such an idea ? Since the Lay of creation that air has been breathed with impunity by millions of different animals-tender, delicate creatures, some of them-fawns, lambs and young birds. The moist nightair of the tropical forests is breathed close though generally well-warmed at-mosphere of our Northern menageries. Thousands of soldiers, hunters and lumbermen sleep every night in tents and open sheds without the least injurious consequences; men in the last stage of consumption have recovered by adopt ing a semi-savage mode of life, and camping out doors in all but the stormiest nights. Is it the draught that you fear, or the contrast of temperature? Blacksmiths and railroad conductors eem to thrive under such influences. Draught? Have you never seen boys skating in the teeth of a snow-storm at the rate of fifteen miles an hour? "They counteract the effect of the cold air by vigorous exercise." Is there no other way of keeping warm? Does the north wind damage the fine lady sitting motionless in her sleigh, or the pilot and helmsman of a storm-tossed vessel? It cannot be the inclemency of the golden air, for, even in sweltering summer nights, the sweet south wind, blessed ly all creatures that draw the breath of Inc, brings no relief to the victim of acrophobia. There is no doubt that families who have freed themselves from the curse of that superstition can live out and out healthier in the heart of a great city than its slaves on the airiest highland of the Southern Apennines.

In a tolerable location the air of a three-room cottage can be kept pure mough without any force ventilators or any other expensive contrivance. Open your windows; in very cold weather air the bedrooms in daytime and the others at night. In larger houses the kitchen, parlor and dining-room should be thor-oughly ventilated every night, also in daytime at convenient intervals, during the temporary absence of the occupants. To save foul air for the sake of its warmth is poor economy; experiments would show that the difference in fuel amounts only to a trifle anyhow. Ten or twelve pounds of coal a day ought not to weigh against the direct gain in comfort and the prospective, unspeakable gain in health. Breathing the same air over and over again means to feed the organism on the excretions of our own lungs, on air surcharged with noxious gases and almost depleted of the life-sustaining principle. Azotized air affects the lungs as the substitution of excrements one-of anchoring somewhere, somehow."

Somewhere, indeed! When, on the following morning I busied myself getting ready to go down the mountain, I heard a profound sigh, followed by some half audible words, proceeding from the adjoining room. These words rang in my ears all that day: "Ah, this terrible solitude!"-S. A. Drake, in Harper's Magazine, verbai Etiquelte.

There is a distinction between certain phrases, according to circumstances, which, when misused, become vulgarisms. We give a few, taken from a Loudon journal:

The terms "ladies" and "gentlemen" become in themselves vulgarisms when n.isapplied, and the improper application of the wrong term at the wrong time makes all the difference in the world to ears polite: thus, calling a man a "gen-man" when he should be called a "man," write speakag of a man as a man when ne should be called a gentleman; or the alluding to a lady as a woman when she should be alluded to as a lady; or the speaking of a woman as a lady when she should be properly termed a woman. Tast and a sense of the fitness of things decide these points, there being no fixed rule to go upon to determine when a man is a man or when he is a gentleman, and though he is far oftener t-ruled the one than the other, he does not thereby lose his attributes of a gentionnal. La common parlance, a man is shavys a man to a man, and never gen-ternan; to a woman he is occasionally a as to and occasionally a gentleman; but a may would far effetier ferm a woman a woman than he would term her a lady. When a man makes use of an adjective in speaking of a lady he almost invariably calls woman, the term young lady gives places as far as possible to the term girl, although it greatly depends upon the amount of infimacy existing as to which term is employed. Now, to turn to the really tabued words, "stylish" and "genteel" are relegated to the showr. om, where they are very much used at home in each other's company, although considered decidedly vulgar when met with elsewhere. "Stylish" being bred in the show-room is the right word in the right place; but it is hard npon unfortunate "genteel," that, con-veying in itself so much it should have met with such a fate. "Nice" bids fair to follow in the footsteps of discarded words; standing alone as an adjective, though passe, it still has its admirers, but when to nice is added either "awfally" or "too," then nice is altogether out of favor.

"Jolly" is well enough on the lips of a schoolboy, to whom it now of right be-longs-a right which no one disputes; but slang proper is and never can be anything else than vulgar; and those who delight in its use for the embellishment of their speech to all intents and purposes intend to be vulgar.

"What of it?' Why, them's black walnuts, sir. Ten acres of 'em. Planted 'em myself ten years ago. See, ing interested. "The trees," continued Mr. Graves,

"are growing an inch a year. When they are 20 years old they will be nine-teen inches through. A black-walnut tree nineteen inches through is worth $25. My 2,000 trees ten years from now will be worth $50,000. A Pretty German Custom. There is a beautiful custom among the Germans of having chorals played from the church towers at regular hours of the day. It is said they first derived the idea from the Arabs, who at certain hours of the day and night are called to prayers by the long wailing cry of the muezzins from the minarets of the mosques. When I first heard this music in Stuttgart, coming as it appeared to me from heaven, I was puzzled to know its object and the sources will be it came. I gazed above and around me, but I failed to detect its source. The beautiful melody, softened by distance, was floating in the air. It was like the invisible heavenly choir that entry tured St. Cecelia. A few days afterward, ha pening to be in the same neighbor mari, and at the same hour of the day, I was more fortunate in my discoursies. I again heard the music from above, its pealing notes coming to me ir in some far distance like the strains of a church organ. Near me was the Stifts Kneae, an old church built in 1308, which has attached to it an immense ocurgon tower rising up to a height of nearly 2 th feet. Encircling this near the large is a balcony, on which I at last especithe authors of the strange music. Several men with brass instruments were perched on that giddy height pary-ing sacred music. When they had himished one piece they moved to another position on the balcony and played a different tune. Four selections in all were played, one toward each point of the compass. On making inquiries atter-ward I found that this playing from the church tower had been in practice for more than 100 years. A German lady, "once upon a time," belonging to one of the noble families, bequeathed a sum of money, the income of which was ever after to be devoted to paying the expenses of this religious observance. The clause in her will stated that chorals or selections of sacred music were to be
