Abstract of Titles.

A N abstract of title is a brief statement of all the conveyances, liens and tax sales of record affecting the title to a lot or tract of land. A set of Abstract Books shows the conveyances on every lot of land in a county, and to be of value must be thoroughly made and MINUTELY ACCURATE. The making of such an abstract is a work requiring the greatest care and patience in searching, and the closest scrutiny of all matters relating to the same.

To successfully conduct this branch of business and enjoy the confidence of the fuello, persons must have large experience, a thorough understanding of the business and a conscientious appreciation of its importance and responsibility, for this is the best guarantee that their work will be accurate and reliable.

of Berrien County

is owned and conducted by Messrs. DIX & WIL-KINSON, with office in the County Building at Berrien Springs. MR. DIX has been prominently and credibly before this community in connection with real estate matters for more than sixteen years, and MR. WILKINSON has been associated with him seven years. During this time nothing has been spared to make the Berrien County Abstract Office all that an abstract office should be, and the reputation it now enjoys as trustworthy authority in all matters touching realty interests, is sufficient proof of its success.

Careful buyers no longer accept as satisfactory the "IT"S ALL RIGHT" of the would-be seller, for experience teaches that nothing is easier than to be mistaken, and without an abstract one cannot know what errors have been made, and responsible sellers are equally careful, for one cannot safely warrant a title without a knowledge of its history.

While thanking its patrons for past favors, and soliciting their future orders, the office begs to in vite correspondence with owners of lots and farms who have never looked np their titles. Defects readily cured now may be past healing when one wants to sell. All correspondence will receive prompt and courteons attention.

When writing about property, please give correct description and name of present owner. DIX & WILKINSON,

From Harper's Weekly.

The Victim of a Prejudice.

BY MRS. FRANK MC'CARTHY. CONCLUDED.

"I'll cut my throat first!" I shouted "Never! I'll never give Florence up. Good Heaven! does the old fool think he can always shun the vital principle of humanity? Does he suppose he can shut his eyes to the inevitable? Pah! It stares him in the face, and he'll have to see it."

"Not while he can shove it aside, Mort. You must remember there's everything in custom and habit. Even a woman like Sarah Bernhardt has to confess she hobnobs with these things to get used to them. The old man May prefers the other plan." I groaned, and yielded.
"See here, Jack," I said, "I'll give it here, and go to farming, stock raising -anything the old idiot requires. Hang it! I won't do any business, if that will satisfy him. I've got money enough to live on. Jack began to stroke his head meditatively. "As for money," he said, "between the two of you, you could buy a mine; and I don't see how the old gentleman can object, if you agree to sell out and have nothing more to do with the old business. There's the old connection, to be sure. What is it some-

up. I'll sell out there, and come out body says? You may break, you may shatter the vase if you But the scent of the roses will hang round it still.' The old man is so peculiar about these things. He never allows them to be mentioned in his presence; he'll ride twenty miles out of his way to avoid anything appertaining to them, and a stranger is always warned of this weakness before a friend dares to introduce him. Then he was prejudiced against you in the beginning. Miss May in-vested you at once with a romantic interest. Your deep voice, your solemn manners, your sad and sympathetic smile, reminded her of her poetic idol, Lara; but the old man was troubled with realistic doubts. 'Why the dickens does your cousin speak so hollow and low? What makes him look so glum? What does he go about like a cat in walnuts for? He makes me creep and crawl; he sends a shiver down my back." "I don't care a cent for the old man, exclaimed. "Florence loves me, She'd marry me if I was a highwayman." "Oh, wouldn't she? Quicker than lightning! And perhaps if you give up the old business—" "An honest, comfortable, steady, profitable business," I groaned, for I was fond of it. "Yes," said Jack, "I always regretted leaving it. If you sell out, I think I'll buy your share. I've been homesick for some time; but I never could fit in, like you do, Mort. You'll be a loss to the profession. Some men acquire it, others have thrust it upon them, but as for you, you were born to it." I can never accuse Jack of neglecting any opportunity to win me back to the path of peace and prosperity. Whatever was his fault, it was not that of duplicity. He placed the whole matter before me time and again; but who of us all can be warned by advice or entreaty? Once upon the headlong path to destruction and despair, nothing but a miracle can save us. My infatuation had reached a point of frenzy. I only lived at the May mansion. The rest of my existence was a mere vegetation. The world only held the one happiness, and that was so supreme that to lose a moment of it seemed to me a folly or a crime. I neglected to write home; I gave up the mercantile investigations which it was a part of my journey to pursue. For weeks I did not even ride through the streets of Denver, or cast eyes on my cousin Jack. Yet there were moments when I was intensely miserable. The old man May had become intolerable in his incessant prodding and goading about my husiness connections. It required all my ingenuity and watchfulness to prevent his bringing matters to a focus, and I was not yet prepared to reveal to him my occupation for the present, or plans for the future. In truth, I was a slave to the silly and criminal prejudices of the old man May. The past and the future were topics with which a man of his weak proclivities should have nothing to do. He lived in the present, didn't want to look a day beyond, basked in the joy of the hour, forbidding any one to hint that it might not last forever. Florence knew that I loved her. How could she help but know? My whole being exhaled a constant adoration of her presence. The sweep of her garments sent a thrill to my heart; the clasp of her hand was a delirium of bliss. One morning she ran to meet me, and drew me aside into a little summer-house where we had spent many ecstatic hours. The wind wantoned with the golden hair which hung loose about her neck, and heightened the color that was already warm in her cheek. A morning robe of faint blue cashmere, embroidered with a deeper shade, and opened down to her feet, re-India muslin. As I said before, I perhaps notice these little feminine decorations more than the generality of men, and I never beheld neater and more effective combinations in color and style than adorned the matchless beauty of Miss May.

"Oh, Mortimer," she said, with her hand upon my arm, and looking up into my face with a charmingly pleading expression, "will you do something for "Anything! everything!" I cried. "I would lay down my life to serve you." Transported with her beauty, the enchanting surroundings, the hour, the place, the situation, I threw myself at her feet, and implored her to promise me?

she would be mine forever. "I adore in Jack. Something in his face sent a chill to my vertebræ; something in my face probably sent a chill to his, for he you," I cried. "I will give up everything, leave everything, to come here and be your slave. Say that you love me, Florence."

"Oh, you foolish boy," she said, "you know that I love you. But what I want you to do just now is to make yourself agreeable to a young lady who has just arrived from the East. She is an old schoolmate of mine, and has met with a great loss. I was so shocked to see her in deep mourning." Here Florence grew pale, and trembled in my embrace. So tender was the old May's rearing of this delicate girl, the subject she sought to approach appalled her. "You know papa hates to see people in black. So do I. I think it's a detestable, wicked custom. I know papa won't be nice to her. He'll avoid her, keep out of her way, take his meals at separate hours. But you, Mortimer -you'll be good to the poor thing, won't you? You won't mind her being sad and mournful, and not wearing colors?"

"On the contrary," I said, smiling with a calm superiority over the old man May, "it will be an incentive to my interest in this dear young lady. Where is she?" "In the breakfast-room. Let us go to her at once," said Florence; and hand in hand we went out of the summer-house. Little did I think I should never enter it again. Little did I dream, as the warm white hand rested confidently in mine, that a few brief moments would render it cold as marble to my touch or entreaty. The old man May was already walking up and down the balcony, his hands beneath the tails of his coat. His face was red and troubled. He had evidently seen the mournful young person in the breakfast-room, and fled from her presence. My manner involuntarily suited itself to the occasion. It was subdued and sympathetic. My step was soft and slow My voice was modulated to a melancholy cadence as I bade Mr. May good morning. He scowled at me, and resumed his walk. The old man May must have been a fool to suppose I could put off the habits of a life-time. I was reared to these things. I entered the room. Florence introduced me. The young woman looked at me, but both her hands to her head. uttered a long, loud shriek, and faint-

"What is it?" said the old man May, running in at the door. There stood Florence gazing distrustfully from her friend to me; there was the young woman in a dead faint. The old man May glared from one to the other. "She fainted at the sight of Mr. Clay," said Florence, growing paler and colder with every word. "I solemnly swear I never to my knowledge saw her before!" I said, and spoke the truth. "Well, I'm tired of this," said the old man May. "I hate all this mystery

What do you do for a living? You are hanging around my daughter—" "I love her; I adore her," I exclaim-l. "I would give my life for her." And then I sank into a chair, and covered my face with my hands. I felt that the awful moment had come, and the thought of losing Florence through this old man's imbecility nearly drove me mad. Florence had helped carry and beating about the bush. Who are you, anyway? What's your business?

her friend out of the room. We were "See here, Mr. May," I said, getting pon my feet again; "whatever may nave been my business, if it's distaste ful to you I'll give it up. I'll come here, and do anything or nothing, just as you see fit to command. I can't give Florence up—I won't. Nothing shall induce me."

"Who asks you to give her up?" said the old man May. "She's as much of a fool about you as you are about her. Something must be done to patch up matters, I suppose. If you're inclined to do what's right, the Lord knows I am. A man can always leave his past behind him, especially out here in this part of the country. But what has been your way of doing? It don't make any difference now. Out with it at once. A gambler?" I shook my head. For the moment his vehemence took away from me all power of articulation. "A highwayman? a horse-thief?"

shouted the old man. At that moment Florence ran into the room and up to her father. Her face was like marble.

"Papa, papa," she cried, "come away from that man. He has deceived us all shamefully." "What is he?" screamed the old man. 'A convict? a murderer?" "Papa, oh, papa, my friend has told me all about him. His face brought hack to her all the old agony. This man officiated at the last sad ceremony.

Oh, papa, this man is an undertaker! The old man May fell back in a chair. His face became of an ashy pallor, and with a trembling, stubby forefinger he pointed to the door. I made one final effort to reach Florence. She shuddered, and drew back. In her beautiful face struggled an expression of pity and loathing. "Go away, you miserable man!" she said; "oh, do go away!" And I went. I started for Omaha that night, not even waiting to bid Cousin Jack good-bye. I could not reach home quick enough. Only to press on to the dear old city, to see again the sweet face of Cousin Sue, which every moment of my journey rendered dearer and more precious. Not that I was weak enough to disparage the beauty of Miss May in my disappointment and chagrin, but it had never held the domestic and solid charm that invested the attractions of Cousin Sue. Here was a woman who would share life with a man honestly and fearlessly, help him to hear misery as well as appreciate happiness, help him to make money as well as to spend it, help him to dispel bugbears instead of raising them—a warm-hearted, brave, religious girl, who took the world as she found it, tried to better it as she went along, confiding innocently and happily in the will of the Almighty. Oh, for a balloon to Omaha! And reaching Omaha, still more wearily the road lengthened out. I scarcely slept a wink for the last two nights, and gaining the city, half worn out but glad, hag-gard but happy, I jumped into a cab, offering the driver double fare to push on double quick, and we went rattling over the dear old streets, while I craned my neck out of the window, and fretted at every delay. I went direct to Sue, knowing the dear girl's heart would beat all the warmer for a weary traveler, and reaching the house of my aunt, found it, as usual, with the blinds cheerily open, the familiar geraniums blossoming lustily at the windows of the front basement, the canaries singvealed a delicately embossed skirt of ing away, the grate fire blazing, and India muslin. As I said before, I pertue the oleander in full bloom. A warm, spicy, fragrant odor of cakes and preserves and all manner of dainties came floating out of the kitchen, and Aunt

Cynthia ran in, kissing me at arm's length, for her hands were full of flour. "Getting ready for Christmas?" I said. "Better than that," said Aunt Cynthia; but I paid no heed to this remark, for I was looking around for Sue.

beginning to feel uncomfortable. "You said you'd cut your throat first, didn't you? Now, honest, Mort, before Heaven, didn't you say that?" "And you told her?" I said, sitting down on the step, for I began to guess the truth. ·"No, I didn't. I never said a word about you that would disparage you in said Jack. "I'll give up all idea of the partnership to you again, but it won't be safe for any one to interfere with my claim to Cousin Sue."

I smiled bitterly. "She's not the kind of woman to give her word and break it lightly," I said, and softened, for after all Jack was worthier of her than I, and so many blows would break the most indomitable spirit. "God bless you both!" I said, holding out my hand to him. Commiserative tears sprang to the good fellow's eyes. "Won't you go up and see her?" he

"Not now," I replied. "Well, come in at Christmas, Mort anyway, to the wedding, won't you? I ask it as a favor, Mort." And I did go in at Christmas, and saw them married, and Sue seemed so perfectly happy that I almost distrusted her old fondness for me; but only a few nights ago, at the christening of her third baby, when Sue and I were talking together in a corner, in a jolly, confidential way, and I had told her that my money and share of the business should go to her eldest boy, Mortimer, in the impulse of the moment asked her if, upon that morning in the ware-room, before I went West, I had made her an offer of marriage, what she would have said. "Bless your soul," said the frank generous creature, "I'd have jumped

Some Newly Discovered Points on Iceland.

Iceland is well located for a summer residence, being in the Northern Atlantic on the confines of the Arctic Ocean. Nearly all the icebergs on their way from the pole to the Gulf of Mexico stop there to wood and water, which has an enlivening effect on business. Iceland has about 70,000 inhab itants, chiefly of Scandinavian origin though a Scan. mag. case is almost unknown among them. They are strictly honest: an ice house can be left unlocked on the darkest night without a lump being raised.

Iceland was discovered in the eighth century by a Norwegian ice dealer, who was searching for that commodity one very mild winter when his usual sources of supply had failed, and he struck this island, which just flowed with it, so he called it Iceland, and a nice land it has been ever since. It was a republic for 400 years, but now owns allegiance to Denmark. Hamlet, during one of his trips to Iceland, was nearly frozen stiff, which gave rise to his asthetic exclamation:

"O, that this too too solid flesh would melt, Thaw, etc." It was all altogether too too for anything. The island is warmed by numerous volcanoes, and it is a cold day when they get left-without an eruption. If they miss an eruption they are liable to break out with the scurvy, which answers every purpose. Scurvy is the pational air of Iceland. When they don't sing that they 'roar a borealis, which is also a northern production. Though Icelanders are a temperate people, they are fond of putting in a glass occasionally, and that is why there are so many glaciers there. Iceland is noted for its hot springs called geysers. Nearly every resident has one in his back yard, so that if the fall and winter prove cold he is sure of a hot spring. Some of the women in big hats that we meet on our streets remind us of those springs, they look so like a guy, sir. The prevalence of small-pox throughout the country has caused some strange exhibitions of fright and selfishness Only nine miles out of St. Louis a negro lay sick with the disease on a pile of straw by the roadside. The next morning he was discovered, and as the weather had been cold it is probable that he was badly frozen; but nobody would go to his aid, and he was left to die all alone, which he did after another night of exposure. An Indian woman was similarly left to herself in a suburb of Cincinnati. After her death the shanty in which her body remained was set on fire by throwing blazing wads of straw at it. Three children were abandoned by their parents at Selina, Tenn., and in this case there was not the excuse of real danger, for the father and mother had been protected by recent vaccination. A Powerful Appeal. The Lewiston, Me., Journal is responsible for the following story: At a recent local temperance meeting a speaker, in dwelling upon the degredation caused by the appetite for liquor, said he knew a man who drank to such an extent that his whole person seemed impregnated with alcohol; his lungs, even, became so charged with it that in blowing out a candle one day his breath took fire as if it were naphtha. At the conclusion of these remarks olear-eyed and ragged man staggered forward from the rear of the hall. The audience-room was packed. People standing in the aisles made a passageway for the groping inebriate. All present thought another reformation was to come and that the trembling toper was on his way forward to sign the iron-clad pledge. The people on the stage stood ready to welcome him gladly. The besotted and rum-poisoned appearance of the old fellow made a sad and quieting impression on the crowd, snd the utmost silence prevailed. The editor of the Fall River (Mass.) News, who is fond of fishing through the ice for pickerel, thus describes the conditions under which he has found the sport satisfactory: "A good time to catch pickerel through the ice is when it is covered with snow and the sun is shining brightly. Cut the holes through the ice 12 feet apart, and in a group, instead of running them out in a straight line. The sun shining through the holes cut in this form is a success ful lure for the fish. A live mummychog is better bait than a shiner, from the fact that he is always at work. He cannot keep still, while the shiner is apt to have a lazy spell after being placed on the hook. Any tackle that gives Mr. Pickerel 10 feet of slack line as soon as he bites it is a good one. Another advantage of placing the holes in a cluster is that when you have a bite you are close by and can attend to

What is this? It is a man. Oh! so it is; I thought at first it was a wild animal. What is it the man has in his hand? It is a package of bills. What is the man trying to do with the bills? He is trying to collect them. Will he do it? We fear not. Where is he going? He is going to the sanctum; he has a bill for eighty cents against the editor. He has been there before. The editor hears the wellknown footsteps in the rotunda and crawls under the table. The man comes in and looking at the clock says: Is Mr. So-and-So in? The clock does not say anything, but the editor under the table groans in his soul of souls. But the man does not hear him. He has worn out two pairs of $7 shoes running after that eighty cents. He has on his feet the third pair of shoes sacrificed in this vain pursuit. He looks down at them and sees holes in his toes. He turns with a weary sigh and goes out apostrophising. The editor crawls blithely from beneath the table and joyously completes an editorial entitled, "Our National Wealth; How to Protect it."

How a Cat Saved a Child's Life. A singular incident happened at East Germantown, a village fourteen or fifteen miles west of here, by which the death of a cat saved the life of a child. A young man named Frank Winter had gone to his room, in the second story of his home, to get a breech loading gun to hunt birds with, and was descending the stairs with it when his hand slipped against the hammer and discharged one of the barrels. The load struck a pet cat that his brother, a little boy of five or six years, was carrying in his arms, and burried itself in its body. The boy, who was directly in range when the gun exploded, was also hit by one shot, which cut off a finger at the first joint. The cat protected his breast and saved his life.—Richmond (Ind.)

Senator Lapham, in a bill introduced in the Senate Monday, goes for polygamy so far as to change the name of Utah to Altamont. He proposes to take all that is connected with this business at one swoop. The bill disfranchises all persons guilty of bigamy or polygamy, and makes them ineligible for jurors or any other office. It provides for the support of destitute wives and children by levying a tax for that purpose.

A correspondent of the Evening News objects to taxing bonds and mortgages because they are not property. He claims that because A. buys a $10,000 farm of B., and gives a $10,-000 mortgage, that does not make $20,-000 worth of property. Besides, with this law, interest that is now at seven per cent. would be only five, or as much less as the liability of taxes amounts to, and the amount of taxable property found by the assessor would be but little less. It seems that a more equitable way would be to allow tax-payers to subtract the amount of their bonded indebtedness from their assessment and assess the rest to the bond-holder.

"Soda Water."

The beverage popularly known as so-da water is so named because it was formerly made of bicarbonate of soda or baking-soda; and, in the East, bicarbonate of soda is still largely employed; the manufacturers claiming that no cheaper ingredient can be furnished that can so well serve their purpose. It is said the basis of all fermented beverages now manufactured is mostly made from sulphuric acid and ground limestone, and not "marble-dust," as is generally supposed. It is ground to the consistency of flour in a powerful steam mill and passed through a sieve; the finer it is ground the greater the quantity of gas that will be produced. By the time it is well screened it is almost pure carbon-ate of lime, and is then poured into an air-tight metallic vessel, denominated s generator, and saturated with sulphuric icid. By the union of gas and lime the sulphate of gypsum is formed, and the carbonic gas is eliminated. Afterward the sulphate of gypsum is blown out of the generator, the gas is passed through the pipes to another vessel, when it is passed through the water, for the purpose of freeing it of the presence of oil of vitrol or any other noxious gas. From the gasometer the gas is passed into portable fountains, containing, filtered water; for it is known that water at a low temperature will absorb its own volume of carbonic acid gas, and the Struggle With a Porter-House Steak.

"This is the porter-house, is it?" asked the sad passenger, sitting at the corner table in the restaurant. "Yes sir," said the waiter, with the weary air of a man who was tired of having to tell the same lie a thousand times a day, "porter-house steak, sir; same as you ordered sir." "Do you cut porter-house steak from between the horns this year?" asked the sad passenger, with the intonation of a man who wanted to know. "Sir?" said the waiter.

"It seemed to be a trifle tenderer last year," the sad passenger went on, with the air of a tired man indulging in pleasant reminiscences of the past; "but I remember now; it was cut a trifle lower down then. Last year you cut your porter-house steaks from the curlin the forehead and the sirloins from the shin. But I think this comes from between the horns. I used to live in a boarding-house where they cut the porter-house between the horns, and this one reminds me of them. Animal dead this steak came "Dead," echoed the astonished waiter;

course, sir. He was butchered, sir, "Butchered to make a Roman holiday," sighed the passenger. "He would be more likely to make a Roman swear. Well, it was time he was killed. He hadn't many more years to live on this earth. Ah, here is the brass tip from one of his horns. Dropped into the steak, no doubt, while you were slicing it off. What do von do with these steaks when the guests are through with them?" The waiter looked puzzled. "Why, sir." he said, "they ain't nothing left of 'em when customers gets through with 'em,

"Possible?" said the sad passenger "what becomes of them?" The waiter looked nervous. "What!" he said: "the customers eat them up." The sad passenger looked up with an air of interest. "Incredible!" he exclaimed; "can not accept your statement without proof. They may hide them under their chairs, or secrete them in their napkins, or they may carry them away in their pockets to throw at burglars, but I can not believe they eat them. Here, let me see one of them eat this and I will believe you. Trust me, good

A Colorado Sanset. Standing upon the margin of a lovely lake in the bosom of the nestling mountains above the beautiful Village of Georgetown, in Colorado, one can see a sunset more brilliant and beautiful than was ever looked upon in the East, and which is only equaled by the virgin reach of reddening light which mellows into twilight shadows on the plains. I saw it on a summer evening when all nature was hushed in stillness. The fireflies shot through the growing dusk like sparkling louries in Egyptian night. Overhanging forest and swart and blackened crag were reflected in the green waters of the lake. The sun hovered, as in a fascinated spell, above the mountain tops, while rays of golden light, flushed with crimson peak and turret on nature's battlements. It seemed to glow and expand like an opening rose, until it became full-blown, and cast its arrowy pencilings for miles across the sky like a mighty flame. Then, as if ashamed of its boldness, it drew a veil of grayish mist about its face and blushed beneath it. The mist changed into a cloud shaped like a crescent, with ragged fringes flecked with gold, and in its wonderful aspect recalled the legends of Mohammed's banner, red and lurid be neath Asian skies. Even as I looked it changed. The darkening scarlet_was transformed to ruby brilliancy. Long lines of pallor whitened on the parti-colored surface, side by side with golden lances, which seemed to flash from the glowing orb like dissolving rays. The enamored sky for one feverish instant caught and mirrored all the colors of the rainbow. Then again it darkened—flushed and paled—and drawing the

Sold.-Mr. B. M. Pennell has bought the Ammerman house, with two acres of land, on Front street, of B. F. Pennell, of Berrien Springs, for $2,500. He will improve the property as soon as the weather will admit and will then offer it for sale.

HARVESTING machine dealers have commenced their work, and are busily engaged in setting forth to the farmers the numerous points of superiority of their machines over any other machine known to the civilized world or the Hoosiers.

THE RECORD is informed that a first class poker room is being operated regularly in one of the buildings on Front street, where the old and young boys spend their nights and Sundays and loose change. Do the officers know whether there is or not? If they do not, will they inform themselves?

Mr. Hughson, while at his home in St. Joseph last week, took a walk across the fields near by, and as he walked through the grass noticed a considerable number of grasshoppers flying along in front of him. He thought that Feb. 15 was pretty early for such birds THE U.S. mail service had lots of to be out.

At the masquerade parade in Niles last Thursday, there was represented a burlesque on the St. Joseph Valley railroad. Our informant did not say whether they had the hose companies out to wet it down or not. They would hardly be apt to do such a mean trick as that, however, since they fully recovered from the court house fever.

We think we should enjoy living in South Bend. They charge their own citizens and tax-payers a license of $2 per day if they want to sell a book of any kind, or a map. The enhancing influence this has on the dissemination of knowledge can hardly be imagined by one who has had no experience.

Mr. A. D. AYERS, of the Telephone Construction Company, has the work of establishing an exchange at Niles well under way, and will commence the work of constructing a line connecting the line to this place and Berrien Springs as soon as that is completed, which will be in about a week.

THE executive committee of the Berrien County Odd Fellows Association met at New Buffalo yesterday to decide where to hold the next celebration of the Anniversary of the Order, April 26, and chose New Buffalo as the place. The various committees were appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The Odd Fellows of that place will leave nothing undone to make the celebration a success.

LAST summer, during the firemen's tournament at Niles, Mr. Huggins, of this city, who was in attendance, had his pockets picked of a watch and chain. Yesterday a number of young men from Niles were here on a little pleas ure tour, and Mr. Huggins noticed his missing chain dangling innocently from the pocket of one of the visitors. He hunted up an officer and asked the young man to deliver over the proper tv. which the latter did without hesita tion. He claimed that he purchased the chain of another young man in Niles, who was still in possession of the watch. Huggins will now take steps to recover the watch.-South Bend Tribune. OUR editorial brother, D. B. Cook, Esq., of the Mirror, went to Berrien Springs on Tuesday, and to show hi lugubrious account of his trip, and of "getting left" at Buchanan and having to come home on wheels. A landslide bringing down earth and stumps on the track about three miles this side of the seat of government, caused an abandonment of the train and a resort to a hand-car by the passengers.—Niles Republican. That explains the trouble. The train has made regular runs all winter without serious mishap, and now see what disaster the first time the famous scribe ply such an institution with all kinds comes this way. Can it be the evil spirit accompanies him?

MAJOR SAMUEL WELLS returned from his trip to New York to attend the meeting of the National Agricultural Association, Thursday. MRS. MILLIE CONWAY, sister of Mr. Orin Main, of Niles township, died Feb. 18, aged 84 years. Mrs. Conway was born in New York, but has been a resident of St. Joseph county, Ind., and Berrien county, for over fifty years. She has lived a consistent Christian life, and been a member of the New Light and Christian church over sixty years. The funeral was held in this place Monday.

ELDER W. DEVERELL, from Canada, will preach at the old Advent Church, Sunday, Feb. 26, morning and evening. Subjects: Morning-The two Thrones. Rev. 3:21. Evening-The coming Russian war, compared with the Bible, showing the countries which are to be taken by that power. After which show the probable move which the European powers will make for the suppression of that power. Please bring Bibles.

JUST as the Democrat goes to press we are in receipt of a line from H. C. French, dated Tampa, Fla., Feb. 10, announcing the arrival at that place of O. E. Woods and H. H. Kinyon with their wives, of Buchanan. He says: "We are having a pleasant time; are now trying to arrange for a cruise of about ten days down the gulf coast, sight seeing and deer hunting. Our party expect to take sail boat to-morow and meet the families of Moon, Linsley, Spooner and others, on the coast about eight miles from here, for a picnic and one night's camping.-Cassopolis Democrat.

ARRANGEMENTS TO BE .- Messrs. 'arothers & Hudson have sold out their saloon business to A. B. Sabin, of the Dunbar House, and closed doors this morning. The building they occupied will be used by Redden & Boyl as a dry goods store, after March 1, instead of moving into the Boyl building on the opposite side of the street as was intended. The Boyl building is to be occupied by W. S. Howe as a furniture store as soon as the room can be fitted for that purpose. This leaves Buchanan with but one saloon, which is a great plenty under ordinary circumstances. The room now occupied by W. S. Howe will probably be used for a millinery establishment, although this is not settled upon.

THE officers of the Michigan Central railroad came to this place last Thursday to look the town over and decide are talking of exchanging property. whether they should grant a few priv- Mr. Francis takes the store and Mr. ileges that have been asked. Among those promised is that they will put a third rail along the narrow gauge road from their depot to Rough Bros'. wagon works, by way of the narrow gauge engine house near River street crossing. This will enable those who wish to load and unload cars to have the cars brought down to either Short street or any other point along that part of the line most convenient to their business. Among the privileges partly promised is that they shall sell tickets for Berrien Springs and return, at their stations in this county, west of this place, the tickets to be good on way freight, thus enabling those living at Dayton, Galien, Three Oaks and New Buffalo to attend business at the county seat to go there on the morning train and return to their homes in the evening. For this privilege the people may thank Mr. L. P. Fox.

A Birthday Party.

There was a very pleasant gathering of the relatives of Mrs. Evalinda Hooker, at her residence in this place, Feb. 14, for the purpose of celebrating her 70th birthday and to present her some presents as tokens of their respect for her. The party was gotten up as a surprise, and the dinner, which was a very excellent one, was provided by the relatives. To see Mrs. Hooker moving around so lively, a person might think she would live to enjoy a number of birthdays in years to come. A short time after dinner was very agreeably spent in talking over old times, and of those who were near to us and have just passed over the river before us. Her father's family was a large one, which consisted of eleven daughters and one son, who were among the oldest settlers in this section of the country, of whom only a few remain with us. Mrs. Hooker came with her husband from New York in the year 1838, and settled upon a farm about one mile south of our village.

Odd Fellows' Resolutions. At a regular meeting of Buchanan Lodge No. 75, I. O. O. F., held Tuesday evening, Feb. 21, 1882, the following resolutions were adopted: WHEREAS, It has pleased our allwise and loving Father to take from our midst brother Edward McGlinsey, who but recently came among us to

Resolved, That we tender to the family of our deceased brother our heartfelt sympathy in this time of their great bereavement, and would urge upon them to remember that "God reigns," and that "He doeth all things well." Resolved, That we express to Selins Grove Lodge No. 197, of Selins Grove. Pa., of which he was a member, our deep regret at their loss of brother McGlinsey, and would remind them that in his remains we should recognize "an emblem of what we are sure to be and what we may soon become.'

May we ponder upon this lesson and be also ready.

Resolved, That our Secretary be instructed to convey a copy of these resolutions to the family of our deceased brother, to the Lodge of which he was a member, and that they be also published in the village papers.

We are informed that Mr. H. M. Rose, late of the St. Johns Republican, has purchased the Benton Harbor Times and Palladium, of Mr. W. H. Marston, and that hereafter he will be the presiding genius of that institution. Mr. Rose is a bright young man, a versatile writer, and will be a desira-ble acquisition to Berrien county journalism. In further evidence of his good sense, we may mention that he chose for a wife one of our Niles young ladies, the daughter of Mr. John Miley.

We are glad to announce that the Scientific American came out of the late fire in New York, like the fabled Phonix with renewed life. The subscription lists, account books, patent records, patent drawings, and correspondence were preserved in massive fire-proof safes. The printing of the Scientific American and Supplement was done in another building; consequently the types, plates, presses, pa-per, etc., were unharmed, and no interruption of business was occasioned. The new Scientific American offices are located at 262 Broadway, corner of Warren Street, a very central and excellent situation. The new building fronts towards the City Hall, the Court House, and the New Post-office. Neary opposite, and a few hundred feet distant from the Scientific American offices, is the entrance to the great Suspension Bridge over the East River, between New York and Brooklyn, which required ten years to construct Rescued From Death. William J. Coughlin, of Somerville, Mass. ays: "In the sall of 1876 I was taken with a iolent bleeding of the lungs, followed by a severe cough. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the lungs. I got a bottle, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced spirits than I have in the past three years. "There is an opinion much too prevalent in the world that the posts and places in life depend largely on an undefined and unregulated force, which makes man the passive creature of a for-

She wished I would see if it was not so. I examined her shoes and agreed with her that they were too large. As she stepped, her foot rocked over first on one side and then on that. Now it pressed over on the outside, rubbing down over the edge of the sole, and touching the ground, and perhaps, if the ground were at all uneven, on the very

To Teach Dogs to Hate Mankind. The idea of catching highway robbers with bloodhounds seems to be gaining in popularity. Some few newspapers oppose the suggestion on the high ground of humanitar anism. Such papers say it is wrong to chase human beings with dogs. The robbers are becoming the suggestion of the sugges the eminent surgeon, Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, said: "Let me repeat to you that the success you seek lies wholly within the pale of the law, and if I were to lay before you what I believe to be the conditions which regulate advanceing so numerous, however, and are so careless about murdering or maining people when a robbery is to be done, that it should seem that a highwayman should be caught by other means than such as have been in vogue for capturing other kind of criminals. And that highwayman are so seldom caught in the orwayman are so seidom caught in the or-dinary way is a fact that goes largely to calling for the bloodhoundplan. Whether it is practical to chase criminals with hounds in this climate is a question of great doubt. We are told by hunters that in the summer time in California tinguished success. The purer and more ennobling the subject which engrosses the attention of the student the more will his mind be elevated, his feelings refined, and the whole man be lifted out have not the power of scenting to any very great degree of usefulness.

Another difficulty is that robbers are generally well armed, and by shooting the dogs can easily get rid of the pursuit. The dogs will always be ahead of the men who are with them in the chase. This would be more particularly the hounds used for chasing deer or foxes case in the rough mountain regions of the State, where the robbers mostly operate.

In spite of these drawbacks, if any body wants to experiment with hounds in chasing robbers, it is easy to do so. The bloodhound is not absolutely necessary to the business. A No. 1 foxhound will do. The writer of this has seen many "packs of hounds" that were used many "packs of hounds" that were used to pursuing human beings, and yet he never saw a pure bloodhound. Any hound, and we believe almost any dog with a "nose" on him, can be taught to follow only the scent of a human being. The best bred English foxhounds can certainly be trained in that way to such a degree that, in moist climates, the pur-sued human can get away only by killing the pursuing dog.

Whoever wants to own a pack of menpursuing hounds should get at the start a lot of puppies, the best breed that he can find. If these puppies are all of one litter so much the better. As soon as the pups are old enough to toddle around let their owner himself constantly feed and care for them. Let every other hu-man being that comes near the little dogs tease them, and even whip them. In that way the pups will soon get a dislike to the human race. Let a man, or a boy, after teasing the puppies run away from them and hide. They will soon learn to seent him out. Advance them in the grades of this school as they show that they have learned. Their chase can be made longer each week or so, and taking the scent without their having seen the pursued will be quickly acquired. Never let them run after any animal below the grade of men. In this way one can have human-pursuing hounds. The descendants of such trained dogs will inherit something of the educated disposition of their progenitors, and generation after generation, properly bred, of those same dogs will become the better man-chasers It is the training and education of dogs in a particular way that makes their strains celebrated.—Grass Valley Tid-

The Curse of Mormonism. Here is a horrible story told by a correspondent of the Eureka Leader of what he saw at Ogden, a railroad town in Utah, where a number of Swedish immigrants were waiting to take the train to Brigham City:

I was looking on with great curiosity, when I discovered a tow-headed, buxom girl weeping bitterly. Two or three old women were scolding at her, and a withered up old Mormon stood with his arm around her. He finally coaxed her off to his wagon, she screaming and crying that she would not marry him, and he never letting go of her until he sat her down upon the wagon-tongue. A girl was following them. I halted her and asked what was the trouble. She said that this girl was pledged to the old man and that he had paid her passage out; and now she did not want to marry him because he already had a wife and seven children. I asked if she would be forced to do so. The girl replied: "Of course she will. They have pledged her to him." Poor thing! the last that I saw of her she was struggling to get away from him, and the withered old fellow was holding on with both arms around her. It is sickening to think of such doings in a civilized land. Dark as that girl's mind was, she had some grains of virtue and some delicate instincts. The despair pictured on her face showed that.

There is a terrible account for our country to settle with that poor girl. England was lately stirred with indignation because girls were found to be inveigled from London to Belgium for immoral purposes; but what was done there a few times is done here a thousand times, and yet our country does not dynamite the evil of polygamy.—('on-

USEFUL HINTS. To MAKE plum pudding take six ounces of raisins, six ounces of currants, six ounces of bread crumbs, six ounces of suet, half a nutmeg, a little lemon peel, five eggs, half a wineglass of brandy. Mix these ingredients together and put the pudding into a mold and boil it three hours.

boil it three hours. READY-MADE GLUE.—A good glue ready for use is made without the application of heat by dissolving the glue in common whisky instead of water. Both are put together in a bottle, which is then corked tight and allowed to stand for three or four days. If prepared in this way, it will keep for years and always be ready for use, except in extremley cold weather, when it will be necessary to set it in warm water before using. A

They require when growing plenty of moisture at the roots and shaded from the direct rays of the sun. When watering, however, do not allow much water to fall on the leaves, as it is apt to cause them to rot. A soil suitable for this plant is sandy loam and a good mixture of leaf-mold and thoroughly rotted manure. Do not put into too large pots, as the soil is apt to sour before the roots pass through it sufficiently to use up the moisture. A STRONG AND HANDY CEMENT.—One of the strongest cements, and very readily made, is obtained when equal quantities of gutta percha and shellac are melted together and well stirred. This is best done in an iron capsule placed on a sand bath, and heated either over a gas furnace or on the top of a stove. It gas inmace or on the top of a stove. It is a combination possessing both hardness and toughness, qualities that make it particularly desirable in mending crockery. When this cement is used the articles to be mended should be warmed to about the melting point of the mixture, and then retained in proper position until cool, when they are ready KEROSENE STAINS UPON A FLOOR.—A correspondent writes from Pilot Mound, Minn., that the breaknig of a kerosene lamp has caused a "frightful spot" upon the floor, and wishes to know how it can be removed. Good kerosene has a boiling point of 380 degrees, considerably above the melting of lard—hence in to drive it com fabric, from paper or from wood, it must be heated high exactly to form a vapor, when, if pure, it may be completely removed. Heat may be applied to the floor by using flatirons sufficiently hot, first placing a piece of paper over the creat. It may be that after the city the spot. It may be that, after the oil is driven from the surface by heat, the stain will appear; some of the oil remaining in the wood will be brought to the surface by capillary attraction. In such a case it will be necessary to repeat the operation as often as the stain appears.

"Turning now to the medical profession, does it come short of the conditions which have been designated as essentia to a life pursuit? It has always remained to me an unsolvable paradox that a profession whose members do so much to relieve human suffering in all walks of life and are so willing to sacrifice for the benefit of others; a profession whose members ordinarily devote one-fourth of their lives to the gratuitous dispensing of their services, and so few of whom accumulate a competency of this world's goods sufficient to keep the wolf from the door, or, at best, to remove the anxieties of advancing years—I say it is puzzling to explain in the face of such a record

A Clever Husband. Only a short time ago, says the Osceola Sentinel, while we sat in an Osceola store, we saw a man and his wife from the country trading. The woman had the appearance of being a hard working, intelligent lady. She was examining a piece of calico or other cheap dress goods. The clerk said: "Shall I cut you off ten yards?" The pale faced, hardworked woman turned to her husband and in a timid, frightended manner asled him if she might buy a dress, as she needed it, and the cost would less than $1. "No," he grunted, "I can't afford it," and yet he had just paid as much for a great plug of navy and a paper or two of smoking tobacco. The poor, illy-clad, but neat woman, sub-narrow! It has long been suspected that a narrow sole was the great trouble in this world. The particular suffering under consideration, I am sure, all, or nearly all, comes from a too norrow sole.

My friend Mrs. C., on reading the chapter in Our Girls devoted to "Boots and Shoot"

step her boot would rock over on the other side of the sole. Such friction be-tween the little toe and the big toe joints

it has been left until the present time without organization, or the least approach to a civil government. Various attempts have been made to obtain from Congress a government for Alaska, but, for some cause or other, they have invariably failed. It is a startling fact that this Territory, which is more than twice as large as Texas, and now contains some thirty thousand inhabitants, two or three thousand of whom are white, should have no other law than that which is promulgated by the captain of a war vessel stationed at Sitka. There is a Collector of Customs at Sitka, and Seal Inspectors at the Seal Islands, but nowhere is there an executive or a judicial authority known to the law. Acting under the instructions of the Secretary of the Navy, the commander of the man of war stationed at Sitka maintains order and administers justice. This condition of things was necessary at first, when the civilized population was not large enough to form a civil government, but now a Territory should be organized, and a Territorial Governor appointed. The present authority, as we understand it, is only exercised over so much of the country as is embraced within a radius of two hundred miles around Sitka. The Alaska Commercial Company governs the Seal Islands, and the balance has not even this apology for a government. Yet the country deserves a good and stable form of civil government. It contains gold, silver, and other minerals, and its salmon fishery is already of value. Industries that might be made important are kept down by the present condition of affairs, while nothing is lacking to promote the growth and wealth of the Territory but organization and the appendages of civil law. Land Laws.

Why is it that it is necessary for the British Parliament to pass a law regulating the rent of land in Ireland? And why is it that this Irish law is believed to be only the precursor of similar laws to be enacted for England and Scot-The cause which has forced on this mighty change in British legislation is simply the swift navigation of the At-lantic and the introduction of American beef and mutton into the old country.

As long as the tenant farmers of England, Scotland and Ireland controlled their own markets, they got paying prices for the beef, mutton and pork which formed their principal products, and thus they were enabled to pay the heavy rates of rent which were exacted for the land they leased. But when, through increased speed of ocean transportation, it became practical to import beef and mutton from the United States, whether on the hoof or slaughtered, and to sell the same in the British markets at the prices of Texas and Missouri, adding only the charges for transportation and insurance, the British or Irish farmer, with his dear land and high rates of rent, found himself suddenly brought into competition with the farmer of Texas or Missouri, where the price of land is only nominal, and the rate of rent is comparatively trifling. Hence the whole trouble in Ireland and else Such is the cause which is revolutionizing the tenure and the revenue of land in the United Kingdom, reducing its productive value, and rendering it necessary for the Legislature to come in and make new settlements between the land owner and the tenant.
