BUCHANAN, BERRIEN COUNTY, MICHIGAN, THURSDAY, JUNE 22, 1882.

On the terrace lay,

Dimly rose the day.

Merrily the sunshine

Touching with an equal ray,

In equal gladness to illume

Caught the upper pane,

With its glitter to surprise

Lower crept the sunshine

Down the lattice tall.

All along the silent floor,

The triumphant sunshine

Flooding all it saw.

An eternal shadow cast;

And her glances fell at last.

Where the glorious sunshine

The tall cross that stood above

And 'mid her bitter sorrow strove

"And," said the happy sunshine,

"Oh, heavy eyes that mourn,

Trust to the God of sunny hours,

Nor dare in grief's keen scorn

With reckless hand aside to toss

The trials of our way to heaven.

The comforting through nature given,

"To turn away from sunshine:

Nor in the sense of loss.

All her best of life and love,

To point the higher road.

Danced, and shone and glowed,

Where the treasured picture showed

Oh, heart, from its chief moorings torn.

The wakening earth and budding flowers;

Look at the joy with which He dowers

As in a breathless awe.

Till it saw the radiance fall

Light step or cheery call.

Past the heavy, close-shut door.

Through the room that knew no more

Laughed at last her gaze to draw,

From where the phantoms of the past

■Violet bed and vew tree's gloom

But as yet it strove in vain,

The yearning in the lady's eyes.

Fought life's long fret and strain.

Who, lonely, 'neath the sweet spring skies,

Preparing to Catch Sharks.

A year passed. Our young avenger of his father's stolen fruit had joined a party, one bright October morning, for a hunting expedition. They had gone to Cat Island, a large swampy island situated near the head of Hemmody estate. they were returning home. As they neared the center of the treacherous little body of water a sudden squall arose, and, striking the sail with full force, before they had time to shift it, their boat was upset.

Two of the young men were fortunate enough to grasp the gunwale of the boat, where they clung, but the remaining three, being separated from it by the force of the fall, and excellent swimmers, struck boldly for the shore, a distance of half a mile. One, two, forms emerged from the waters of the lake and stood in safety that their actions might be less impeded, they plunged again into the waters of the lake and struck out in the di-

At this moment a young girl, a wildfaced, gypsy-like maiden, rushed from a fisherman's hut near the beach, and, without any ado, plunged into the water, and commenced the race with her two male rivals for the rescue of the drowning man. Her life had been spent on the water and in its bosom, and she soon proved herself more than a match for her competitors. She reached the spot where the young man went down just in time to see a tuft of hair floating on the surface. Seizing this firmly in her left hand, she supported the senseless body by almost superhuman exertions in one so young until the arrival of the two tardy swimmers, and together they bore the drowning man ashore.

* * Will Dermody was lying in a weak condition in his bed, recovering from a severe fever which had resulted from his recent mishap; for it was not without the greatest exertion on the part of the physicians that he was restored to consciousness and life.

His mother stood by his bedside and had just finished telling him the particulars of his rescue. "It was Mabel Wheelock, a fisherman's daughter, who rescued you at the risk of her life; and, thinking you might wish to thank her," said Mrs. Dermody, with a smile, "I have sent in the orchard. As his mother stole from the room the young girl came quickly to his side, and, with a face from which all the wildness and defiance had fled, placed a soft brown hand over his pale lips, and asked him if she did not promise to make him repent the blow he struck her.

Will kissed the little hand and retained it in his own, and glanced again with deep admiration at the pretty face of Mabel; but this time he had no command from the Squire which forbade the admiration.

Of course, after this, his recovery was very rapid; and a few days thereafter he might have been seen with a beautiful gypsy-faced girl wandering through his father's orchard; for he had gone to the hut for her, and demanded her assistance in despoiling that choleric old gentleman of his Training Tomatoes.

Those who have never trained a tomato plant are not aware how much may be done with it. If nothing more can be done, it will pay in the excellence of fruit to merely lay down a lot of brush to keep the vines from the ground. A support or trellis of some kind can be very easily constructed. Supports of poles, wire, lath, or whatever will hold up the vines are such an improvement over the slip shod method that we cannot too strongly advise something of the kind. In a village garden the vines may be fastened to board fence or may be trained against the side of a barn, shed, or other building, fastened as needed by loops of leather or cloth, tacked up with small nails, and they will run to the height of ten feet or more if desired. In the way of variety some plants may be kept to a single stake or pole. and for those fond of such matters, afford much pleasant occupation in the training and pruning, besides giving more perfectly ripened fruit. In training to a single pole or trellis, the heavy clusters of fruit must be supported, or they may become so heavy as to break

A Useful Sermon Drawn from Her Bone-Brethren the words of my text are:

These beautiful words, dear friends, carry with them a solemn lesson. I propose this evening to analyze their meaning, and to attempt to apply it, lofty as it may be, to our every day

"Old Mother Hubbard, she went to the cupboard,

Mother Hubbard, you see was old; There being no mention of others, we may presume she was alone: a widow

-a friendless, old, solitary widow. Yet, did she despair? Did she sit down and weep, or read a novel, or wring her hands? No! "She went to the cupboard." And here observe that she went to the cupboard. She did not hop, or skip or run, or jump, or use any other peripatetic artifice; she sole-

We have seen that she was old and lonely, and we now further see that she was poor. For mark, the words are "the cupboard."

Not "one of the cupboards," or the "right hand cupboard," or the "left hand cupboard," or the one above. or the one below, or the one under the stair, but just the cupboard. The one little humble cupboard the poor woman possessed. Was it to bring forth golden goblets, or glittering precious stones, or costly apparel, or feasts, or any other attributes of wealth? It was to get her poor dog a bone! Not only was the widow poor, but her dog, the sole prop of her age, was poor, too. We can imagine the scene. The warded? "The cupboard was bare!" It was bare! There were to be found neither oranges, nor cheesecakes, nor penny buns, nor ginger bread, nor crackers nor nuts, nor lucifer matches. The cupboard was bare!

There was but one, only one solitary uphoard in the whole of that cotta and that one, the sole hope of the widow and the glorious loadstar of the poor dog, was bare! had there been a leg of mutton, a loin of lamb, a fillet of veal, even an ice from Gunter's, the case would have been different, the incident would have been otherwise.

Many of you will probably say, with all the pride of worldly sophistry, "The widow, no doubt went out and bought

She did not attempt, like the stiffnecked scoffers of this generation, to war against the inevitable; she did stand. She did nothing, "The poor dog had none!" And then at this point our in-

Boys Out Nights.

The boy who spends an hour of each evening lounging idly on street corners, wastes in the course of a year An Indiana man who took in the three hundred and sixty-five precious hours, which, if applied to study, would familiarize him with the rudiments of the familiar sciences. If in addition to wasting an hour each evening, he spends ten cents for cigars, which is usually the case, the amount thus worse than wasted would pay for ten of the leading periodicals in the country. Boys, think of these things.

Think of how much time and money you are wasting, and for what? The gratification afforded by a lounge on the corner or dicigar is not only temporary but positively hurtful. You cannot indulge in them without seriously injuring yourself. You acquire idle and wasteful habits, which will align to rough encoding woon. cling to you each succeeding year. You may in after life shake them off, hut the probabilities are that the habits thus formed in early life will remain with you to your dying day. NUMBER 20.

When sharks were numerous in New York Bay last summer, all attempts at catching the very large ones failed. This year the trial is to be renewed Shark-fishers are preparing their lines and hooks, and with last year's experience to guide them, they hope to suc ceed in landing some monsters. It is very difficult to exhaust a shark on a line. Generally the fishermen get tired first, for in this sort of sport there is little opportunity for the exercise of skill, but there is a great demand for strength. To fish for sharks successfully it is necessary to have a long line and a chain leader attached to the hook, which should be baited with a fresh bluefish or a couple of weak fish. A large block of wood is used for a float er, and is anchored by a stone fastened to a piece of common fishing line. In this way the bait is kept in the desired position. When the big floater goes the kind, as is usually the case when fishing on the beach, a tug of war is immediately commenced between the sportsmen and the shark. The latter always gets the start, and the difficulty is to turn him. Once turned the hauling becomes less difficult, until the shark finds himself get ting into shallow water. Then, if he is a very big fellow and his opponents are not sufficiently numerous, there are ten chances to one that he will manage to turn again. This is the critical moment. If he is strong enough to turn he should get line and be permit ted to run a reasonable distance, when the chance of turning him again be comes far better than when he is ir the shallow water. Then the work of down, the fishermen jump and grab the line. If there is a spile or anything to take a turn around, so much the better; but if there is nothing of hauling is resumed, and sore hands become orevalent. Panting, almost exhausted, and bath ed in perspiration, three stout Irish men hauling on a line hailed a boat man one day last fall from the Staten Island shore, near the mouth of the Narrows: "Come ashore, boss, and give us a pull; we've got a shark!" they shouted. The boatman lost no time in going to their relief. He was a powerful man, and the pull that he gave turned the shark head on for the beach, and he began to come quietly.

"He has given up the game," one of the party said. "He thinks it ain't a square deal, and that we had no right to call for help.

"Keep him coming!" said the boatman. "Don't give him a chance to change his mind!" "Now, Pat," one of the party shouted, "the moment we pull him out, you must go and take the hook out of his mouth." "Eh!" said Pat. "Be gob, you can go and do it yourself! I don't hanker after the iob.

The four men pulled the monster easily enough until he reached the. shallow water. There he refused posi tively to go any further. They tugged and strained. He plunged furiously. Just at this critical juncture there was disunion among the Irishmen, some favoring concession, others coercion. "Give him line!" the boatman shout-

"Not an inch!" said a coercionist. "Now, boys, all together!" "No. no; he's too strong yet." "Pull!"

"Don't pull!" Taking advantage of this want of unity, the shark made a terrible plunge and turned again. Then he darted off, making the line whistle through the water. Coming near the end of the line, which was 600 feet in length, he showed no disposition to slacken his speed. So the men braced themselves for another effort. Planting their heels in the sand, they began to howl, but the big fellow was too much for them. Step by step he compelled them to advance to the edge of the water. They declined to go in, and the shark would not come out. A renewed struggle of a most desperate character was immediately commenced. Suddenly the four Irishmen fell all in a heap in the sand.

The shark was gone. "Well, we had sport with him, any way," one said.

"Do you call it sport," another said to be dragged up and down the sand for an hour, and then to get nothing for it but sore hands?" "That's what I call powerful sport, the first speaker replied. "Welk" his companion said, "I'll never play tug of war with that old shark again."—New York Sun.

A Criticism Upon His Thrift.

The death of a prominent business man of New Britain, Conn., has evoked a communication in the Hartford Courant from some one who evidently believed himself a fine example of Connecticut cleverness or thrift. The writer says he bought of the deceased merchant in 1829—he being then at school in New Britian—"a two-bladed red bone handled pocket knife" for which he paid 22 cents. "I was then," he says, "as I have ever been since, inclined to buy, sell, exchange, and try to get gain. My practice was to swap knives from two to ten times each day, always aiming to get a little boot money." At the end of the term he says he had as the proceeds of his trades with the 22 cent knife, $15 in money and two old knives. This sum he placed in the savings bank, and as he remarks with conscious pride it "now amounts to more than $500!" This is all very fine as an example of thrift. but it is quite possible that the boys in the school whom he diddled out of the $15 and the odd knife have been more useful citizens and done more good in the world; and without saving as much as $500 either. John Frebbett, fifteen years old and residing with his parents at Perham, Minnesota, was an ardent reader of the Boys of New York and similar flash literature. On Saturday the bodies of Washington and Fred Febrack, two young Germans, were found in Red Rye, seventeen miles from Perham Washington had a load of buckshot back of the right ear, and Fred's throat had been cut after receiving a bullet in his cheek. Frebbett, after the murder, appeared in Perham with plenty of money, a watch, and Washington Febrack's pistol. An attempt was made to arrest him, but he escaped, and will probably reach his destination and become a cowboy, for which association his crime is a first-class recommendation. of a room where his daughters and some young friends were assembled, he thought, from what he overheard, that they were talking too free with the characters of their neighbors; and after their visitors had departed, he gave his children a lecture on the sinfulness of scandal. They answered, "But, father, what shall we talk about? We must talk about something!" you can do nothing else," replied he. "get a pumpkin and roll it about; that will at least be innocent diversion." A short time after, an association of ministers met at his house, and during the evening some discussions on points of doctrine were earnest, and their voices were so loud as to indicate the danger of losing their Christian temper: when his eldest daughter, overhearing them. procured a pumpkin, and entering the room, gave it to her father, and said, "There, father, roll it about." The minister was obliged to explain to his brethren; and good humor was instantly restored.

We have tried pruning in almost all months of the year, and on the whole prefer June. This being about the busiest month of the year, there is usually little time for pruning, and so the favorite time is early in spring, and many of our old orchards, in their rotton limbs and decayed trunks, bear testimony to the mischief wrought by the ill-timed use of saw and axe. Small limbs an inch in diameter or less can be taken off at any time with comparative safety. But the thorough pruning called for in a long neglected orchard is best done in the early summer. The sap is absorbed by the rapid formation of wood and leaves; the wood laid bare in pruning large limbs soon becomes scarred, the healing process around the edge of the wound begins immediately, and in a few years the wound will be completely covered with new wood and bark. There is no chance for decay as when the large limbs are removed in early spring. There is far too little pruning done in the farm orchard. A dead limb should not be suffered upon the tree. Good pruning leaves no stubs, but close to the trunk or branch bearing the excis-ness and happiness. The Fourth of July will be generally you, and wate till I calls you."-Brunscelebrated in Southern cities.

A terrible tornado passed over Grinnell and Malcolm, Iowa, last Saturday night, carrying with it death and de-

It appeared at Kelly at about eight o'clock, and at Grinnell about 8:30 P. M. It was seen at Grinnell five minutes before it struck, and parties describe it as a monstrous black and green cloud, making a noise like a heavy train of freight cars running through water on a rocky ballasted track.

First came the wind, which broke down the trees, and immediately following came the revolving, funnelshaped monster, emitting electrical sparks, and it passed through the city in less than a minute. Then followed a fearful flood of half an hour. The tornado passed through the northwest portion of the city, where were the best residences, and swept away almost every building for ten or twelve entire blocks. They were upon the more elevated portion of the city, and there was a clear sweep from the open prairie. The Iowa Congregational College, a beautiful four-story stone structure, and a large brick dormitory near it, built a few years since at a cost of about fifty thousand dollars, after the other college was burned, stood in the path of the storm and were both completely demolished.

Trees were pulled up by the roots and carried long distances, and half of the grove of maple, elm, and cherry trees were completely stripped of their bark on every side, showing plainly that the force was a genuine tornado. The track of the tornado was about 1,000 feet wide. Fifty-one persons, mostly women and children, were killed and nearly two hundred wounded at Grinnell. The loss of property in Malcolm is estimated at about $100,-000, and at Grinnell at nearly $400,000. Later.—Fuller particulars show the destruction is more widely spread than at first reported. Letter From Southern Illinois.

ST. ELMO, ILL., June 18, 1882. MR. RECORD:-I noticed a letter in your columns from our old friend of Weesaw, Orr Henderson, now in Kansas, and he speaks in glowing terms of their prospects. You know that every one who knows Orr Henderson is aware that he would starve before he would squeal, and then he would not squeal; he would simply say with his expiring breath, "Tell them in Michigan I was prospering." But such pluck, and such material as go to make up Orr Henderson is what makes a country, and long may he live to enjoy the prosperity that will certainly attend him.

Now, it may not be amiss to make a few remarks before I say anything about Egypt, or Southern Illinois.

As you are aware, I came to this place a little over one year ago, and moved on a farm adjoining town. It sounded a little big for a doctor to be called a farmer, but I did not lose my balance by it, but thought I was above the ordinary average of mortals, to be promoted from an M. D. to a farmer; and I certainly was. But last year I felt like hiding, from the very fact that we did not raise anything. Drouth and chintz bug cleaned us out, but American like, we "staid," and I am of the opinion that Providence orders all things well, for what we lost last year we will make up this. There were never better prospects for wheat and oats than at the present time. But this is the buggiest country I ever saw. Last year they ate up my grindstone, and commenced on my buggy tire; but I headed them off by covering my buggy tire with poison. But this year, thus far, all has been favorable. George Holmes, who is a boss farmer, I think, will teach these southern suckers a few things. They have been in the habit of using a piece of ground as long as it would raise anything, by plowing about four inches deep for a number of years in succession, and then if the soil failed to produce, call it a failure. One old Virginian told me that if he did not pull up every red clover he saw, and lay it on a stump so it would die, his "dad would give him a wolloping." This will give you an idea of the farming here. But I tell you that a few Michigan farmers like George Holmes will raise first-class crops, but better still, they will raise the value of land. George has the best oats I ever saw stand. They are commencing to head out, and are waist high and as thick as they can stand. "Bully for George." Potatoes never were better, and George knows how to take care of them. We have the army worm on the east of us, and also on the west of us, but thus far have kept off of our crops. Quite a number have commenced to e cut by the close of the week. We will not have much of a crop of apples, but a large crop of peaches. Late frests killed cherries and most small fruit. Good-day.

IRISH moss is successfully used as a mechanical agent for preventing incrust-ation in steam boilers. There are locomotives now running in this country, which run, as a regular duty for a short distance, at the rate of seventy-two miles an hour! This with a train of five cars. These are Baldwin engines on the Central Railroad of New Jersey; cylinders, 18x34.

A GERMAN authority states that a room covered with paper in wich ultramarine has been largely used was found to have an unpleasant odor of sulphurretted hydrogen, the source of which long escaped detection. It was ultimately found that the ultramarine in the design was being gradually decomposed by the alum forming an ingredient in the paper-hanger's paste. A MINIATURE steam engine, constructed by an ingenious clockmaker, is said to weigh only fifteen grains, and can be entirely covered by an ordinary thimble. The stroke of the piston is little over onetwelfth of an inch, and in diameter pro-portionately less. The whole machine consists of 140 distinct pieces fastened together by fifty-two screws; and three drops of water are sufficient to fill the boiler and set the mechanism in motion. The size of this engine has probably shrunk a trifle in the description.

For making a cement for leather belts, take of common glue and American isinglass equal parts, and place in a glue pot. Add water to cover the whole. Soak ten hours. Then bring the mixture to a boiling heat, and add pure tannin, till the whole becomes very ropy or like the white of eggs. Apply warm. Buff off the grain of the leather where it is to be cemented; rub the joint surface solidly together; let it dry a few hours, and it is ready for use. If properly put together no rivits will be needed, and the cement is as strong as the leather. For hardening lime, cement and similar substances, a German authority uses oner and enlabate of or zinc. To the solution coloring or odorous substances may be added. Cement, lime, gypsum and stones are hardened by this solution, either if covered with it or when dipped in it. The solution can also be used for wood and metals, if these have been previously covered with a layer of cement or lime, The cement or lime can be used alone, or mixed with sand and pebbles or with metal slag. The addition of cement to the last-named bodies can be reduced to a minimum by good mixing when the solution is used for hardening. This process is patented in Germany. THE operation of "driving" rivits consists in placing a set on the end of the rivit, and sledging it down to form the head, the operation requiring two men to sledge, one to hold the set, one to manage the holder, and a boy to heat the rivits. The rivet is not struck direct by the sledges at any time during the operation of driving, but one head is formed entirely by driving the set down squarely on the end of it. To drive a rivet requires about twenty-four blows with the nine-pound or ten-pound sledges at the rate of about eighty blows per minute; a flatter, with a face about 11-2 inches square, is then placed on the lap alongside the rivit, and given five or six blows to close the sheet together; the set is then placed on the rivet head again, and given five or six more blows and the rivet is finished; the whole operation of driving requiring about thirty-five seconds of time to the rivet. In practice we find that a riveting gang will drive in the seams of the shell of a boiler an average of thirtyfive rivets per hour, or 300 per day, and in the seams of the fire-box, in throat and back sheets, dome, mud-ring, braces, etc., an average of about twenty-two rivets per hour. This includes the time necessary for taking out bolts, drifting holes, adjusting the tools and the work. In hand riveting two riveters will drive. on an average, taking the whole boiler. only about one hundred and twenty-five rivets per day, or 12 1-2 per hour.

What a "Corner" Is. A stock corner is thus explained by the New York Evening Post: The "bear" element in the market consists of all those who think that the prices of securities are higher than they ought to be, higher than they can permanently remain. In order to take advantage of the unwarranted "inflation of values," as they understand it, they borrow stocks and sell them at the high prices prevailing, expecting to be able to buy them in at a lower price before it becomes necessary to return the borrowed securities. For instance, A borrows from B, 1,000 shares of Hannibal and St. Joseph, which is selling at 60. A pays B $60,000 cash and agrees to return the stock on demand, when, of course, the money will be refunded to him. It is for B's interest to lend the stock, because he gets the interest on the $60.000 during Irving Collins, a teacher in Highland, the interval, or at all events, more inpay for the use of the money. Under ordinary conditions, B, the lender of the stock, will pay A, the borrower, some thing for the use of the money, but if the particular stock wanted by the bears is scarce it will be lent "flat;" that is the borrower will receive nothing for the use of the money while the loan continues. In extreme cases the lender may even get a commission for the use of the stock in addition to the interest on the money which it represents. If the market fluctuates while the loan continues, the borrower and lender settle with each other at the close of each day, so that the amount of money shall at all times be exactly equivalent to the value of the stock. When the bears, or any portion of them, have discerned a weak spot in the market that is a security selling for more than it is worth in their opinionthey borrow and sell liberally. Their selling has the same effect in putting down the price as though the stock were absolutely their own, and their ex-pectation is that other holders observing the decline in price will become alarmed and sell also, thus putting down the price still more and frightening still other holders. They intend, of course, to buy enough at the lower scale of quotations to deliver back what they have borrowed, pocketing the difference. It sometimes, though rarely, happens a few persons, discovering what the bears are about, and believing that they (the bears) are strong enough to stand a heavy loss without breaking, quietly buy up all of a particular stock that exists. In order that the price may not be forced up while they themselves are buying, they lend stock to the bears, and thus encourage the latter to sell.

When they have secured all, or nearly all, of the particular stock that exists, they call in their loans. The bears are then compelled to buy, and since no stock, or very little, is for sale, the price can be forced up to any figure at which the cornering party choose to put it. That is what once happened in Hannibal and St Joseph. The "shorts" must come up and settle on such terms as may be dictated to them. The last resort is to leave the cornering party saddled with the whole issue of the stock in question. Whether they may make or lose by the operation, will depend upon whether they can extort from the bears more than enough to compensate them for the loss they may incur in re-selling the stock to the general public. Most commonly the cornering party, as well as the cornered, lose money-which has been gained meanwhile by the multi-

"The Trapper's Last Shot.".

He was probably christened James, but is always J.m now, and, along with the greater part of his christened name, he has almost entrely lost his surname If he had been a few shades lighter, he might have been "Colored Jim," but black being the absorption of all color, this name would not fit him. So he is known wherever known at all as "Nigger Jim." He is an expert trapper and fisherman, but, rather singularly, considering these gifts, a poor marksman For years he lugged about or carried in his boat an aucient flint-lock Queen's arm, so deadly in its action that it would pickerel with only a charge of powder, so Jim said; yet he rarely brought home any poils of field or flood but such as were gain d by trap or hook. Once, however, he made a very telling shot. It was on an October morning, and he was paddling his light trappingskiff up the channel of Womakakatuk as silently as any Indian could, when, as he rounded a bend, he saw through the tall stalks of the wild rice at least a dozen ducks sitting among the lilly-pods in the edge of the channel, not six rods from him. Here was his long-sought opportunity, and no sooner did he descry them than a backward stroke of his pad dle stopped the headway of the craft just before she poked her sharp nose in sigh of the unsuspecting fowl. Then he laid the paddle in the boat without the slightest noise and as silently lifted from her resting-place his old gun, whose true inwardness at that moment consisted of all the powder in her owner's possession and a handful of BB shot, both wadded with a half-pound or so of waspnest. He cautiously thrust her muzzle through the rice stalks, cocked her without a tell-tale click of the ponderous lock, set the breech-plate firmly against his shoulder, laid his cheek to the stock, took such long and deliberate aim that a spider, setting his snare among the rushes, made fast an end of his web to the rusty barrel before Jim. shutting both eyes, set his teeth, and, with a sturdy pull, unhitched. There was a dazzling flash in the pan as if a kettle full of lard had caught fire, and then the noble weapon belched forth a horizontal column of flames and smoke, kicked Jim and his skiff half the boat's length astern, and gave a roar that went bellowing down the creek, across the lake, and was tossed back and forth from Split Rock Mountain to Shellhouse for five minutes before it lost its voice. When Jim got his eyes opened and his wits gathered, he peered through the eddying smoke and saw—not a feather raised, nor one wounded duck fluttering its last, but some riding unconcernedly with their heads knocked off, and some keel up in a quarter-acre of fine splinters. Then up rose two Boston men from among the rushes, and the fire, and smoke, and uproar, and vicious recoil of Jim's gun were as nothing to the vials of wrath which they poured out upon his curly, devoted head. Never was such paddling done on these waters as Jim did till he put half a mile of Wonakakatuk's channel, seething with his rapid strokes, between himself and the scene of bloodless slaughter. Then he shoved his boat into the rushes and skulled ashore. Next day he offered his gun for sale, giving as a reason that she burned so much powder no poor man could afford to keep her. He effected a sale at $1.50, and has done no duckshooting since. He says with emphatic shakes of the head, "Any man that'll try

It will be sad news to many a prudent nouse wife to learn that every time she picks a hole in an egg with a pin she is violating the patent of an American inventor, but such is the case. Years ago an inventive genius devoted himself to discovering a method to prevent eggs from cracking during the process of boiling. He solved the problem by picking pin-hole in one end of the egg, through which the air in the shell was allowed to escape, and this pin-hole he duly patented according to law. Precisely how he managed to collect his royalty is a mystery, but the fact remains that he has a legal claim for royalty on every e made in an egg

John R. Hood owns a bear. He had it chained in the vard near the house. It broke the chain and entered the house nobody being about the premises but W. P S ith. The bear walked into the parter, emptied two sugarbowls, sampled the entsup and pickles, took the choese o down from the shelf and regaled him eif with the contents, took the chimneys off the lamps, placed them in a row and knocked them down like ten-pins. Bruin then had a picnic of the pies and cakes in the cuphoard showing great partiality to sweet things. He emptied the sat in the corner of the room, and then amused himself by pitching the china and delf through the window, and ended his hour and a half sport by emptying a pail of water on the floor and taking a bath. He remained in the house till the boys returned from work. Considerable fun occurred before he was captured, one of the boys getting hit in the eye with an egg thrown by his bearship.—Guelph Herald.

THE mineral springs in Berrien township, owned by Davis & Kimmel, is now owned by Mr. Kimmel, they having dissolved partnership. THE clover crop in this vicinity is worth cutting. But few fields of other grasses will make a full crop. A LARGE crowd gathered at Dayton, Sunday afternoon, to witness the baptismal ceremonies by which 40 persons were joined to the Mt. Zion church.

In our notice last week of the advertisement of the auction sale of the estate of Jacob Rough, an error was made in the date. The sale is to be held to-morrow (Friday), June 23.

MAJOR GRAVES returned Monday evening from St. Joseph, where he has been the past few weeks, at work on the narrow gauge railroad prospect, which is doing well.

THE concert given by Rev. J. D. Mc-House, on Friday evening, was an enjoyable one, and also proved a financial success, the receipts being about $27.

THE New Buffalo cornet band received their new uniform last week, and no doubt the members now feel very proud. The suits were furnished by Bernard of this place.

THE composition base has been taken from under the Coveney monument, in Oak Ridge cemetery, and a substantial one of granite put in its place. It improves the appearance of the lot very much.

CAPT. HUGHSON, late with Bradley. the photographer, will sail the "raging deep" this summer on Sister Lakes, in command of the new Berrien Springs

MRS. HARRISON WILSON, of Edgewood, Iowa, who has been visiting with her many friends in this place and Dayton the past few weeks, returned yesterday.

A copy of the Tombstone (A.T.) Epitaph was received at this office Tuesday, and from a perusal of its advertising columns one would judge that the principal business of the place was selling liquors.

THREE Berrien Springs chaps have gone to jail for picking strawberries. Pretty tough on the strawberry business, but they picked them in the night from another man's patch.

C. C. KENT of Bainbridge, who was mentioned last week as having been shot by his son, is doing well, and is likely to recover. This will be a good case for the legal limbs.

TRAMPS are perambulating the country in droves of from six to a dozen. This makes convenient work for the constables who can gather them in by the wholesale.

THE Niles City Council have voted to raise by tax 712 mills on the dollar of valuation. This is 212 mills higher than the tax here, and our tax is higher this year than ever before.

LEWIS CARVELL, clerk in Rough Bros. hardware store, tried to smash a pine box by falling about ten feet onto it, face first, Monday evening. He feels considerably "shuck up" since.

BUCHANAN HOSE COMPANY wish to express their thanks to the citizens of Buchanan for their liberal patronage, at their lawn social, Thursday evening.

St. Joseph has hired her teachers for the coming year at the followprices: Prof. French, of Spring Lake, Principal, $750; Preceptress, $450. Salaries of the other teachers, eleven in number, range from $300 to $350 each, and $350 for janitor. Ox complaint of Wm. Haslett, Franklin A. Cross, a teamster hauling lumber from Fisk & Wagner's mill, was arrested on Friday last for cruelly beating a horse, and brought before Esquire Dick, who held him in $250 bail to appear for trial to-morrow

MARTIN SUSAN has been bothered by fishing parties going to Pike Lake, and particularly by boys who burned his fences and committed other depredations, and on May 21, a fifteen-yearold son of Henry Rundle received a slight whipping at his hands. On Tuesday of this week Martin was arrested for this, and will be tried before Esquire Dick to-morrow.

ABOUT twenty of the Masons of Buchanan went to Berrien Springs on Monday evening to attend the meeting of instruction, which was presided over by A. M. Clark, of Lexington, the Grand Lecturer of the State. They returned by special train at about mid-

JOHN ALLEN, mentioned last week as having lost a portion of one of his feet, by being run over by the cars at this place, is likely to lose the rest of the foot and perhaps a good portion of about whose business it is to take care of him. that is a curiosity. It is about half an inch in diameter by about 21/2 inches in length. For curiosities such eggs do very well, but for practical purposes they are a failure. DROWNED.—Charles, a thirteen-yearold son of Flem Reynolds, was drowned in Hudson Lake last Saturday. The very light, many pieces not being body was found Sunday morning. He and another boy were rowing a boat, each handling one oar. Reynolds' oar broke and he fell overboard, with the above result.

More work has been done in this village toward repairing and building new sidewalks than for a number of years. There is still considerable room for more, and it should be done in the most substantial manner. If there is any one thing more than another that comes in range of the saying, "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well,"

THE lawn social by the Buchanan Hose Company, at the Old School Cord's Bible class, in Rough's Opera House grounds, last Thursday evening, was a success both financially and in a pleasurable point of view. Everybody had a good time if appearance is a guide. The total receipts amounted to $73.84, leaving $55.34 in the treasury of the company after paying all > OUGHT Buchanan not have an improvement association whose business it shall be to induce manufacturing establishments of a substantial character to locate here? Other places find such associations of value, and the same would be true of Buchanan. What is everybody's business is not done, so this branch of Buchanan's improvements goes unattended.

MR. DAVID SALISBURY, north-west of Terrie Coupe Prairie, has mown one field of his wheat, that a few weeks since had the appearance of being the best field of wheat he had. The cause of this operation is the work of the Hessian fly to such an extent that he thought the crop would be worth more for hav than for wheat.

MESSRS. Geo. W. Fox and O. A. Woodworth have each a strawberry patch planted in a barrel. The vines are thrifty and well covered with fruit. About one hundred plants occupying not over four feet square of ground. It is a sight to see, but be sure to go in the day time if you go to see it.

As the season advances and green things begin to bloom, the annual fight over where the young people's picnic association shall picnic this year, grows. It is Berrien Springs and St. Joseph for it this time. Better bury the hatchet early, and hold the picnic somewhere down in Royalton.

Louis, a seventeen months old son of Carl Praeger, of Grand Rapids, ate some pieces of bread that had been dosed with arsenic for rats, while visiting with Mrs. C. Joslyn, in Niles, last Friday, and died Monday afternoon, although antidotes were promptly administered, and all possible medical assistance being close at hand.

A NUMBER went from this place, with the band, to Niles to assist in organizing a G. A. R. Post, Monday evening, known as Frank Graves Post No. 64. Following are the officers of the new Post: David Bacon, Post Commander; Wm. J. Edwards, Senior Vice Commander; Robert Allen, Junior Vice Commander; Chas. O. Pratt, Adjutant; W. Peck, Surgeon; J. P. Howlett, Chaplain; L. A. Duncan, Quartermaster; Dan'l Sheehan, Officer of the Day; W. G. Cutting, Officer of the Guard; Julius Fletcher, Sergeant Major; John Crofoot, Q. M. Sergeant.

Prof. Morris will give an entertainment in Rough's Opera House this evening. Admission 10 and 15 cents. Reserved seats 25 cents. On sale at Folk's jewerly store. Following is what the Mirror says of the entertainment given in Niles Monday evening: "The Dog Show, given by Prof. Morris, at Peak Hall, on Monday evening last, was a grand success, and was witnessed by an immense audience. The tricks performed by the dogs are truly wonderful, and well repay the investment. We doubt if any other man has ever succeeded in achieving the success of Prof. Morris in the training of canine. Our sister cities should give him good houses, for the enter-tainment is deserving of them.

As we expected, when we spoke of the Knights of Labor, it touched the editor of the Independent, and the rest of the Greenback party, in a tender spot, and accordingly they kick vigorously. One of the primary objects of the organization is to work new votes into what is left of the Greenback party, which is shown in paragraph 15 of "Principles." The other "Principles," such as that proposing arbitratration instead of strikes, asking for laws giving laborers a lien on the products of their labor, both of which are now existing, and for which there is consequently no particular use in forming a new organization to bring about are simply blindfolds to cover up the No. 15. They ask for a law compelling employers to pay employes weekly, without any regard to any contract that may exist between them. The same kind of unions are at the bottom of the strikes that are making trouble in nearly every branch of manufacturing enterprise, and that embody the principle that the man who makes a profit from the employment of his fellow men must necessarily be a robber, and to own property a crime. We can but repeat our remark, that those who contemplate joining the organization should give it a good study first, and this with due respect for the intelligence of the working men, for whom we have probably as much respect as has our worthy cotemporary,

HILL'S CORNERS, June 19, 1882. ED. RECORD:-Last Friday the relatives and neighbors of this vicinity took it upon themselves to surprise Mrs. Austin Adams, to remind her that she was fifty-two years of age, and that labor and economy, with an abundance of integrity, during the past thirty years, had brought her the comforts and good things of this life. Everything passed off in perfect harmony. Eatables of nearly every description were brought in that would have a tendency to satisfy the inner man. During the evening the young folks took possession of the house, re-

VENS' Thresher: In answer to your favor, I will say, I have run threshing machines (several different kinds) about 20 years, and ought to know something about them. I fed the STEVENS with a table and a pitcher on both sides. It feeds easy and even, and threshed as fast as they could pitch, and cleaned it good without wasting grain. I consider it the best Separator in use, both for the farmer and parties running it. Very respectfully, WILLIAM BREWER. As far as fast threshing and good work is concerned, the STEVENS caps the world. The straw stacks show for themselves. You can't find any wheat growing in them or around them.

"My sister'll be down in a minute, and says you're "My sister'll be down in a minute, and says you're to wait, if you please;
And says I might stay till she came, if I'd promise never to tease, Never speak till you spoke to me first. But that's nonsense, for how would you know?
What she t'dd me to say, if I didn't? Don't you realty and truly think so?

"And then you'd feel strange here alone! And you wouldn't know just where to sit;
For that chair isn't strong on its legs, and we never use it a bit.
We keep it to match with the sofa. But Jack says it would be just like you To flop yourself right down upon it and knock out the very last screw.

"Suppose you try! I won't tell. You're afraid to!
O' you're afraid they would think it was mean.
Well, then, there's the album—that's pretty, if your fingers are clean.
For sister says sometimes I danb it; but she only says that when she's cross.
There's her picture. You know it. It's like her;
but she ain't as good looking, of course.

"That is me. It's the best of 'em all. Now tell me, you'd never have thought That once I was little as that. It's the only one that could be bought—
For that was the message to pa from the photograph man where I sat—
That he wouldn't print off any more till he first got the money for that.

"What? Maybe you're tired of waiting; why often she's longer than this.

There's all her back hair to do up, and all her front curls to friz.

But it's nice to be sitting here talking like grown people, just you and me.

Do you think you'll be coming here often? Oh, do! But don't come like Tom Lee.

'Tom Lee? Her last beau. Why, my goodness!
He used to be here day and night
Till the folks thought he'd soon be her husband, and Jack said that gave him a fright.
You won't run away then, as he did? for you're not a rich man, they say;

The Dog Kissing Girl.

The custom that some young women have of kissing poodle dogs is the means of driving many young men to dissipa-tion. On Thursday evening last week a young Chicago man came into the Palmer House bar-room, at Chicago, and asked for a drink of raw whisky, with perfumery in it. He had a wild look in his eye, and the bar-tender set out the whisky, and asked what kind of perfumery he wanted in it. He said "Any thing! Put in some bitters, a little kerosene, squeeze an onion over it, and rub the edge of the glass with some asa-fœdita. Bah!" and he spit out some imaginary bad tasting stuff. The bar-tender put in several bad tasting things, and gave the glass to the poor young man, and he swallowed it, and asked for limberger cheese. The bar-tender gave him a piece of an old overshoe to chew and he seemed relieved, and after he had become calm he told the bar-tender what was the trouble. He had been calling on a girl and she owned a poodle.
All the evening she would kiss that dog on the nose every few minutes, and when he got ready to come away she threw her arms around his neck and they indulged in a kiss that under ordinary circumstances would have pulled the filling out of his teeth, but he said it tasted doggy, and almost made him sick. He tried to get away, but she clung to him, and again put her lips to his, and he said he felt as though he should die, and he got away after a while and rushed for the nearest saloon, where he drowned his sorrow and dog hair in the flowing bowl. He said every time she kissed that dog he felt like the girl that eat tomatoes the first time. The thoughts of her kissing that dog's nose, that had been in so many places of disrepute, smelling of old bones in alleys, and hunting dirty things in out-of-the-way places, was too much, and he wept and asked for another drink. The bar-tender tried to brace him up by telling him that he would feel better in the morning, and that he should not let a small dog come between him and bliss. He said he didn't want any more bliss, and he should never feel any better in the morning.

"Why," said he, as he drank the liquor and gagged, "I shall never be able to look a dog in the face without being sick. To think of that beautiful girl kissing that dog. If she had seen the dog as I did that afternoon, with some other dogs, she would faint. The dogs were pulling at a cow's tail that they found in a vacant lot, and fighting over it, and the tail was an old one that had fallen off a butcher's wagon. O, see that my grave is kept green, and put an iron fence around it, to keep dogs away.

Give me another drink. The young man had drank enough, and the bar-tender called a porter to show the young man to his carriage, and see him home, and he went out with his hand on his stomach, swearing eternal vengeance on all dogs. Young women who despise the man who puts the cup to his neighbor's lips, to steal away his brain, should be careful about putting the unsavory dog's nose to their own lips. They may catch the dog distemper, and have to drink gunpowder and milk. -Peck's Sun.

Literature of Suicide.

For nearly a generation no satisfactory English-written compendium of progress of the investgation as to suicide has ap-peared. Meantime, a large mass of re-cent data has been accumulated by European observers. These have been ably exhibited by Dr. Morselli in a recent volume of statistical but very suggestive character. Dr. O'Dea, in a work somewhat more historic and philosophic, has contributed much general information from early as well as recent sources. The two taken together furnish very complete material for an outline view of what is known on this sombre and somewhat interesting subject. It is to be regretted that American statistics are still meagre: the census of 1880 will perhaps give important additions.

The chief ethical philosophies of Asia have somewhat permitted suicide, as witness the suttee of Hindoo widows and the hari kari of disgraced Japanese officials. Such beliets as pantheism, fatality, and transmigration were not adapted to suppress it. Early pagan systems ellowed it. allowed it; cynics, stories, and epicurians, traveling by different roads of reasoning, reached the same result; and not only did eminent teachers of Grecian and Roman philosophy avow that the hopelessly unhappy might rightly seek relief in death, but several of these acted upon the tenet. In strong contrast was the belief of the ancient Jews; they accepted the command, "Thou shalt not kill," as comprehending self-killing. The influence of the New Testament is to the same effect. If warnings are few and slight, this is because there was no need in Judea to forbid voluntary death; it was not prevalent. In instances, the readiness of martyrs to meet death rather than be false to their faith somewhat re-sembles seeking it, but, in truth, the early Christians adhered to the Jewish and apostolic belief—that suicide was a sin. So taught Mohammed and the Koran. Throughout the middle ages the authority of the Roman Church on one side and the restlessness of philosophic skepticism on the other introduced exceptions, and suggested or doubted whether from certain emergen-cies one might not seek escape through the grave. But at the present day, wherever the light of Christian civilization prevails, teachers and laws are agreed that suicide is a sin against God and a crime against the State; the arguments by which in darkened times or lands it has been defended or excused are disregarded as chimeras, and the only questions are: What are the facts of suicide? What are its causes? How may it be prevented?

Modern researches, without denying that in the individual case suicide is an act of free will, yet teach that the will is under influence of causes which can be traced, and that the general course of the evil can be delineated and even pre-dicted as governed by tolerably uniform laws. There is no better illustration of the comprehensiveness and ingenuity of modern research in physico-mental problems than the acute manner in which the statistics of self-murder are now marshaled to develop the law governing its ebb and flow. Time of life is shown to have a definite connection with the evil; suicides are infrequent in youth and again in old age; but the period from the thirty-fifth to the fifty-fifth year is fruitful of them. Men are much more prone to suicide than are women. Yet in prison life the young commit it oftener than their elders, and female convicts in greater number than males. Comparison between deaths among the single and those among the married-show that marriage and parentage are preventives. Any one would guess that insanity tends to suicide; few would realize without reading the proofs given that a spirit of mere morbid imitation may lead to it; thus it has sometimes raged as an epi-Progress in education and spread of literature have seemed to increase it, probably because they have been injudiciously so managed as to heighten desires more than to inspire contentment. Who would have thought of tracing a connection between suicide and the spread of periodical literature or advance of railway development; but in Europe the evil seems to have flourished under these improvements. There, also, intensity of religious teaching and conviction has, perhaps, had an unhappy effect, and the Protestant countries are said to show this more than Catholic. monasteries and convents in particular being rarely invaded. Yet, causes of crime and degredation among the masses (drunkenness is a conspicious one) increase suicide, and so do "hard times."

Domestic trouble and disappointment in love (especially among the young) are prolific causes, and so are business anxieties, (these chiefly among older persons.) Connected with this cause stands what is known as to tendency of various vocations; apparently agriculture is comparatively wholesome, while me-chanical trades tend downward in proportion as they are uncertain and subject the artisan to being often "out of work;" while the liability of the mercantile, scientific, and professional classes to suffer from commercial depressions has a like tendency. Soldiers are (in Europe again) much more prone to suicide than civilians, and city residents more than the rural population. Variable climatic and atmospheric influences seem to have a specific tendency to promote suicide. The period when spring is verging into summer, and particularly in June, is the most fertile season, and the hours from sunrise to noon the most tempting time of day. The reader, however, must remember that the data which support conclusions like the above which support conclusions like the above are chiefly European; somewhat differ-ent results might be reached in America. Dr. Moselli expresses a belief that sui-cide is increasing faster than population. We do not find that Dr. O'Dea says this, but the tone of his book indicates

How Chinese Coolies Act When They Come Ashore.

"If you have the patience to watch them, you will be amused, and perhaps astonished to see how like sheep these coolies are," Deputy Custom Inspector Brown said to a Call reporter, as the coolies from the Devonshire were being landed and searched. The sheepish characteristic remarked by the official was the blind, stupid persistence of each coolie in doing exactly as the one before him was doing. At one time it was desirable to large a part of the Chinaman sirable to have a part of the Chinamen leave the sea-wall shed through another entrance than that through which the first landed were going. Accordingly divert part of the living stream pouring in tumultuous and noisy haste over the steamer's side on to the wharf to another part of the shed. It was useless. The aid of interpreters was invoked. The coolies were plainly told in their own language to go in a certain direction. stanguage to go in a certain direction. Still useless. Those crowding on the wharf went in the same direction they saw the ones preceding them go, and nothing could prevent them. They were pushed, argued with, even struck by the exasperated whites, but it was as if a sheep-herder had endeavored to reason with his scurrying, witless, panic-stricken

Another instance a reporter noticed. A Chinese Inspector of one of the Six Companies directed a group of his countrymen to a certain portion of the shed, and there wait for an express wagon. Between them and the point they were to go to was a stack of grain-filled sacks. A passage around the stack was block-aded for a moment by a wagon, so the first of the Chinamen clambered labori-ously, with all his baggage on his back, over the grain sacks. Every Chinaman in his group followed, climbing and stumbling over the sacks with much trouble, although the passage-way was cleared for them by a policeman before the first one had crossed the sacks.—

Petty Worries.

San Francisco Call.

What a blessed thing it is that we can forget. To-day's troubles look large, but a week hence they will be forgotten and buried out of sight. Says one writer: "If you would keep a book and daily put down the things that worry you and see what becomes of them, it would be a benefit to you."

You allow a thing to annoy you just as you allow a fly to settle on you and plague you; and you lose your temper, (or rather get it,) for when men are sur-charged with temper they are said to have lost it, and justify yourselves for being thrown off your balance by causes which you do not trace out. But if you would see what it was that threw you off your balance before breakfast and put it down in a little book, and follow it up and ascertain what becomes of it you would see what a fool you were in the

The art of forgetting is a blessed art, but the art of overlooking is quite as important. And if we should take time to write down the original progress and outcome of a few of our troubles, it would make us so ashamed of the fuss we make over them, that we should be glad to drop such things and bury them at once in eternal forgetfulness. Life is too short to be wore out in petty wor-ries, frettings, hatred and vexation.

To be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

THE most valuable animals are women; yet they are nearly all given away by their original owners. Some give themselves away.

Newfoundland. As England's oldest colony, Newfoundland is entitled to notice. Discovered in the reign of Henry VII., and incor-porated with the realm during the time of Elizabeth, its history is replete with curious facts and abounds in instances which illustrate the difficulties which are to be contended against in the colonization of a new district. According to the accounts left by those who were among the first to visit the new ac-quisition, the land was fruitful, the fishing wonderfully fine and the presence of mineral ores which were discovered in the soil promised much for the subsequent wealth and prosperity of the country island. A railway in the interior, a system of general education, and other modernizing modifications have been successfully introduced. As regards its mineral wealth Newfoundland now ocupies the sixth place in the list of copper producing regions, and other min-erals, such as gold, silver, nickel, lead andiron ore found in moderate quantities. The fisheries are, however, the important connubial bliss says it is often the case when you see a great man, like a ship, sailing proudly along the current of renown, that there is a little tug-his or renown, that there is a little tug—his wife—whom you can not see, but who is directing his movements and supplying the motive power. Just imagine Brigham Young in this connection. There were enough tugs around him to have yanked him along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. miles an hour,
