A COOL SCOUNDREL.

The Peculiar Manner in Which a Burglar Cracked a Bank. My profession is not a popular one.

There is considerable prejudice against it. I don't think myself it is much worse than a good many others. How-ever, that's nothing to do with my story. Somes years ago, me and the gen-tleman who was at that time connected with me in business—he's met with reverses since then, and at present isn't able to go out—was looking around for a job, being at that time rather hard up, as you might say. We struck a small country town. I ain't a goin't a goin't be given by telling where it was to give it away by telling where it was, or what the name of it was. There was one bank there. The president was a rich old duffer; owned the mills, owned the bank, owned most of the town. There wasn't no other officer but the cashier, and they had a boy who used to sweep out and run their errands.

The bank was on the main street.

pretty well up one end of it-nice, snug place—on the corner of a cross-street, with nothing very near it. We took our observations, and found there wasn't no trouble at all about it. There was an old watchman that walked up and down the street nights, when he didn't fall asleep and forget it. The vault had two doors; the outside one was chilled iron, and had a threewheeled combination lock; the inner wasn't no door at all; you could kick it open. It didn't pretend to be nothing but. fire-proof, and it wasn't even that. The first thing we did, of course, was to fit a key to the outside door. As the lock on the outside door was an old-fashioned Bacon lock, any gentleman of my profession who chances to read this article will know just how easy that job was, and how we did it. I may say here that the gentlemen in my line of business, having at times a great deal of leisure on their hands, do considerable reading, and are particular fond of a neat bit of writing. In fact, in the way of literature, I have found among 'em—however, this being a digression, I drop it, and go on with the main job again. This was our plan: After the key was fitted I was to go into the bank. and Jim-that wasn't his name of course, but let it pass—was to keep watch on the outside. When any one passed he was to tip me a whistle, and then I doused the glim and lay low; after they got by I goes on again. Simple and easy, you see. Well, the night that we selected, the president happened to be out of town; gone down to the city, as he often did. I got inside all right, with a slide lantern, a breast-drill, a steel jimmy, a bunch of skeleton keys, and a green baize bag to stow away the swag. I fixed my light and rigged my breast-drill, and got to work on the door just over the lock.

Probably a great many of your readers are not so well posted as me about bank locks, and I may say for them that a three-wheel combination lock has three wheels in it, and a slot in each wheel. In order to unlock the door you have to get the three slots opposite to each other at the top of the lock. Of course if you know the number the lock is set on, you can do this; but if you don't you have to depend on your ingenuity. There is in each of these wheels a small hole, through which you put a wire through the back f the lock when you change the combination. Now if you can bore a hole through the door, and pick up those wheels by running a wire through those holes, why, you can open the door. I hope I make myself clear. I was boring that hole. The door was chilled—about the neatest stuff I ever worked on. I went on steady enough only stopped when Jim-which, as I said, wasn't his real name-whistled outside, and the watchman toddled by. By-and-by, when I'd got pretty near through, I heard Jim, so to speak, whistle again. I stopped, and pretty soon I heard footsteps outside, and I'm blowed if they didn't come right up the bank steps, and I heard a key in the lock. I was so dumbfounded when I heard that that you could have slipped the bracelets right on me. I picked up my lantern, and I'll be hanged if I didn't let the slide slip down and throw the light right onto the door, and there "Who are you?" says he.

"Who are you?" says I, thinking that was an innocent remark, as he commenced it, and a trying all the time to

"I'm the president of the bank," says he, kinder short; "something's the matter with the lock!" By George! The idea came to me

> "Yes, sir," says I, touching my cap;
> "Mr. Jennings, he telegraphed to me > this morning as the lock was out of > order, and he couldn't get in, and so > I'm come on to open it for him." "I told Jennings a week ago," says > he, "that he ought to get that lock fixed. Where is he?" "He's been a writing letters, and he's gone up to his house to get another letter he wanted for to answer." "Well, why don't you go right on?"

> says he.
> "I've got almost through," says I;
> "and I didn't want to finish up and open the yault till there was somebody avoiding the very suspicion of evil."

"No, sir," says I, kinder modest like. "What do you suppose is the matter with the lock?" says he.
"I don't rightly know yet," says I; "but I rather think it's a little wore on account of not being oiled enough. These 'ere locks ought to be oiled about till Jennings comes. · Can't I help you? Hold your lantern, or something of that sort?" . The thought come to me like a flash, and I turned around and says: "How do I know you're the president? I ain't ever seen you before, and you may be a trying to crack this bank for all that I know."

"That's a very proper inquiry, my man," says he, "and shows a most remarkable degree of discretion. I confess I should not have thought of the position in which I was placing you. However, I can easily convince you that it's all right. Do you know what the presrdent's name is?"
"No, I don't," says I, sorter surly.
"Well, you'll find it on that bill."

said he, taking a bill out of his pocket; "and you see the same name on these letters," and he took some letters from his coat. I suppose I ought to have gone right on then, but I was beginning to feel interested in making him prove who he was, and so I says: "You might have got them letters to put up a job on me." "You're a very honest man," says he, "one among a thousand. Don't think I'm at all offended at your persistence. No, my good fellow, I like it, I like it," and he laid his hand on my shoulder. "Now here," says he, taking a bundle out of his pocket, "is a package of ten thousand dollars in bonds. A burglar wouldn't be apt to carry those around with him, would he? I bought them in the city yesterday, and I stopped here to-night on my way home to place them in the vault, and, I may add, that your simple and manly honesty has so touched me, that I would willingly leave them in your hands for safe keepng. You needn't blush at my praise.

I suppose I did turn sorter red when see them bonds.. "Are you satisfied now?" says he.
I told him I was, thoroughly; and so I was. So I picked up my drill agáin, and gave him my lantern to hold, so that I could see the door. I heard Jim, as I call him, outside once or twice, and I like to have burst out laughing, thinking how he must be wondering what was going on inside. I worked away, and kept explaining to him what I was a trying to do. He was very much interested in mechanics, he said, and he knowed as I was a man as was up in my business, by the way I went to work. He asked me about what wages I got, and how I liked my business, and said he took quite a fancy to me. I turned round once in a while and looked at him a setting up there as solemn as a biled owl, with my dark blamed if I didn't think I should have to holler right out. I got through the lock pretty soon, and put my wire in and opened it. Then he took hold of the door and opened the vault. "I'll put my bonds in," said he, "and lantern in his blessed hand, and I'm go home. You can lock up, and wait till Mr. Jennings comes. I don't suppose you will try to fix the lock to-night?" told him I shouldn't do anythin more with it now, as we could get in before morning.

"Well, I'll bid you good-night, my man," says he, as I swung the door to again.

Just then I heard Jim, by name, whistle, and I guessed the watchman was a coming up the street.

"Ah," says I, "you might speak to the watchman, if you see him, and tell him to keep an extra lookout to-night." "I will," says he, and we both went to the front door.

"There comes the watchman up the street," says he. "Watchman, this man has been fixing the bank-lock, and 1 want you to keep a sharp lookout tonight. He will stay here until Mr. Jennings returns." "Good-night again," says he, and we shook hands, and he went up the street.

I saw Jim, so-called, in the shadow on the other side of the street as I stood on the step with the watchman. "Well," says I to the watchman. "I'll go and pick up my tools and get ready to go."
I went back into the bank, and it didn't take long to throw the door open and stuff them bonds into the bag. There was some boxes lying around, and a safe, as I should rather have liked to tackle, but it seemed like tempting Providence after the luck we'd had. I looked at my watch, and see it was a quarter past twelve. There was an express went through at half-past twelve. I tucked my tools in the bag on the top of the bonds and walked out the front door. The watchman was on the steps.

"I don't believe I'll wait for Mr. Jennings," says I. "I suppose it will be all right if I give you his key?" "That's all right," says the watch-

"I wouldn't go away very far from the bank," says I. "No, I won't," says he; "I'll stay right about here all night." "Good-night," says I, and I shook hands with him, and me and Jim which wasn't his right name, you understand-took the half-past twelve express, and the best part of that job was, we never heard nothing of it.

It never got into the papers. How to Become Strong. In the summer of 1872 it was necessary to shift the rails on upwards of rive hundred miles of permanent way on the Great Western line from the broad to the narrow gauge, and there was only a fortnight to do it in. The work to be got through was enormous. About three thousand men were employed, and they worked double time, sometimes from four in the morning until nine at night. Not a soul was sick, sorry or drunk, and the work was accomplished within a fortnight. What was the extraordinary support of this wonderful spurt of muscular energy? Weak oatmeal gruel. To spare every ounce of strength the men were hutted along the line, and brought with them bacon, bread, cheese, cocoa, etc., to provide their usual meals at the usual times. There was no beer, spirits, or alco holic drink in any form. A pound and a half of oatmeal and a half pound of sugar was allowed to each man daily, and to every gang of twenty-one men a cook was told off. The first thing done in the morning was to breakfast; and then the cook, with his cauldron, started along the line till water was found convenient, and a fire place of stones built, and the pot boiled. Oatmeal was then sprinkled into it with sugar and thoroughly well boiled. The thirsty men liked it exceedingly, and learned by experience the importance of having it well cooked. Here is a very old and well-known agent, cheap enough and easily procured, capable of impart-ing "staying power" better, probably, than anything else, which is not employed to anything like the extent it

An Educated Hog.

A man residing near Winneconne has got a sow that is trained to drive campers off the place. Price's Point is a favorite place for campers to pitch their tents and put in time fishing and hunting, but their presence has tended to the embarrassment of farmers adjacent, as some who came there would steal vegetables and milk the cows, so it was decided to put a stop to camping. People were warned away, but sometimes they would bring out a shot gun and cock it and say they would stay if it was all the same, and the farmer would let them stay rather than to have any fuss. They tried everything to induce campers to keep away, and finally they resorted to the old sow. The campers are allowed to pitch their tents, and when they go out fishing or hunting and leave the camp alone, the old sow is turned on to the point, and she goes on a run to the camp and goes through everything. She will eat everything that is eatable, chew flannel skirts, blankets, mosquito bars, and fishing tackle, and root around the tent so it looks like a hog wollow.

It is said some people from Oshkosh were camping there two weeks ago, including ladies. The men went fishing, leaving the ladies in camp, and the ladies went in bathing leaving the tents alone. The sow got in her work in about forty minutes, eating everything in the tents, and wound up by making a desert of the ladies' clothing on the bank. The sow eat three muslin dresses and all sorts of under clothing that go with the dresses, the names of which we are not familiar with, three pair of colored stockings, with rosebuds worked on the instep and up the side for eight inches, and as the ladies came ashore the sow was finishing a red corset and a combination suit. The ladies frightened the animal away with the corset in her mouth, and they put on their shoes, all that was left of their wardrobe, and went to camp. They had to cut up a tent fly to make clothes for themselves, except one who put on a man's ulster and a landing net which had been hung on a tree out of reach of the hog. When the men came back to camp they were mad, and went to the owner of the hog to complain, but he put in an offset that the hog drank some Oshkosh whisky that was in the camp and became drunk, and of course he was not responsible. The campers wrapped themselves up as best they could in what was left, and went home in the night, so as not to be seen. Other people who have heard of the Winneconne educated hog have offered fabulous sums of money for her, but the owner says he has got work for the hog to do this summer and he won't sell .-Peck's Sun.

A Hen Set on Golden Eggs.

A well-to-do Ohio farmer named Henry Kline has lost his surplus wealth in a manner that is calculated to destroy his confidence in all the safeguards with which treasures of gold can be surrounded. Some time ago he was a depositor in a Cincinnati bank which suddenly suspended operations and was found to possess no assets. Mr. Kline, hearing of the suspension, went to collect his account, and, finding that it worthless, declared then and there, in a manner in which emphasis was not lacking, that he would never, so long as he lived, put another dollar in any bank or like institution. Two weeks ago he came in possession of $800 in gold, hard cash. The question at once arose where he should keep it for safety. Procuring a strong tin box he placed the money in it securely, and put the box at the bottom of an old ash barrel in his woodshed, filling the barrel up with old rubbish. He placed a box on top of it, which he filled with straw, and placed in one corner a dozen eggs and an old setting hen. He argued that should thieves come around they would never think of looking for anything valuable in an old barrel of rubbish, and even should they chance to suspect the hiding place, the hen would make such a clatter that the household would be aroused. As yesterday was Sunday and he had nothing else to do, examined the barrel. The hen was unturbed the night previous by the visit of the thieves. An Eagle's Attack on a Child.

A three-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Wallingford, living on Lake Washington, twelve miles from Seattie, while playing on the doorstep last Tuesday, was attacked by an eagle and elevated ten or twelve feet from the ground. The screams of the little one brought Mrs. Wallingford to the rescue, who succeeded finally in driving the eagle away. The child's shoulders and arms were considerably lacerated by the sharp talons of the eagle. The mother was so overcome by excitement that she has since been prostrated. It was subsequently ascertained that the eagle, or rather a pair of them, had a nest in the cliff of rocks about one hundred yards distant from the house, and it is reasonable to suppose that had not the child's mother put in a timely appearance the body of the little one would have been carried to the cliff and its flesh divided among the eaglets. Mr. Wallingford's rifle, however, has put a quietus on any further depredations by this particular pair of marauders. The largest of the two eagles measured seven feet from tip to tip, and weighed nearly fifty pounds. An American eagle is a proud bird of fame, but when he so far forgets his dignity as to make an assault on a little three-years-old child, our admiration of his kingly bearing is considerably lessened.—Seattie (W.T.) Chronicle.

I was in the office at Marietta, Ga., when an

This was accepted, and on the first match he lost, increasing the sum to $3,000. The second chance increased it to $6,000 and the third to $12,000. This brought the game to a close. The Same in Other Places. Said a lady yesterday: "I wonder how many pleasant homes will be made unhappy by this election?" An explanation was asked and she said: "Why, I have seen to-day two men drunk on the street that I know well, and I never saw either one of them under the influence of liquor before. I have heard the wife of one of them say that she had rather see her husband dead, much as she loved him, than to see him a drunkard. Both of these men are candidates, and knowing the sorrow of their homes to-night I was merely thinking and wondering how many other homes would be saddened in the next week and had been saddened in the last few days by the drinking of canaidates and those who had been treated by them. The great trouble with your politics is that women can have nothing to say, When a man runs for office he must 'treat.' If he doesn't, then those who do will get the votes. He must drink, not only with his equals, but much more with those whose company he would not think of keeping under any other cir-cumstances. He would never think of bringing home with him the men he spends his time with. It's all wrong, and I tell you this running for office has ruined more men than you have any idea of."

A Little Absent Minded. Mr. Bonner's Ledger tells the following story of a moon-eyed student at Harvard:

"He called on a young lady in Boston one afternoon, and in taking off his glove tore it slightly. His fair hostess hindly offered to mend it, took it away for the purpose. When she came down she found her visitor peering about under his chair, looking under the piano, and evidently in search of something. 'Have you lost anything?' she asked. 'Yes,' was the response, 'I had both my gloves when I came in, and one of them is gone. I must have mis-laid it somewhere, but I can't think where.' He had actually forgotten that she had taken it to mend, and had left him alone expressly and solely in order to mend it. And he was't a fool either. He was only a little ab-

It is said that one of the chief causes of the famous Sullivan farm in Illinois, the last small section of which has just been closed out, was the exgovernor's too rigid discipline, not founded in common sense. The farm, ten miles long and seven miles wide, was divided into three section. If, for instance, the first of a gang of 40 plows, broke down, none of the others were allowed to pass it, but all had to wait until the damage was repaired. No overseer could dismount for a moment to perform any manual labor, however urgent, and no employe, of whatever grade, was permitted to do even the most trifling thing not properly belonging to his department. The great machine had no elasticity and so it

Republican State Convention.

A Republican State Convention to nominate State officers and for the transaction of other business, will be held at the opera house, in the village of Kalamazoo, on Wednesday, August 30, 1882, at 11 o'clock A. M.

In accordance with a resolution adopted at Grand Rapids, May 10, 1876, every county will be entitled to one delegate for each 500, of the total vote cast for Governor at the last State election (in 1880) and one additional delegate for every fraction of 500 votes, but each organized county will be entitled to at least one delegate.

Under a resolution of 1838 no delegate will be entitled to as seat in the Convention who does not reside in the County he proposes to represent.

In accordance with a resolution adopted at Detroit, June 23, 1880, the Secretary of each County Convention is requested to forward to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, by the earliest mail after the delegates to the State Convention are chosen, a certified list of such delegates as are entitled to seats in the State Convention from their respective counties.

The Iowa democratic state convention adopted a platform the leading features of which are unequivocal opposition to a protective tariff and hostility to the prohibition amendment to the state constitution lately adopted, coupled with a pledge to use all lawful means to secure an abrogation of the new organic law of the state.

Senator Ferry arrived at his home at Grand Haven, Mich., Thursday last, and was received by the citizens in royal style. The Mayor made a complimentary speech, which was briefly replied to by the Senator, who alluded to the legislative history of the recent session, and defended the river and harbor appropriations as demanded by the undeveloped resources of the coun-

The bottom of the free trade movement in Detroit continues to approach the surface. The senior proprietor of the Evening News, which paper is at the head of the movement, besides being an Englishman, appears to have a bad itching for a chance to represent the first district in Congress. His name is now proposed for that office by the News.

The work of preparation for printing the new currency "brown-backs" is going on quite satisfactionily at the bureau of printing and engraving. Under the recent act of congress authorizing national banks to renew their charters, all banks doing so must turn in their old circulation and take out new. The new money is to differ in many re. spects from the present national bank notes. The plate from which the face of the note is to be printed has been engraved new, and differs materially from the old. The backs are to be printed in brown instead of green and black, as the old ones.

So long as the "Fort Pillow" Chalmers, of the Mississippi "Shoe String" district, was an avowed Democrat, and could keep his seat in Congress by fraud of the blackest kind, he was a good fellow with the Northern Democrats. But since the present Congressional Committee on contested elections decided that he was out of place. and he was ousted, and now proposes to introduce the Mahone dodge in. Mississippi, the organs of that immaculate party turn upon him with deadly intent. It is amusing to see them whittle his record when he was one of the best of their number.

The British fleet has taken possession of the Suez canal, and will probably hold it until some other power appears on the scene in defence of other European interests, strong enough to dislodge the British gunboats. In every instance where the Republicans have held County Conventions, so far this year, they have expressed themselves decidedly in favor of submitting to the people an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, thus showing which party is in favor of putting down the liquor traflic. Yet pretended friends of temperance will stick to a third or fourth party when they know, or at least ought to know, that they only cripple the cause of temperance by "giving aid and comfort" to the Democratic party, which is opposed to temperance, laws, if we may judge from the fact that they do not express themselves on the question as the Republicans have done.

The State Liquor Dealer's Assosociation of Indiana recently met, two hundred strong, in convention, at Terre Haute, and besides other important business, adopted the following lucid resolutions, which explain the position of the Hoosier Democracy on the temperance question: WHEREAS, The people of the State of Indiana are now threatened with a prohibitory constitutional amendment, right and liberty; and, WHEREAS, The Democrats of the State of Indiana, at their State Convention on the 10th day of August, 1882, declared themselves to be opposed to the prohibitory amendment now pending and recognized the right of the people to defeat said amendment at every stage necessary for its adop-

At the Congressional Convention held in Kalamazoo last Thursday, Hon. J. C. Burrows, in accepting his unanimous renomination, made a few remarks, in which he briefly reviewed the work of the first session of the 47th Congress, and among others had the following to say regarding the question of appropriation, of which so much has been said by way of criticism:

"But it is charged that this Congress has been extravagant, and that its appropriations have been largely in exess of the last fiscal year. The river and harbor bill is cited as an instance of lavish expenditure, and it has been the subject of severe criticism by the public press, and denounced as a steal. But what are the facts? 1. No work is appropriated for in government engineers. 2. The amount appropriated is in no instance in excess of the recommendation, and, 3. The total amount of the appropriation s less than one-half the sum which the engineers asked and which they affirmed could be profitably expended during the present fiscal year.

The amount carried by the last river and harbor bill was $11,441,300. The sum appropriated this year is $18,743,875 —an increase of $7,302,575. It is assumed that this additional sum of $7,000,000 in round numbers has been appropriated for creeks and streams and objects not of a national character. But what does the bill disclose upon this point? The following are some of the items going to make up this increase of $7,-

:000,000 mprovement of Mississippi river and tributaries..... Providence river... Charleston harbor

Total.....$5,200,000 The foregoing items of increase, it will be observed, aggregate more than five millions, and other works might be pointed out, equally meritorious, sufficient to account for the remaining $2,000,000.

This examination shows how unjust and unfair the charge is that the river and harbor bill is a "steal." It will be observed that the main portion of this increase is for the improvement of the Mississippi river and its tributaries, that great national highway through which the surplus products of the west may be cheaply conveyed to the markets of the world. It must not be forgotten, either, that much of the criticism of the river and harbor bill may eminate from the railroad interest of the country, which would be materially aided by arresting all improvement of the great national : waterways.

And finally it is charged that the amount appropriated for the support of the government for the current year, is greatly in excess of the amount appropriated for the last fiscal year. Here again a simple statement of facts will show how unjust such criticism is. In determining the increase of appropriations this year over those of last, we must first add to the appropriations for last year the amount of deficiencies made necessary by insufficient allowances. This sum is $29, 248,193.96, which added to the regular appropriation aggregate the sum of $219,367,983.38, the amount actually made use of in support of the govern ment during the last fiscal year. The amount appropriated for the current year for expenses including the river and harbor bill is $265,923,065, an increase it will be observed over the preceding year of $46,522,001.71. This increase was made necessary by the enlarged service of the country and the Yellow Fever.

Surgeon-General Hamilton has already made arrangements by which hospital tents have been sent to Memphis, and instructions have been given to the surgeon of the service there to proceed at once on receiving orders to Browns ville to take charge of the patients.

Congressman Hubbell is favoring his friends with copies of an Adrian(Mich) paper containing an interview with himself on the Senatorial question, in vhich he asks:

"Where does Mr. Ferry stand on the great question of tariff, for I wish to say now that that question will be one of the prominent questions of the coining campaign? It will be in vain for any candidate for office, State or National, to ignore it."

Mr. Ferry's opponent appears to be the only man who feels any doubt on this question, and his desire for information can be easily gratified by a reference to the Congressional Record which contains the record of the position of Mr. Ferry on the tariff question during the past ten years. It is Mr. Hubbell's views which are indoubt on this subject, and in the interview referred to he says:

"I do not wish to be understood as being a free-trader in the strict interpretation of the term, but, as I have previously stated, I am in favor of a evision of the tariff."

This a very good as far as it goes, but as Mr. Hubbell has introduced the subject into the Senatorial canvass it would be well for him to be a little more explicit in the expression of his views. A "revision" of the tariff means great deal, and when a man of his experience in legislation declares himself in favor of it, he leaves an indefinite inference to be taken. All the freetraders in the United States and England desire a revision of the American tariff, and the Democratic platform is very pronounced in its favor. How does Mr. Hubbell want it revised?— Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Hou. Julius C. Burrows.

The Republicans of the 4th Congressional District met in convention yes-terday and renominated the Hon. Julius C. Burrows by acclamation. Mr. Burrows is yet comparatively a young man, being in his 45th year, and has apparently a long and brilliant future before him. He acquired some promi nence in the 43d Congress, but it was not until he was returned to the 46th that it dawned upon his fellow members that he was a man of real capacity-of how much, those who were most closely watching his course were not prepared to say. He had growth in him, of that much they were confident, and he attracted their attention. Later he has justified the anticipation of all who looked for him to make his mark in Congress. He has made it. And he has dawned upon the country as one of the rising men of the west. Some of his speeches in force, clearness of reason, brilliance of imagery and genuine eloquence, have not been surpassed by the foremost orators or depaters of either branch of Congress. When he has spoken he has always had something to say, and he has said it in a way to compel the attention of friend and adversary, and he has reached beyond Congress to the hearing of his countrymen. During the past session he has frequently presided over the House, and in that difficult position he has exhibited so much courtesy, self-possession and knowledge of parliamentary law that he has come to be acknowledged as one of the best, if not the best, presiding officer in Congress. He has been mixed with no jobs There has been no breath of scandal touching his public or private life while in Congress; he has been devoted to the public business and to the interests of Michigan; he has been unflinching and intelligent in his advocacy of Republican principles, and he has otherwise given his great constituency at home and his party throughout Michigan many reasons to be proud of his career. He will be elected as a matter of course. And his election will continue him in a sphere in which the future, if he continues true to it as he has been, cannot fail to bring to him higher honors. We sincerely congratulate Mr. Burrows, his constituents and his State.—Detroit Post & Tribune.

Uncle Sam's Silver.

A Commercial Bulletin reporter obtained permission a few days ago to see the vault at the New York subtreasury, in which the silver now accumulating so rapidly is deposited. He was courteously ushered by Sub-Treasurer Acton through the offices, and then lowered by a lift to the vault. Its entrance is guarded by a massive safe door, with a complicated lock. Underneath the vault are, it is said, twenty feet of solid granite, and the sides are about eight feet in thickness. The vault is divided into 12 compartments, each having its door of stout wire. Here are stored in 28,-000 canvas bags no less a sum than $28,000,000, in dollars and smaller silver coinage. The money weighs 800 tons. This immense stock of silver coin has been received, it is said, within the past two years. To the door of each compartment is attached a label stating the value of its contents. This accumulation is expected to grow larger so long as the coinage of silver goes on. The public dislike handling it in large sums, provided greenbacks or certificates can be obtained.

The developments of the last 60 days at the Ropes gold mine, near Ishpening, are of a most satisfying and convincing character. Some 350 feet of the gold bearing rock have been uncovered. Assays made from this rock prove conclusively that there is a rich deposit of gold here, running in some instances as high as $400 per ton. To what extent gold mining will be carried on here will soon be determined. The work of development is being vigorously pushed, with strong indications that a large bed of valuable rock had been found. Capital necessary to work the mine has been assured if further exploration are as favorable as are now apparent. Mr. Ropes is confident that he has a bonanza, and predicts that extensive gold mining will be one of the mining features of the upper peninsula.

The Bay City Tribune says: It has occurred to the writer, and we believe it is true, that there is not a business in the city with the capital invested that furnishes employment to more hands than the daily newspapers. Take the Tribune for example. The number of men on the pay-roll aggregates 40 including 10 carrier boys. The largest wholesale house in the city has not half the number, nor is there a manufacturing establishment of about the same capital which can show as large a list. The Evening Press, including carrier boys, has 38 employes. This only goes to show one of the reasons why a newspaper should receive the hearty support of all classes.

in his recent lectures: "Kalamazoo, Mich., is a very wicked town. It is the haven of private dog fights and household draw poker. All minstrel companies go there to get wrecked. I do not know why they should get wrecked there, for they always have good houses. It must be because the poor minstrels, after the show, are invited into the best private Kalamazoo families for social intercourse with deacons and clergymen, and are then robbed. When I put up at Kalamazoo I always go to jail. It is really the only safe place for a traveling man to go to. I always feel safe at the jail, for I know while I am there that the citizens of the town cannot "My dearly beloved brethren, services will be held in this church next Sabbath, Providence permitting, and it isn't good fishing in the river." mother took him to Europe that he might enjoy the advantages of a European edu-cation. Accordingly, immediately after arriving in Amsterdam they set out for Geneva, from which place the young Jerome sent his American grandfather the following interesting description of the journey, which is a remarkable produc-tion from a boy not yet fifteen years old: GENEVA, July 15, 1819.—DEAR GRAND-FATHER: I left Amsterdam on the 27th of last June with a respectable voiturier Swiss, who had been it the habit of traveling from Amsterdam to Geneva for the last twenty years: He has his own carriage and horses, which he never changed the whole journey, and for the sum of seventy-five guineas he agreed, and has landed us safe in Geneva. We were obliged to take Mr. Dixon's brother as far as Basle, because mamma was afraid to travel through Holland and Germany by herself. But as soon as we entered Switzerland he returned to Amsterdam. We are informed that living in Geneva s enormous, and the defraying of Mr. Dixon's brother-in-law's expenses from Amsterdam to Basle and back again added a great deal to our expenses. The journey from Amsterdam to Geneva has through Holland, Prussia, the dominions of the Kings of Bavaria, and of the Dukes of Darmstadt and Dalar country is beautiful. Through Holland it is flat, and nothing but magnificent chateaux, gardens, fields, canals and everything you can imagine most beautiful are seen. Prussia in commencement s very ugly, the land poor and everything looking miserable; but looking towards the end, along the banks of the Rhine it is magnificent. On both sides you see very high mountains, so steep you can hardly climb them, and covered with grapes until the top. On the tops of them many old castles, towers and chateaux are seen in ruins. Then the Rhine running in a serpentine form, and large caves in the rocks, as well as beautiful houses built on islands in the middle of the river, form a most beautiful and magnificent prospect. Through the other places nothing re-markable is seen. This is a very short and imperfect account of it, as it is enirely from recollection, as I did not take notes on the road. The air of Switzerland is very clastic and light, the sky clear, and in fact just such a climate as that of America, except it is not so warm. Your devoted and affectionate grandson,

Not Swearing.

A real pretty, precise and polite young girl went to the dentist's and having a difficult case the dentist had to put the rubber-dam in her mouth, as is usual. The girl stood it like a little man, and whimpered, but when she had the teeth all fixed, and came out, she was overheard to remark to her best friend as she held her head in her hands, that she never swore except when she was on the witness stand, but really she thought that thing would rubber-dam head off. THE FAMILY DOCTOR.

FOOD AND DISEASE.—It may be well to recollect that it is not the quality so much as the quantity of food which lays the foundation every year of in-numerable diseases and death. Let it be remembered. also, that men need a variety of food; living on one or two kinds for a length of time will always undermine a healthy constitution. Milk only has all the elements of life; and any other one kind of aliment, used in-definitely as to time, will as certainly deteriorate the constitution, bodily and mentally. The popular notion that one or two kinds of food at a meal is most wholesome, is wholly untrue. On the contrary, several kinds at a meal, other things being equal, are more conducive to our well-being. Quantity and not quality is the measure of health.— Hall's Journal of Health. SMALL-Pox.—We again call the attention of our readers to the importance of early vaccination, in order that they may thereby secure the measurable protection it gives against small-pox, and because the degree of protection it gives may now be had without the danger of being inoculated with some terrible disease that has always attended the use of humanized vaccine. The thirty establishments in the United States where vaccine is taken direct from thoroughly healthy calves or young cattle afford an abundant supply, stored on ivory points, and obtainable by all druggists and physicians, at a very moderate cost. The fact of having been vaccinated years since does not afford proof of continued safety, and, while successful vaccination is not an infallible safeguard against small-pox, it renders its fatal termination, if contracted, highly improbable. Vaccination should be avoided when the system is suffering from manifestations of a tendency to erysipelas or inflamma-tion of any kind. As a rule, children while teething should not be vaccinated. We also again remind our readers of the fact that a pinch of powdered sulphur put in the foot of each stocking whenever they are changed is, to a very considerable extent, absorbed by the system, and it is a most effective preventive against the contraction of very nearly all contagious diseases. Sulphur purified by precipitation (precipitated lac sulphur) is the best.—American Sentry. BURNS AND SCALDS—IMPORTANT REM-EDY.—Four years since this paper recommended the use of bicarbonate of soda, that is the common cooking soda, for most kinds of burns. Since then

The soda, and the carbonic acid so readily set at liberty from it, have anæsthetic, antiseptic and disinfecting properties— all highly beneficial for burns. For slight burns cover all the injured parts with a layer of powdered soda. For deeper burns, but where the skin is not broken, dip linen rags in a solution made by dissolving about one-third of an ounce of the soda in a pint of water; ddress with stamps, REIEN & BOYLE

Just what her counsel expect to gain by this proceeding does not at present appear, unless it be to secure a judgment upon the judgment already obtained, and in that way assist them in collecting. Just before the trial of the case before, a similar one was decided against the village of Lowell, Kent county. The complainant obtained judgment and applied for a mandamus to compel the village to raise the money by tax. This case was argued on June 29, Judge Withey, of the District Court, and Judge Matthews, of the Supreme Court, on the bench There was a disagreement as to the power of the court to issue a writ, Judge Matthews holding that the court had no such power. In onsequence of this disagreement that case has gone to the United States Supreme Court for decision. Owing to the similarity in the two cases the decision of the Lowell case will practically decide the one for Buchanan. The deacon explained as best he could how that good schools, churches, etc., increased the price of land wherever they are established.

A few days after the same man called again on the deacon, and, placing a roll of bills in his hand, said:

"They heep talking up this subject "I have been talking up this subject of churches, and we have concluded to have preaching in our district. We want you to take this money and get us

Circulars and Newspapers Missent. It is the observation of the clerks in he "nixie," or misdirected, department of the Cincinnati Postoffice, that the common cause of circulars and newspapers being missent, or turned in as misdirected, is the giving of the wrong State on the envelope or wrapper. A clerk is addressing envelopes to postoffices in Indiana. Completing that State he turns to Ohio, but from the force of habit he continues to write "Indiana." In such a case matter intended for Jeffersonville, Ohio, would, of course, be sent to Jeffersonville, Ind., and so on down through the list. If itshould happen, as it frequently does, that there is no corresponding name in Indiana for the one intended for Ohio, the matter would be turned in as misdirected. This is not a hypot etical case, but one of almost daily occurrence. There does not appear to be any adequate remedy. In most instances parties having large quantities of circulars to address employ the cheapest help they can get, which is more interested in the number of envelopes that can be addressed in a given time, at so much 1,000, than that the addresses should be correct.—Postoffice Bulletin.

SOMEWHAT mixed: A gentleman who had spent half the winter at Washington endeavoring to get a private bill through Congress, returned to the bosom of his family a sadder and a wiser man. Shortly after his arrival he was met by a friend, who greeted him warmly with "Glad to see you back again. How about your bill?" "Bill—bill?" said the disappointed solicitor, confusedly, with a dim recollection of an encounter with the hotel-keeper, "I left it unpaid."

There is a proposition to pass a law making it an indictable offense for an individual to send out a Polar expedition, unless he goes himself. The practice of hiring good sailors to go off and freeze to death at $16 a month, while it proves a good advertisement for the fellow who hires them, is pretty tough on the families of those who never come back. Hereafter let none but bachelors go after the North pole.—Peck's Sun.

She Wanted Comedy.

Three months ago when a new servant girl came to a Brush street family the mistress said she desired to post the the girl in advance on one certain little point. She and her husband belonged to an amateur theatrical company, and in case Jane heard any racket around the house she must not imaigne that they were quarreling. They would simply be rehearsing their parts. The "play" began on the third evening of the girl's engagement. The husband taunted his wife with extravagance, and she said he played poker for money, and chairs were upset and footstools kicked around and threats were made of going home to mother. Next morning the mistress said to the girl: "Did you hear us playing our parts in the "Wronged Wife' last night?"

"Yes'm." "It was simply a rehearsal, you know, and you mustn't think strange of my throwing a vase at my husband and calling him a vile wretch."

Three or four nights after that the curtain went up on a play called: "The Jealous Husband," and Jane heard sobs, Jealous Husband," and Jane heard sobs, sighs, protestations, threats and exclamations. The next play was entitled: "Coming Home Tight," and was mostly played in the front hall. Then followed "The Depths of Despair," "Threats of Divorce," and "Such a Wretch," until Jane was at last tired of having a private box and being the only audience. The other morning she apaudience. The other morning she appeared in the sitting-room with her hat on and her bundle under her arm and

"What, going away?" "Yes'm

"For what reason?" 'Please, ma'am, but I'm tired of tragedy. I'm a girl as naturally likes to see hugging and kissing and love-making on the stage, and when Marks the lawyer comes in on the what-do-youcall-it I'm sure to be tickled to death. Ethink I'll try some family where they reliearse comedy and have a deal of kissing, and perhaps I may come in as a supe and get a small share of it my-

A Novel Will. The will of the late State Senator George F. Baker, of California, is a pe-quliar document. "I hope and expect that out of respect to my father's memory my mother will never marry. Should she do so, the sums I have bequeathed to her must be paid to her, free and to ner must be paid to her, free and independent of any husband she may hereafter have. Should my sister be at any time so unfortunate as to have a husband addicted to gambling, intoxi-cating liquors or other vice, or to be of alazy or spendthrut habits, then I direct that my executors, or the court having control of my estate, shall personally and directly expend such money, and paying the living expenses of my said sister Lulu, and the maintenance and education of any children she may have. I trust that no such necessity will ever arise, but unforcen calamities over-take the best of wives who are so unfortunate us to be wedded to depraved and unman y men who forget their yows and their duty, becoming monsters and brutes when they thould be companions and protectors.

Head-Hunters. [London Academy.] In Mr. Bock's account of life among the Dayaks (the Head-Hunters of Borneo) the great national custom of "head-hunting" has, of course, a large place. hunting" has, of course, a large place. In spite of the efforts of the Dutch to put it down it goes on still so briskly outside of their borders that many tribes marry until he has a head to show as a piece of bravery. Nor does the blood-thirsty business stop here, for the young warrior's wedding, such public events as the naming of a Rajah's newborn son, and above all, a Rajah's death, with its demand for heads of enemies to be taken in order that their souls may go as his servants in the next world—these and other reasons are always forthcoming to make war everlasting between tribe and tribe. Yet our traveler confirms the contrast, so usual among barbarians, between this ferocity to aliens and the kindly home-life. The Tayaks much desired his European knick-knacks, and desired his European knick-knacks, and begged for them pertinaciously, but would never take the smallest thing without leave; they would hesitate if they could not give a satisfactory answer, but they would not lie. The women have, of course, to work like beasts of burden, but the men behave gently the perspective of the state of the satisfactory and the satisfact them; everbody is kind to the children, and the sick are nursed and looked after by their friends with ready sympathy. According to the European standard of ethics, the head-hunters at compare in some ways favorable not only with the more civilized Malays, but even, we think, with some folks nearer our own doors. The most ferocious tribe met with by the explorer was the Trings, who are not only head-hunters, but cannibble, eating the bodies of the enemies whose heads they take. In most Dayak villages there are posts set up which commemorate head-hunting exploits, while others have to do with the yet more ghastly sacrifice of debt-slaves. It was a relief to meet with a tribe, the Orang Bukkit, whose partly Malay descent accounted for head-hunting not being their custom. Nor indeed, did they have the Dayak practive called pomali, the secluding of reople, or prohibiting access to fields or houses by setting up some such sign as a bundle of leaves on a stick. This is done in order to get good crops, or to shut off evil influences in sickness or mourning.

How Rugs Are Made.

show windows of our carpet dealers know how the rug is made? That it is woven somehow is all that is apparent as it lies there, warm, soft, bright with a dozen colors, fruit, birds or figures.

The rng is twice woven, and this is its history: First, the border and center that is to form the pattern is designed;

then painted in straight lines upon paper cantaining a ruled scale, and in the proper colors that are afterward to appear on the rug. This paper rug is then cut up into strips, each containing two spaces of the scale, and these papers are the pattern that the first or weft weaver is to follow. In weaving weft a warp beam of say 200 threads in width, and a wheep beam of 100 threads in width are required. Two threads of the first and one of the second pass through the same split in the reed at regular intervals of,

say one-third of an inch, the intervening splits of the reed being empty. The paper pattern is fastened to the middle of the work, and the weaver follows it exactly as it is painted; that is, the pattern may need six threads of crimson, two of black, twelve of ecru, ten of green olive, and so on, the weaver filling the "spot" exactly as to length and color. Having woven the full length of the paper as painted on the left-hand space the paper is begun again and the painting in the right-hand space is followed by the paper which lowed and when all the papers which, laid side by side, form the rug, have been thus gone over the west for the rug is finished. The roll of west-cloth is then run through the cutting machine, a 10-inch cylinder, around which a con-tinuous thread of knife blades is wound.

The cylinder is revolved at a high rate of speed, and the west-cloth, passing within range of the knifes, is cut into strips by them. These strips do not unravel, because, in weaving, the wheep-thread, is twisted about the two warp-thread, is twisted about the two warp-threads and the filling is locked in. After twisting each strip to change it from being a flat thread into a round thread, it is wound upon a bobbin, and is ready for the second weaver, who is called the setter.

The warp of the rug is black flax; and the setter uses two shuttles, alter-and the setter uses two shuttles, alternately—a small one, containing a bobbin of two-ply or three-ply flax, and a large one for the unwieldy bobbin of weft. A white thread on each side, and one in the middle of the black wrap are the guides to the setter, who sees that certain parts of the west-thread come under those white threads before he presses the west in. Each bobbin of west will weave about three inches of the rug; so, if the rug is one yard long it will require twelve bobbins, which mean twelve pieces of west-cloth, to complete it.

But these twelve pieces, having each been cut up into ninety-six identical strips, will make ninety-six similar rugs.

Therefore should the west-weaver put in, say, eight threads (one-half inch in length) of a wrong color or shade, that error would appear in ninety-six rugs. The setter having finished the ninety-six sets of twelve bobbins, the rugs are ready for finishing. The machine through which they pass cuts the surface off evenly, and brushes t..em free of fragments of the materials used. This treatment brings out every detail of the design and heightens the colors. Most of the rugs made here are of flax and wool; others are of silk and shoddy silk. The weft for the silk rugs has eight strips to the inch, and to cut it requires 288 knife blades, each one of which must have a razor edge. The west cloth and the blades must be set to a nicety, since the variation of the sixteenth of an inch would make the knives cut the 288 threads instead of the filling be tween the threads. There is a firm in Glasgow, Scotland, who manufacture for the royal houses of Europe such elaborate designs, as the Lord's supper, the west-weaver, in some cases, using 400 different shuttles.

ALBERT OF SAXONY is an odd sort of fellow. He is a devout Roman Cathoa fellow. He is a devout Roman Catholic, who rules with great circumspection his seven millions of Saxons, five millions at least of whom are orthodox Roman Catholics. Saxony is a vivid and entertaining illustration of the mercurial motive of maukind. For many more hundred years than the readers of these scraps would be interested in following, Saxony has been the spoil of war, the creature of intrigue, the sport of chance, the plaything of ambitious captains.

To go no further back than Frederick the Creat the removaling philosopher the the Great, the romantic philosopher, the petulant adorer of Voltaire, the liver of strange lives, Saxony has been the scene of Oriental diplomacy, poetry and song. It was Saxony that gave brain and function to Luther's mighty ravings—an electron of the training of the straining tion to Luther's mighty rayings—an elec-tor of that staid and regulated Gascony gave Luther the arms and the rock that made his sa'vation, even when the mighty forces of the potent Charles V. stood in his path like the lion that af-tickled Toxid frighted David.

"Yes," said the farmer, "barbed wire fences are expensive, but the hired man doesn't stop and rest every time he has to climb it."—Salem Sanbeam.

MALARIA

Malaria is an almost in-describable malady which not even the most talented physicians are able to fathom. Its cause is most frequently ascribed to local surroundings, and there is very little question, but this opinion is substantiated by facts. Malaria does not necessarily mean chills and fever while these troubles usually accompany it. It often affects the sufferer with general lassitude, accompanied by loss of appetite, sleeplessness, a tired feeling and a high fever, the person afflicted growing weaker and weaker, loses flesh day after day, until he becomes a mere skeleton, a shadow of his former self.

Malaria once having laid its hold upon the human frame, the door of the system is thrown open to nervous diseases. The body weak and enfeebled absorbs no nourishment, but subsisting upon itself, the digestive organs no longer perform their functions; the liver becomes torpid, and other organs failing to do their routine work, speedily become disordered, and dissolution and death are apt to ensue.

In addition to being a certain cure for malaria and chills and fever, BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is highly recommended for all diseases requiring a certain and efficient tonic; es pecially indigestion, dyspepsia, intermittent fevers, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, etc. Enriches the blood, strengthens the muscles, and gives new life to the nerves. Acts like a charm on the digestive organs. It is for sale by all respectable dealers in medicines, price, $1 per bottle

Porous Plasters.

Reasons Why they are Preferred to All Other Porous Plasters or External Remedies:

First. Because they possess all the merit of the strengthening porous plaster, and contain in addition thereto the newly discovered powerful and active vegetable combination which acts with increased rubefacient, atimulating, sedative and counter irritant effects.

Second: Because they are a genuine pharmaceutical preparation, and so recognized by the profession.

Third.

Because they are the only plasters that relieve pain at once. Fourth. Because they will positively cure diseases which other remedies will not even relieve.

Fifth. Because over 5000 physicians and druggists have voluntarily testified that they are superior to all other plasters or medicines for external use Sixth.

Because the manufacturers have received the only medals ever given for porous plasters. Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster! SEABURY & JOHNSON, Manufacturing Chemists, New York.

Of Duchess Co., N. Y., 80 Years of Age. Suffered Continually for Many Years from Stone in the Bladder. Biadder.

Great age and painful disease are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Duchess Co., N. Y., now of Washingtou Hollow, in the same county came to the office of Dr. David Kenneäy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-blooded, hardhearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of Urine, had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculus formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy irankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, and operation was out of the question, but that he could by the prescription of "Kenedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

ing but a trific. Will you let them suffer? 2

It seems strange, yet it is a painful truth, that thousands of people are dragging themselves through life, continually suffering from biliousness, which produces headache, constipation, pain in the back, and many other ills too numerous to mention. Mr. Geo. A. Hay, mayor of Coshocton, Ohio, writes as follows: "For the benefit of those who are sufferers from bilious complaints, I wish to speak in praise of Dr. White's Dandelion Alterative. I have used it during the past year, and I am unable to estimate the benefit I have derived from its use. I cheerfully recommend it as a specific for biliousness." For sale by W. A. Severson.

AN ATTENTIVE CONGREGATION. A Leaf From a E orthy Gergyman's Expe rlence—Transla ed ryom the German. It was Sunday and raining; raining hard, raining as it usually does at a seaport town and on the first day of the week. In this particular town there was a modest, unpretending church, from which the British flag was occasionally displayed to announce that religious service would be conducted therein for sailors and sea-faring people. The Gergyman on the morning of our narrative had arranged for the proper service, and as there was no sign of the storm abating determined to order a carriage. The demand for carriages was greater than usual, as indeed it is in every town during stormy weather. A few minutes before 11 o'clock, however, one answered his summons, and arriving at the place of worship, the clergyn an hastly or-dered the driver to wait until the service was over, to find himse f, however, in the edifice alone. Apparently sen-faring people hesitate to attend divine service in rainy weather with the same trepidation as the somers of the had, fr not one place was occupied. The energyman being a zealous man determined to defer the services for a s or while, and perhaps then some God fearing person might attend. His p-to-nee was rewarded, for in a few moments a man, dripping wet from the rain, entered, and modestly took a seat on the back bench. One might think he came only seeking shelter from the poming rain, as all the taverns were closed, it being the custom throughout England to close them all on Sunday. Now this spiritual adviser was not only a zealous but a conscientious man as well, and he determined, therefore, even before one worshipper, to render the service from beginning to end. He read with care and deliberation a portion of the Scriptures and the Liturgy throughout, and influenced probably by the piety and devotion of the worshipper before him, took occasion to suggest that the unfavorable weather had certainly deterred the usual visitors from attending the service and that he would not preach a sermon, but close the morning's exercise with a few remarks. The worshipper begged him to continue the entire service, expressing at the same time a desire to hear the sermon. This desire for instruction on the part of the attentive listener gratified the man of God, and, flattered not a little, he determined to fulfill the request. He selected a proper text and eloquently enlarged upon its firstly, se ondly, thirdly, fourthly, and finally concluded with "a few words more." The single worshipper proved most attentive, and when the services were finally concluded, our zealous prea her descended from the pulpit, and, approaching the devout worshipper, warmly pressed his hand as he thanked him for the attendance and care-

Useful and Beautiful.

If you want a golden rule that will fit everybody, this is it: "Have nothing in your house that you do not know to be useful or believe to be beautiful." And if we apply that rule strictly we shall in the tirst place show the builders and such like servants of the public what we really want; we shall create a demand for real art, as the phrase goes; and in the s cond p a c, we shall surely

Perhaps it will not try your patience too much if I lay before you my idea of the fittings necessary to the sitting-room of a healthy person—a room, I mean, which he would not have to cook in mych or charing generally a viscolish much or sleep in generally, or in which he would not have to do any very litter and a bench that you can sit or lie upon; next a cupboard, with drawers; next unless either the cupboard or book case be very beautiful with paintings or carving, you will want pictures or engravings, such as you can afford, only not stop gaps, but real works of art, on the wall; or also the wall itself must be organized. or else the wall its if must be ornamented with some be utiful and restful pattern; we shall also want a vase or two to put flowers in, which latter you must have sometimes, especially if you live in a town. Then there will be the freplace, of cours, which in our climate is bound to be the chief object in the room. This is all we shall want, especially if the floor be good; if it be not, as by the doubt, a diabolical expression—or at all events the tiger seemed to think so, for he put his tail between his legs and ran for his life. This tiger afterward killed a Karen, and was shot over the body by means of two guns tied near it, with a string attached to the trigger, fastened across the path he was expected by. To show the audacity of a tiger, I may briefly relate the following: Our Thirty-sixth native infantry was en route to Berhampore, and an officer's servant to Berhampore, and an officer's servant to Berhampore, and an officer's servant —who, with the mess-kit, had, as is often the case, preceded the corps to the next encampment ground—was, just at dusk, and close to the messguard, carried off the high road by a tiger. An infant he had in his arms when he was seized was quite unhurt in the awful rush that took place. Early the awful rush that took place. Early

While a platform was being got ready one of the party went back, while the other two sat a little way off to eat their lunch, and their gun-carriers were scat-tered about collecting materials for the machan. While thus employed the tiger carried off the body from their midst, in open day, and through not very thick brushwood, without being observed. To follow up was useless, as the body had neither blood nor rags to leave a trace behind. Tigers were so plentiful close to the large town of Pegu, in British Burmah, that many traps were set for them. In one, for lack of something them. In one, for lack of something better, Dr. Le Presle, Assistant Surgeon of Her Majesty's Eighty-fourth regiment, placed a duck, and caught a big tiger! An officer of the commission, who was sleeping with the doors and windows of his bedroom open, had a powerful bull-dog, which was chained to his bed, killed by a tiger by his bedside! When I was at Banlong a poor woman who was sleeping in the veranda of her house was fearfully clawed, but not bitten or carried off by a tiger. When

Col. Warren, of the Bengal army, was carried off, but kided the tiger by means of a pistol he carried with him, I believe: and many other sportsman have recovered of the being systematical and a Proered after being severely mangled. But the most extraordinary scape was Capt. Hill's, who, while leading a party of police, was attacked by a noted man-enter in the Yonzaleen Hills, and had a standup fight. The tiger pinioned his right arm to his side, put his paws on Hill's shoulders and stood over him openmouthed, while Hill endeavored to strike him with his left arm over the right shoulder. With a fiendish growl the tiger snapped down onto his victim's neck, who fortunately fell at that moment. Thus only the upper fangs penetrated, and the tiger turned over a com-plete somerset; and when the man and tiger faced each other again, the biped had apparently been converted into a quadruped, as he was on his knees and hands, and the blood pouring down his face and beard gave him, I have no doubt, a diabolical expression—or at all
