A WOMAN'S HEROISM

A sky darkened by clouds hurrying before driving winds, a sea gray-faced and wrinkled, tossing restlessly beneath a mass of barren rocks, upon which stood a tall light house, made up the dreary picture Huldah Deane was gazing upon with such wistful intentness. Her gray eyes presently followed the swoop of an osprey, and his after-flight upwards with his prey in his talons. "I would rather be that fish-hawk than Huldah Deane," she said, giving expression to her gloomy thoughts. "I must stay here day in, year out-here. where nothing happens, where the sea frets, and I fret with it. So I light the captain's pipe, scrub the tower and do chores for the dame. Who cares what else I do or what becomes of me? Yes, old sea, I'd rather be a fish-hawk and snatch the fish from you, than be Huldah Deane. Oh, dear! If something would only happen! If I could do something great or wonderful—go out in a life-boat to save drowning folks, or—"
"Huldy! Huldy Deane!" the quick, impatient call reached her, even above the roaring of the surf. It was Cap-tain Dutton's voice. "Come right in, quick; mother's taken in a spell, and I can't make it out." Huldah obeyed in awed silence. A spell the captain couldn't make out must be very bad, she thought. What if she or anybody else could not make it out? And, alas! who could understand the fixed stare of the dame's kind eyes, or the pinched shrinking ofmiliar to the two who dwelt under the same roof with her?

"She's got to hev the doctor as soon as he can be fetched, Huldy." "The doctor from shore?" questioned "Certain. There's none closer as I know. Do you?" "No, she gravely answered, "but the main land's a long way off, an' a storm's

"It makes no difference," said Cap-tain Dutton, stubbornly. "She's been a good mother to me, and she's in a bad fix. The doctor's got to be fetched,

In his rough, good-natured way, the captain loved his mother as he loved nothing else. The Largest in South-Western Michigan

"Ef she should die, I want her to know somehow as I tried to do my duty by her last of all. And Huldy" laying his hand on the girl's shoulder-"I ain't concerned but what she'll be took care on as fur as you can do it, child. It's hard lines to leave a young one like you here with such trouble but there's no help for it. I'll fetch the doctor as soon at I kin, leastways 'fore the sun drops. No sailor kin say as ever Kyle Dutton n.issed lightin' the beacon wi' the last ray o' sunshine, or turnin' off lamps as the sun stepped 'crost the horizon. Livin', I'll be here in time for that, Huldy." He nodded and went away. Huldah shivered as she glanced down at the motionless figure on the couch below. Maybe she would be left thus utterly alone for hours-for days. Her breath came hurriedly. It seemed to her more than she could bear. Frantically she forced open the window, and, thrusting her head through, shouted herself hoarse in a vain effort to make Captain Dutton hear her above the roaring of the sea. The boat tossed from wave to wave, plunged further and further away. And it was but a few hours ago that Huldah had wished she might have had an opportunity to do some great heroic deed. Now she said to herself: You were a pitiful coward then, Huldah Deane. You brave enough to go into a life-boat to save drowning folks! You deserve to be nothing better than fish-hawk. Because Dame Dutton lies ill yonder, and the captain puts off to fetch a doctor, is that any reason you should go into spasms of fright? For shame! Remember what father told you that night he sailed away never to come back any more: 'Do your duty always, Huldah.' Isn't it your duty now, foolish girl, to get right down from here and see to poor Mrs. Closing the window, she descended from her perch to renew her exertions for the relief of the poor dame. But toil as slie might, nothing she could do would change the fixed attitude, or calm the quick drawn breath that told of bitter suffering.

Presently the day began to wane The clouds ranged themselves in solid masses, and darkness and storm besieged the seagirt tower. Crossing to the clock in the corner, she scanned its face. "Five o'clock! So late? Why. the sun is down in less than half an hour, and the captain will lose his place if the beacon is not lighted by sundown. But what can I do? It's the order, he says, that women and children shan't have anything to do with the lights."

"Well, I'm hardly a child, I suppose, but neither am I a woman. Ships may be lost if the beacon is not lit." Then lighting the lantern the captain always used, she hung it on her arm, and after one more look at the sick woman, left

A fearful journey it seemed lighted. through the darkness, broken only by fitful glimmerings of her lantern, and now and then cross rays of light from the slits of windows in the thick walls. Clasping the iron rail, she toiled on, her limbs failing, her heart thumping, and her brain in a whirl. Not until she had reached the top step did she drop down to rest. Exhausted by fatigue and nervous excitement, she had Dutton returned from the mainland.

Fortunately the great lamps were trimmed and supplied with oil. Every part of the machinery was also in working order. Captain Dutton was one of the most careful of the light-house that terrible night was lifted, and be-

"And he shall see that I do not mean him to lose his place for one night's' failure to light the tower," Huldah said, her heart warming for the first time to the silent man who had, in his way, done his duty by her as well as by the place of trust-he filled. "Who upon the very spot where he has gone down to the bottom of the sen." Again a shiver crept over the silent figure, and only the blazing forth of the beacon dispelled her vivid fancy. One by one the lamps flared up, and were turned into place. The reflectors, polished to the utmost, caught the cheerful rays, and sent them in a farreaching circle of radiance out through the darkness and the storm, to give warning to those who were "gone down to the sea in ships." But this was only the beginning of Huldah's work. It was a chief part of the keeper's duty, she knew, to see that the lights burned undimmed throughout the night Now, however, she must return to attend to the dame a while. But as she turned to go, there was a sudden crashing of the glass about her, a whirling swoop of some swift-winged creature overhead, a gust of wind, a flaring of the circle of lights, and then darkness, rayless, absolute. The storm monned and shrieked in her ears, and Huldah shricked too, hiding her face in her shawl.

What had happened? Again the winged intruder whirred by, beating the air with wearied and dripping plumage. Ah! now she understood. Once Captain Dutton had told her of a storm-bird breaking one of his trans-parencies. Attracted by the light, doubtless, this wanderer has dashed against the glass.

There was but one thing to be done. She could not hope to relight the lamps until those blasts were shut out. She must find another frame and transpar-

How the descent was accomplished Huldah could never think [without a shudder. At the very outset, when she had groped her way to the landing, and had succeeded in relighting her little lantern, the door she had latched behind her flew open, giving outlet to those terrible winds, which tore at her clothing savagely, extinguishing her light, and leaving her again in darkness. Of necessity she stood still until the currents had strangled each other, and sunk down into the depths of gloom below her. Then, shutting her eyes tightly, she went on her perilous journey.

From the basement stores she procured the frame and fixtures, and running with them by the same winding route upward, found it not such a dificult thing to unhinge and replace the shattered transparency, the tempest having lulled slightly, and the force of the wind being broken. Yet by the time her task was complete, and the lamps relit, her strength failed her. Vaguely thinking that maybe she was going to die, she fell upon the floor and with a deep-drawn sigh her eyes closed.

Four hours later an inspector from the mainland passing to the island light-house was hailed by the captain of a brig which had weathered the storm and come to anchor for repairs.
"What ails the tower light, sir?" he asked of the officer, nodding towards the beacon, through the transparencies of which a steady stream of light was still pouring, though the sun was doing its best to dim its glory. The inspector frowned. "I only know that the keeper's neglecting his duty. The sailor shook his head. "Some thing more's amiss, I'm thinking. The light came near playing us a jack-o'lantern trick just before day. She put on her night cap all of a sudden, and it was like the pole-star had let loose o' the compass needle. A little more'n we'd 'a dashed upon the reefs, only she waked up and showed us her shiners. And not a wink had she took since. Somewhat's wrong. Cap'n Dutton's been prompt as the sun these twenty

"Captain Dutton? Is't Captain Kyle Dutton that's keeper of the light-house vonder?" asked one of the brig's passengers, starting forward, excitedly. 'Yes, Kyle Dutton. He's a queer chap, but he ain't the fellow to shirk

In a moment the stranger had asked to be put ashore. The landing was effected with little risk, but those of the boat's crew who ascended the cliff and sought entrance to the tower found themselves baffled. The ladder was gone, the iron door barred, and their pounding awoke no response other than muffled echoes from the interior.

"We may get in through a window," said the inspector. "Hodges, fetch the

The hook was brought, and at the second throw caught over the iron balcony under Dame Dutton's window. The inspector climbed the rope, followed by the others, and soon admission was gained to the room beneath. "Here's one of the 'Seven Sleepers,' said Dick Trail, going up to the couch. He started back. "Why, it's the Cap'n's mother, and she looks as if she were

Two of the men gathered closer to see what they could do for the poor woman, and the others began to search the tower. No clue to the mystery, if mystery it contained, was found below. Together in silence they mounted the winding stairway.

A flood of meliow light poured upon the group as the officer opened the door into the lantern room. There upon the floor, bathed in the glory, lay Huldah Deane. To her locked senses, lulled into unconsciousness by the roar of the storm-lashed ocean, the tumult in the tower had never ceased

She was only awakened now by feel ing herself lifted in a pair of stout arms, and strained to the breast of the stranger seaman. "Huldah! Huldah! My little one my daughter!" she heard a tender voice murmuring, and in her glimmer of consciousness felt hot tears drop ping on her face. After the first wild emotion of joy what a sense of rest the child had, feel ing the protecting arms of her father about her. For the stranger, who had endured shipwreck and danger, was none other than Huldah's father. With only the name of Kyle Dutton, who had taken Huldah from the orphanage where he had placed her be fore sailing on his last fated voyage, to furnish him a clew, Captain Deane, after a vain search of months, had been guided into the presence of his child by the beacon her little hands had

There were honest tears in the eye looking upon this reunion; neither did one of those strong hearts fail to respond with a thrill of admiration as the daughter recounted to her father the trials to which her fortitude and courage had been subjected during the past night of tempest and awful solitude. An Editor with an Eventful History. There died in Vienna, this month, knows, though, but this light may fall Carl Hoffmann, for a long period the editor-in-chief of the Wiener Tageblatt. He had worn constantly for thirty years, on the forefinger of his right hand, an iron ring, made by himself from a link of the chain he had worn through two weary years of imprisonment of hard labor. He was an ardent sympathizer with the Hungarian struggle for independence, the struggle that made Kossuth famous. He advocated liberty with tongue and pen; though very young, he became so conspicuous than when the Anstrian General Windischgratz entered Pesth, in 1849, his first act was to arrest Hoffmann. Although but nineteen years of age, a court-martial found him guilty of high treason. He was sentenced to five years' penal servitude in a Bohemian fortress. In the depth of a severe winter he was forced to march from Pesth to Vienna, and thence to Koniggratz by circuitous routes heavily ironed and thinly clad. After reaching the place of imprisonment, he was set at cleaning the streets. It is from a link of the chain that he wore during this time that he made his iron finger-ring. As a scavenger he was in good company, for by his side toiled Szlary, the present Austrian Minister of Finance, who is probably the only Chancellor of the Exchequer in the world who has done scavenger work with a chain upon his ankles. Released from imprisonment, Hoffmann adopted journalism as a profession, and remained to the last an ardent advocate of liberal government For fifteen years he was the editorial head of the foremost daily paper in Vienna; at all times and on all occasions he had the courage of his convic-tions. A long time is likely to elapse before there arises in Vienna another editor with the varied and bitter experience of Carl Hoffmann.-Printer's Circular.

Gum Arabic.

The most familiar objects about us are often least understood, and probably few can pause to ask the question what is gum arabic, and from whence it comes? In Morocco, about the middle of November (that is just after the rainy season), a gummy juice exudes spontaneously from the trunk and branches of the acacia. It gradually thickens in the furrow down which i runs, and assumes the form of oval and round drops, about the size of a pigeon egg, of different colors, as it comes from the red or white gum tree. About the middle of December the Moors en-camp on the border of the forest and the harvest lasts a full month. The gum is packed in large leather sacks and transported on the backs of camels and bullocks to seaports for shipment to different countries. The harvest oc-casion is made one of great rejoicing, and the people, for the time being, al most live on gum, which is nutritious and fattening. Such is the commercial story of this simple but useful article.

Why They Do It.

Every established local newspaper receives subscription from large cities, which puzzle the publishers, which the New York Times lately explained as follows:

"A wholesale merchant in this city who has become rich at the business, -says his rule is that when he sells a bill of goods on credit to immediately subscribe for the local paper of his debtor So long as his customer advertised liberally and vigorously he rested, but as soon as he began to contract his advertising space he took the fact as evidence that there was trouble ahead, and invariably went for the debtor. Said he: "The man who is too poor to make his business known is too poor to do business.' The withdrawal of an advertisement is evidence of weakness that business men are not liable to act upon."

According to an English geographical writer, there are four vast areas still to be opened up or traversed by civilized man, and which among them constitute about one-seventeenth of the whole area of the globe. Of these there is the Antarctic region, which in extent is about seventy-five times that of Great Britain; the second lies about the North Pole; the third is in Central Africa, and the fourth in Western Aus-tralia. The South Polar region refer-red to is almost conterminous with the antarctic circle. The vast African area reaches on the west very closely to the coast, and it is only near the equator that it has more than superficially been driven inland. In Australia the great undeveloped region is that which lies west of the track explored from north to south by Stuart, and which now forms the line of telegraph-ic communication across that conti-

Once when John Randolph was leaving a country tavern, the landlord said: "Mr. Randolph, which way are you geing?" The gruff Virginian replied. "I've paid my bill, and it's none of your business." Half an hour later Randolph came to a cross-road, and not knowing which to take, sent his servent back to inquire. The landlord replied, "Tell Mr. Randolph he has paid his bill, and can take which road he pleases."

Ben Perley Poore gives the following account of the origin of reaping machines. Rev. P. Bell, son of a Scotch farmer, but studying for the ministry, one day noticed the action of a pair of hedge shears as used in the garden, and looking attentively, said to himself:
"Here is a principle." He tried it on some oats near by. Soon he saw his way to the cutting, and had suitable sets of shears made. The gathering baffled him long, but accident interven-ed again, and helped him to success, reached in 1828, the grain cutting being tried upon straws stuck in the ground, before any crops ripened. In 1888 one of the machines was ordered from America, and soon those of Hussey and McCormick were produced, using the same principle.

Diseases of the Kidneys.

and changes in many diseases, but is the only true resource in diagnosing all complaints of the kidneys. He finds many difficulties with similar symptoms as those in diseases of the kidneys, and his chemistry must be his discriminator. Then, again, many times chemistry will tell us we have too much of an alkaline or acid condition, and in so doing name our treatment. Now, it is a fact that twe-thirds of the difficulties coming under the notice of the specialist of chronic diseases is due directly to an abnormal condition of the excretory organs.

Right here it may be well to mention briefly these organs and their functions. Commencing with the bowels, we find an outlet for all the unnecessary solids of the body. The kidneys and skin serves as channels by which the superfluous fluid constituent are discharged, while the lungs expel the poisonous carbonic acid gas, admitting in its stead the life-giving gas, oxygen. Any means, it matters not what, that impedes the normal functions of these organs, alone or together, sows the seeds from which to reap a goodly harvest of disease. The urine is one of the most, if not the most complex fluid of the body. It is analysed in three prominent ways, viz: optically, microscopically and chemically. We adopt the same mode in analysing as in the analysis of mineral waters. The health urine is of an amber-yellow color, has a temperature of 98 degrees or of the body, and possesses a decided acid reaction. If we leave the urine standing for some time we will perceive a cloud-like substance in the bottom of the vessel—This is mucus. Soon after this change, by testing with the litmus paper, we find there is no longer an acid reaction. but an alkaline. Now, these changes are no indication of disease. This mucus is derived from the genito-urinary tract, the alkalinity being due to the presence of carbonate of amonia formed by decomposition. On the other hand, suppose you realize the changes on first urinating, then they indicate some diseased condition. The ordinary ingredients of the urine are urophaeine. indican, urea, uric acid clorides, sul-find that urophaeine undergoes a change in Bright's disease and in acute and chronic forms of inflammation of the bladder. Indican changes in hyperaemia and Bright's disease; urea in diabetes, cholera and Bright's disease; uric acid in urinary calculi and gout; chlorides in but a very few diseases; sulphates in all acute, chronic and congestive stages; phosphates changes generally similar to chlorides. There are many more diseases which. we could add, in fact we could go on through the whole category of diseases and find in all some change in these above ingredients, some decreased and others increased. With all these diseased conditions there are many changes in the uride which is in perfect health, and yet resembles the gravest difficulties. Let us take the most simple examples. Suppose at dinner you eat of substances plenti-ful in alkalies, during the afternoon you will find the urine is of an alkaline reaction. Again warm weather when the pores of the skin are well is due to the increased work of the skin accomplishing some of the work belonging to the kidneys, thus concentrating the urine. In cold weather, however, we find just the opposite, the pores of the skin contracted, the kidneys doing the large part of the work and the urine plenty, of a low specific gravity and a pale color. All this within the bounds of health and yet in fevers the urine has a similar appearance as the warm weather urine, while in diabetes we find a similarity of the cold weather urine. From the above we will observe that the kidneys are the principle excreting organs of the body, eliminating as they do more waste matter than any other organ, thereby illustrating their importance and showing theis secretion to be the great health and strength indicator of the body. Although we have shown that every change noticed in the urine is not one of disease, yet we wish to impress upon all the necessity of attention of these organs, and to at once consult some intelligent physician concerning the first change noticed, as substances visible only by means of a high power microscope soon become the size of an egg. We have made our visits regularly for years, and shall for years continue to do so, and will be for consultation upon all diseases of the lungs, liver heart, throat, stomach, nerves and blood, on our next visit at Niles, Bond House, on Saturday, until 3 o'clock, the Far below us in the distance, plainly visible, lay Leadville, the largest buildings looking like toy houses. We turned to our horses, and were soon off for a steady ride of about five miles, and arrived home at noon, just in time to escape a heavy shower of rain.

That evening we could look up on the same mountain where we had been, and there instead of rain it was white with snow. It has rained most of the time since. This morning, in the city, the house-tops and sidewalks are covered with snow, and it has continued to snow and rain nearly all day.

was then divided pro rata, and each one's share was found to be seventeen cents. What became—but of course, you know that the lawyers got it. A farmer takes four dozen eggs to town and exchanges them for two pounds of sugar at nine cents a pound, and when he returns home his wife gives him fifty-five cents' worth of "you infer-nal old sap-head!" Figure it all in and find how much he received per dozen for the eggs.

A lightning rod man sits down to try and remember how many farmers he has swindled. He can't begin to recall the names and dates, and so he multiplies his eighteen years of experience by two, adds five, subtracts one, and calls the result one-fourth of the grand total. What is the total?

From the Mountains. LEADVILLE, Colo., Aug. 31, 1882. EDITOR RECORD:-I would like to have a chat through your paper with my former schoolmates and friends. I think they would like to hear from me in this distant mountain land.

I must tell you some things about our city. We live on the principal street, in the central part of the town. Just now six large brick stores, each 100 feet deep and two stories high, are being built adjoining us on one side, and large brick and frame buildings are being built in other parts of the city. Thirteen railroad passenger trains now arrive and depart daily, and soon another road will be here, which is being built as fast as possible. All the principal Christian denominations are well represented, and each have a good church, and are well attended on Sundays. The ministers are noted as men of ability. People here can have good society and good company, if their education and inclinations are that way, and certainly there is no new or old town, for that mater, where educational advantags are better. We have four school buildings, two of them each as large and fine as the school building in Buchanan, and two other smaller ones, and a large Catholic school building in course of erection. I attended the public school all last winter and did not miss a day, and consider our schools very superior to any other. There is one large Catholic hospi-pital and a Union Veteran hospital. The beautiful little private residences are almost without number, but large pallatial private residences, like in Eastern cities, are few. The buildings on the many great mines, on the hills near by, present the appearance of little villages, and the

WHILE in Kalamazoo one day last week we noticed that when store-keepers had watermelon rinds, dried beef stubs, dish water, slops, and such things to dispose of, they do not step to the back door and give it a throw, to rot and furnish the whole neighborhood with perfumery for a whole season, but the back yards and alleys are all as dry and clean as the front streets. It occurred to us that Buchanan would be a much more pleasant, and certainly a more healthy place if her merchants would observe the same cleanly habits followed by those in Kalamazoo. On Monday, October 2, the Republicans of this county will make their choice of candidates for the various county offices, excepting Judge of Probate. Judge Leeds' term of office being but half expired. By provision of the statute the county treasurer can hold the office but two terms, and for this reason there must be a new man selected to fill that office. For the office of Circuit Court Commissioner for the south end of the county, there will be' Wm. J. Gilbert of Niles, and A. A. Worthington of this place, to choose between. As the office has been held in Niles for a long term of years, and two terms by Mr. Gilbert, we expect to see Mr. Worthington nominated. With these exceptions the present incumbents having performed their duties in a manner satisfactory to all concerned, will probably be renominated. For the office of treasurer there are three candidates in the field: S.L. Van Camp, for a number of years supervisor of Benton township; Ed. Platts, a hardware merchant of St. Joseph, and James Brooks, of Royalton, captain of the river steamer May Graham. Each of these gentlemen is fully competent to properly fill this important office, and the choice will depend greatly upon the acquaintance of each through-

This was taken to Buffalo in the spring, being the first provisions shipped from the West through the Erie Canal. We carried out on our persons about $7,000 in Boston bills, but were unable to find cattle and hogs enough to use all the money, and carried back a portion of it in the spring. I went from Chicago to Ohio in the winter '33 and '34 on an Indian pony. The stopping places were often thirty miles apart, through Michigan. Chicago had a garrison of eighty soldiers, and 250 or 300 citizens. I began the provision business in a rather novel and primitive way, by hanging my cattle on a large Elm tree, near where the postoffice and custom-house now stand, following the business until I slaughtered 185 large cattle and 500 hogs daily. This was progressive for the times, but in magnitude not to be compared with what has been done since I left the business in '52. Last season there were hogs enough slaughtered in Chicago, if placed in line, single file, to reach 2,000 miles. The principal beefpacking is now done in Kansas and Missouri, five or six hundred miles west of Chicago.

·Dr. K. Von Fritsch, of Halle, discusses the subject of earthquakes in the Verhandlungen of the Berlin Geographical Society. He maintains that the cause of earthquakes must be sought for at a rather small depth, the greatest depth ascertained not exceeding ten or fourteen miles, and usually far less, while rather feeble forces produce earthquakes which are felt at great distances. It is known that Krupp's hammer, which weighs 1,000 centhers, and falls from a height of these rectanger produces for a heighth of three meters, produce sensible concussions on a surface of eight kilometers diameter; while the recent explosion of the Leimbach dynamite manufactory was felt at Halle and Merseberg, forty-one and forty-five kilometers distant. While showing how easily concussions are produced by causes comparatively feeble, Dr. Fritsch points out how earthquakes might be and must be produced by the increase and decrease of volumes of rocks under the influence of physical and chemical forces, and by concussions, by the opening of crevices in rocks, and by the subsidence of masses of rocks due to these agencies. Many schists are subjected, as is known, to extension, and when crevices arise the schists must enter into oscillations which must produce very varied phenomena, according to the direction and the force of the oscillations, much like to what is seen in the oscillations of tuning-plates.

FOR A COUGH.—For a tight, nearse cough, where phlegm is not raised, or with dificulty, take hot water often, as hot as can be sipped. This will be found to give immediate and permanent relief.

THE British Medical Journal asserts that the local effect of tobacco on the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and ears is as predisposing to catarrhal diseases as is inefficient and insufficient clothing in the case of women.

CURE FOR DANDRUFF.—A preparation of one ounce of sulphur and one quart of water, repeatedly agitated during intervals of a few hours, and the head saturated every morning with the clear liquid, will, in a few weeks, remove every trace of dandruff from the scalp, and the hair will soon become soft and

FOR CHAPPED HANDS.—The following formula is recommended by the Medical Brief: Bay rum, two parts; glycerine, two parts; quince-seed jelly, four parts. A few drops of oil of rose or any other perfumery may be added to the bay rum before mixing. The same lotion diluted with rain-water forms an excellent dressing for the hair. The jelly is made by adding two drachms of quince-seed to 2 pints of water, boiled down to one pint, filtered hot and allowed to cool. pint, filtered hot and allowed to cool. DEATH IN RAW HAM.—It is strange that people will eat raw ham after the many warnings which they have received that all pork, smoked or not, is liable to contain trichine. When pork is proper-ly cooked, the germ of the parasite is lestroyed, and no danger need be apprehended. When uncooked and eaten, the eggs, which are lying dormant, become active and the parasites multiply with amazing rapidity, and soon the entire muscular system is invaled by them, and the eggs of the sufference is interest. the agony of the sufferer is intense.

A WRITER in the Nineteenth Century says that contagion consists of minute solid particles and not gaseous disseminations. If this is true we can readily understand that a person who breathes only through the nose will be much less likely to the nose will be much less likely to catch a contagious disease in a sick-room than would a mouth-breather. Free ventilation, perfect cleanliness and frequent changes of clothing afford the light means of removing the contagious patticles given off by the sick persons.

ICE FOR TEETHING CHILDREN.—The pain of teething may be almost done away, and the health of the child benefited by giving it fine splinters of ice, picked off with a pin, to melt in its mouth. The fragment is so small that it is but a drop of warm water before it can be swallowed, and the child has all the coolness for its feverish gums with-out the slightest injury. The avidity with which the little things taste the cooling morsel, the instant quiet which succeds hours of fretfulness, and the sleep which follows the relief, are the best witnesses to the magic remedy. Ice may be fed to a 3-months' child in this way, each splinter being no longer than a common pin, for five or cen minutes, the result being that it has swallowed in that time a teaspoonful of warm water, which, so far from being a harm, is good for it, and the process may be re-peated hourly as often as the facting fits at least one year's actual bona fide residence and cultivation of the homestead.

Respecting the five-year homestead, the homestead law says: By making an entry an inceptive right is vested in the settler, and his final title depends on his residence upon, and cultivation of, the land embraced in his claim. This resi-dence and cultivation must continue five years, unless he was a soldier or sailor in the late war; or if he prefers to pay for his land, or at private entry, he may for his land, or at private entry, he may after six months' settlement and cultivation make the necessary proof. This early payment is called commuting homestead entry. Such homestead settler (an ex-soldier or sailor) shall be allowed six months after locating his homestead, and filing his declaratory statement, within which to make his entry and commence his settlement and improvement. Tree Growth and the Flint Lock.

A correspondent in the Chicago Inten Ocean says: I see it stated that the growth of a young tree never gets any higher from the ground, but I think I can cite two positive facts to the contrary.

1. Some person put a circular flat stone one and a half inches thick, tapering to a round edge, between forty or fifty years ago, into the crotch of an apple tree, and when it was put there the top of the stone was about level with the crotch of the tree, and now on one side or edge of the stone the wood is five or six inches higher than the stone, and on the other side of

2. Forty-six or forty-seven years ago my brother hung about six inches of a deer's horn in the crotch of a beech tree, and the tree was cut down last winter, and the horn was imbedded in solid wood which had united eight or nine inches above the horn, so that if another horn had been hung in the same place it would have hung eight or nine inches

A few words in regard to the flow of sap in the maple tree:

When a maple tree is cut into to get the sap, in order to make sugar, the sap will flow up and down until the warm weather will stop the flow. The flow may be checked in the upper part of the tree first, because it will be effected by the heat first. After the sap has done flowing in the spring there will be no perceptible flow up or down until the tree is frozen again. The leaves of the tree don't put out until after the sap has done flowing perceptibly.

Now a little in regard to the old flint lock. When I was a boy I used to play with a flint and jack-kuife, with which I produced sparks, the largest of which would fall perhaps two feet from the flint. Now if these sparks had been caused by hympion cos I think they would have by burning gas, I think they would have gone up instead of down. Our theory for the sparks going down, is the flint pares off small particles of steel, which are heated by friction. Now if the atmosphere of the earth and sun are so dense as to cause such a tremendous repressive force the moon having to pass through the atmosphere of one or the other would be retarded in its motion. As far as we are able to observe, the earth's atmosphere has a tendency to retard the motion of anything passing through it.

A Mississippi Pilot's Story.

The passenger, who was going down the big river for the first time in his life, the big river for the first time in its me, secured permission to climb up beside the pilot, a grim old grayback, who never told a lie in his life.

"Many alligators in the river?" asked

"Then there used to be lots of 'em?"

inquired the passenger.
"I'm most afraid to tell ye, mister, but I've counted 1,100 allygators to the mile from Vicksburg cl'ar down to New Orleans. That was years ago, afore a shot was ever fired at 'em."

"Well, I don't doubt it," replied the stranger.

"And I've counted 3,459 of 'em on one sand-bar," continued the pilot. "It looks big to tell, but a government surveyor was aboard, and he checked 'em off as I called out."

"I haven't the least doubt of it," said the passenger, as he heaved a sigh.

"I'm glad o' that, stranger. Some fellers would think I was a liar, when I'm tellin' the solemn truth. This used to be a paradise for alligators, and they were actively that they they when the theory they have the solemn truth.

"Are both halves of this seat occupied?" was the next query.
"Of course both halves are occupied."
"Well, my friend," said the new arrival, as he let go of his satchel, "I want to bother you with one more query. Had you rather I would toss that grab-bag out of the window and sit down with you, or chuck you out and ride with the grab-bag?"

The grab-bag man got mad at that and wouldn't ride anywhere else than on the wood box.

BECAUSE all men are apt to flatter themselves, to entertain the addition of other men's praises is most perilous.

A GIRL at Glasgow, Scotland, committed suicide because she dreamed that the devil was her husband. That was very frivolous. Why, lots of Chicago women have not only dreamed that same, but when they woke up have felt that it was so, and they didn't commit suicide but merely jawed round a good deal.

MALARIA

Malaria is an almost in-describable malady which not even the most talented physicians are able to fathom. Its cause is most frequently ascribed to local surroundings, and there is very little question, but this opinion is substantiated by facts. Malaria does not necessarily mean chills and fever while these troubles usually accompany it. It often affects the sufferer with general lassitude, accompanied by loss of appetite, sleeplessness, a tired feeling and a high fever, the person afflicted growing weak-er and weaker, loses flesh day after day, until he becomes a mere skeleton, a shadow of his former self.

Malaria once having laid its hold upon the human frame, the door of the system is thrownopen to nervous diseases. The body weak and enfeebled absorbs no nourishment, but subsisting upon itself, the digestive organs no longer perform their functions; the liver becomes torpid, and other organs failing to do their routine work, speedily become disordered, and dissolution and death are apt to ensue.

In addition to being a certain cure BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is highly recommended for all diseases requiring a certain and efficient tonic; esecially indigestion, dyspepsia, intermittent fevers, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, etc. Enriches the blood, strengthens the muscles, and gives new life to the nerves. Acts like a charm on the discrete control of the like a charm on the strength of the s digestive organs. It is for sale by all respectable dealers in medicines, price, $1 per bottle

Of Duchess Co., N. Y., 80 Years of Age. Suffered Continually for Many Years from Stone in the Bladder. Bladder.

Great age and painful disease are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Duchess Co., N. Y., now of Washingtou Hollow, in the same county came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-blooded, hard-hearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of Urine, had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculus formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy irankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, and operation was out of the question, but that he could by the prescription of "Kenedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

The Reasons Why The Heasons Why
Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is being extensively used by our people are as follows: It is a combination of vegitable alteratives. It is pleasant to the taste, adapted to both sexes and all ages is effective in affording immediate relief in all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver complianti, constipation of the bowels and derangements peculiar to women. At the same time purines the blood, thus giving tone and strength to the system debilitated by disease or age. "Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy" for sale by all druggists.

Woman Suffrage in Wyoming.

We clip the following from the Hebron, Thayer County, Nelraska Journal:

"Mrs. Galbraith, wife of Hon. R. Galbraith, of La amie, Wyoming Territory, is visiting relatives and friends in Thayer County. In a recent conversation she gave the following facts relative to woman suffrage in Wyoming:

Mrs Galbraith has lived in that territory for eleven years, and her observation and experience cover the entire period of women voting there. She said that the women voting there. She said that the women of the territory received equal political rights without the asking. Political equality was thrust upon them, but they were equal to the emergency, and performed their political duties from the first as well as the men. I efore the introduction of this measure no murderez had ever been punished, although several murders had been committed. When a jury composed equally of women and men was formed, the first murderer was convicted. Mrs Galbraith's daughter convicted. Mrs Galbraith's daughter was one of the jurors. Good order prevails at the polls. At first women thought they must be accompanied by their husbands to the polls, but they soon learned they could attend the polls as safely as at church, and with less rudeness than at the postoffice. The ranchers and "cow-boys," from which the most disturbance was to have been expected, on the approach of women to the most disturbance was to have been expected, on the approach of women to the polls, would say, "stand back and let the ladies pass." In all cases is the utmost courtesy shown, and order and quiet prevail. No one is allowed within a prescribed number of feet of the place of voting, consequently there is no jost-ling. That much mooted question of the ever present baby which is to interfere with the mother voting has long since been settled in Wyoming. One must re-member in depositing a ballot is but the work of a few moments. A mother, in case she has no other competent help entrusts her babies to the care of a neighbor, goes to the polls, deposits her ballot, returns and takes care of the neighbor's babies while she in turn performs her political duties. And all this in much less time than it takes her to go shopping or to church, which are universally accorded women's privilege. Unless one chooses it is not necessary for a woman to walk to the polls, as politicians always have carriages in readiness to convey voters there. Indeed the utmost courtesy and consideration of the political statement of the political statement of the political statement of the province of the province of the political statement of the province of the political statement of the province of the province of the political statement of the province of the provi tion are shown women in Wyoming, because they are an important factor in the government as well as the home."

How Johann Strauss Writes his Waltzes. Strauss and his wife were enjoying a Strauss and his wife were enjoying a quiet walk in the park at Schonau recently, when suddenly the composer exclaimed: "My dear, I have a waltz in my head; quick, give me the inside of a letter or an envelope to write it down, before I forget it." Alas! after much rummaging of pockets it was discovered that neither of them had a letter about them—not even a tradesman's account. them—not even a tradesman's account. Johann Strauss' music is considered light, but it weighs heavy as lead on his brain till he can transfer it to paper. His despair was heart-rending. At last a happy thought struck Frau Strauss. She held out a snowy linen out, and Johann smiled. In two minutes it was MS. Then its mate shared the same fate, then Frau Strauss' collar, then not another scrap of starched linen on which to conclude the composition. His own linen was limb colored calico-no hope linen was limb colored calico—no hope there. Johann became frantic. He was much the worse for having been allowed to write three-quarter of the waltz. He was on the point of dashing home like a madman when another happy thought struck Frau Strauss. She plunged her hand into a capacious pocket, fished out a purse, opened it and displayed, to his delighted gaze, a bran new hundred gulden note. Hursh! The entire finals gulden note. Hurrah! The entire finale was written on the bank-note, and then Johann Strauss relapsed into his usual

A Soft Answer.

"Can I see the lady of the house?" inquired the peddler.

"Well, yes, you can if you ain't blind!" snapped the woman who had answered the bell.

"Oh, beg pardon, madam; you are the lady of the house, then?"

"Yes, I am! What d'yer take me fur? Did yer think I was the gentleman of the house, or the next door neighbor, or one of the farm hands, or the cat, or the ice-chist?"

The extremes of society seem to be farther apartin England and the working classes appear as a whole to fare herder, than in any other nation of Europe. Thomas Wright, a journeyman engineer, says that the condition of English workingmen is worse than it was in the Middle Ages. Then they had abundance according to their needs, now they rarely have a sufficiency. Of five million operatives, only one third find employment; another third have partial employment, while the lowest third find little work, and are often without any employwork, and are often without any employ-ment, He believes that only one in twenty is able to live comfortafly, and lay twenty is able to live comfortafly, and lay by something for a time of need. In 1868, 3,794 persons died in London of atrophy, or lack of nourishing food.

Mr. Wright gives a sad picture of the homes of the poor. "In every requisite of health, their dwellings are inferior to most stables. We have seen piggeries in comparison with which the same might be said of them. Any master of hounds would be indignant if he were asked to kennel his hounds in such dens for a single night; while any master of hounds or owner of horses who fed his animals as scantily as some of the poor animals as scartily as some of the poor are fed, would be in danger of prosecution by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty."

Van Dyke's Good Shot.

Van Dyke, of Brook, came upon a wildcat and four kittens upon a large rock. He pulled trigger, and the ball struck the nearest kitten in the neck, the splinters striking one in the ear, another in the breast and the main portion passion killing the action of the large transfer of the large transfer that the structure of the large transfer to the large transfer to the large transfer transfer to the large transfer transfer transfer to the large transfer ing killing the mother cat. This was done with an ounce round rifle ball, with a gimlet hole bored in front, half-way through, so as to make it expand.

"I didn't know, madame, but you might be the youngest daughter."

"O, did yer? Well, that was nat'ral, too," replied the lady of the house.

"What d'yer want, sir?"

Then the peddler displayed his wares, and when he left that doorstep half an hour later, his face was full of pleasure and his pockets were full of money. He
