THE LITTLE BRIDGE.

They parted on the Little Bridge Which spans the running water. The bright-eyed youth with fluent tongue. And she-the yoeman's daughter. A few fond words—a stolen kiss,

A littlè golden tainket, Twas all—but that his heart could change She did not dare to think it. The journey to bright southern lands Where tropic skies bent o'er him,

And wooed blind Fortune till she cast A shower of gold before him. Then fame took up her trumpet, tuned

To sound his praise in story, For much that to his life belonged Was what the world called glory. A ribbon marked his high degree, His name had added letters.

And not on him was any sign

Of life's more galling fetters. The maiden's path lay toward the north; She toiled for daily guerdon. And meekly bore her low estate, Nor felt her task a burden,

Till "hope deferred" her spirit broke, And thorns seemed springing round her, And thoughts that once were purest joy, Had only power to wound her Toils on from early morning, With scanty thanks and little praise, And ofttimes heartless scorning. And yet sometimes she sees the Bridge, And hears the river flowing, When memory lifts the shroud of years,

A moor old maid with tailed cheek

The dead past calmly showing. And sometimes he in idle mood, 'Mid silence a'l unbroken, Just wonders if the Bridge still stands

Where their last words were spoken. The Little Bridge still lightly spans The rippling, running water; But no bridge spans the gulf 'twix him And her - the yeoman's daughter. -Chambers' Journal

MISS CYNTHY'S NEW DRESS. BY HATTIE WHITNEY.

"The' ain't no use of your standin' at that winder all day, Cynthy Pinkerton. Solomon Winterbloom won't go by here no more, since the new road's been cut out; and," with rather spiteful emphasis, "'twon't do you no good Cynthy finshed slightly and bit her lip, but made no reply to the words of her sister, the small, dark, blunt-featured woman who sat darning stockings by the kitchen fireplace. Mrs. Peter Pennigood had a talent for making those about her uncomfortable, and one she cultivated industriously. "It's quare," she continued, medita tively rocking back and forth with irritating complacence, "how much more attention some folks attracts than others. I refused three good offers before I tuck Pennigood, an' could a hed lots more. But you won't never get married, Cynthy, without you take Jake Potter. I reckon you could hev him. He ain't more'n eighteen, an' most too lazy to draw his own breath; an' you wouldn't hev nothin' to live on, without you could get along with blackhaws an' persimmons, like the 'possums; but he's your only chance, I reckon. Ef Solomon Winterbloom does want you, he's too big a coward to ever speak, so he might as well not." Cynthy was certainly not youthful, but her brown eyes were as soft and sweet as any young girl's, and the color had a trick of flashing into her checks, till they were like wahoober-ries in autumn. They were at their brightest now as she spoke: "He asked me to go with him over

But I can't-unless I could have a new—"
"For land's sake, don't talk of new dresses!" cried Mrs. Pennigood, her dull, smooth voice taking a shrill tone, "jest now, when everything's so high, an' the wheat not sold, nor the corn gathered, an' all the young ones got to hev school clothes. You oughtn't to gave so much to them heathen varmints over yander. You never do hev no consideration, Cynthy. New dresses to the Marsh church festival, anyway.

ain't so plenty." "I don't expect one," said Cynthy, uietly. "But I can't go—that's all." "Can't you fix up your brown alapacky?"

"I've fixed and fixed it over, till it's beyond fixing any more. If I can't look nice, it's of no use to go." She turned to the window again calmly, but there was a sorely-disappointed look in her eyes. She knew that if Solomon ever could get up the courage to speak, and wished to do so, the long ride to the Marsh would give him the golden opportunity; and now she saw the chance melting away, and was helpless. "I cannot even tell him why I won' go," she thought, despairingly.

"Hey, Miss Cynthy!" shouted a loud hearty voice from the lane; and Cynthy, hastily tying a blue veil over her flax-brown locks, fluttered out as Solomon Winterbloom-the tall, browncomplexioned old bachelor-stopped his team at the bars. "Here's some stuff mammy sent you," he said, hand-ing her a bundle, and then growing red and awkward as her gentle fingers touched his brown ones in taking it and looking everywhere but at her. And she blushed and grew quite as embarrassed as he was, and neither could think of the most commonplace remark to make. So Solomon drove off, clutching the reins nervously, and calling himself a fool; and Cynthy entered the kitchen, wondering what he would think of her ridiculous embarrassment. "What's that truck he give you? asked Mrs. Pennigood, who had been watching the proceeding sharply from the window.

"I reckon it's Mrs. Winterbloom's contribution for the South Sea Islanders," Cynthy answered, beginning rather dejectedly to untie the parcel. "She promised to send it to me, so I could take it over to the committee along enough to give all your 'arnin's to 'em." "I declare to goodness, Solomon Winterbloom, you ain't got a grain of sense. You've done fetched back all this truck I tole ye to give Cynthy Pinkerton for them South Sea critters the preacher was tellin' about a Sunday. Reckon

Cynthy." Solomon dropped the big gourd he had just taken from the cedar waterbucket so suddenly that a shower of drops flew all around the kitchen, and turned to his mother in blank consternation. "Then do you know what I must have did, mammy?" he asked, solemn-ye plum lost your head when ye seen

ly. 'T've gave the dress I bought for you to Miss Cynthy. I didn't stop there till I was coming home. Oh, jimmeny!" The widow Winterbloom was one of ose who contrives to see a lud side to almost every circumstance, and at these words, and the rueful look of her son, she dropped into a chair, threw her head back, and laughed until the old wooden chair creaked and groaned, the combined mirth and weight of the "What kinder stuff was it?" she asked, at last, wiping the tears from her with her checked apron.

and threatened to break down under

"Red-awful red," said Solomon, with much depression; "kinder like a Ben Davis apple—you could see it a mile

"Well, men ain't got no sense," said the widow, emphatically, "especially about buyin' dresses. Did ye think I'd be any sich an old lunatic as to be a wearin' of scarlet at my time?" "I don't know why one woman shouldn't wear red things as well as another," said Solomon, "ef she looks nice in 'em. Miss Cynthy'd look good enough to swaller in that. But, oh, land, she'll be mad -she'll be hoppin'! What shall I do?" "Quit a worryin'," said his mother.

"She can't hey you arrested an' hung for it. What'll she be mad at? "Tain't no killin' matter." "But, mammy, how it looks for me to be givin' her a dress, like as if she didn't hev bushels of 'em, as of course she has. An' me never hardly darin' to speak to her-not but what I wanted to. She's the proud kind; she'll be mad, I know she'll be mad. Everything's

"Can't you go an' tell her the mistake, you big piece of foolishness?" "Like as not she won't listen to no explanation. She'll be too mad." "She'll be madder if you don't let her keep the dress," said the matter-of-fact widow. "But go ahead. Men is men. Solomon, with despair in his heart, and his straw hat over his eyes, was bolting down the path, when he became conscious of a pink calico dress and a gray tie-down hat entering the gate, and to his infinite surprise he beheld Cynthy, who gave him a shy nod, and looked inclined to run away. "I wanted to thank your mother, and to tell her how pleased I was-that is, if it was really for me and not the heathen," she said. "The second fool I've made of myself to-day," thought Solomon, "to forget I told her she sent it." Cynthy tried to slip past him, but his late excitement had inspired him with an unwonted courage, and he stopped

"Cynthy—oh wait, Cynthy," he said.
"I—there, I am a fool, but, I will say, I'd be the happiest fool in the world if you'd let me buy your dresses always; if—shucks! I'll have to get mammy to ask you for me, if you won't run me ravin' distracted by sayin' I shan't." Cynthy broke into a clear ripple of laughter, and for the first time in his presence her confusion disappeared.

"How funny you are, Solomon!" she said; "but I think it's a heap nicer to have you ask me in your own way than for your mother to."
When the widow looked out and saw Solomon and Cynthy under the pear tree, she remarked: "I reckon Sol made a lucky mistake, somehow. She's welcome to the dress for all of me, an' if Sol ain't been green enough to let out about it, I shan't."

Leprosy by Express. On the departure of the steamer ley received a dispatch from the railroad office at North Vallejo, advising him to look after two Chinese and trunk which were en route on the steamer. The dispatch stated the belief of the railroad men to be that the trunk contained human flesh, from the peculiar odor which came from it. On the araival of the boat officers were on hand and as soon as the two Chinese presented themselves to claim the trunk they were placed under arrest and the suspicious baggage was turned over to deputy coroner Smith. The trunk was an ordinary wooden affair, about 2x3 feet in size and 20 inches deep. At close quarters it emitted an indscribable odor, that was fairly sickening, although very faint. On breaking the trunk open the railroad people's suspicions were fully aroused by the discovery of the body of a Chinaman so distorted and repulsive in its cramped quarters that it bore little semblance to the human form. The corpse lay partly on its side, with legs and arms doubled, and the head jammed down on the breast to make room. The limbs were swollen to a terrible size, and the head and features presented the raw appearance of a pugilist after a glove battle. The skin was scaly and dry in places and in others was covered with terrible cracks resembling cuts, and these for some time caused the opinion to exist that foul play had caused death. Dr. Stumbaugh was sent for, however, and a glance sufficed to inform him that the ailment was the most terrible form of leprosy known to medical science. Subsequent investigation showed that the deceased was a member of the Hop Wo company, and was consigned to Fung Bhung, at 709 Commercial street. The trunk method of transportation was adopted to save the heavy freight charged for dead bodies, the trunk being checked as an ordinary piece of baggage. One of the custodians of its ghastly contents was the brother of the leceased, and second cook in one of Vallejo's most aristocratic hotels, his change from handling eatables to rail-roading lepers being allowed by his employers on the strength of his true representation that he was going to

In connection with the White Breast Bottom (Iowa) storm, we wish to speak of the heroic conduct of Mrs. Carey, a young married lady, who was stopping with Mrs. Wiles for the night. About 9:30 or 10 p. m. the banks of the creek began to overflow, and soon the water began coming into the house. The whole bottom was a black and roaring body of water; the rain was pouring down in torrents; the clouds overhung the sky like a velvet curtain and the thunder was terrific. Mrs. "South Sea fiddle-foddles!" said Mrs. Carey took the little boy, aged about Pennigood, scornfully. "She'd better send you a dress, seein' you was smart six weeks old, left the house, and started for the high ground. Reaching the garden fence, perhaps 100 feet from the house, she found the current so strong that she could not keep her footing. Her clothes became entangled in a barbed wire fence. Fortunately she was at the foot of a tree. Helping the boy to climb the tree she handed him the baby to hold a moment. The waters were raging all about her, and were rapidly raising. She must act quickly. With great presence of mind she disengaged herself by tearing her dress from her person and swung herself into the tree. Assisting the boy to climb further up she took the baby and held it herself by one foot and one hand to that swinging tree for three long hours, and till rescued by men, who swam to her and brought her and the children away by the aid of ropes. When the men reached her, she said: "Save the baby adelphia Record. A new submarine torpedo boat has first." The heroism of this noble little women who thus saved these children constructed on the shores of —the children of another—deserved to be mentioned in song.—Osceola Sen-

How She Won Him. I have just heard the most remarkable story of the evenness of female temper. In fact it seems so surprising to me that I think some record of it should be embalmed in the archives of Quiz. It is a beautiful little fairy story and may appropriately be called, "How She Won Him." Indeed, it was quite enough to win a far worse man, if the worst men are eyer won, which I dare say they are not. It happened here in Philadelphia, and is on this wise: You know, or rather you don't know until I tell you, (for how should you?) that there was a beautiful dinner given "many years ago," and she sat opposite him and looked ever so charming in a wine-colored silk, with a square neck, and otherwise arrayed as never were the lilies in any valley of this poor earth. Well, the idiot of a waiter, in handing the soup, upset the entire contents of a plate right in her lap. Just think of it, girls! The whole front breadth utterly ruined, and for the world it could not be matched. Well, what did she do? Did she faint? Did she say, "you horrid man!" Did she scream? Not at all; she passed the thing off in some witty remark about fiery baptism, and calmly resumed her dinner. He of course was de-lighted, and thought her a most remarkable woman, and indeed she was; he became attentive to her and finally married her. One evening long after the event they were sitting before the fire, the children having gone to bed, and were talking about old times, when he said:

"My dear, I never told you, I think, how I first thought I would like to marry you, did I?" "Why, gracious, goodness, no, never."

"Well," he said, "do you remember that dinner at Mrs. Simkin's, where your dress was spoiled by the soup?" "Indeed, I do," she replied; "I shall never forget it as long as I live."
"Well," he continued, "you behaved so well about it that I thought you a perfect jewel." "Yes," she answered, "I remember behaving very well about it at the time, but, good land, you should have seen the mark of my teeth on the bed-post that night." Now wasn't that just too perfectly romantic for anything?

Unexpected Charity. Dog stories are not always so well authenticated as the one about to be related, the animal in this case being owned by a gentleman residing within a few rods of this office, and the facts coming directly from the family: The dog is a white terrier, which was sent as a present from New York some time since, and although a terror to rats, is a great pet. She is of a most affectionate disposition, and when she meets with any stranger to whom she takes a fancy she will go right to him, sit up on her hind-legs, and reach out her fore-paws for recognition. A day or two since a boy called at the side door to beg for something to eat. The dog trotted to the door with the ser vant who told the begger she had nothing. "Give me only a piece of bread," said the boy. The girl answer ed that they were out of bread, and that she was baking at the time. Meantime the dog was momentarily missed, but quickly returned bearing in her mouth a large piece of bread that had been previously thrown to her to eat. She went directly up to the boy, extended her paws with the bread in her mouth, and offered it to him as intelligently as any mute being could do. The girl was actually frightened at this remarkable exhibition of intel ligence on the part of a dumb animal The dog, in order to obtain his piece of bread had passed through two rooms and out into the kitchen-a distance of fifty or sixty feet from the side door.—Rochester Union.

Tin in Tasmania. Little has hitherto been known of the western half of Tasmania. Nature unmolested has produced labyrinthic thickets, tangled moors and giant trees, often more than 300 feet in altitude and sixty feet in girth. Coal seams and auriferous quartz abound in the country, and silver, antimony and traces of tin have been occasionally stumbled upon. But in 1872, to the westward of the Surrey Hills, in the county of Russell, and 100 miles from Launceston, a party of adventurers found what proved to be a veritable tin mountain. An eminent mineralogist reported Mount Bischoff to be almost a veritable mass of tin, the ore yielding seventy to eighty per cent. of pure metal. Extensive smelting works were erected at Laun ceston, and in 1876 a thousand tons of tin were raised. Five dollars only have been paid upon each share, but the ruling market price is from $300 to $350, and the company during the last four years have paid a dividend every two months of $2 per share.

A gentleman in Hobart, who purchased 700 shares for $4,000, in 1873. now luxuriates in an income of $10,000 per annum from his investment. -Toronto Globe.

A Florida Wonder.

A strange animal, half man and half fish, and covered with a long growth of coarse black hair, has been seen several times recently in Big Charley Popka river, Manatee county, Florida. The head and upper portion of the body resemble a man, short stumpy arms, with webbed feet taking the places of fins, while the lower portion is just like the tail of any fish. The monstrosity is about four feet in length, and when sporting about in the water utters coarse, gutteral sounds, a cross between the barking of a dog and the bellowing of a bull. Several attempts to capture and shoot the animal have proved fu-

The document was left by George Philip Lippi, of the firm of Lippi & Thoma, printers, on Wood street, above Seventh, the es-tate of the decedent being bequeathed to his wife Eva absolutely. Accompanying the document were exhibits to show that Mr. Lippi, who was in a weak, physical condition, had practic ed writing his name, but proved unable to form the letters intelligibly. Upon attempting to append his signature to the will he made a sign resembling the capital letter B, but could go no further. But allow me-to say a word or two of praise of this fair valley of Riverside, San Bernardino county, Cal., rainless semi-tropical county for at least nine months in a year, but always green, lemon trees. The valley is about nine improved. When we came here, two vears ago, it was little known, but now it has gained a wide reputation for its fine oranges and lemons in almost every city in the East. not tell." The explanation is very lucid. I have written now more than I expected to, but I would not do justice to the valley if I did not speak of the raisin culture. This year we expect a good crop, although may not get as good prices as realized last year. There are more vineyards producing this year, but not quite so perfect clusters, but will be a big crop and expect fair prices, Last year they sold at $2 per box of twenty pounds. The Baptist church, just completed, costing about $6,000, building, furnishing and bell has all been done the past year. Dedicated to the worship of our Father free of debt. The past year the church has been one of preparatory work, in great part, as well as of strugling and anxiety, but we have endeavored to lay our foundation upon the solid rock of Christ and Bible truths. It is generally understood that Christians, as a rule, leave all their religion on the other side of the Rocky mountains, and come here for the express purpose of making money, but I feel to say it is not so Most of the people in the valley are Eastern people, and are happy to say they have brought their religion with them, of which our many churches of various denomination is a proof. 'I will say the people of this valley and county are particularly interested in the great moral and reformatory questions now pending before the Christian public, such as temperance and the maintainance of the Christian Sabbath. We do not expect to pass the prohibitory law this year, but will do all we can in that direction. Yours very truly,

THE Michigan Central will give special rates to the Berrien county fair at Niles from New Buffalo on the west and intermediate stations, as far east as Dowagiac on the Central and on the Air Line from Cassopolis. Also from South Bend. The rates will be one and one-third for round trip tickets and will be good from the 27th to the the 30th of September.

BECAUSE of Mr. A. F. Ross' conclusion to not support a mixed ticket, the Independent opens out on him with a tirade of abuse that is both uncalled for and unbecoming a man whose boast it is that he came into this State with a good-sized fortune and has a mere pittance to show for it. Yet Mr. Ross and others who do not squander their means are to be despised.

MAL-PRACTICE ALLEGED. - A declaration signed by Mrs. Paxton, by her attorney, Mr. Coolidge of Niles, was read to Dr. Pierce last Friday evening, charging him with the above named crime, and demanding damages to the small sum of $10.500. To one who sees from a distance, it looks like a modern newspaper libel suit. Not a very rich investment.

THE Secretary of State has recently issued a Michigan crop report, showing the number of acres, number of bushels, and yield per acre of wheat and oats, by counties, as made up from record kept by threshers: For Berrien county the wheat record is, acres, 5,599; bushels, 81,476; average yield, 14.55. Oats, acres, 1,433; bushels, 45,967; average vield, 32.08 bushels. The number of bushels of wheat marketed in Berrien county in July was 6,306. In August, 18,606.

Ar the first meeting of the school district board it was decided to raise by tax, for this district, $2,300. This, with the amount voted to apply on indebtedness, makes the school tax for this district amount this year to $5,-900 against nearly $8,000 raised last year. This will make a very perceptible difference in the taxes. The board elected Seth Smith Director, D. E. Hinman Moderator, and Wm. Pears Assessor, for the ensuing year.

Two colored and two white boys were arrested Saturday, by Constable Evans, charged with stealing watermelons from Wright Bros.' store. Mr. Silas Ireland, agent for this county for the State school at Coldwater, was sent for, but after viewing the case from all sides, concluded that with the confinement in the calaboose two days and two nights, the boys had been sufficiently punished, and they were discharged.

Mr. ALONZO POTTER has found a new ornament to the corn crop in form of a very small green louse, that feeds upon the roots of the corn. He has twelve acres that he says amounts to nothing, in consequence of these lice, and the two stalks brought to this office this afternoon were about as large as a good sized pencil, and the roots badly eaten. This appears to be something new in the corn business, and if it increases to any great extent, must necessarily be a great drawback.

[Niles Republican.] Willie Bracken, a boy of nine or ten years, living on the west side, had his arm broken between the elbow and wrist to-day, when coming from Hewitt & Lakin's mill, where he went to take his father's dinner. He was standing up in a little wagon and his sister suddenly pulling at it, he fell out with the above result.

[Berrien Springs Journal.] In the suit against certain citizens of St. Joseph, mentioned in last week's Journal, it appears that the bondholders expect to show that the defendants entered into a conspiracy to defeat the collection of the judgments of the Uni-ted States courts, and claim that this fact being shown, the defendants are personally liable. For twenty years past the Democracy of this county and State have busied themselves just before election time in telling how badly they were going to whip the Republicans, and after elections. tion in explaining why they didn't suc-ceed. We are now being treated to the same chin music, and the same old re-frain will be heard after the election. -Niles Republican.

THREE nimrods, from this place, went to Kankakee to hunt ducks. They captured twenty-six ducks, and saw an enormous blue crane that measured fourteen feet across the The remedies he employs are based wings. They probably took the measure over a hunter's spy-glass-a black bottle-while the bird was on the wing. Berrien people are referred to Geo. W. Rough for full particulars.

For the Record. From the County Seat. A Correspondent's Estimate of a Valuable

Enterprise. Since the completion of the railway system of Michigan this village has been too far from even the most unimportant side-track to grasp any such share of the world's business prosperity as its natural facilities, beautiful and healthy location, and the intelligence and thrift of its citizens would otherwise have secured. It was recent ly attempted to wrest the county seat, the little we had, from us; but a stout fight on our part, assisted by the sturdy common sense of the people of the county, prevented that injustice being

Now the completion of the St. Joseph Valley Railroad to our place, and its prospective extension to the lake have at last, rendered communication with the rest of the world an easy matter, and we have reason to expect something in the way of a revival of our business interests-something to come from abroad, which will encourage home enterprise and add to the wealth of the town, and enhance its importance in the eyes of the world.

The few people who have stuck to the place through all discouragements are entitled to all the praise and good feeling our citizens can bestow: for they have contended against the impediments of our imperfect communication with the markets, the sneers of the people of other towns, and the croaks of certain hide-bound obstructionists of our own place, who could never discover the utility of an attempt to do anything here, except to anticipate their physical death by a mental and moral stagnation, to which death itself must be a timely relief.

A few years ago, Mr. J. H. Mathews braved the warnings of the croakers, and established his mill down at the river, and met with such success that from his small beginning, we have seen an important enterprise spring into sturdy life, giving employment to our citizens and putting cash into the tills of our tradesmen. E. A. Graham & Co., at great expense, have enlarged our facilities by their boat line, and have built up a trade in lumber, which intercepts a large amount of business that otherwise would go to the Lake

This is not all. For years, struggling against the discouragements of poverty and the unwarranted opposition and calumnies of some of our own obstructionists, The Berrien Springs Dispensary has steadily pursued its course into popular favor, until it can point gratefully to the praise of its patrons and to its achieved financial success. Although conducted with a reasonable regard to economy, it has given employment to many people here; it has paid its cash in generous amounts to our citizens for materials; it has increased the patronage of our hotels and carriers; in fact it has brought grist to the mill of every citizen in town. Nor is this all: It has received, as it has merited, the confidence of its local friends and patrons, and is to-day regarded as an institution of which the village and the county may reasonably be proud. As the years have gone by and means increased, new features have been added, until it is nearly complete in all respects save one. Now that the village is easily reached, its correspondents are invited to come here for personal treatment. This renders desirable a place where they can be entertained with strict regard to their requirements. Already the managers are considering the merits of various locations in town where may be established such a retreat as will insure a large number of health seekers constantly resident here. Such a property as they need, and will have, will be an object of pride to our people, and the money it will bring here may be readily estimated when one takes into consideration what each person would disburse for board and recreation, to say nothing of the cost of medical treatment. People are constantly coming and going, and many are asking if such a home as is here foreshadowed is already provided. That a large edifice could be filled with little delay, is certain, and, that it would prove of great advantage to the patients, to the Dispensary and to the village, is equally certain. This addition to the facilities of the concern will soon become a necessity, and as the energy of the managers has never allowed any reasonable requirement to go long unprovided, we may expect soon to see steps taken toward securing a Saritarium. Mere energy and determination to succeed could never have accomplished all that has been done, had the means been neglected. Good business ability can project a great enterprise and care for its results; but to heal the sick, more is required. The physician in charge, Dr. S. G. Armstrong, is thoroughly educated in his profession, and is one of those who didn't shut his books when he had first secured his right to practice. He kept on reading, and nothing valuable, whether it is from one of the fathers of the profession or from some ingenious contemporary, comes amiss to him. He reads not only for such knowledge as may be made available, but from a pure love of reading-because he delights in generous pursuits, and is not satisfied until the philosophy of a subject is mastered by him. He has had long experience, and, as can be shown by hundreds of kindly testimonials in the archives of the Dispensary, he has accomplished what has, until recently, been regarded as impossible. He has undertaken large numbers of cases given over by able and conscientious practitioners, and has assisted nature to repair, what accident or neglect or vicious courses of life had broken down.

Being a man of large originality and inventive genius he cannot be entirely controlled by the usages of his brethren in the profession. While he welcomes any information likely to be of use, and preserves a healthy respect for the traditions of the fraternity, he is aware that he is of the living present, and that to become fossilized | see them.

would destroy his power for good. He therefore avails himself of any method, of whatever school, that endures the test of practice and is not repugnant to common sense.

on his large experience and his thorough knowledge of the materia medica. His effort is always to assist nature, and not to attempt the impossibility of building up by his own arts that which only Omnipotence can create. Although patients far away only invoke his skill after every local opportunity has been exhausted, his success in treating consumption and kindred disorders is admitted by hundreds who have been lifted from sick beds after all others had pronounced them incurable. Their letters, after their despair has been changed to exultation, present many interesting phases of human nature, and will well pay for the perusal, which can easily be accomplished, as they are at all times open to inspection, except where private reasons or requests pre-

With this full measure of success, what wonder that the managers feel proud of their work, and what wonder that the most candid of our people rejoice at their good fortune? We can see that a business has been created and persevered in, which is a great benefit to our town because it is a recognized benefit to mankind. Our beautiful village, with its sylvan surroundings, receives an introduction to all parts of the country, and soon scores of people in pursuit of health and rest will while away their leisure hours here drinking in the life and vigor which rational treatment, pure air and water, and good society will insure to Argus.

Berrien County Examinations.

The Board of Examiners will hold the following examinations during the school year of 1882-83: 2-St. Joseph, Sept. 30, 1882, (special). 3-Berrien Springs, Oct. 27 and 28, 1882, (regular). 4-Buchanan, Nov. 11, 1882, (special). 5-Berrien Springs, Dec. 2, 1882, (special).

6-Benton Harbor, March 17, 1883, 7-Berrien Springs, March 30 and 31, 1883, (regular).

8-Niles, April 6, 1883, (special). All examinations begin at 9 o'clock Applicants should provide themselves with paper (legal cap), pen and ink, also a stamped envelope.

Only 3d grade certificates will be given at the special examinations. Those desiring 1st or 2d grade certificates, will be examined in algebra, physiology, philosophy and book-keeping in addition to those branches required for 3d grade. A general average of 75 per cent. (not to fall below 50 per cent. in any one branch) will be required for 3d grade, 85 per cent. for 2d grade, and 95 for 1st grade.

I will be at the township clerk's office, in the village of New Buffalo, on each Saturday, examination days excepted, at 9 o'clock A. M. to consult with any person who may wish to see H. C. CROSBY. Sec. of Co. Board.

Longfellow's First Wife. July 30-Made the acquaintance of July 30—Made the acquaintance of two American ladies and was much pleased with them. Mary Ashburnham, alias Fanny Appleton, was a near neighbor and friend of theirs—a most beautiful girl, whom thirty bold gentlemen sought to win! She came to Europe and met Longfellow in the Black Forest, and there transacted the scenes described in "Hyperion." She returned to America, and her father on his deathbed expressed his wish that of all her suitors she should fix her choice on suitors she should fix her choice on Longfellow as the person most worthy of her and most able to sympathize with her feelings. After a little time she married him, settled in the country in poetic simplicity, and speaks of herself as the happiest woman possible. My friend heard him read his prize poem at stock lode was discovered is interesting.

As he tells it, one of his stage drivers had a prospector's pass on for broken rocks, outcroppings, float and other indications of mineral treasures. On a certain day he came to Mr. Holladay full of a discovery he had made, and showed a sample having a wonderfully large proportion of silver in its composi-

$1,000 for money with which to operate it. The offer was refused, and the driver resigned and disappeared. In a month or so a company was formed and operations were begun. The mine yielded the richest or over taken out of any

A man at Henderson, Ga., while plow ing sent his 10-year-old daughter to the house for his gun for the purpose of shooting some rice birds. On her way back the little girl was attacked by a victous bull, but, instead of running off in a fright, as most people would have done, she bravely stood her ground and as the beast advanced discharged both barrels of the gun in his face. The bull, barrels of the gun in his face. The bull, seemingly in a bewildered state, ran here, there and everywhere in search of the child, against fences, trees, etc., but climbing a fence hastily sne managed to escape. The father, hearing the report of the gun, hastened to the spot, and with the aid of two colored men drove the bull home, when it was found that

My practice is not one of experiment, but founded on laws of nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no triffing, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guesswork, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. Great age and painful disease are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Duchess Co., N. Y., now of Washingtou Hollow, in the same county came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-blooded, hardhearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of Urine, had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculus formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy irankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, and operation was out of the question, but that he could by the prescription of "Kenedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

Mental Visions. Dickens used to say that he some-times heard the characters of his novels speak to him. A French novelist de-clared that, while writing the description of the poisoning of one of his characters, he had the taste of arsenic as distinctly in his mouth as if he himself had been poisoned. Artists sometimes have this power of making a mental representation seem real; but it is a dangerous power to use. The mental vision may haunt the man until he becomes insane. Dr. Wigan tells of a skillful painter whom he knew who assured him that he had once painted 300 portraits in one year. The secret of his rapidity and success was that he required but one sitting and painted with wonderful facility.

"When a sitter came," he said, "I looked at him attentively for half an hour, sketching him from time to time on the canvas. I wanted no more. I put away my canvas and took another sitter.

"When I wished to resume my first portrait, I took the man and sat him in the chair, where I saw him as distinctly as if he had been before me in his own proper person—I may almost say more vividly.

The New Prisoner of Chillon. The Castle of Chillon has another mysterious prisoner. Bonivard's successor is a lady "40 years old, said to be a Russian," and her offense is that she tried to shoot a simple German from Magdeburg as he sat on the terrace in front of his hotel at Glion. She seems to have done so under a misapprehen-sion. She thought he was a Nihilist, and whether she tried to kill him because she believed him to be a traitor to the cause or, as other conjectures have it, because she wanted to punish him for his sentiments to the Czar can make no difference in the regard worshipers of

Side Saddles for Bannisters. [Peck's Sun.] There is no little town in the State that is more pious than Tomah, in Monroe county. The people there are all religious, with few exceptions, and they strain every nerve to raise money to pay their ministers and to pay church expenses. A traveling man who goes there a good deal, says the people seem to vie with each other to see which of them can do the most for their church. The traveling man attended a sociable at a residence there not long ago, which was held to raise money to buy the minister a pair of rubber pants for bap-tisimal purposes, and he says he witnessed a scene which he never shall for-get. The residence was filled with the best people of the town, and at the head of the stairs were a numer of ladies and gentlemen who were discussing this characteristic of the citizens. One beautiful lady said to the drummer, "Yes, we are full of enthusiasm for the cause of religion, and would do anything reasonable for the development of our finances. Why," said she, as she leaned over the railing and tucked the lace into the dashboard of her dress which was cut down at the heel in front, "if I could make a dollar towards paying the salary of our minister, I would slide down that have been into the country of the traveling men thought bannister." The traveling man thought to bluff the beautiful and stylishlysimply constructed, consisting of short dialogues between Death and "four-and-twenty" or more followers, and was undoubtedly acted in or near churches by dressed lady, and pulling out a silver dollar he handed it to her, saying, "Well, there is no man that enjoys giving to the church any more than I do. Here is your dollar, and now let's see you slide down the bannister." The lady blushed a little, and acted as if she was surprised at being taken up so quick, but seeming to realize that it was her duty to turn all the shekels she could into the coffers of the church, she at once threw a half of herself over the bannister, and began to go down slowly. It was evident that she intended to hang on tight and go down easily and quietly, and have it over and the dollar in the contribution box before the crowd found it out; but somebody announced in the parlor and sitting-room that Mrs. Soand-so was sliding down the bannister, and everybody rushed into the hall. Whether it was the crowd that made the Whichler it was the crowd that made the lady fiervous or something let go unexpectedly, probably, notody will ever know, but she seemed to cut loose all at once and go down that bannister as though she was shot out of a gun, and as the procession arrived at the newel post at the bottom, the searcher after a silver dollar yelled like a Comanche and went over into the crowd, against the hat-rack and card basket as though she had fallen out of a balloon. The drummer says the air seemed to be fairly surcharged with beautiful woman. The charged with beautiful woman. When he came to the first tning he asked of the man of the house was, "Why in Gehena don't you have a lightning rod on this house?" It was nearly an hour before the lady and her attendants came down to lunch, and she refused all offers of chairs, say-ing she preferred to stand; but the drummer said he came away early, for every time she looked towards him it seemed as though she wanted to bite his head off. He says if he had suggested the sliding down the bannister he would have felt as though some blame might attach to him, but it was her game, and if she got beat at it he couldn't see what the sense was in getting spunky. It is safe to say that if the success of the churches at Tomah depends on bannister sliding, hereafter ministers will go hungry unless they put side-saddle on. A Canary and a Mouse. A very fine canary bird is owned by a gentleman in Nevada county, Cal. Un-usual quantities of food disappeared from his cage. One day the gentleman chanced to look in the cage, and there, snugly stowed away in one of the seedboxes, was a mouse, fat as butter. Upon attempting to remove the mouse the bird made a chivalrous fight for the little animal. A singular fact that while the mouse was there the bird kept up a con-stant singing all day, but since the mouse has been removed the bird has refused to warble.

Charles Lamb at Home.

I availed myself of Charles Lamb's friendly invitation August 5, 1834. On reaching his cottage, which stood back from the road, (nearly opposite the church,) between two houses which projected beyond it, and was screened by shrubs and trees, I found that he was out taking his morning stell. I was out taking his morning stroll. I was admitted to a small, paneled, and agreeably shaded parlor. The modest room was hung round with engravings by Hogarth in dark frames. Books and magazines were scattered on the table and on the old-fashioned window seat. I chatted awhile with Miss Lamb—a-meek, intelligent, very pleasant, but rather deaf elderly lady, who told me that her brother had been gratified by parts of my poem, ("Emily de Wilton,") and had read them to her. "Elia" came in soon after—a short, thin man. His dress was black and he wore capacious coat, breeches, and gaiters, and a white neck-handkerchief. His dark and shaggy hair and eyebrows, and heated face, and very piercing jetblack eyes gave to his appearance a singularly wild and striking expression. The sketch of him in Frascr's Magazine gives a true idea of his dress and figure, but his portraits fail to represent adequately his remarkably "fine Titian head full of dumb eloquence," as Haz-litt described it. He grasped me cor-dially by the hand, sat down, and taking a bottle from a cupboard behind him, mixed some rum and water. On another occasion his sister objected to this operation, and he refrained. Presently after he said: "May I have a little drop now? only a leetle drop." "No," said she, "be a good boy." At last, however, he prevailed and took his usual draught. On each visit (that of August 5 having been quickly succeeded by another). other) I found that he required to be drawn into conversation. He would throw out a playful remark and then pause a while. He spoke by fits and starts, and had a slight impediment in his utterance which made him, so to say, grunt once or twice before he began: sentence: but his tones were loud and rich, and once, when he read to me a passage from a folio of Beaumont and Fletcher (which his sister had brought down to show me Coleridge's manuscript remarks at the end of each play) the deep rathes of his voice gave great weight to the impression made by the poetry. He would jump up and slap his sister playfully on the back, and a roomy snuff-box often passed between them on the old round table. There was not that point in his conversation which we find in William Hone's. He agreed with me that Moore's poetry was like very rich plum cake—very nice, but too much of it at a time makes one sick. He said that Byron had written only one good-natured thing; and that was the "Vision of Judgment," "Mary," he added to Nice Lord "Hon" the result of the state of the state he added to Miss Lamb, "don't you hate Byron?" "Yes, Charles," she replied. "That's right," says he.— Notes and Queries.

The Dance of Death. This name is given to a certain class of allegorical representations, illustrat-ive of the universal power of death, and dating from the fourteenth century. When the introduction of Christianity first banished the ancient Germanic conception of a future state, a new description of Death mythology arose, partly out of Biblical sources, partly out of the popular character itself, wherein the last enemy was presented under simple and majorite increase with a their few and majestic images, such as that of a husbandman watering the ground with blood, plowing it with swords, rooting out weeds, plucking up flowers, or felling trees, sowing it with corpses; or, of a monarch assembling his armies, making war, taking prisoners, inviting his subjects to a festival, or citing them to subjects to a festival, or claing them to judgment. But, with a gradual change of national manners, came a change in the mode of treating the subject, and it was associated with every-day images, such as the confessional, chess-playing, and, above all, with the adjuncts of a feetival viz. festival, viz., music and dancing. This tendency to familiarize the theme increased during the confusion and turmoil of the fourteenth century, when the national mind alternated between fits of devotion and license, or blent both elements in satire and humor. Such a mood as this naturally occupied itself in personifying Death, and adopted by preference the most startling and grotesque images it could find—that of a musician playing to dancing men, or a dancer leading them on; and as the dance and the drama were intimately connected, and employed on religious occasions, this particular idea soon assumed a dra-matic form. This drama was most Garibaldi's Courtship. Disappointed in his hopes of accom-plishing great things for liberty in South America, saddened by the death and imprisonment of his companions, and weary with his personal sufferings, Garibaldi was standing one day on the deck of his ship, when, among the women who came to the shore for water, one suddenly attracted his notice. "I gave orders," says he, "to be put on shore, and I approached the house pointed out to me as her dwelling, with a beating heart, but with that determined will which never fails to command success. A man" (her husband) "invited me to enter. I should have done so without his invitation. I had seen him previously. And to the young woman I said: 'Thou must be mine by a bond which only death can dissolve. I had found a treasure, forbidden, in-deed, but of what value! If there was blame it was wholly mine. And blame there was! Two souls were indissolubly bound together, and the heart of an innocent man was broken! But she is dead. He is avenged—avenged indeed! And I acknowledged my sin on that day when, striving still to detain her with me, I felt her failing pulse, and sought to catch her feeble breathing. and sought to catch her feeble breathing;

but I pressed the hand and kissed the lips of the dead, and wept the tears of despair."

From this paculiar description of his courtship, if so that could be called which proceeded in such summary fashion, it may be inferred that Garibildi's way of love was very similar to his way of warfare. "He took Anita Rivieras," says Ricciardi, "in pretty much the same manner that he did have been expected from such a com-mencement, to the end of poor Anita's life she was faithful to her hero. She bore him three children; Menotti, born in 1840; Teresita, in 1845; and Ricciotti, in 1847.—Century Magazine. A Wonderful Fortress.

MALARIA describable malady which not even the most talented physicians are able to fathom. Its cause is most frequently ascribed to local surroundings, and there is very little question, but this opinion is substantiated by facts. Malaria does not necessarily mean chills and fever while these troubles usually accompany it. It often affects the sufferer with general lassitude, accompanied by loss of appetite, sleeplessness, a tired feeling and a high fever, the person afflicted growing weaker and weaker, loses flesh day after day, until he becomes a mere skeleton, a shadow of his former self. Malaria once having laid its hold upon the human frame, the door of the system is thrownopen to nervous diseases. The body weak and enfeebled absorbs no nourishment, but subsisting upon itself, the digestive organs no longer perform their functions; the liver becomes torpid, and other organs failing to do their routine work, speedily become disordered, and dissolution and death are apt to ensue.

In addition to being a certain cure for malaria and chills and fever, Brown's Iron Bitters is highly recommended for all diseases requir ing a certain and efficient tonic; esmittent fevers, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, etc. Enriches the blood, strengthens the muscles, and gives new life to the nerves. CHEAP.

The Simplest and Best.

Is strictly first-class in all respects; perfect ly automatic in its action during storms. Has the best regulating device ever used. Mate-cial and workmanship unexcelled. Our new rial and workmanship unexcelled. Our new method of fastening the sails in the wheel is decidedly superior to the old way, as they cannot be blown out, nor will they decay where they contact with the rims. By this method the complete circle is filled, which adds to the power as well as to the beauty of the mill. Our mill is sold entircly upon its merits, and the purchaser assumes no riski whatever, as we guarantee satisfaction or no sale. We are prepared to meet all competition, and will not be undersold. We cordially invite an examination of the "Buchanan" mill, as we know that this will convince every one of its superiority.

Pumps and Tanks of all kinds, also Pipe' and Fittings. Orders promptly filled.
