Doctor Freshcorn.

Dr. Solomon Freshcorn was the village physician of N—. His residence was nearly two miles from the place. His house, which stood a little distance from the public road, was a two-storied stone which had at one time been a pretty cream color, but, like the green blinds, had so faded that the original color was known only to those who had good memories. The Doctor's front yard was grass-grown, possessing neither tree nor flower, while his pump, an old-fash-ioned wooden one, stood directly in front of his door for convenience.

Dr. Solomon was a bachelor. He was tall and stout, not handsome, but a well preserved gentleman, who, at the time I first became acquainted with him, was in his sixtieth year. He was noted for his peculiarities, or eccentricities. The villagers laughed at him for his odd ways—nevertheless, loved him for his good qualities. He was very diffident; the knowledge of this fact appeared to make him more awkward; however, he was a good physician, honest and upright in his course, and celebrated for the kindness of his heart. Mrs. Melinda Jane Simpkins, the village grocer's wife, declared "he was the singularest man she ever seed—dretful queer, for laws-a-me," she remarked, when he came to see her Julia Ann, he 'almost skairt her life out for he knocked over her stove and nearly sot her house a-fire," to which Mrs. Noodle, her neighbor, replied: "Now, Lindie Jane, he's jist so clever you can't help but like him, and is awful smart-my old man says so-and it's somethin' to be that now-a-days. when there's so many fools agoin', That's why we named the twins after him—Solomon Noodle and Freshcorn Noodle. Likely boys they be, and we lost nothin' by it, for he gave each young one a $20 gold piece, which we have put in the bank for 'em 'til they grow

The boys of N—were really mischievous and would, in spite of being reminded of their error call him Greenhorn instead of giving him his right

The doctor was noted for his singular style of dressing, and in summer time generally wore a light gray round about, which was entirely too short in the sleeves, and very small for his fleshy body, making him look like an inflated toad, while his large red face was made conspicuous by the small velvet cap which adorned his head, and which the village maidens likened unto the rising sun or full moon. He frequently surmounted this with a large oldfashioned coat with long tails and three colars piled one on top of the other, in the Elizabethan style, which looked so ancient that some of the villagers declared that it must have come out of the ark, and been the special property of Father Noah. Perhaps one of the nost amusing circumstances narrated to me was about the doctor's being in love. He vowed in his youth never to marry, and until he passed it, with the mid-summer and autumn that followed, he had remained true to his vow, and it was not until he was looking forward toward the sunset of his life that the alarming event took place. Mrs. Thorton, one of the lady residents of the village, had a beautiful dark-eyed widow visiting her. Being poor and desirous of replacing her departed husband, and thinking the doctor so situated that he could support her comfortably, the widow determined to captivate him. She became, as she thought, very ill, and had him summoned. His visits were frequent, and continued long after her convalescence. He was captivated, and began to think it would be pleasant to have an agreeable partner—some sweet woman to care for him in his declining years. He determined to be agreeable. The task was difficult, for diffidence and awkwardness were against him.

On one occasion he was bowing himself out of the widow's sick room, and. being too polite to turn his back on agreeable company, went backward, regardless of the step that descended the vestibule at the top of a long, steep flight of stairs, and, losing his balance, he went plowing, scrambling and revolving from the top to the bottom, to the alarm of the widow, and the amusement of the little Thortons. He raised himself up and almost flew to his carriage, smarting and bruised, followed by the children, who called loudly after him to know if he was hurt.

The doctor was celebrated for driving the slowest horses in the neighborhood. This did not suit Squire Bel lows, for he went after him on one oc casion when his son was very ill, and being anxious to get the good man there as speedily as possible, urged him to mount his colt named "Telegraph." He reluctantly consented. Mrs. Rosalind almost fainted with fright when she saw him dash through the village with such speed that she thought 'Telegraph' must have been charged with electrici-

The doctor's queer actions did not deter Mrs. Rosalind from her purpose. She was a true philosopher, and saw beyond the man's peculiarities a kind husband and home. The case did now become serious to the doctor, he could of course; that was necessary to consummate his plans. The house of Mr. Thorton was a large, smooth-plastered, whitewashed stone, with green blinds and a wide veranda in front, the iron work of which was painted like the blinds, a fresh-looking green. The yard was filled with flowers and shrubbery; the place was pretty and inviting, reflecting credit on the refined tastes of

in his sulky with his old white horse, looking in fine array. He was considering in his mind the best way to proceed to business. He had never undertaken such a mission before, "but, of course," he argued, "it is an easy thing." The widow had conquered his heart

The doctor was mortal, and thought, like many another modest man, that all that was necessary for a man to do was to say to a woman, "Will you have me?" when she would jump for joy, and exclaim, "Yes, sir! and thank you too." No woman would say no. If she does not get married everybody knows it is because she never had an

and he determined to reward her with his heart and home. It never occurred to him that she would say anything but opportunity. So the doctor thought as he drove along, until he mounted an eminence and stopped his horse for a few moments to look at N—, as it lay in the valley below, with its pretty church spires glittering in the morning sun, while the village creek wound along like a band of silver unrolled, and the water of the noisy mill-dam sparkled and leaped over the wide field, then flowed on and lost itself in the broad, widening river. The residence of the Thortons stood at the base of the hill, nestling like a white swan amid the Lowers and shrubbery. As the doctor was meditating, little Charley Thorton exclaimed: "Dr. Freshcorn,I will run a race with you down the hill. I think I can beat Flying Eclipse." "All right, my boy!" exclaimed the doctor, They started—Charley ran with his hat in his hand, his dark eyes full of glee, while his white teeth shone like ows of pearls, as he laughingly ran by the doctor's side.

"You see, Mrs. Rosalind," cried he,"I can beat Flying Eclipse!"

The widow rose, and in spite of her efforts to be agreeable to the doctor, went within, for fear the good man might detect a smile.

The doctor asked at once to see Mrs. Rosalind, determined to learn his fate. He entered the parlor and seated himself in a recess window, tiping his chair back so as to be perfectly comfortable. The widow entered, bright and smiling. The doctor sat and stared at her so long that she began to get uncomfortable, and not knowing what course to pursue, quietly took up the morning paper. It was a terrible thing now, this popping the question. Why, there was not a bit of fun in it. perspiration stood in great drops upon his forehead, while his tongue appeared to cleave to the roof of his mouth. There the widow sat, in the meantime, looking so pretty and calm, mild and unruffled as a summer sea. How could she look so, when he was in such anxiety? He felt the necessity of arousing himself. With a desperate effort be commenced,in his usual awkward fash-

"Madam," said he, "of course, like all females, you want to get married, and if no one else will have you, I will." Mrs. Rosalind raised her eyes and fairly glared at him. The doctor became frightened and lost his presence of mind. In his terror he tipped over. his head striking the floor, his feet elevated like two gunboats. The widow, at the sight, burst out into uncontrolable laughter. "Really, sir," she stammered, "you must pardon me, and I am sure von will, when you think how awkwardly you put the question; but I know how good you are, and-and-" But she spoke to empty air, for the doctor had sprung up and darted out like an arrow from its bow,never stoping until he mounted his sulky. Here he commenced whipping "Eclipse" so violently that the poor animal, entirely unaccustomed to such a proceeding and being tied to a hitching-post, bounded high into the air, upsetting the sulky and its inmate simultaneously. The doctor quickly scrambled up and got away, never looking behind him, and never returning to the attack.

At his death it was found his life's earnings were left to the widows and orphans, the poor and afflicted-doing while he lived a noble work, and when he died leaving an excellent memory freighted with noble deeds.

Why a Woman Must be Uncovered in Court. At the trial of Mrs. Turner as an accessory to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, Sir Edward Coke ordered the prisoner to remove her hat, saying: "A woman may be covered in church, but not when arraigned in a court of justice" The accused tartly commenting on the singularity that she might wear her hat in the presence of God, but not in the presence of man, Coke replied: "For the reason that men with weak intellects cannot discover the secrets which are known to God; and therefore in investigating truth, where human life is n peril and one is charged with taking life from another, the court should see all obstacles removed. Besides, the countenance is often an index to the mind, and accordingly it is fitting that the hat should be removed, and therewith the shadow which it casts upon your face." Mrs.Turner's hat was taken off, but she was allowed, for modesty's sake, to cover hair with her handkerchief .- All The Year Around. A Portable Life Boat. An English clergyman, the Rev. E. . Buhon, has for years been trying to arouse the interest of the public in his collapsable boats, and has at last partially succeeded. His largest boat, about 28 feet long, eight feet wide over all, and capable of carrying 70 passengers with stores for two weeks, occupies, when folded up, less then two feet in width. When stowed against the ship's side such a boat occupies 22 inches by less then 9 feet, and she can be made ready to take the sea in one minute, with all necessary gear on board, and her water breakers filled. This invention, if it be a success, will be of incalculable value on emigrant vessels and military transports, as well as the ordinary passenger steamships.

An amusing incident occurred on a Connecticut express train recently. When the conductor was taking up tickets a lady passenger handed over to the gentlemanly "Knight of the punch" her pass, to which was attached a coupon. The conductor hastily glanced at the perforated card and rending it asuuder returned the proper slip to the owner. With a doleful expression of countenance the lady for a moment gazed at the mutilated ticket and then dropped it from an open car window. China leads civilized countiries in finding a use for its ants. Prof. Rilev of the Agricultural Bureau. Washington, has received from Han Chow an account of a curious use made of ants in that part of China. It seems that in many parts of the province of Canton the orange trees are injured by certain worms, and to rid themselves of these pests, the inhabitants import ants form the neighboring hills. The hill people throughout the summer and winter find the nests of two species of ants red and yellow, suspended from the branches of various trees. The trees are colonized by placing the ants on their upper branches, and bamboo rods are stretched between the different trees, so as to give the ants easy access to the whole orchard. This remedy has been in constant use at least since 1640, and probably dates from a much earlier period.

> Dakota Correspondence. JAMESTOWN Sept. 30, 1882.

DEAR RECORD:-At the urgent request of many friends at home, I send you a few general facts about this great North-west.

I left Galien on Monday, Aug. 28th and came direct to this place by way of the Chicago & Northwestern to St. Paul, and the Northern Pacific to Jamestown, arriving here on the following Wednesday, p. m. As there were several hours between trains at St. Paul, I ran over to Minneapolis and made a short visit to Thomas Gilbert and family, formerly of Buchanan. I had time only for a few of the many grand sights to be seen in Minneapolis and vicinity. Along the line of the railroad through Minn., there are to be seen many nice farms; but not until after you pass Fargo, the key city to Dakota, will you see any of those mainmoth wheat farms which have male Dakota notorious. From Fargo to Jamestown, a distance of about 100 miles, all you can see from the car window is wheat on the right, wheat on the left, never ending wheat fields in every direction, although occasionally there is a strip of wild prarie not yet broken up and now and then a beautiful inland lake. Between this place and Fargo all the land on either side of the railroad for a distance of twenty miles is taken up. West of Jamestown there is any amount of land not taken, much nearer than that. Much has been said about the beautiful location of Jamestown. Much more can be said and the half not yet told. Without any exception, Jamestown is built in one of the most beautiful localities for a city that I ever saw,or that any one could possibly imagine. It stands in a valley or a kind of basin, almost perfectly round. High bluffs completely encircle it. The bottom of the valley is almost as level as a floor. The James river enters on the north, flowing along at the foot of the bluffs on the west and south and passout on the east side. The population at the present writing, is estimated at 1,800. The Northern Pacific road runs directly through the place, dividing it in two parts known as the "North Side" and the "South Side." The company have in course of construction a forty-stall round-house which will be road from this place to Ft. Witten, a distance of 80 miles. They have about twenty miles completed. During the present summer there has been erected in Jamestown about 150 buildings. Among the most important are the court-house and jail, the James River National Bank, the First National bank, the school house, which has S departments, the new elevator, with a built of brick with stone foundation.

The company are also building a branch capacity of 75,000 bushels. There are five church organizations and three fine churches.

The Masons and Odd Fellows have both large lodges and have in course of construction a fine, large room over the First National Bank, which they will occupy jointly.

The Good Templars have but just organized and have not yet got under Jamestown has also a board of trade building association and a theater.

Property is very high, business lots are worth from $1,000 to $4,000, dwelling lots from $100 to $1,000, according to location.

Wages are high, especially carpenters,' as the demand is greater than the supply. A good carpenter can get from $3 to $3.50 per day. All skilled labor can get good wages. Farm hands are more plenty and wages not so high, but better than in Michigan. So much for Jamestown. A word or two about farming and I will close for fear of using too much space.

The soil in Stutsman Co. is a sandy loam with a clay sub-soil, mixed with lime. Wild prairie is first broken up through the spring months and "back set" in the fall, and in the following spring sown to wheat. The kind used here almost exclusively, is known as "Number One Hard." Placed by the side of Michigan winter wheat,in looks it is nowhere, but Dakotians brag terribly about the quality of flower it makes. The average yield this year is about twenty-five bushels per acre, although the yield in many places has exceeded forty bushels per acre.

Oats is very productive here, yielding from 80 to 115 bushels per acre.

Corn, as yet, is but very little raised. Potatoes and vegetables of all kinds grow in abundance and to an enormous size, for instance; cabbage thirtyfive pounds, beets two and one-half feet long, weighing 10 pounds. Now some of your readers will say: "I don't believe it. it is not possible;"but I say yes, what I see I know. • It costs some more to live here than in Michigan, although dry-goods and clothing are scarcely if any higher than elsewhere. What is most felt is lack of fruit. Fuel is very high. Lumber and building material is also high. Nearly all of the lime used is burned here. There are also extensive brick kilns in this place. Respectfully,

PORTER CHURCHILL.

There is a terrible boom in all kinds of business. Mechanics are busy and JOHN L. SMITH. money plenty.

Two Democratic Opinious of 1874. Having done his puny worst for inflation and finding that his constituents are in favor of honest money, he now with a sickly smile says in effect: "Then is my sentiments, but to get your votes I am ready to change them. Men without conviction like Mr. Begole think principles can be laid aside like a garment. If he is honest he thinks inflation is absolutely necessary to the welfare of the people. If he was a man of principle and thought that, he would sacrifice a hundred seats in congress before he would consent to labor to bring disaster upon the country. But that is not the style of man Begole is. He thinks that vote-getting is statesmanship. And he hasn't sense enough to even do that with candor.-Lansing Journal, October 1, 1874. Begole deserves neither respect nor support. An inhationist by his record he has been nominated by a convention which repudiated inflation and he has not the manhood either to acknowledge his mistakes and promise in future to be governed by the will of his constituents, or to insist that his course was not one of which he is not ashamed. He tries to dodge the issue and talk of

"happy adjustment" that has been nade. The best thing that his constituents can do is to "adjust" him out of ongress, and elect in his place a man who can stand squarely on a hard money platform, and who is neither afraid nor ashamed to express himself an any question.—Detroit Free Press,

LECTURE-President Angell, of the State University, will deliver the first of the course of lectures in Kinyon's hall, on Friday evening, Oct. 13. Subject, China. Mr. Angell's visit to that country as minister plenipotentiary from the United States, and his wellknown ability as a scholar makes him peculiarly able to handle this subject

Mr. J. J. Roe has set music to the well-known poem, "There is No Time Like the Old Time," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, making an excellent song and chorus, which is now being published by the music publishing house of W. W. Whitney & Co.

in an entertaining manner.

MR AND MRS. BRAZELLA DRULINER, of New Carlisle, uncle and aunt of Mrs. G. W. Fox, in this place, celebrated an anniversary Tuesday evening that is not usually the lot of man and wife to celebrate, their sixtieth wedding. There were present 104 members of the Druliner family, and the occasion was made a festive one. A purse of gold was made up for the aged people.

Mr. George Dunbar will sell his personal property, consisting of live stock and farming implements, at public auction, at his residence, four miles north of this place, on the river road to Berrien Springs, on Wednesday, Oct. 17. Lovi Logan, auctioneer.

Lost,-A music-holder, containing one sheet of music, was lost from a buggy at some point on the road between this place and Gotlip Boyle's residence. The finder will please leave the same at the store of Redden & Boyle.

THEY always have a good fair at Dowagiac. Reason why: Everybody in the place feels as if he owned the whole fair and had it all to look after and consequently the work that goes to make such an exhibition attractive is done and everybody it satisfied.

MESSRS. Samuel Wells and O. A. Koontz have been absent during the past two weeks looking after the interests of the concerns of which they have the superintendency, at some of leading fairs, taking in Jackson, Grand Rapids, Indianapolis and St. Louis. The orders they take will make business for some time.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.—A Democratic Township Caucus for Buchanan township, for the purpose of appointing delegates to the County Convention, to be held at Berrien Springs Oct. 9, will be held at John C. Dick's office Saturday, Oct. 7, at 3 o'clock.

Wм. Osborn, JOHN MANSFIELD, Com.

NILES people, and numerous others who have been induced to go there by extensive advertising, have been richly taken in by one "Indian doctor," a red headed paddy from Cork, who has been dealing out horse liniment to all who visited him, whether for one complaint or another. We are sorry to say this place contains a few of those who were green enough to pay him their money, although they had to borrow it.

MR. A. N. Woodruff, master of the Berrien County Grange of Patrons of Husbandry, and wife will each deliver a lecture in the Buchanan Grange Hall, on Friday, Oct. 13th, at two o'clock, P. M., on the social and intellectual advancement of farmers and their families. We have no doubt that but Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff's lectures will be instructive and interesting. All are cordially invited to come and hear SUDDEN DEATH .-- Mr. David Marks, a Pennsylvanian who came to this place a number of years since, died instantly last Thursday evening, of heart disease. He had worked all of that day, ate a hearty supper, and at about I six o'clock went into the barn to attend his chores. Being gone longer than she thought right, his wife went to call him, and found him sitting upon the floor, dead. A coroner's jury was impanneled, which rendered a verdict in accordance with the above. Mr. Marks had been troubled for some time with

FROM THREE OAKS.

Oct. 3, 1882. A large number of people went from this place to Chicago, this morning, to take in the Exposition. Mostly farm-

Picnic at Hudson lake to-day. A good time is expected. It is gotten up by Miss Alice Kelsey. The streets are lined with teams. E. H. Vincent has a new house very nearly completed. The Disciple church is nearly done, which makes six churches in town. Chamberlain & Hatfield have made a large addition to their store.

Menzo Ames of Otsego county, N. Y., is the guest of A. B. Wright. I see the Three Oaks Furniture Co. are unloading a carload of nice shingles, which they sell cheap.

A. A. Hall, of Galien was in town to-day. A good deal of wheat is being brought to this place now.

The mills are running full force at this time. Bennet Bros. are making a fine class of handles. William Decker is painting some very nice signs on some of the stores in this place. The people of Three Oaks are going to hold a town fair on next Wednesday, Oct. 11, at Town Hall. Considerable interest is manifested, and it will be good. A. F. Martin has a new carriage.

one thought of lingering, and Crump, among the rest, prepared to leave. The President called him back, saying, "I want you to stay; I may want you." So Crump remained at his post by the bed, and, though he would gladly have gone of with the rest he was compelled to out with the rest, he was compelled to witness the meeting. "What was said at that meeting I shall never divulge, except by permission of Mrs. Garfield," said Crump to me. One thing is evident, however; what Mrs. Garfield said so far restored the courage of the wounded man that he rallied from that At no time during the twenty-four hours was it thought the President could recover. The sick-room was crowded with physicians and others, who had the privileges of the house. All remarks were in consonance with the general belief that death would follow in a few hours.

"Why not probe for the ball?" would be asked by one surgeon.

"What is the use to probe?" would be the response; "he can't live, any-

"If he lives four hours, he can't live twenty," would be heard from another. These remarks naturally enough annoyed the sick man. He asked Crump to clear the sick-room, and allow in only those whose presents was nacessary those whose presence was necessary. The remark that if he lived four hours he would not live twenty, made a deep impression upon the sufferer, and it was evident to those who watched him closely and heard his remarks that he fully ex-

A Girl's Essay on Frogs. The frog is an amphibious animal, found in parts of the temperate and probably the torrid zones. It has four feet, a naked body and no tail. Now, a person who had never seen a frog might think, having no tail, it has some difficulty in keeping the flies off his naked body. But the frog has a way of receiving the flies when they call upon him. He tells them to "come in," and they generally go. The frog lies torpid until he comes out and begins to sing. The frog lives on small insects and vegetables. It is preyed upon by snakes and geese, and the hind legs are also eaten by some people, especially the French, who say the meat is very fine. The tadpole is half an inch long when hatched. The mouth is distinct, but small and without lips. Without any great change in form the size is rapidly increased. The tenacity of life in the frog is very great; it survives the severest wound. The frog is not only graceful and harmless, but it is actually useful in destroying insects and slugs injurious to vegetation. The difference between a frog and a toad is that the body of the frog is soft and smooth, while that of the toad is thick and

A Preventive for Hay-Fever. A few years ago Prof. Helmholtz, the eminent German physician, published an account of a remedy which he found for true hay-fever. This was simply to apply to the lining of the nose a solution of the sulphate of quinine by means of a small pipette, or pointed glass tube, while lying with the chin held in the air. Since then a preventive has been discovered by Dr. Blakely, and independent of the beautiful by Tr. Blakely, and the beautiful by Tr. Blakely by Tr pendently by Mr. Hannay, of Cove Castle, Lochhong, N. B. This consists in preventing the hay-pollen entering the nose by pinching it with a spring-clip. Mr. Hannay also plugs the ducts of the eyes by means of dumb-bell shaped pieces of glass, which can be readily remov . Curiously enough, hay-fever, which appears to be due to a tender lining of the nostrils, is almost unknown in Scotland, although common in the South of England, and the observation has elicited the curious explanation that the more callous membrane of the Scot is inherited from the long line of snuff-taking ancestors. A Damp Place. The island of Mauritius is a place where one can realize what it is to be a "damp, moist, unpleasant body." If any one asked me what was the serious occupation of my life here, Ishould answer without hesitation, "airing my clothes," and it would be absolutely true. No one who has not seen it can imagine the damp and mildew which covers everything if it be shut up even for a few days. Ammonia in the box or drawers keeps the gloves from being spotted like the pard, but nothing seems to avail with the other articles of clothing. Linen feels quite wet if it is left unused in the almirah, or chest of drawers, for a week. Silk dresses break out into a measle-like rash of yellow spots. Cotton or muslin gowns beome livid, and take unto themselves a horrible charnel-house odor.

Shoes and books are speedily covered a quarter of an inch deep by a mold which you can easily imagine would be-gin to grow ferns and long grasses in another week or so.—Good Words.

THE KING OF BEASTS. A Lion Hunt in South Africa-A Perilous and Exciting Sport. [From Good Words.]

During the night lions have been prowling about and keeping up a hideous roaring, so I hurry away in front with the prospect of meeting one stroll-ing home in the gray light of the early hours. The air 14 raw and cold, so I march at the double quick and recklessly thrust my hands to the bottom of my pockets in the happy consciousness of not being in Regent street. My two usual attendants in my hunting excursions have considerably shriveled up and began to keep a sharp lookout for game. Several herds are descried at a distance; but, not caring to go far out of the way, we leave these unmo-lested. Matter, how ver, do not become lested. Matter, now ver, as not recommended there is to be no sport this morning. Just as that thought shapes itself, down sinks the guide in a croaching position while he excitedly whispers, "A sition, while he exe tedly whispers, "A lion! a lion!" Instinctively we follow his example. After a hurried glance at my rifle I cantons y rase my head.

Looking in the direction indicated by my guide, I am mortified at seeing.

already fitty yards off, a fine lion leis-urely bounding away through the long grass. Rising errot, I five precipitately.

The lion, we harmed, singly pauses for a momentary stare, and theu continues its course. Grinding out an expression of intense vexation, and yielding to the impulse of the moment. I rush after the animal in hot haste. My servants, less eager and more wise than I, remain where they were. It never occurs to me that I have only the remaining cartridge of my double-barreled rifle for a possi-

The movement of the lion can only be traced by the shaking of the grass, and with eye intently fixed on that I dash on pell mell, tripping, stumbling, and gasping for breath, while my heart palpitates with the excitement of the chase. We thus keep up the race for about 300 yards, when alt at once the shaking of the grass ceases, reminding me that I must proceed with much more caution, lest I rush abruptly into the fervent embraces of his leonine highness—a con summation most devoutly to be depre-cated, seeing I have no ambition for the world's reproduction and a warning ept-taph. Moving on very stealthily for some time, I suddenly emerge into an open space and as suddenly halt transfixed; for there stands the lion at a distance of a little more than fifteer yards, with its side toward me, and evidently awaiting my approach.

The momentary shock gives place instantly to a strange feeling of exultation. With such a spiendid opportunity for a shot I am sure of my game! Mentally, as by a flash, I picture myself exhibiting the trophies of the encounter to an ad miring troop of friends. I level my gun and bang! it goes. To my infinite sur-prise, mortification, and, as I think, against all the laws of reason, there is neither the grand death spring nor the last tragic roar. Unwounded and undaunted there stands my dangerous antagonist, "staring upon the hunter!" It takes one or two seconds to let the grim realities of the situation dawn upon my imagination.

Only too evidently the tables are turned upon me. I have no ammunition, and I dare not flee. To "fix" him with my eye unfortunately does not occur to me as practicable. On the contrary, I have a very distinct consciousness that he has "fixed" me, and that I venient tree from which I might try the fascination of the human gaze. Thus for a little space, which to me seemed hours, we stand face to face. The lion seems uncertain what to do, but finally resolves to treat me with contempt.

Turning with dignity, he gives one or two powerful hands and disappears in the jungle, while I, limp and bedraggled,

Then he turned, and while he held to the fence with one hand he shook the other at the house in a wild, strange manner. Then he stood on one foot and felt of the other as tenderly as if he was caressing a new-blown rose. "Was it all there?" He seemed to doubt, and that same wild expression floated over his countenance again, and again he waved his arm around his head and shook his fist at an unseen enemy. Dr. Price's reputation has been acquired by candid, honest dealing and years of successful practice.

My practice is not one of experiment, but founded on laws of nature, with years of experience and evidence to sustain it, does not tear down, make sick to make well; no harsh treatment, no triffling, no flattering. We know the cause and the remedy needed, no guess work, but knowledge gained by years of experience in the treatment of Chronic diseases exclusively; no encouragement without a prospect. Candid in our opinion, reasonable in our charges, claim not to know everything, or to cure everybody, but do claim to reason and common sense. We invite the sick, no matter what their ailment, to call, invegtigate before they abandon hope, make interrogation and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing, as consultation is free. Is strictly first-class in all respects; perfect ly automatic in its action during storms. Has the best regulating device ever used. Material and workmanship unexcelled. Our new method of fastening the saits in the wheel is decidedly superior to the old way, as they cannot be blown out, nor will they decay where they contact with the rims. By this method the complete circle is filled, which adds to the power as well as to the beauty of the mill. Our mill is sold entirely upon its merits, and the purchaser assumes no risk whatever, as we guarantee satisfaction or no sale. We are prepared to meet all competition, and will not be undersold. Of Duchess Co., N. Y., 80 Years of Age, Years from Stone in the .

Great age and painful disease are a sad combination. Yet Mr. William Westfall, formerly of Rock City, Duchess Co., N. Y., now of Washingtou Hollow, in the same county came to the office of Dr. David Kennedy, the eminent Physician and Surgeon of Rondout, N. Y., some time since, in a condition to excite the sympathy of the most cold-blooded, hardhearted person in the world. We say he came—he was, rather, carried to the Doctor's office, for he was totally helpless, and bore the weight of years beside. He had suffered long from Retention of wrine, had all the symptoms of an aggravated case of calculus formations in the bladder. The usual instrumental examination revealed the presence in the bladder of a urinary calculus of uncommon size. Dr. Kennedy trankly told Mr. Westfall that, owing to his age and debility, and operation was out of the question, but that he could by the prescription of "Kenedy's Favorite Remedy," together with local treatment, make him comfortable and leave him to live out all his days. The outcome of this was that the patient enjoys good health to this day.

The Reasons why

Dr Keunedy's "Favorite Remedy" is being extensively used by our people are as follows: It is a combination of vegitable alteratives. It is pleasant to the taste, adapted to both sexes and all ages is effective in arfording immediate relief in all cases of Kidney troubles, Liver compliant, constipation of the bowels and derangements peculiar to women. At the same time purioes the blood, thus giving tone and strength to the system

An Age of Assass-ation.

The number of assussinations since 1879 shows the loose state of opinion that exists in many minds on political crime; and so does the rank of many of the victims. Two Czars of Russia, two or three Turkish Sultans, a French King, a King of Sweden, two Presidents of the United States, a British Premier, a President of Greece, a Governor General of India and a French Royal Duke (M. le Duc de Berri, father of M. le Comte de Chambord, who claims to be the legitimate King of France and Navarre)—these are the highest of the persons assassinated within about ninety years. Conspirators and assassins sought to kill George III., Napoleon, Wellington, Louis Phillippe, President Jackson, Ozar Nicholas, Napoleon III., Secretary Seward, Sir Robert Peel and others. Of reigning sovereigns and statesmen who yet are active, Queen Empress Victoria, Emperor William, Alexander III., King Humbert and Prince Bismarck all have been objects of attack by assassins; and perhaps Mr. Gladstone has been conspired against with a view to his violent death. It is not improbable that Mr. Forster was set down for a similar fate. The attempt of Thistlewood to destroy almost the entire British Government was an anticipation of Nihilutic modes of operation. He expected to destroy more than a dozen Ministers at one blow, and the threatened Ministers were so far alarmed as to return public thanks for their escape. This was at the beginning of 1820, and so it can be considered, by old men, a contemporary event. Political Nihilism makes of assassination a regular mode of party warfare; and it is supposed that it means to act at the approaching coronation of Alexander III. True, assassination was the regular thing in Russia, long before Nihiiism was heard of; but then it was a regular thing of the palace, not party, and in little more than a century two Czars perished by it; Peter III., in 1762, and Paul, in 1801. Many years after 1801 it went down among the people, and now it is less palatial than popular; and it may accomplish a great change in the Great Empire. It is quite possible that the strength of Nihilism and the numbers of Nihilists are exaggerated and overrated; but the faot is clear that a party of some power exists in Russia that accepts assassination in 1ts highest formthat of regicide—as a legitimate force in politics. It is equally true that the civilized world does not appear to be much affronted by the existence of such a party, in what but recently was supposed the most stable of nations, because of its Government's strength. This is altogether unlike to anything ever before known in Christendom; and it indicates either a general change in sentiment, or a disposition to make an exception in the case of Russia. In either case, the fact is important, for if
