Major Glinton's Mistake.

Major Glinton was one of the most courageous fellows in the world, according to the men who knew him; but when the ladies of his acquaintance heard this of him they laughed it to scorn, for they considered him the most timid creature they had ever seen. He was very fond of ladies' society, they said, or he would not spend all his evenings at parties or making calls; yet ro one lady, old or young, single or married, had ever known him to express his regard in any way that was not extremely decorous and formal. Flirt? They would as soon think of a tombstone or a telegraph pole attempting to flirt. Most of the Major's male acquaitances carried scars on their hearts, as results either of attacks more honorable than judicious, or of sudden surprises by fair skirmishers; but no one could imagine the Major to have suffered any such mishap, for he not only made no reconnoisances, but he always retired precipitately within himself at the first flash of a pair of eyes levelied decidedly at him. The truth was that the brave Major was not only as modest as a model maiden, but he was painfully bashful beside. The only desire of his life was to marry, which he was financially able to do, but the important preliminary step of proposing he had never dared to take. Until he had reached adult years he had met scarcely a woman but his two orphaned sisters, to whom he had tried to be a father, and upon whose rare purity and sweetness he had based his idea of womanhood. Both married and went far from their old home, so they could not help him to gain a wife by disabusing him of his impression that all women were too good for lim. To Glinton nearly every woman appeared a saint. He worshiped one after another, although only one at a time, and his tastes were so correct that he was obliged to change his divinity about once in three months to avoid worshiping another man's wife. Whenever an old scar healed and a delicious throbbing of the heart told of a new dart that had found its way to his heart, he vowed solemnly to propose at once, and vary the dreadful monotony having another man step in before him. And each time he delayed, just for a day or a week, or because he feared too much, or hoped too widely, and every time he waited a little too long-every time but one. For when the Major met Alice Walerson he felt that, to lose her, too, would be more than his life could endure. She was pretty, as all women seemed to the Major. She was good and she was sweet, the Major was sure else why were all other women fond of her? Best of all, she seemed the most modest and bashful maiden in the whole circle of his acquaintance, and through these qualities would be able to offer him sympathy with feelings that all other people regarded with provoking smiles. But how should he propose? Being i woman, her bashtul nature must be far more sensitive than his own, so even if he were to nerve himself to the ordeal, how could be be enough of a brute to inflict greater trepidation upon her, if he loved her? Even were she favorably disposed toward him, he was sure that listening to a proposal would put her heart in a terrible tumult: how much more dreadful would it be, then for her to listen to him should she not be favorably disposed. He knew that she always looked at him pleasantly; he felt that she had been even grateful to him one evening, when both, at a party, and both through timidity, retired to the same half-hidden corner of the drawing-room, each innocent of the approach of the other, and each over-anxious, on meeting, to show that the affair was a mere accident. This was the only basis of Glinton's hope, and vet-he had been disappointed so many times he could not bear to think of failure new. He made several calls, with the intention of proposing, but every time his courage failed him; besides Mrs. Wallerson or Alice's sister Nell were always in the parlor. Of course he could not say before two what he dreaded to say to even with a single hearer. Worse still, Miss Nell, who was a brilliant brunette of the irrepressible species, could not avoid teasing him slyly at every possible oppor-tunity, and he always lost his tongue under her onsla ughts. Then he tried to propose in writing, and for a week of evenings he wrote steadily, with no more satisfactory result than a note to Mrs. Wallerson, in which he intended to inclose his pro-

Chance finally came in play to his aid. Miss Nell, as one of a trio of girls, who had devised a surprise party for a recently married friend, wrote to the Major about the project, and begged that he would call and give her some assistance among their mutual acquaintances among gentlemen. As the Major read her note a brilliant thought occurred to him. While talking business Miss Nell would certainly not endeavor to tease him; his bashfulness never troubled him while talking with ladies on any subject requiring common sense, opinion and executive ability; he should, therefore, be able to feel at ease with Miss Nell, and while in that unusual condition he would make a confident of her and ask her advice and assistance. He would try to talk to her as if she were a man; it might be a rash experiment, but he felt equal to almost any degree of rashness when he thought of how many times before he resolved and failed. So the Major went to the Wallerson home on the evening appointed by mischievous Miss Nell, with a stouter all his male friends into the surprise party, and she, rather confused by her new view of the Major's character, was most effusive inthanks, and being only twenty-three years of age, and no older than her years signified, was completely astonished by the Major's coolness. She could not help betraying her curiosity; she looked at the Major inquiringly, she dropped into reveries, and she said to her mother, who came to the door of the parlor a moment about some affairs strictly of a family nature, that Mr. Glinton was fifteen years before.

Conversation had dropped to the dead level of the National Academy, the last new novel, and Brown's last volume of poems, all of which were very bad. Miss Nell looked interested, pretty and sentimental until the Major half wished she would be her natural self, for he had at last roused himself to the combative state, and he wanted to talk with her in the most serious manner about her sister. At last he made a desperate effort and

"Miss Wallerson, I called this evening only on business, but I have for a long time wanted to say something to you about a matter-" "Excuse me just for an instant, Major," interrupted Miss Nell, "the gas is hissing dreadfully. Won't you be good enough to see which burner it is; I'm just too short to reach any of them, I'm sorry to say." The Major hastened to the rescue He heard a hissing noise, as of the escape of too much gas; he could not be sure which of the six burners was at fault, so he turned down one after another until the noise stopped and the parlor was almost dark. "You are very kind," murmured Nell as the Major resumed his seat near her; "the blowing of gas is dreadful annoying to the ear. By the way, you were saying that— The Major resisted a temptaion to say, "Oh, nothing of any consequence,"

"I have been long the most reverent adorer of a certain young lady who—"
"Oh, Major!" exclaimed Miss Nell, the idea of you being in love. Did

"Excuse me, Miss Wallerson," said the Major, hastily, "but no one is competent to pass an opinion on my condition of mind but myself. I fully know my own feelings, and merely wish an opportunity to explain them in such a manner as may be most respectful." "I beg your pardon, Major," said Miss Nell, now entirely on her guard. Please continue, and believe no one here can doubt your sincerity." The Major's heart gave a mighty to give up." "Your thoughtfulness does you hon-or, Major," said Miss Nell, in the kindest way in the world. "Thank you-thank you," said the Major, hastily. "Perhaps then you understand why I speak with more than my customary freedom. Miss Wallerson, I was trained in my youthful days to such unquestioning reverence for woman as woman that I feel almost like a thief when I think of asking any-woman for her hand and heart." "Again, Major, I must say that your thoughtfulness and delicacy do you honor." said Miss Nell, as demurely as if she had never teased any one in her "Thank you—thank you," said the Major again. "I would like first to explain myself, if I may trouble you for a moment. I am, I believe, an honorable man; I have a good business and a good bank account. I want to devote both, and my life beside, to service of the sweetest woman that ever lived. I cannot expect her to love me as I love her, for she is an angel and I am only-well, only a man." "A true man," said Miss Nell, still as demure as a parson, "is as good as anything in the world-even as good as a true woman.'

"Do you really think so?" asked the Major. "I must believe you against my will, but according to my inclination. Well, the woman whom I love you know very well; no one can know her better; she is pure, good, sweet, noble, tender—" "Major -- Major," exclaimed Miss

"Please don't contradict me on this particular point," said the Major; I think I know—I am sure I do." "Then," said Miss Nell, "it would be very impolite in me to contradict, but reallv—' "Really," said the Major, "I am weighing my words most carefully and mean all I say. I want to offer her all I am and have, under any conditions she may impose. Don't imagine me impulsive or rash in this matter," continued the Major, extending both his hands in his earnestness. "I mean—"

What the Major wanted to say was never explained, for Miss Nell, entirely in accordance with her own idea of what the excited man was trying to say, murmured "Enough!" fell upon the Major's breast and threw her arms around the Major's neck.

What could the astonished man do? What could any gentleman do under such circumstances? Miss Alice tripped into the parlor, found it dark, turned the gas, saw the couple, and exclaimed:

"Oh my!" Her sister looked up into the Major's face for a second time, then dropped her brow on his shoulder and exclaim-

"Oh my!" And the Major, looking down at the face before him, now entirely empty of roguishness and everything else but tenderness, forgot all the past, placed his arms around the graceful figure that rested on him, and said: "Oh my!"

And although he has been married ten years, he never has had reason to regret his mistake.

galloping horse. No one was in the wagon, and everybody who saw it coming got out of the way as soon as possible. The animal turned down Seneca street to St. Clair, down St. Clair to Bank, and then came up Bank street to Superior. Some time in the course of the horse's rambling about the block, a man who is known as Champ Riley got into the wagon from behind, and seizing the charger's tail, began to twist it. This brought the runaway to his senses, and he stopped near the corner of Superior and Seneca arranged with the young lady to bring streets.—Cleveland Leader.

Indian Policemen. It is practicable to make a home so delightful that children will have no At Standing Rock Agency there are thirty Indian policemen, garbed in blue of the shade known as "baby;" and very efficient conservators of the peace they prove. The position of poiceman is coveted by the reds ardently, and as their tenure of office is dependent upon good behavior, the thirty are zealous and careful. The guard-house is an agency institution similar to the calaboose of municipalities, and offenders are there incarcerated with neatness and dispatch. Major Mc Laughlin has a way of imposing fines in the way of the sawing of many cords of wood, and these mulctings of sweat are greatly disliked and dreaded. Finding how well the police system worked, the Major determined to parallel the plan, in a way, in relation to farming. Accordingly he has divided his Indians into eight districts, and over each has placed a native superintendent or inspector of agriculture, whom he holds responsible for the doings and undo-ings of his fellows. Gall has one district, and keeps his men at the plow most vigorously. Running Antelope, who with his people is encamped at Grand River, fully thirty miles from the agency buildings, is another of the superintendents, while High Eagle (Bad Hip was his name in the days when his finger knew the trigger well, the plow handle not at all) was found in a field wherein thirteen yoke of oxen, half a dozen plows, and two score Indians were at work. The reds dearly love to work in gangs, and they "spell" each other, as a down-easter would say, with both frequency and egularity. Houses are springing up all over the plains where tepees once abounded, and the log structures are for the most part much more carefully and substantially built than are the claim shanties which, aggregated, are yclept a something-or-other city before the chinking is dry. Many of the Indians have work cattle, a few have milch cows, and nearly all have a few agricultural implements.—St. Paul Pi-

A Sheep With a Shirt on Makes Music.

An incident which was both rich and racy, and quite laughable, actually did occur near Smyrna, in Tennessee a few days since, which was about as follows: One of our neighbors, Mr. T. D., sheared the long wool off of his favorite pet sheep a few days since. As the evening began to gather the air grew chilly. Mr. D. being a man of much sympathy, and in order to make his pet as pleasant as possible, took a shirt and pulled it over the body of the sheep and buttoned the collar around the sheep's neck and let the sleeves hang loose, like a pair of wings. Mr. D.'s faithful dog espied this wonderful freak of art and nature and made battle at the poor creature at once. The poor sheep jumped the yard fence and ran for his life. It ran into the public road just as Mrs. R. H. Nicholson and Her horse grew frightened and ran for several hundred yards, but as fate would have it she remained firm in her saddle, and neither she nor the child was hurt. On the following morning this wonderful, celebrated sheep made its appearance in Joe Derryberry's field, where its visit caused a general stampede, where the snapping of trace chains and knocking down fences, and the word "whoa! whoa! whoa!" bursting from the mouths of plow-boys, made music in the air. During the day Mr. D. was seen hunting a sheep that could be easily identified

President Arthur is fond of playing practical jokes. An incident occurred at the White House recently that afforded considerable amusement. A party of Mr. Arthur's friends were here on a visit from New York. The President had shown them through the White House. The party were loud in their praise of the improvements in the Presidential mansion. Coming through the east room, or general reception room, Mr. Arthur halted and said in the most serious manner:

"Do you see that colored man standing over there?" pointing to a wellpreserved specimen of the African race. 'Well," continued the host, "he has a most remarkable history."

"How so?" "Guess," said Mr. Arthur. "An exiled king?" said a bewitching young lady member of the party.
"An ex-Street Commissioner?" observed a practical Wall street broker. "Neither," said the President. "Listen: He has been sold into slavery over 700 times."

"Impossible." "Fact, I assure you," said Mr. Arthur. The colored man was called over and questioned. "My good man," said the Wall street broker, "is it true you have been sold in slavery more than 700 times?" The colored representative showed his white teeth and bowed. "Remarkable," was the general re-"What are you doing now?" was asked. "Well, boss, I'm traveling with an Uncle Tom's Cabin Company. I am put on the auction block every night

One time there was a feller bot a dog of a man in the market, and the dog was a biter. After it had bit the feller four or five times he threw a closeline over its neck and led it back to the dog man in the market, and he said to the dog man, the feller did: "Ole man. didn't you use to have this dog?" The man he luked at the dog and then thot awhile, and then he said: "Well, yes, I had him about half the time, and the other half he had me." Then the fel-ler he was fewrious mad, and he said: "Wot did you sell me such a dog as this'n for?" And the ole man he spoke up and said: "For four dollars and seventy-five cents, loffle money." . Then the feller guessed he would go home in the dog was willing. Uncle Ned, who had been in Indy and everywhere, he says the Mexican dogs don't have no hair on 'em. ### A Mouse in Court. During a recent murder trial in Carson, Nev., the monotony of the jury room was much releived by the antics of a mouse. The mouse seems to have half a length and listen attentively.

When the crowd would go out and leave the room to the jury the mouse would skip up on the table and take his rations along with the rest. He became a great pet with the jury, and now the sheriff has adopted him, and made comfortable and happy.

It is now suggested that a few to-bacco plants can be grown advantageously among cabbages. Horses at hard work should have, in the middle of the forenoon and after-

Carrots are good feed for both horses and milch cows, fed in rational rations. Sugar beets are preferred by some to carrots. The latter is good feed both for cows and horses, to be fed as a tonic in connection with dry feed.

At the head of Canton Canon in the Coast Range Mountains, California, stand three tall pillars of rock almost as large as the Egpptian pyramids, and nearly exactly of the same size and shape. Around these pillars are now camped more than a thousand people attracted there by three black-eyed Mexican women. The leader is the widow of the famous Mexican bandit Joaquin Murietta. She has been there for twenty-five years, the other two not so long. They profess to see spirits as plainly as though they were in the flesh and to hold conversation with them. When the spirits arrive these women meet them, go through the form of shaking hands, kissing and talk to them as to the living. The gist of their teaching is that the three rocks are hollow and are really gorgeous temples, and that in next month a potent padre will come from Mexico and open the doors of these temples to be lievers; that once inside each will possess his or her affinity regardless of previous marital relations. The sick are laid in front of the rocks and soon manifest signs of recovery. ### The Bride of a Madman.

A bridal night experience almost surpassing in tragic horror that of the bride of Lammermoor, which Scott said was "an ower true tale," is reported from Rio Grande del Sur, near the Uruguay frontier. A young farmer's marriage was postponed on account of his being bitten by a dog. The wound was cauterized, and all went well. Three months later doctors declared all danger over. The marriage took place. A supper followed, and at supper the bridegroom was noticed to fall into gloomy abstraction. After supper came dancing, and when the ball was at its height the bride and bridegroom withdrew. About an hour later piercing screams came from the bridal chamber. The door was burst open. On the floor lay the bride, still alive, but torn as though by a wild beast. The bridegroom, covered with blood, and foaming at the mouth, cowered in a corner, but in a moment sprang upon one of the men, when a brother of the bride sent a bullet through his brain.

-New York Sun. Beer in the United States. The production of beer in the United States last year amounted to 525,000, 000 gallons, an average of more than fourteen gallons for every inhabitant. This average is still behind that of Belgium, of Great Britain and of Germany, the German average being twenty-two gallons per head annually, but it is larger than that of any other country, and the increase in the consum tion of malt liquors in this country is in every way remarkable. In 1863 the total production was but 62,000,000 gallons, so that the increase has been more than eight-fold in twenty years. the population having increased about 60 per cent. To counterbalance this the statistics show that the production of distilled liquors has diminished during this period, notwithstanding the increase of population. This confirms the general observation that beer has to a large extent supplanted whisky as

A rather strange incident occurred in a yard at Norwich, Conn., a few days ago. The yard at times appears to be the meeting place for rodents, and on the day in question a steel trap, baited with stale cheese, was set for their reception. Several persons were watching the trap when a large rat put in an appearance and walked towards the trap. He was within a few feet of it when a favorite cat clambered over the fence into the yard. The rat stopped. So did the cat. They seemed to recognize each other. After looking at one another a moment the distance between them was lessened. Finally they were nose to nose and actually kissed each other. They remained together a few minutes, when the rat took a knowing glance at the trap and ran away in the opposite direction. A Thrilling Experience.

Wm. Ash, of the Hotel Madison, only eighteen years of age, had a remark-able experience on Lake Huron during the recent disastrous gale. Heshipped from this port on the schooner H.C. Sprague, and on the 20th inst., off Port Sanilac, Captain Peabody called for some one to save the life-boat, thinking that the vessel must go down. The life-boat was launched and the crew saved, by young Ash, who was washed into the angry waves and drowned, as was supposed at the time. He, however, caught hold of some boards and floated to the shore, ten miles distant, the long night seeming an age, almost He found shelter in a cottage, received all due attention, and on the next day started on foot for Port Huron, reaching there just as a vessel, which proved to be the Sprague, was setting sail. ## OUR WESTERN TRIP.

As our article last week ended with Lincoln, the second shall begin with a correction. Instead of the silver bricks seen at the Omaha smelter being 1,200 in number, as the types made it appear, there was a pile of them about four feet in height, and each worth $1,200.

At Lincoln we took a short walk about town with Henry Herpolsheimer, visiting the new State Capitol, It made us long to have him in Lansing and show him a Capitol. It would not be a bad building for a county court house, in any county but Berrien. The post office here is a fine stone structure, made to accommodate the U.S. District Court as well. The fire alarm was sounded, fire having broken out in a coal shed near the depot, and in less than half an hour the fire department were out and were actually throwing water onto that fire; but as coal is not a very rapid burner, but little damage was done. They have a fine steam fire engine. The company may have an apology for being so swift (?) in this case, as the nearest water supply was at a cistern on the side of the postoffice square, about two blocks away, and the company had between 600 and 700 feet of hose to lay.

At Lincoln the party were met by a committee from Hastings, sixty miles farther on, headed by Mr. E.C. Yokum. At Hastings, a place of about 5,000 inhabitants, we found the band out to greet us, and in the rain that was falling the party divided, for a dinner at the Buckeye and Commercial hotels, paid for by the city. Preparations had been made for showing the party about the town with carriages, but the rain prevented. After dinner there was a pleasant time had, in speech making .by Congressman Laird, of that district, the Mayor of the city, and others. What we saw of the city indicated that it was thoroughly alive to business, welcomed good citizens who came there either to settle or see, but most seriously objected to the influx of foreigners, who build about themselves an impregnable wall of coldness that admits of no sociability, and incloses no business enterprise that will improve a country. The stop at Hastings was two hours. The next was for supper, at McCook, a town ten months old, chuck full of vim. The number of inhabitants was variously estimated at from 500 to 1.200. Three good hotels and two newspapers, doing business. This was the last of the country seen until next morning, when we awoke on the Buffalo grass and Cactus plains. The attention of the party was attracted to what appeared to be a heavy bank of white clouds off to the front of us and at either side. After various guesses and comments it was finally decided that this was the first view of the Rockies, and our guide, the Pullman porter, informed us that the two high points were Long's Peak and Pike's Peak. When we arrived in Denver, three hours later, we learned to our surprise that these points were still seventy-five miles away, although we had been riding directly toward them three hours. The first impulse upon reaching Denver was to take a before-breakfast walk to the snow banks, which appeared as if they might be reached by an hour's brisk walk. but this information dampened all desire for a morning walk. The first greeting upon stepping from the train was a cry from the party of, "Here, Buchanan," and John K. Apted, of Niles, put in an appearance. He is employed as express messenger between Denver and Black Hawk and Central. Two blocks from the Union depot we found Rob. Parkinson, employed in a coal office at $60 per month and room rent. A short time afterwards, after purchasing some curiosities and views of a dealer on 16th street, accidentally learned that the dealer was Rob't. Davis. There are some in Buchanan who will have fond recollections of Rob. He asked various questions about them and we answered to the best of our ability. Rob, very kindly led the way to Knight Carpet Company, conducted by a former Nilesean of the above name, with E.W. Post clerking for him. We found here Messrs, Wall & Witter, former South Bend boys, who have made themselves wealthy in running a stage line between this point and Leadville, and in a general selling and commission business. The firm is now dissolved, Mr. Wall continuing the business, while Mr. Witter turns his attention to a small ranch about forty miles out on the plains, where he

he is a member. • In the afternoon, Saturday, the party took a ride on the Circle railway, a narrow gauge road that has a charter to build around the city for pleasure purposes. It now extends across one side, past the mining exposition, which was visited, to a new park that is being fitted up by the city. In the evening the entire party attended the theatre at the invitation and expense of Gov. Tabor, in his opera house, which is the finest building of the kind in America. After the play, Gov. Tabor showed us the building. He owns another at Leadville. Here some of the party went to hotels, but the greater number clung to their elegant berths in the Pullman sleepers, the entire train having been side-tracked to await our pleasure. Sunday was spent in various ways by the members of the party. Some actually went to church, but the greater part were seeing the city. It was by the kindness of Mrs. Witter that we were enabled to ride about seventy-five miles-Colorado distance-passing through the fine dwelling portions of the city, past General Grant's fine Scottish house, through the Jowish quarters, where was displayed the most magnificence in dress and building of any part of the city, and among other places, past "Brick" Pomerov's home, as this was a point of special interest, a large number of Buchanan's wealthy laboring men and dess-makers having contributed liberall the erection. It is a magnificent acted about two miles out on an emînence over-

> Denver contains more wealth than any city of its size we visited. Herresources are entirely from the mining and stock trading. A few gardens are grown, but where this is done it must be by irrigation, as nothing but Buffalo grass and cacti grow here without it. A stream of water is kept running along the street gutters, to keep the shade trees, which are either cottonwood or soft maple, alive. The finest buildings are of stone, sandstone or granite. Some of the sandstone resembles that from Joliet, and some is red, or of a greenish cast, and the three formed in a building, properly arranged, present a very pleasing effect. The city hall is one of this kind. This kind of buildings, we were informed, cost but little more for material than brick in Michigan.

The atmosphere in all of this part of the country is very dry; none of the sultry, moist feeling common to Michigan. So much is this condition prevalent that the carcasses of dead animals, left unburied, do not decay but simply dry up, and lie there until the flesh is eaten from the bones by birds or beasts of prey. One of the luxuries of the section is the occasional dust storm, which is simply a strong wind that fills the air with the fine, dry dust from the ground. We saw one of these in its glory, Sunday afternoon. While it lasted, distances very materially lessened, and two blocks was a good distance for a person with good eyes to see distinctly. This storm lasted about five minutes. They occur whenever there is a strong wind and no rain.

Sunday morning a newsboy came about the depot, and thinking to buy a paper, handed him three pennies and a two cent piece. A look of supreme disgust ran over his face, and looking up, he said, "A nickel, please, Mister; this is no penny town." We gave him the nickel.

Dr. Esick, a traveling Chinese doctor, and one of his countrymen, passed our car, Saturday afternoon, and were called in for an interview. We found the doctor quite intelligent, and speaking fair, broken English, having been in this country sixteen years. He wrote his autograph for all who were in the car, and kindly invited all to visit the Chinese quarters, where there were 400 or 500 of the celestials living in a space of about two blocks. Some of the boys went and saw.

By midnight, Sunday, we were all satisfied with our stay in Denver, and the train pulled out for Pueblo, over the Denver & Rio Grande road, which has three rails between these points, for broad and narrow gauge trains.

THE GREAT BRIDGE.

New York City and Brooklyn had a grand celebration on the occasion of the completion of their great bridge, on Thursday, May 24. President Arthur and some of the members of the cabinet, together with several governors, were present to assist in the imposing ceremonies. Work on this bridge was begun Jan. 3, 1870, and cost complete about $14,750,000, of which amount Brooklyn pays two-thirds and New York one-third. The following facts concerning this great enterprise we condense from the New York Sun:

The Brooklyn tower rests upon a caisson 22 feet high with a roof 15 feet thick, made of timbers a foot square, bolted and joined. It is 108 by 102 feet. The New York tower rests on a caisson four feet longer, with a roof 22 feet thick.

The Brooklyn tower foundation is 45 feet below high water mark. The New York tower foundation is 78 feet below high water mark. The New York caisson weighs about 7,000 tons, and contains 8,000 tons of concrete filling and 5,253 cubic yards of timber and iron. The New York tower contains 46,-945 cubic yards of masonry. The Brooklyn tower contains 38,214 cubic vards of masonry. The height of the arches in the towers above the roadway is 117 feet. The openings in the arches are 33 feet 9

The anchorages are 129x119 feet at the base, 117x104 at the top, 85 feet high in front, and 80 feet in the rear. The grade of the roadway is 314 feet

There are 208 suspenders from each cable on the main span, and S6 from each land span.

Where the cables dip below the roadway there are 35 post bands on each cable on the land span. The strength of a single suspender is equal to 140,000 pounds; the greatest weight on a single suspender is 20,- 000 pounds. Each cable contains 5,296 parallel galvanized steel, oil-coated wires, closewrapped to a solid cylinder 1534 inches in diameter. The cable wire weighs a pound for every twelve feet. Each cable will sustain 12,200 tons:

the greatest weight on each cable is 3,000 tons. The main span of the bridge is 1,595 feet 6 inches long Each land span is 980 feet. Total length of the bridge, 5,080 feet. There are 5,280 feet in a mile. The length of the New York approach is 1,562 feet 6 inches; the length of the Brooklyn approach is 971 feet. The bridge is 85 feet wide and the centre of the river span, when the temperature is 90 degrees, is 135 feet above iigh water mark. The height of the floor at the towers above high water is 119 feet 3 inches. The total height of the towers above high water is 278 feet each. The size at high water line is 140x59 feet, and at the roof course is 136x53 feet. The height of the towers above the roadway is 159 feet. The length of each single wire in the cables is 3,578 feet 6 inches; the total length of the wire in the cables.

exclusive of wrappings, is 14,361 miles. The granite approaches to the bridge form one of the finest masonry viaducts in the world. The archways under the approaches are to be fitted up at a cost of $400,000 as warehouses, which will be fire and hurglar proof.

The New York terminus is 38 and 27-100 feet above high water mark, and the Brooklyn terminus is 61 and 32-100 feet above high water mark. The bridge is 15 feet higher in the center than at the towers, and is 46 feet higher than at the anchorages. The suspended superstructure weighs 6,620 tons, the cables weigh 3,460 tons, the suspenders weigh 1,180 tons, the timber flooring weighs 2,760 tons, the steel rails weigh 660 tons. The total permanent weight of the bridge is 14,680 tons. To prevent disturbance by wind there are 432 overfloor stays on the bridge. On Memorial day a sad disaster occurred upon this wonderful structure. The foot path is only fifteen feet and six inches wide, narrowing twice to thirteen feet, and containing two flights of stairs eight feet high and fourteen feet wide. In this narrow pathway,. designed to accommodate about 50,000 pedestrians per day, nearly 250,000 have passed over in a day, occasioning It may be well to several jams, but not until Memorial day was there any loss of life. On this day a jam occurred at the New York end. near one of the stairways, in which twelve persons lost their lives and a large number were more or less seriously injured. A gentleman who was interviewed by the New York

Reminiscences of Clay and Randolph

Just below the treasury, within a guncho

of the White House, lives David Callan, one of the oldest citizens of the District of Columbia. He has shaken hands with soven-teen presidents of the United States, and he saw the flames burst from the White House

when the British set-fire to it during the war of 1812. He is a sort of living record of the past, and his personal recollections include reminiscences of the great men of the country, from Madison down to to-day. I had a delightful talk with him this afternoon. Seventy-five years of age, his memory is as strong as that of Blaine, and he talks as fluently as a college boy, bubbling over with reminiscence and anecdote. A tall man with a high forehead, a large, thin face, silky gray hair, and bushy red eyebrows, he emiles pleasantly while he chats, and when I mentioned Ben Perley Poore's article in the last Century on the "Capitol at Washington," he said he had read it, and commenced at once he said he had read it, and commenced at once to talk.

"I know Mr. Randolph," said he, "and often came in contact with him while he was here in Washington. But he was an austere man, cold and uncompanionable, and he fraternized but little with any one. His style was harsh.

"How do you do, Mr. Randolph, I am glad to see you. I passed your house the other day and had a notion to go in, but I did not."

"You did just right. Whenever you come by, just keep right on; I don't care to have callers.

"It was far different from that of Clay, who was one of the kindest men who ever came to Washington. Clay had a good word for everybody. To a man he would say, putting his hand upon his shoulder in a familiar way, I am glad to see you to-day; I saw your good lady at church yesterday. How is your family? To a woman, if he knew her, he would stop and shake hands with her on the street, and ask after her husband; and to a young man he would put himself on familiar terms, and advise with him as to his profession or plans for the future. Clay was a philan-

Living in New York.

It is too shamefully expensive here altogether. My advice to those contemplating coming here to live is not to come quite into the city.

The rents here quite take away all sense of comfort. You have to literally pave your path with gold. There is much talk about a possible tumble in the line of rents the coming May.

But the city is too full of people, and of money too, for that to happen. Yet some of the "flats" may be cheaper. In the region of Yorkville, where nearly half the immense new buildings are "flats," I think some will surely remain ne, for parties contemplating new homes in the great cities of the east, to settle either in Philadelphia or Boston. From these places New York is, of course, always easily accessible. The schools are better in those places, the society vastly better, and morals certainly ought to be infinitely better.

The reappearance of the star of Bethlehem is predicted by astronomers for this year or the next. On November 11, 1572, Tycho de Brahe discovered a star in Cassiopeia which equalled Sirins and even Venus, in brighiness

for a month, and then fell back into its for-nor a month, and then fell cack into its for-mer insignificance. Conjecture has sought to establish a connection between this ephermeral phenomenon and two similar apparitions in 1264 and 945. A not unnatural inference was that the same increase in volume of this re-markable star occurred before 945, which would bring us to about 630 and 310, and to the date of the nativity. The star is now due again.

Nature in Siberia.

"The history of animal and vegetable life on the tundra," says our author. "is a very curious one. For eight months out of the twelve every trace of vegetable life is completely hidden under a blanket six feet thick of snow, which effectually covers every plant and bush-trees there are none to hide. During six months of this time, at least, animal life is only traceable by the footprints of a reindeer or a fox on the snow, or by the occasional appearance of a raven or snow owl

where it has retired for the winter. For two months in midwinter the sun never rises above the horizon, and the white snow reflects only the fitful light of the moon, the stars or the aurora borealis. Early in February the sun only just peeps upon the scene for a few minutes at noon, and then retires. Day by day he prolongs his visit more and more, until February, March, April and May have passed, and continuous night has become continuous day. Early in June the sun just touches the horizon at midnight, but does not set any more for some time. At midnight the sun's rays are hot enough to blister the skin, but they glance harmlessly from the snow, and for a few days you have the anomaly unbroken day in midwinter.

"Then comes the south wind, and often rain, and the great event of the year takes place—the ice on the great rivers breaks up, and the blanket of snow melts away. The black earth absorbs the heat of the never-setting sun; quietly but swiftly vegetable life awakens from its long sleep, and for three mouths a hot summer produces a brilliant alpine flora, like an English flower garden run wild, and a profusion of alpine fruit, diversified only by storms from the north, which sometimes for a day or two bring rain down from the Arcticice."

Most novel readers have heard of the nau

first appeared between forty and fifty years ago. The first-named novel was edited by Capt. Marryat, and became very popular. On one occasion Mr. Howard received an anonymous letter requesting him to be at a certain spot twelve miles from London, and hes would hear of something to his advantage. He complied with the request, and the only satisfaction he received was the sight of a carriage and pair which drove away at his approach. Mr. Howard received a second letter, when the same result ensued. He vowed he would not be imposed on a third time. But his confidence was not again put to the test, as he shortly afterward received a letter containing Bank of England notes for £30,000! To the day of his death he never discovered the name of the mysterious donor. Mr. Howard married the daughter of the celebrated "Publicola," whose caustic writings contributed so materially to found the fortunes of The Weekly Dispatch half a century ago under the proprietorship of the lete Mr. Alderman Harmer.

stays in pursuit, caused the crowd to stop and jeer him. In a moment several of the bridge police ran up and endeavored to open a passage for those moving toward New York. As by far the greater proportion were moving Brooklynward, and as the path was already blocked for one hundred yards. this resulted only in making matters worse. Several men leaped to the railing and made violent gestures for the crowd to press toward New York. Further down, other men, misunderstanding the signals, wedged the throng toward Brooklyn. The result of obe dience to these two opposing counsels was a frightful crush where the pressures met, and the chorus of shricks, yells and oaths from those who bore the brunt, was horrible to hear. This state of affairs was maintained for ten or fifteen minutes. Then from the Brooklyn side came a concerted movement, which gradually overcame the pressure from the New York end, and the dense throng of half-stifled men, women and children was forced, inch by inch, crying, cursing, praying and yelling toward the staircase. Those on the outer edge clutched desperately at the railing, but the tremendous pressure tore them loose and swept them on with bleeding hands toward the next truss, at which they grasped in turn. Men struck out right and left at those who pressed against them; girls shricked themselves into hysterics; one old man plied his cane vigor-ously on all sides and made more than one head ache; a young wife shrieked at intervals not exceeding one second. for some one to 'Save me, Jimmie!' a drunken Irish woman scratched and bit like a frenzied cat at every face and arm within reach, and got soundly pummeled in return: a policeman vell ed himself hoarse as he swept along. and threatened innumerable heads with a club, which fortunately had been knocked out of his hand; a mother held her babe high above her, screaming vainly to men perched on the railing to take and save it; a little girl, crushed between two stalwart laborers, was by their combined strength lifted and held up, senseless and bleeding at the nose and mouth: and from every throat came frantic shricks of terror and agony, which added every moment to the excitement and made the danger worse. Several of those who attempted to climb upon or cling to the railing had their arms or legs broken, and one woman who had succeeded in getting upon the rail fainted, and would have fallen through to the street, 150 feet below, had not two strong men caught her by her ankles and so lowered her in safety to a beam, where they held her until assistance came. "Managing to reach the railing." climbed over it, and down the iron supports to the railway below. Then walked toward the staircase, and stood beside it, trying with others to urge men to lighten the pressure by coming over as I had done. The first I believe to fall on the stairs was a young girl with reddish hair. She shrieked, and sank down fainting. Two men in trying to lift her were knocked over her and trampled. Over these others stumbled, and, in a few seconds, men, women and children were lying four deep at the bottom of the staircase, and under the crowd. Men on the railings and on the driveway now directed their efforts toward stopping the movement toward the staircase, and shortly succeeded. Others dragged out those who were trampling the victims. A number of laborers ran up the drive from the tower, and tore away a portion of the iron railing which guarded the staircase, and then every man with free hands worked with a will to extricate the injured. The first to be lifted out was a boy perhaps ten years of age. His face had been trampled to a pulp, and, so far as I could judge, he was dead. A young woman, almost nude, was laid on the drive, and died almost instantly. A man about 35 was next. He was dead already. Several children, moaning and gasping, were handed out. A young woman with a broken rib protruding through her breast was carried across the track. She seemed to be lifeless. Altogether there were eighteen or twenty removed through the broken railing, over half of whom were dying or already dead. "The pressure in the center of the crowd. when the panic was at its height, was unbearable, and I am certain severe injuries were sustained by many who escaped the danger of the cision. St. Louis, Mo., June 4.-In the United States Circuit Court to-day, Judge Treat rendered a decision of importance to people in all parts of the United States, in which he refused to grant a temporary injuncion to the Washburn-Moen Company against a number of defendants, thus settling the great barbed wire fence controversy, on the ground that the Kelly & Glidden patents were void. Under these patents the Washburn & Moen Company claimed exclusive right to manufacture barbed wire of all kinds, or to grant licenses to other companies to manufacture the same under such restrictions as the W. and M. Company saw fit to impose. The decision rendered to-day is lengthy, and covers all points in the case, deciding against the monopoly and opening the manufacture of barbed wire to all companies. The subordinate question of the right to make or use the machines for making the barbed wire was also decided against the Washburn-Moen

Company. South Bend expects to have telephon connections with Chicago in a short Sleeping in a Reindeer Bag---Buffalo Robes no Good---Traveling Comfortably with the Thermometer Fifty Below Zero.

Regions.

I reached home on the 13th, the coldest weather I experienced on the trip being on the 13th, when, about two hours before sunrise, the thermometer indicated fifty-three degrees bolow zero. That day I made a journey of twenty-five miles, riding most of the way on a sledge, and at no time during that day did I feel uncomfortable, the highest the thermen eter reached being fifty degrees, and I might here say that I really enjoyed the whole trip. I attribute this almost wholly to the Esquima reindeer clothing and constant living in a snow igloo like the natives, where the temperature is never above freezinz and generally ten to fifteen degrees below that point. I do not be lieve-and my belief is confirmed by the written accounts of others-that any Arctic voyagers, housed in warm ships as their base and clad in the usual Arctic suits of explorers, could stand such a journey without more or less material Only once did I learn the lesson of caution. I took off my right mitten in attempting to get a shot at a passing reindeer, the wind blowing stiffly in my face, and the thermometer thirty-seven degrees below zero, when the persistent refusal of the frozen gun-lock to work perfectly kept my hand exposed much longer than I had intended. When I at-tempted to use it again it seemed paralyzed, and looking at it I noticed that the skin was as white as marble. Tooloosh, who was beside me, noticed it at the same time, and with an Innuit exclamation of surprise, hastily doffing both of his mittens, grasped it between his warm hands, and held it against his warmer body under his coo-le-tah, or Esquimaux coat. It soon resumed its functions, and although I felt for some time as though I was holding on to a horner's nest, I experienced no more serious results than a couple of ugly-looking blisters where the iron of the gun had come in contact with the bare hand. The reindeer escaped. As the reindeer clothing is the warmest in the Arctic, so it makes the warmest bedding, two large skins made into a long, coffin-PHACTS AND PHYSIC. Rattlesnakes weighing ten pounds and seven ounces have been found in the Santa Anna mountains.

An Australian physican, who has been going about the world examining insane asylums, says there is now less caped. As the reindeer clothing is the Walfinest in the Arctic, so it makes the warmest bedding, two large skins made into a long, coffin-like bag or sack, the hair side in, being a sufficient protecton in the coldest weather when in a properly constructed igloo. When the first severe cold came at North Hudson Bay I was sleeping under a blanket and two fine buffalo robes, which I found, as the thermometer sank thirty to forty degrees below zero, Fahrenheit, to be inadequate to secure comfort, until I secured a reindeer sleeping-bag, weighing not half as much, after which cold nights were no longer dreaded. The robe of the American bison seems under the least provocation to become damp, and then freezes as stiff as a piece of sole-leather. Once spoiled in this manner, it is difficult to try and restore it to its former pliability in the low temperature of an igloo. The furs of the beaver and muskrat I found to be equally unsuitable in our mode of life, and I believe that all the other furs of the temperate zone would have shared the same opinion if tested in the same practical way. violent madness and more melancholic insanity, with suicidal tendencies. than there used to be A war on mashers and street flirts s going on in St. Louis. youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and ienls nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vicor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dve, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate. agreeable, and lasting perfume.

Agreeable, and lasting pertume.

July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of Aven's Hair Vigor, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. Bowen, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HARR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruft. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used Ayer's Hair Vicon, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministors, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

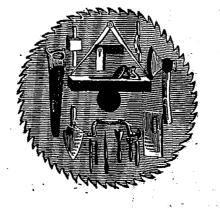

Mrs. O. A. Prescott, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. I'blinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER's Hant Vigor the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the Vigor, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

We work for no blue ribbon, No competition fearing; We rest our cause entirely upon The merits of the Deering.

We were the first to bind with twine, Perfection ever nearing; Old fogy machines got left behind, When farmers saw the Deering.

Probably no harvesting machine has stood so confessedly at the head of its class as the Deering Twine Binder stands to-day. Acknowledgements of its supremacy have come from all quarters, not merely from those who use them, but even competing agents and manufacturers are forced by their own convictions to confess its admirable qualities.

BUCHANAN, MICH., May 14, 1883.

B. T. MORLEY DEAR SIR-Having recently heard that it is being reported that you paid me a bonus to induce me to trade my Minneapolis Binder for a Deering, I take this opportunity to contradict the statement. The truth is, I was not at all pleased with the work of the Minneapolis Binder, nor its construction, and took pains to examine the different Binders in the market and became convinced that the Deering was as good or better than any other, and this conclusion led me to propose a trade to you and pay the large difference I have done. And if the Deering works as well as its construction indicates, I shall have no reason to be sorry for my trade.

FREEMAN FRANKLIN.

BUCHANAN, MICH., April 28, 1883. I notice that Wood & Samson publish, over my name, that I would not exchange my Minneapolis for a Deering Binder for $50. I never authorized such publication and you are at liberty to publish this to contradict such statement.

DAYTON, MICH., April 14, 1883. I have used two Deering Twine Binders. The first one, for some reason, did not work satisfactory, but the second one worked to perfection. The last day of harvest I cut 22 acres in about 9 hours. My fifteen-year old boy drove the most of the harvest and could handle the machine with ease, and I am satisfied that Mr. Deering and his agents will deal justly with their customers in all cases.

I bought the Deering Binder which John Marble condemned and it worked all right. There never was anything the matter with the machine, but the failure was owing to the inexperience of drivers. The expert sent here fixed it n half a minute after he got here, and I like the machine. I cut more after supper that day than I had done with my old one in all the forenoon. It is a light draft Machine and did not fatigue the team as much as light plowing WILLARD MARBLE. would have done.

The Deering Binder for 1883 does away with the plunger bolt and 20 other pieces, and substitutes a shaft and gear instead. Do not fail to see it. B. T. MORLEY, Agent.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Thursday evening, Jesse Susan, a sixteen-yearold son of Casper Susan of this place, was in I. N. Batchelor's livery stable and went into the loft to feed hay to a horse, when he fell through a hatchway to the floor, a distance of about twelve feet, striking upon his shoulders and back, receiving injuries to the spine which caused his death on Saturday morning.

A FRIEND of ours visiting Buchanan a few days ago, had an occasion to visit the cemetery of that place, and was highly delighted with the neatness and beauty of those sacred grounds and that great credit is due to the worthy sexton for his care and management of everything connected with the cemetery.-Niles Democrat.

A course of smooth-tongued chaps, with their wives, took in a number of the verdant of this place with some first-class solid silver goods, such as knives, forks, spoons, etc., "Ferry scheap." WE call attention to the advertisement of Dr. F. B. Brewer, on the second page of this issue. The doctor has for several years been a partner of Dr. V. As the warm weather approaches the members of the Jackass club congregate on the street corners as of yore, and by their presence there, and obscene talk make the people who have to go anywhere near them wish that the officers would run some of them in, or that someone would hit them with a brick or something.—St. Joseph Re-

THE following complimentary notice of Representative Fyfe is from the Detroit Free Press, the most prominent Democratic journal of the State. That the words of commendation are CHARLES F. CALDWELL, while plowdeserved no one acquainted with Mr. Fyfe will dispute:

> Representative Fyfe, of Berrien, has not missed a roll call of the House this session and has been absent only a brief time during one of the evening sessions. Representative Fyfe's knowl edge of parliamentary forms, his faithfulness and assiduity, and his affable demeanor have commended him very sincerely to his fellow members. If it should be that the next House has a Republican majority and Fyfe is reelected to it, his chances are most excellent to be chosen Speaker.

ONE HUNDRED TOWN LOTS FOR SALE CHEAP!

In Thresher's Addition to the Rapidly Crowing Village of Benton Harbor, Michigan;

A village where there are better stores, large stock of goods and more business than in any other town in the Southwestern portion of the State, and while in 1870 there were but 652 inhabitants, and the disaster to the Peach trees was closely followed by the money panic of '73, there has been a steady and healthful growth every year, 'til we now have over 2.000 people in the corporation, and more than 6,000 in the township; and in the village the cost of the new residences and business blocks last season was over $300,000, which promises to be exceeded this year. The population will double the present number in a few years. The title to these lots is absolutely perfect. Every lot has an alley, or side street. The lots are large, and the streets are the broadest of any in town, and many of them command a fine view of Lake Michigan, the two rivers, the shipping, railway stations, St. Joseph, and the business portion of the town.

Lots Sold on Monthly Payments or on Long Time. SPECIAL NOTICE!!

After July 1st the prices will be advanced ten per cent. If you want a beautiful home, in a thriving city, convenient to the best schools, steamboat docks, the depots of the Chicago and West Michigan railway, and the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan road which terminates here; or if you wish to make A PERFECTLY SAFE INVESTMENT, SURE TO RAPPIDLY INCREASE IN VALUE, COME TO BENTON HARBOR, examine this property and BUY THESE LOTS!

REMEMBER THIS INPORTANT FACT, namely: Contrary to what is true of nearly every other town there are but two ways for the expansion from the business portion of this promising young city, of the residence portion convenient to the business of the place, because the St. Joseph and Paw Paw rivers and the lake occupy the territory. In one direction the desirable lots, within convenient distances of business, are nearly all taken. In the remaining direction is embraced these lots now, for the first time, offered for sale. The day is close at hand when no desirable lots can be had except at inconvenient distances from the business center.

DON'T FORGET, that the nineteen Medicinal Springs at Col. Eastman's Park, and that are the wonder of the thousands who visit them, are within pleasant walking distance of these lots. REFLECT UPON THE FACTS,

That the healthful and mild climate of this lucious fruit-producing region, bordering the great lake, the deep waters of which so beautifully modify the climate here, both summer and winter; the certainty of large crops annually; the exceptional cheapness of fuel, timber and lumber; the immense water power here only awaiting capital to develope it; the unsurpassed transportation facilities—Lake Michigan don't consolidate or pool its earnings with any competitor—insure the development and growth of new manufactories, and the success of the important industries already established, far in advance of those in less favored sections of the country; and that being, as Benton Harbor is, within a few hours of Chicago, which is reached with no loss of business hours, at a cost of only $1.00, and while passengers are enjoying a refreshing sleep, is an advantage to business men and manufacturers of the highest importance.

YOU NEED NOT GO TO THE WILDS OF THE WEST, nor spend your best days as a PIONEER, sufference a thousand privations to gain a competency—a constant and heavily taxed contributor to the

COME TO BENTON HARBOR! Enjoy its pleasant society, superior schools and inviting churches, and sleep sweetly at night, because living in a civilized country, among a prosperous community, where TAXES ARE LIGHT, and where, though your property is protected by a steam fire engine and an efficient force that are paid for, there is neither Church-edifice, School District, Corporation, or municipal debt of any kind! Come to Benton Harbor and be happy, and MAKE MONEY FAST, by first buying and improving these fots, and then by prosecuting some one of the thousands of manufacturing industries that promise you a fortune at home!

CHICKAMAUGA

Gen. Longstreet's Account of the Great Battle.

The Turning Point in the Military Fame of Rosecrans .-- Where Thomas Stood Like a Rock -Polk's Delay---Bragg's Failure After Victory.

Frank A. Burr in Cincinnati Enquirer. * While riding over the field I learned a great deal about the battle from Gen. Longstreet that cannot be found in the books or in the military records. It is the most interesting as well as the most important matter I gathered. This story of Chickamauga would be incomplete without it Beginning with the causes and plans that brought him to this field Gen. Longstreet said: "During the latter part of the summer and early fall of 1863 Gen. Lee and I often talked over different plans for an aggressive fall camprign. I urged upon him the reinforcement of Bragg, and the superior chance of winning a decisive victory in the west. He did not approve of it, but decided to make another advance into Maryland and Pennsylvania. I was so much impressed with the idea of making an effort that fall to transfer the battle ground from the east to the west that I pyrote a letter to Mr. Seddens, secretary of war, giving my views in relation to such a movement. Shortly after this General Lee went to Richmond, and a few days after I received a note from him directing me to get my corps in readiness for another advance north, and also to have Hill and Ewell's corps prepared for the march. I replied to him that my command was ready, and that I had given the necessary instructions to Hill and Ewell to get their froops and transportation ready. In this letter I renewed the arguments that I had made to him personally against making another campaign into Pennsylvania that year. I urged that if he was strong enough to move north again, he was strong enough at least to act on The defensive where he was, and spare the reinforcements necessary to win a sweeping victory over Rosecrans. I presented to Bim the certainty of his having to withdraw from Pennsylvania on account of the lateness of the season at which he would find himself on Northern soil, even if the enemy did not drive him back. I also directed his attention to the fact that Rosecrans was pushing toward Georgia, and if he should succeed in marching through that state the Confederacy would be virtually dead. Afew days later I received a note in reply to mino, requesting me to get two divisions of my corps in readiness to move west. General Lee soon returned from Richmond to his headquarters, and we had a long, earnest talk over the effort to be made to force and win a great battle in the west; or I might say to transfer the battle ground of that year from Virginia to Tennessee, and even to the Ohio, if we were as successful as I hoped we would be. I expressed to him great concern lest Bragg should fail to follow up with energy any success we might gain. He replied that both President Davis and himself had anticipated this suggestion, and that orders had gone to Bragg that should he win a victory he must follow it np with great vigor. I was at General Lee's headquarters or he at mine every day during the short time it took to get Hood's and Me-Law's divisions of my corps, about 12,000 men, in readiness to move west by rail. After he had decided to send reinforcements he was much interested in the movement, and we talked about it more or less every day. Time and again he would say: 'General, we must have a great victory out there. The success of our cause depends upon it. We need only inflict one great disaster upon the Federal army to recover everything that has been

*The morning my troops were loaded on the General Lee's headquarters to bid him goodby. We had a hurried but earnest talk, shook hands and parted. As I walked out of his headquarters he followed me. When I put my foot in the stirrup to mount my horse he put one hand upon the animal's mane and the other enemy shoulder, and, looking me square in the face; said, with great earnestness:

"General, you must beat those people out

DREAKING THE LINES. I moved my troops into position for the assault with great care. I massed five brigades an column by brigades at half distance, and sentthem forward under the leadership of Hood In other words, Hood had my whole force, with the exception of Buckner's reserves, against the Federal position. I telt great inlerest in our winning the battle of Chickamanga. I had promised Gen. Lee that I would domy share toward gaining a victory here, and I never remember to have taken greater chances in a battle than in directing this charge against Rosecrans. He and I had graduated in the same class at West Point, and were friends in our boyhood and early army life. He was a good soldier and a good man. I have read in his report, as well as in the stories of this battle that have been written from time to time, that my success in breaking his line and in driving McCook and Crittenden from the field, is attributed to Wood's action in withdrawing his two brigades from the Federal line about the time I started forward to the assault. The success of my attack on Rosecrans did not by any means depend upon Wood's mistake. The number of men and the peculiar formation of the force that I sent against the Federal line in this battle, could, and would have carried any position except a strongly fortified one. The action of his subordinates and the movement of Wood in and out of the line may have made the victory easier, but Rosecrans' line could never have withstood the force of the assaults sent against it that day, no matter how well his plans had been observed or his order obeyed. Notine of battle outside of for allications ever yet successfully resisted the charge of troops in such numbers and formation. Our assaulting column was five brigades deep, each within, easy supporters distance. Hood led them with great spirit and gallantry. If one brigade faltered another was there to take its place. Thave been a soldier all my life; served in the Mexican as well as the late war sand I never yet saw a body of soldiers not protected by fortifications that could stand the onsets froops information such as Hood led against Rosecrans' lines that September Sunday."

Gen. Longstreet was riding up the Lafayette road discussing the various phases of this batof Wood in and out of the line may have made cent Longstreet was riging up the Larayette road discussing the various phases of this battle is he rode along. He was going toward the Suddgrass house; where Thomas had his headquatters during the battle, of Sunday, when he reined up his horse near a clump of trees by the road, and pointing a little distance of togen open space, said:

"There is where Hood-lost his lest. The battle was almost over then, and he had passed through the thickest of the fight unhurt. While we were making the final movements against Thomas he was shot. Generals Helm and Deshler were also killed late in the afternoon. The loss was heavy all day. There had been hard and continuous fighting ever since Polk began the attack. I might almost say desporate fighting nearly all day. It is impossible for me to recall a field in the history of wars that deserves a higher place in the records of armed conflicts than Chickamauga. It was a great a phenomenal battle, fought upon a field where the disadvantage of sight, of locomotion and opportunity for manoenver was greater than upon any battle-field I ever saw or read of."

We rode on a short distance further, when the General reinedy whis horse again, and a smile played oven his usually immovable countenance.

"There was an amusing incident occurred right here during this battle that you will enjoy," said he, turning to Capt. Howell "You remember Henry L. Benning, who used to be a judge on the supreme bench of Georgia. He was one of my brigade commenders, having a splendid brigade of Georgia troops. Steedman struck him with his two brigades of fresh soldiers while we were making our final movement against Thomas. He was agood soldier, but got very roughly used. I was sitting right here on my horse, when he came back in a sadly demoralized condition. He was riding an old artillery horse and urging it along with a piece of rope which he used as a whip. His hat was gone. He was greatly excited and the very picture of despair. He was looking for me, and as he saw me he rode up and said: "General, Gen. Hood is killed, my horse has been shot under me, and my brigade is gone. I have lost every man."

"General, don't you think you could find a sincle man?' I reolied.

been shot under me, and my brigade is gone. I have loste every man.'

"General, don't you think you could find a single man?' I replied.

"Yes, I suppose I might find one,' he said.

"General Bentling, this is Georgia soil; your home and mine. There is no better place for you and I to make a stand than on the soil of our own State. You go and find one man and come back here to me, and let us make a final stand together right here. My words and manner had completely restored his self-possession, and he rode away as fast as he could on the old artillery horse he had taken in the place of the finer animal that had been killed. In less than half an hour he rode back with his brigade reformed, ready for another charge."

THE FINAL ASSAULT.

"When did you begin to make the final move "After McCook and Crittenden had been driven from the field, and their troops had been pushed through the gap at Missionary ridge, I reversed Bragg's order of battle and wheeled to the right to envelope Thomas. The movements that followed my change of Bragg's-line of battle I gave you further down

I wish time and space would permit me to record all the details Gen. Longstreet gave of the battle here as we rode over the field. Not far from the place where he told the story about Gen. Benning we came upon the Dyer house, and stopped for dinner. This house was, late on Sunday, at times in the focus of the battle, and not far from it Longstreet formed his troops for the final attack upon Thomas. The few fields and the woods not far from the house still bear the scars of the far from the house still bear the scars of the fight. Here and there little stones have been erected to show where some officer or soldier fell during this conflict. At the edge of a pine thicket on the brow of a hill not a half a mile from the front of the house, a rude headstone stands, upon which is recorded the fact that sixty-four-Kentuckians are buried there. There are other evidences of the battle all round. Trees that-have been cut off by artillery shots or marred by musket balls. The Widow Glenn's house, then Rosecrans', head-quarters no longor stands, but there have been few other changes since those days. It is not far from Dyer's to the Snodgrass house, where, before dinner, we rode to inspect that and other portions of the battlefield. We easily found the little log house upon the hill, with shade-trees in front, under which Thomas had his head-quarters during Sunday's fight. General Longstreet took a seat on the little shelf made by the roots of a great oak tree, the largest in the yard.

"Treckoa Thomas sat on that very seat, General, the day you all were after him." said all Mr. Snodgrass as General Longstreet seated himself at the foot of the tree.

"Not many men would have held on here as Thomas did. There have been few, if any, more dramatic incidents in war than the stubborn stand of Thomas upon this hill. He was very badly whipped, and knew it, yet he took his chances of getting reinforcaments, or of holding on until the friendly dirkness would give him a chance-to escape. It was quite late, after Bragg refused to allow me to flank-his position, before our line was ready for the final assault upon him. Steedmanks fight with Benning delayed us somewhat, and it was nearly dark before we reached the vital point of Thomas' position. Night came on just as we fight. Here and there little stones have been assault upon him. Steedmarks fight with Benning delayed us somewhat, and it was nearly dark before we reached the vital point of Thomas' position. Night came on just as we did, and the darkness gave him an opportunity to slip away to Rossville, and Bragg did not have the spirit to follow him. Thomas' stand at Chickamauga was one of those grand incidents of war like leading a forlorn hope. An accident made it successful, but a man had to have great nerve to take the chances."

"Why did Bragg bring on the battle of the 19th with only 55,000 men when he knew that you were on your way to reinforce him, and ne would have 70,000 next day?"

"I do not know, and I have no opinion to express. That inquiry might be material if we had not won a complete victory on the 29th. As we were successful, the important question is, why Bragg did not obey General Leo's instructions, follow up and get the fruits of the victory?"

"When I urged him to do so, he said it was dark and dangerous, as the Federals had probatly only withdrawn to a new position. I visited him the morning of the 21st about daying the movements. He had lost much by testing over night, but might still have followed up his advantage with success. He saked me what I thought he had better do.

incht, and found him still in doubt as to his first movements. He had lost much by testing over night, but might still have following up his advantage with success. He saked me what I thought he had better do. I advised him, as he was doubtful as to the policy of following up Rosecrans, that he had better march toward Nashville, threaten or decroy his line of communication and leave the better march toward Nashville, threaten or decroy his line of communication and leave the better march toward Nashville, the agreed that this would be a good move and ordered his troops to march toward file capital of Tennessee. The most of his command had crossed the Chickamauga river and was pushing toward Nashville, when I hagg sent to me and said that he thought that it would have a good effect upon the southern people if it were known that his army was marching through Chattanooga with bands playing and banners flying in honor of the victory of Chickamauga; he, therefore, thought that he would turn back and march upon that place. I replied that I thought it would have a much better effect upon the Southern people if they knew that he was following up his victory by a flank movement on Roeserans, now he had lost his opportunity to crush him while his army was demoralized. A short time after this Bragg issued orders turning his army toward Chartanooga, and it was not long before he was ecupying Missionary ridge, and giving the Feleral commander an opportunity to combine all the force he needed to attack us at a dozen different points at the same time, if he desired, and defeat us in detail.

"It is due to the fliving and the dead that I should say that General Lee was very greatly disappointed that the result on this field was thrown away. He had agreed with me that after Geftysburg there was little hope for the "onederate cause, unless we could win a desire and overwhelming victory at some point. He had finally but reluctantly abandoned his plan to move back into Fonnsylvania that fall in order to fight a great battle in the Gents:—Upon the recommendation of a friend I tried Brown's IRON BITTERS as a tonic and restorative for my daughter, whom I was thoroughly convinced was wasting away with Consumption. Having lost three daughters by the terrible disease, under the care of eminent physicians, I was loth to believe that anything could arrest the progress of the disease, but, to my great surprise, before my daughter had taken one bottle of Brown's IRON BITTERS, she began to mend and now is quite restored to former health. A fifth daughter began to show signs of Consumption, and when the physician was consulted he quickly said "Tonics were required;" and when informed that the elder sister was taking Brown's IRON BITTERS, responded "that is a good tonic, take it."

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took Ayek's Sarsaparkilla, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your Sarsaparilla, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world.

Deaf Sir—I have thoroughly tried your "Worm Destroyer," and think it the best-femedy for Worms known. I have tried numberless other remedies for our three-year-old daughter with no benefit. She was failing so fast her condition became alarming. Having noticed your advertisement, I immediately purchased a bottle of your "Worm Destroyer." A few doses improved her health, and a few more restored her to her naturally healthy condition. All symptoms of spasms have comple ely disappeared. I should feel unsale without the medicine in the house. I have no objections to your using my name for reference, as I am glad to inform frightened mothers of so good a remedy.

Yours respectfully. LUDINGTON, Mich., Sept. 22, 1880.

cle. Certain old things are done away.

In the general reception room of the Western Union Telegraph building on Broadway, New York, are exhibited the coarse, crude and clumsy instruments of the infancy of the telegraph. They are only relies now. More perfect machinery has superceded them.

Years ago what is now styled the old-fashioned porous plaster did some good service. There was then nothing better of the kind. Now all that is changed. Science and sindy have gone deeper into the secrets of medicine and produced BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which embodies all the excellencies thus far possible in an external remedy. The old plasters were slow—the Capcine is rapid; they were uncertain—the Capcine is sure. Cheaper articles bear similar names. Be careful, therefore, that some thrifty druggist does not deceive you. In the centre of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE. Price 25 cents.

and most of the current diseases yield to its action. I have used it in the case of a delicate and dyspeptic young lady, with the most gratifying results. It seemed to accomplish with ease what the usual prescriptions and treatment for that miserable malady failed wholly to bring about. I am also glad to state that the Tonic has greatly relieved me personally of a troublesome atonic condition of the stomach of long standing. It is the ideal purilier and invigorant.

Messra, Hiscox & Co. call special attention to the fact that after April 16, 1883, the name and style of this preparation will hereafter be simply Parker's Tonic. The word "dinger" is dropped, for the reason that unprincipled dealers are constantly deceiving their patrons by substituting inferior preparations under the name of Ginger; and as ginger is an unimportant flavoring ingredient in our Tonic we are sure that our friends will agree with us as to the propriety of the change. There will be no change, however, in the preparation itself; and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of "Parker's Ginger Tonic" contain the genuine medicine if the signature of Hiscox & Co. is at the bottom of outside wrapper.

Troy, N. Y., April Sth, 1880.

Dear Sir:—Until within a recent date I had for several years suffered greatly from gravel, called by the doctors the Brick dust Sediment. For about a year past this sediment has not passed off in the usual quantity, but has accumulated, causing me untold pain. Having heard of "Hennedy's Favorite Remedy" I tried it in my case, and after using one and none-half bottles, I voided a stone from the Bladder, of an oval shape, 7-16 of an inch long, and rough on its surface. I send you the largest piece that you may see of what it is composed. Since then I have felt no pain. I now consider myself cured, and cannot express my thankfulness and gratitude for so signal a deliverance from a terrible disease. You have my consent to use this letter, should you wish to do so, for the benefit of other sufferers.

New England Making Them for All the Rest of the World in "Millions and Millions."

OLOTHES-PINS.

New York Sun. "Clothes-pins," replied the grocer, "three cents a dozen, or two dozen for five cents. No, we don't keep the kind that have little brass springs in them and snap together. If you want them you may find them at some hardware store. Groceries don't keep em. Where do I get this kind?' Why, from a man down town." The "man down town" said: The only kind of clothes-pin in general use now is the plain, old-fashioned cleft stick. There was a run, a few years ago, on that fancy sort with springs, but they have played out, and you hardly over see them now, except in dry goods stores, where they are frequently used to hold up goods for display, or in photographers' rooms to hold drying proofs. Teddy O'Flaherty's and Wm. H. Vanderbilt's shirts are both hung up to dry with the same sort of a cheap split stick to keep them on the line. Quantity consumed per annum? Bless my soul! How do I know? Millions of millions of 'em, I suppose. Why, there are a number of factories of them up in Yankee land; big estabishments that make nothing else, and they isiments that make nothing else, and they turn out—well, one up at Vanceboro, Maine, make them pretty much all the year around, I believe, at the rate of about 800 a minute. New England makes them for the world; sends them out by the thousand boxes at a time—sixty dozen in a box—to every country on the globe where people wear clothes and wash them.

George Alfred Townsend. New York state has a tenth of all the American people, an eighth of all the whites, and nearly a fourth of all the city or urban people. It is the second agricultural state, or only second to Illinois in farm products, leading Ohio $20,000,000. New York farms yield $10 an area. Illinois $8. It is the second harles state, the Illinois $8. It is the second harles state, the third cats and rye strict, the first buckwheat and hay state, and it raises one-fifth of all the potatoes and four-fifths of all the lops. It raises one-sixth of all the fruit, one-third of all the cheese, one-seventh of all the butter. It is the manufacturing state in the union, paying more than a fifth of the total wages. Its manufactures aggregate nearly $1,100,000,000. It still leads in ship-building, and owns a third of our marine. It holds a third of the registered national bonds. It produces a sixth of the agricultural instruments, one-third of all the bakery products, one-half of the men's clothing and two-thirds of the women's clothing, one-fifth of the foundry and machine-shop products, one-fifth of the furniture, one-third of the hosiery and late goods, a quarter of the jewelry, one-third of the beer and ale, half of the millinery and lace goods, two-thirds of the pianos, one-half of the paints, half the perfumery and cosmetics, one-third of the soap and candies, one-half of the refined sugar and molasses, one-sixth of the chewing and smoking tobacco and snuff, and one-half of the cigars. home, nor the impressions it made on me. I was quite a young man, and some business fell into my hands that carried me north. I had never been as far as Washington before, and of course I wanted to see what was there to be seen. I went into the senate gallery and took my seat. I could easily pick out the prominent men by the pictures I had seen of them. Pretty soon a question came up, and the presi-Pretty soon a question came up, and the president of the senate announced that Mr. Webster was entitled to the floor. Of course I was very much gratified that I was to hear him. He arose and began speaking in an ordinary conversational way. I think he took his smulf occasionally. He never made a gesture from the time he opened until he closed. I thought it all sound doctrine, but I was convinced that I knew a dozen college boys who would have beaten him speaking. The next morning I picked up a paper. There was his speech headed: "Mr. Webster's Great Speech on the Finances." Pshaw, I thought, they don't call that a great speech, do they? I saw another

"Yes; I suppose a good clothes-pin of straight wood, carefully handled, would last a life-time. But who is going to be careful of a thing that only costs five-twenty-fourths of a cent? And there are a good many of them cross-grained and liable to split if Biddy jams them down a little too hard on the line; and they are convenient to light fires with if a girl is in a hurry and the kindling wood is in the cellar; and they are liable to be dropped in the back yard and tramped in the ground; and they are handy to shy at cats on back fences; and, in short, if you'll tell me where all the tons of little brass pins made every year go to I'll try and tell you what becomes of all the clothes-pins. How are they made. Yes, I guess I can tell you that.

"The woods of which they are made are of white birch and beech, good for this use, but for not much else, I believe. The logs are sawed off into lengths of sixteen and twenty-two inches. The latter are sawed up into little boards to make the boxes for packing the pins. The shorter lengths are sawed into strips of suitable thickness for pins by gang-saws that make a block into strips quicker than you could say Hohokus. Then a gang of three saws cut off the strips into five-inch lengths. Each pin is now just a squared block, about five inches long and three-quarters of an inch square. In this shape they are fed out of troughs into automatic lathes, each of which turns out eighty rounded pins per minute. With equal rapidity the knives of a slotting-machine, set to work like a circular saw, but out the sloping 210t of each pin.

minute. With equal rapidity the knives of a slotting-machine, set to work like a circular saw, bite out the sloping alot of each pin. When this is done they are thoroughly seasoned in drying-kilns. The next process is polishing. Forty bushels of them are tossed together into a revolving drum, where they make each other smooth by their friction, and to finish them a little tallow is thrown in when they are almost done. That gives them a nice glossy surface. After all that they are packed in boxes—five gross in a box—by girls, and are ready for the market."

way, the total prime cost will be about £231,000 for six and a half miles of tramway, the cost of buildings, rolling stock, electric plant, engines, law, parliamentary, and engineering expenses. He says also that the electric car is able to ascend a long, continuous hill of about one and a half miles in length, and with a gradient of 1 in 85, drawing a second car behind it, and work as readily and as well at a distance of two miles from the generator as adjacent to it.

Alexander Stephens on Webster. I shall never forget my first trip away from Rinances." Pshaw, I thought, they don't call that a great speech, do they? I saw another paper. There it was again, headed Mr. Webster's great speech on the finances. I went to Baltimore. There they had Mr. Webster's great speech on the finances. I regioned Pkiladelphia and everybody was talking about Mr. Webster's great speech on the finances. I got to New York. There everything was in a ferment over Mr. Webster's great speech on the finances. It was the same way in Boston. So I concluded that it must indeed be agreat speech. It put me to thinking, and I made unmy mind that it was not the way same, and anything, but what he said made finance or action.

Winkle, letting such companions as came along make his society and mislead his life, and see him now without much greater mental growth except experience, a subject of pride or envy, a national candidate for two great or envy, is national candidate for two greats offices at once, and his self control unsuspected and his pecuniary honesty unchallenged, I feel like saying: "Accursed be him who sets the bottle to his brother's lips!" Rather let it be said: "A loving and beloved wife is beyond all treasures."
