mouth turned up, expect a storm. Cats have the reputation of being weather-wise, an old notion which has given rise to a most extensive folk lore. It is almost universally believed that good weather may be expected when the cat washes herself, but bad when she licks her coat against the grain, or washes her face over her ears, or sits with her tail to the fire. As, too, the cat is supposed not only to have a knowledge of the state of the weather, but a certain share in the arrangement of it, it is considered by sailors to be most unwise to provoke a cat. When a cow stops and shakes her foot it indicates that there is bad

THURSDAY, NOV. 8, 1883. The summary of election returns as received up to this morning, show Republican victories in Massachusetts. Minnesota, Nebraska and Connecticut. Republicans are in working trim in New York and Pennsylvania, each of which States elected accidental Democratic governors last year, by overwhelming majorities, giving the Republicans a majority of 24 on joint ballot in the New York legislature, and leaving Pennsylvania among the surely Republican States. In Virginia the fight was between Mahone and the Democrats, in which Mahone was defeated. The most important victory scored by the Democrats was in Mississippi. They carried that State. Municipal elections were held in Chicago and Detroit, with honors about equally divided. The Democrats are a little ahead in Chicago, and the Republicans

Guiteau's Ghost.

Warden Crocker, of the Washington District Jail, says he is not yet free from the Guiteau business. Often some cranky prisoner in the jail de-clares he saw Guiteau in a vision, and a night or two ago a prisoner confined in an adjoining corridor of the same wing in which the famous assassin was caged created a commotion in the jail at midnight by shouting that he had just seen Guiteau. He could not be induced to think he was deluded by a temporary aberration of mind, but maintained that Guiteau came into his cell and stood for some time, so frightened the occupant that he was speechless for awhile. He still sticks to the story, but the jail authorities still say that he is only one of the many cranks who have become temporarily insane in the jail by brooding over the crime and punishment of the assassin.

Every train from the north is ferighted with the carcasses or saddles of from three to a dozen of these beautiful and inoffensive animals. Hunters inform the Courier that the forests are fairly alive with parties in pursuit of deer, not only from this ing slaughtered deer, and in many instances only the saddles are saved, the remainder being left to rot upon the ground or to furnish meals for other wild animals,. It is no exaggeration to assert that unless the legislature of Michigan comes to the rescue with some practical legislation to prevent this wholesale slaughter, that in five years there will not be a deer left alive in the forests of the lower peninsula of Michigan.—Saginaw Courier.

OUR COMMERCE WITH HAVRE. It is time for us to return to Havre, since we wish to study the city in its commercial as well as in its picturesque aspect. In its commerce with the United States of America Havre holds the second place, Liverpool being first. She imports more of our wheat, corn, cotton and other products than does London, Hamburg or any other transatlantic port, with the single exception I have mentioned, and it is not impossible that she will soon surpass the great mart of the Mersey in the importance of her American trade. Certainly the rapid growth of her commerce is a favorable omen for the future, and it is a growth far more rapid than that of the commerce of her English rival. In 1836 there were entered from foreign ports at Havre 524 ships with an aggregate measurement of 150,000 tons. In 1878 the entries were 3,230, with an aggregate of 1.886,100 tons. For how long must Havre progress at that ratio to outstrip every other port of Europe? More than 300,000 bales of American cotton have entered the port in a single year, with 100,000 barrels of petroleum, and 2,000,000 bushels of grain. And, like Oliver Twist, Havre is looking for more. The demand for our products exceeds the capacity of the port to handle them; when the facilities are multiplied, the trade will grow accordingly. In spite of her enterprise in m v ways, Havre is very conservative in oth er things, and hesitates at progress. Notwithstanding her large trade in grain, she does not, at the time I am writing, possess a single grain elevator. Ships are unloaded, just as they were 300 years ago, by men and women carrying burdens on their backs, and the process is necessarily a slow one. -Thomas W. Knox, in Harper's Maga-

There is serious meaning in this expression. That wearied step, languid eye, and general feeling of lassitude come from "sickness." CHRONIC DISEASES A SPECIAL STUDY FOR YEARS.

SCOTT & BROWNFIELD.

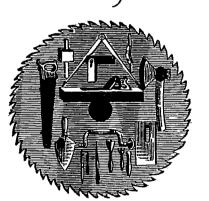

Has made Chronic Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Heart, Stomach, LiVer, Kidneys, Blood and Nerves,

DR. F. B. BREWER

A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, ignorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively and has had his many years of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in his opinions and reasonable in his charges. Those who are afflicted are invited to call, investigate and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing to do so. Address all letters to F. B. BEEWER, M. D., Lock Box 350, CHICAGO, LUL. ILL.

THE CENTURY PROGRAMME FOR 1883-'84.

PROGRAMME FOR 1883-84.

The programme for the fourteenth year of this magazine, and the third under the new name, is if anything more interesting and popular than ever. With every season, This Century shows a decided gain in circulation. The new volume begins with November, and, when possible, subscriptions should begin with that issue. The following are some of the features of the coming year:

A New Novel by George W. Cable, author of "Old Creale Days," etc., entitled "Dr. Sevier," a story of New Orleans life, the time being the eve of the late Civil War.

"Life in the Thirteen Colonies," by Edward Eggleston, separate illustrated papers on subjects connected with the early history of this country. Three Stories by Henry James, of varying lengths to appear through the year.

The New Astronomy, untechnical articles by Prof. S. P. Langley, describing the most interesting of recent discoveries in the sun and stars.

A Novelette by H. H. Boyeson, author of "Gunnan," etc. A vivid and sparkling story.

The New Era in American Architecture, a series of papers descriptive of the best work of American architects in Public Buildings, City and Country Houses, etc. To be profusely illustrated.

A Novelette by Robert Grant, author of "Confessions of a Frivolous Girl," etc., entitled "An Average Man,"—a story of New York.

The Bread-winners, one of the most remarkable novels of the day, to be completed in January. "Christianity and Wealth," with other essays, by the author of "The Christian League of Connecticu," etc., on the application of Christian morals to the present phases of modern life.

Caasting About the Gulf of St. Lawrence, a series of entertaining articles, profusely illustrated. Scenes from the Novelists, Hawthorne, George Ellot, and Cable, with authentic drawings.

On the Track of Ulysses, the record of a yachtenise in the Mediterranean, identifying the route of Ulysses on his return from the Trojan war.

"The Silverado Squatters," by Robert Louis Stevenson, author of "New Arabian Nights."

THERE was a little plan concected this week to relieve the jail at Berrien Springs of its burden. Three twentyday drunks from Niles, whose term of confinement had expired, were liberated Tuesday, when they came directly to this place and bought a set of tools, the jail, by a long pole, through one of the narrow windows, so that the prisoners could get them through the grating. With these they cut a hole in the floor of the jail yesterday morning, through which two came out and three others started, when they were discovered. The two were immediately given chase and captured on the James Graham farm. It would seem that the $600 that the Board of Supervisors gives to agricultural societies, or some other $600, might have been profitably invested in making that jail burglar proof, instead of having so much trouble catching the jail birds the sec-

WIDE AWAKE for 1884 will be like that of previous years, the best juvenile magazine in the market. Published by D. Lathrop & Co., Boston, for $2.50 per year. The corps of contributors includes a large number of the best juvenile writers in the country, who give their young readers good sense to entertain themselves, instead of a supply of hobgoblin balderdash, such as is usually dealt out to young people. If you have a child who can read, you can find no better entertainment for him for the money than to subscribe for Wide Awake. Subscriptions will be received at this office.

ONE of the most happy occasions of the season in Buchanan was the marriage of Dr. M. M. Knight, of Saginaw City, well known here, and Miss Emma J. Smith, one of Buchanan's favorite young ladies, which occurred at the M. E. Church on the evening of October 31, Rev. C. G. Thomas officiating. After the ceremony the invited guests, to the number of about one hundred, repaired to the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Smith, for a pleasant evening with the young couple. The new family was started on life's journey with the following tokens of regard by their many friends:

Horse-Racing in India. (Cincinnati Enquirer.)

Racing in India is both good fun and good sport. There are two classes, first and second class, and there are races for four breeds and races where all come together. There are Arab races, races for English bred horses, and "Walers," as the Australian horses are called English horses have to give weight, which always raises a growl, as they are never really fit in that stewy climate. The second class races are generally the best fun, as everybody one knows has something, even if it can only go on three legs, entered. The subaltern has his charger, and the competition wallah, and sub-collector's buggy horses are for the nonce transformed into race "coudries," as the natives call a race-horse.

And no winner of the Derby ever received such attention as the old buggyhorse does for about two months before the "meeting" comes off. His stable is carefully littered, he has a nice morning gallop, and is then scraped down and his old broken-down legs swathed in clean bandages and new sheeting, with the owner's initials blazoned thereon, carefully pulled over his weary old back; and after breakfast the owner and his friends, all with the inevitable straw in their mouths, stroll over from the bungalow, and Mary Ann is led out and carefully punched and felt all over. and her chances for the Maiden stakes duly discussed. Of course, the owner must say to Sipkins, of the 107th dashers, "Look out for her heels!" as if the dear old lady had a kick left in her. And then the sun comes out hot and strong, and they return to the bungalow, to long armchairs, brandy and soda and cheroots, the proud owner of Mary Ann backing her against the field all round for R.s 100, which she has about as much chance of winning for him as the chair he is sitting on.

The Night Shooter. [Forest and Stream.]

In the Adirondacks once came a remarkable episode in the annals of the night shooter, but which is true to a word. We had paddled barely 200 yards from where I killed a deer, when we heard another one walking among the grasses at the head of the lake. The moss-covered log rustled through the rushes, with the weird half-circle of light spreading shoreward with each sweep of the silent paddle, and again the white outline of the deer seemed to grow out of the gloom ahead. Splurge! splash, it is walking toward us. Now it stops, and in the full glaro of the headlight we see a beautiful, fat doe, her coat beginning to assume the blue tint of the winter covering. With head outstretched, she gazes earnestly at the lantern, while we sit silent and admiring in the impenetrable gloom en-shrouding the dugout behind the light.

After satisfying her curiosity, she turns to feed, and the canoe steals upon her. Now she is watching her shadow, cast by the light on the lily pads and grassy water. Another quick stroke with the paddle, and I prod her in the ribs with my gun. At the first punch she stood like a beautiful statue. At the second—I would stroke her with my hand, but I fear she, waking from her astonished trance, would kick over our dugout in her terror-she gave one great bound, causing our log to oscillate violently, and showering us with cold spray, and then we heard her bounding up the hill.

Magic Vegetation. [Felix Oswald's Letter.]

The boxes seemed to be filled with a sort of gray loam, but presently a green film appeared upon the surface and swelled like a mass of rising dough, till it divulged into a multitude of yellowish-green sprouts. The boxes were then handed around. The vegetable sprouts were apparently some sort of legumina, perhaps Chinese garden peas, but the substratum was less easy to define. It was of a pale chocolate color, viscid, and about the consistency of half-melted tallow. To say that the germs grew visibly would be an exaggeration; but in the lapse of ten minutes their growth from one-third to threefourths of an inch could be ascertained by actual measurement. That their progress was not due to a mechanical expansive force could be implied from the circumstance that the leaf buds unfolded as well as uprose. It was clearly a case of vegetable develop-ment, accelerated by some unknown stimulant.

"To say the truth, I am myself unable to explain it," the professor replied to another leading question; "but from the hints of my adepts I can imply that much, that the solution of the riddle would throw a new light upon the secret of creation."

A Financial Law. [Arkansaw Traveler.] "And you won't pay me?"

"Yes, sir, and I've got the money."
"Oh well, then, you needn't pay me.
I didn't think you had the money. It's when a man ain't got it that we want him to pay. As long as you've got the money keep it, but when you find yourself without means remember that I must be paid."

Biscuits and Griddle-Cakes on the Double-Quick.

[Chicago Herald.]
There was a novel trial of speed on the farm of James Lawton, near Carrollton, Mo., during the recent harvest.
At 6 minutes and 10 second the reaper stood at the corner to the reaper stood at the reaper sto few feet along the line of grain ready to seize an armful as it fell from the reaper, and to rush with it to the thrasher close by. The mill was just sixteen rods distant. At the drop of the hat the mules sprang to work, and in a minute and a half about a peck of thrashed wheat was in the sack and on a horse that began a race for the mill. A minute and seventeen seconds later the flour was delivered to Mrs. Lawton, and in 3 minutes and 55 seconds from the starting of the reaper the first griddle cake was eaten. In 4 minutes and 30 seconds from the starting of the reaper a pan of biscuits was passed out to the spectators.

The Secret Out.

[Exchange.]
At some of the western fairs this year a "great secret' is sold in sealed envelopes at 10 cents apiece. The following is the secret: "Never buy an article before examining it. If you had known this before you would not have paid 10 cents for a worthless envelope when you could have got a dozen good ones for the same price."

How a Lig Made a President.

Roston Globe. 1 About this time in knots about the sunny corners and around depots and hotels, when political stories are in order, you will occasionally hear some old stager remark that "a pig once made Andrew Jackson president." It was never my fortune to meet one who could remember how it came about, but in a copy of The American Traveler for December 19, 1828, being volume IV., No. 50, I find all the particulars, which I copy for the benefit of the Society for the Perpetuation of Old Stories. It appears that away back in the early dawn of the nineteenth century, in the town of Cranston, R. I., Mr. Somebody's pig smelt a cabbage in a neighbor's garden—he rooted through the fence and demoralized said garden—the garden owner sued the pig's proprietor-James Burrill was the prosecuting attorney—the prosecuting attorney was a candidate for the United States senate—the senator was chosen by the state legislature—in that body there was a tie, occasioned by the absence of one of Burrill's party, who stayed away on account of the lawsuit aforesaid the said tie was unravelled by the casting vote of the speaker in favor of Burrill's opponent, Jeremiah B. Howell-Jeremiah voted for the war which James would not have done-the war was made by a majority of one in the national senate—the war made Gen. Jackson popular-that popularity gave Jackson the presidency.

The Landlord's Verdict.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.] Actors are proverbially interested in the criticisims uttered upon their performances. An amusing story in regard to this is told of the elder Mathews, who upon one occasion played "Richmond" to a friend's "Richard III," and, as they were both good fencers, they fought the fight at the end with uncommon vigor, and prolonged it somewhat unnecessarily.

After the performance the two stars lighted each other to their inn, in the hope of liberal applause from the landlord, to whom they had presented a ticket. But, though thus handsomely treated, their host sat silent, and even when invited to join them in a glass and smoke, he maintained the same attitude of absolute quiet, till at length, finding that every circuitous approach to the subject was hopeless, Mathews attacked him with the direct question. "Pray," said he, "how did you like our acting?" This question so put was not to be evaded. The landlord looked perplexed, his eyes sought the ground. He at length slowly took his pipe from his mouth, drained his glass, went to the fireplace and deliberately knocked the ashes out of his pipe, then, looking at the expectants for a moment, he exclaimed, in a deep but hasty tone of voice, "Darned good fight," and left the room.

English Art Progress.

[Jos. Hatton in Harper's Magazine.] Art schools have sprung up all over the land; Lambeth has competed with Worcester, and both with the great potteries of the continent; Durham and Kidderminster have vied with the carpet looms of Brussels and the hand-weavers of Persia and Turkey; Birmingham and Sheffield have sought to perpetuate classic models in their metal wares; Manchester, Bradford and Belfast have consulted the best schools of design and color for their textile fabrics; the illustrated newspapers have given the cottage and the nursery artistic substitutes for poor German prints; famous draughtsmen have adorned the fairy tales and fables of youthful literature with characteristic forms of beauty; the painter has left his garret among the London chimney-pots; and once more English architects and builders are erecting English houses in which all that was useful and picturesque in "Old Kensington" and Anne" styles is restored and adapted to our greater knowledge and better sanitary skill, and more or less idealized through the impulse of the reac tion that has set in against whitewashing church-wardens and the other Goths and Vandals of the interregnum now

Church Property in Gin Palaces. [Demorest's Monthly.] Canon Wilberforce is calling the attention of the people of England to the great revenues which the Established church derives from its gin palaces beer houses and even more disreputable establishments. Of course, the dignitaries of the Episcopal church did not originally invest in this kind of property, but in the leases they negotiated for long terms of years, the houses were sub-let for disreputable purposes. A recent investigation shows, however, that a very large portion of the revenue of the church comes from these unhallowed resources. The agitation of this matter will hasten the day when there will be a separation of church and state in England.

Fred Pouglass' Parents.

[George Alfred Townsend.] He frankly says he did not know his father, or who he was. "He is shrouded," says Douglass, "in a mystery I have never been able to penetrate. Slavery has no use for either fathers or families. My knowledge of my mother is very scanty, but very distinct. She was full and finely proportioned, of deep black, glossy complexion, had regular features, and among the other slaves was remarkably sedate in her manners. We were separated when I was but an infant, and, of course, before I knew my mother from any one else. I remember her only in her visits to me on Col. Lloyd's plantation, and in the kitchen of my old master. Her visits to me there were few in number, brief in duration and mostly made in the night. The pains she took and the toils she endured to see me tells me that a true mother's heart was her's, and that slavery had not paralyzed it with unmotherly indifference."

The last time he ever saw his mother she walked twelve miles after her work to see him, and found that he had had no food since morning. She gave him a sweet cake shaped like a heart, and he went to sleep on her lap and awoke in the morning to find his mother gone forever. "The heartless and ghastly form of slavery," he says, "rises be-tween mother and child even at the bed of death. I was not allowed to visit her during any part of her long illness. I learned that she could read and that she was the only one of all the slaves and colored people in Tuckahoe who enjoyed that advantage. How she acquired this knowledge I know not. Her grave is as the grave of the dead at sea—unmarked, and without a stone or [Milwaukee Wisconsin.] "So much has been said of late reduring heavy storms," said Lieut. Stamm, of the revenue cutter Andy Johnson, "that many people are led to believe it reduces a curling, smashing sea to a liquid mound. It does not exactly flatten things about just in that way, but its use causes good results, there is no doubt of that. And speaking of oil in water reminds me of the wonderful 'oil spot,' a freak of nature that I believe was never fully described. "The 'oil spot' is situated about ten miles south of Sabine Pass, into which flows the Sabine river to the gulf of Mexico. The river forms the boundary between the states of Louisiana and Texas. The 'oil spot' extends two miles along shore and seaward about three-quarters of a mile. A storm from the northeast, by way of east to southeast, has a rake of from 300 to 700 miles across the gulf of Mexico into this mystic haven. During a gale this spot is wonderfully defined. Looking seaward, the scene is grand. An acre of towering foam marks the abrupt dissolution of the lashing seas as they thunder towards the shore. This occurs in about three fathoms, or eighteen feet of water, from which the storm-driven craft, creaking and straining in every timber, emerges and suddenly finds herself reposing like a child rocked in its mother's arms, hemmed in by a wall of wrath, where the weary mariners can be lulled to rest by the roar of the winds. The place is termed the 'oil spot,' not from any known analy sis of its nature, but simply from its condition; it has no troubled water. It is to be hoped that some scientist will unfold its wonders."

The Preacher of the Future.

[Christian at Work.]
. We believe the preacher of the future will never rustle the leaves of his sermonic manuscript in the pulpit, or read off from the written page his invitation to sinners to forsake their sins and become reconciled to God. And we believe this will be accomplished, not by writing the sermon and then committing it—which is simply burning the candle at both ends-but by a return to the practice of the times when written sermons were unknown. This method involves one's saturating himself with his subject-clothing a thought here and there in particular form if he please—and then delivering his sermon after the fashion of the great orators and speakers. Webster pronounced spontaneity to be one of the chief characteristics of true eloquence. We believe it to be reasonably characteristic of the powerful sermon as well as that it is almost wholly lost sight of in the close reading met in so many of the pulpits to-day.

Life in a Big City. [Detroit Free Press.] The New York Hour wonders that so many people want to live in that city. Four small rooms, 100 feet above the ground, it says, 'divided amongst a family of six or eight, command a higher price in this city than a cheerful three-story house with two large bathrooms, back kitchen and back stairs in Baltimore or Philadelphia." Then the nuisances seem almost in-tolerable. There are "the constant rumble of the elevated railways, day and night, the tinkle of horse-cars, and flies, musquitoes, and the odors of public and private stables." What is equally peculiar is that the large mass of these people are too restricted in their means to partake of many of the pleasures of the city. They do not begin to have the spending money of those in a city like Detroit. Corrupting Shakespeare. [St. Paul Pioneer Press.]

to-Hand Encounter. [San Francisco Cor. Enquirer.] Every soul on board crowded to the sides to witness the duel. It was bound to be war to the death. One or both of the combatants must die. The brute was what is known as a right shark, and was about thirteen feet long. His black and shining back set with sharp fins, made me shudder and grow deathly

Ubukia met the first rush of the monster by darting aside and letting the huge hulk go by him. He made a lunge with his sword at the tail as it whisked past, and a thin line of blood on the clear water told that his aim had been a good one. While the shark was near he swam with half his body out of the water, taking good care that his legs were never much below the surface; but when it went by he dropped to the neck and looked up at us with a grin on his coffee-colored face.

"Me kill um!" he shouted. The next rush was similar to the first, but this time, when the white belly showed itself, Ubukia was beside it We saw the point of his sword-blade enter its right eye, and then the native dived, coming up thirty yards away.

I began to breathe easier now. The fellow carried himself in the water with as much ease as the fish itself, and his sword gave him an advantage, while the shark's inability to use its jaws without turning over was another point in his favor. The fish seemed to be fairly mad dened by the last wound, and we could see its dorsal fin ripping through the water for a second, and then it went down out of sight, leaving nothing but the Kanaka visible on the wide stretch of water. If the sight of the monster was horrible, how much worse was its disappearance! We did not know upon what side of the devoted swimmer it would come up, and we held our breath, waiting as one waits when a diver has been under water for a long time, and every minute seems an hour.

and he kept whirling about like a teeto-tum, ready to meet the attack at any point. After the lapse of a few minutes the familiar fin came into sight again, and Ubukia's body rested with his eyes on the enemy. There was no rushing on the shark's part now. It advanced slowly, ready to swerve with the slight-est motion of the native. It seemed determined to approach him so slowly that its momentum could not possibly carry it past him. He waited until its muzzle was not ten feet from him, and then, assuming the aggressive, he darted forward, buried his blade to the hilt in its eye, and then swam leisurely to the ship.

For ten minutes the water within a radius of 500 yards was lashed into a white foam by the dying struggles of the monster. At times he would throw himself completely out of the water, showing us the whole of his round tapering body and ugly mouth. Finally, however, he rested belly upward with-out a motion, and Ubukia's face glistened with pride.
"Good," said he, climbing into his canoe, "me kill um." Wholesale Cremation.

[Chicago Herald.] When the Belgian chemist M. Creteur was charged with the purification of the battlefield of Sedan, he was compelled to resort to cremation in order to dispose of the heaps of half-covered bodies. Not one case of illness occurred among his 250 workmen, though they were at work under a blazing sun. After the battle of Worth and Gravelotte and the two sieges of Paris the bodies of the slain were cremated, and none of the usual contagious disorders occurred. In Russia, after the retreat of the grand army, corpses were burned wholesale, and later, before Paris, 4,000 were cremated with a similar avoidance of bad effect. It is said if a similar method had been adopted in Egypt the cholera would not have broken out at Damietta.

As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume. MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O. July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced failing out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of Aver's HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. Bowen, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "Ayen's Hair Vigor is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

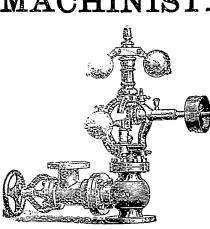

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which flecting time procureth, I have used AVER'S HARR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

Mus. O. A. Prescott, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestoon, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR Vigor the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the Vigor, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonia's to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skepti-

she Endures the Pain of a Severe Surgical Operation Without Taking

(From the Courier.) Mrs. Schoonmaker, of Creek Locks, Ulster C., N. Y., had the misiortune to entirely lose the sight of one of her eyes, through an accident, and endured painful inflammatory action therein for two long years; the other eye finally becoming sympathetically affected, her general health seriously suffering; indeed she was a mere wreck, a walking skeleton. In this terrible strait she consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told her at once that the injured eye must be removed. Sh · quietly but firmly said: "All right, Doctor, but don't give me chloroform. Let my busband sit by ny side during the operation, and I will neither cry out or stir." The work was done and by the friction. "How much is this?" the elderly lady asked.

the poor woman kept her word. Talk of solthe poor woman kept her word. Talk of soldierly courage! This showed greater pluck than it takes to face a hundred guns. To restore her general health and give tone and strength to the system. Dr. Kennedy then gave the "Favorite Remedy," which cleansed the blood and imparted new life to the long-suffering woman. She rapidly gained health and strength, and is now well. The "Favorite Remedy" is a priceless blessing to women. No fumily should be without it. Your druggist has it. If not send to Dr. David Kennedy, Rondout, New York.

Climbing the Spiral Stairs.

"Yes," she said. "our children are married and gone, and my husband and I sit b, our winter fire much as we did before the little ones came to widen the circle. Life is something like a spiral staircase; we are all the time coming around over the spot we started from, only one degree further up stairs."

"That is a pretty illustration," remarked her friend, musingly, gazing into the glowing coals which radiated a pleasant heat from the many windowed stove. "You know we cannot stop toiling up the hill, though."

"Surely we cannot, and for myself I don't find fault with that necessity provided the advance in life is not attended with calamity or suffering, for I have had my share of that. Not long since my health utterly broke down. My system was full of malaria. My digestion became thoroughly disordered and my nerves were in a wretched state. I was languid, ate little, and that without enjoying it, and had no strength or ambitton to perform even my light household duties. Medical treatment failed to reach the seat of the trouble. The discuse—which seemed to be weakness of all the vital organs—progressed until I had several attacks which my physicians pronounced to be acute congestion of the stomach. The last of these was a desperate struggle and I was given up to die. As the crisis had partially passed, my husband heard of the merits of PARKER'S TONIC as an invigorant in just such cases as mine. I took it and left its good effects at once. It appeared to pervade my body, as though the blessing of new life had come to me. Taking no other medicine I continued to improve, and am now in better health than I have been for a long time."

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—, as he entered his house, which was situated in a copy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of colic. If the sympletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPOINE PUROLS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn," added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steam ing tea which his wife had just poured for him. Dr. E.— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapidly increasing use of Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acis efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the center. Price 25 cents. Two ladies, one elderly, the other young, sauntered to a counter in Tiffany's, New York, and asked to see some pocket match safes. "Of any particular kind, or at any special price?" the salesman inquired.

"No. We want to select one from the prettiest you have," the young lady re-

The salesman showed several bronze with raised designs in silver. One of the designs was a cluster of small growing daisies and a bug hovering over it. The salesman pressed a spring, the top flew open, there was a crack and a flash, and a wax match stood bold upright ignited. The hinge on which the lid worked was perforated, and by a peculiar spring the match immediately beneath the perforation was thrust through it and ignited

"Twenty-five dollars, madam." "Oh, mamma," the young lady said in an undertone, "I don't care to get a match safe so cheap as that for him." "Let me see some other designs," said the elderly lady. She was shown some more in copper, with raised letters and monograms in silver, and at about the same price. The young lady shook her head negatively at these, and also at some beautiful safes of fine tortoise shell with silver clasps.

"You can have initials of silver or gold on these," the salesman remarked, and on these of alligator skin." But none of these was satisfactory, and the salesman brought out another saying: "These range from $50 to

The most expensive one was a safe of gold beaten and lumped so that it ooked like rich ore. A diamond sunk in one of the lumps indicated the posi-tion of the spring. The cheapest was a beaten silver with a ruby. From the lot the young lady selected one in beaten gold, with burnished gold designs and a small diamond. It cost $125. A man looking through the entire lot would have undoubtedly selected that in copper and silver first shown as the most tasteful and practicable.

Josh Billings' Methods. ["Cornwall" in Inter Ocean.] I was traveling recently in New England when I dropped into a scat, one-half of which was already occupied by a man whose appearance would attract remark and observation under the most ordinary circumstances. He wore a broad-brimmed hat of felt. It was so large that it required a big head to carry it off. But the head was big, the eyes bland and benevolent, though in speaking he contrived to withdraw them under bushy brows, and hold them there twinkling until you had laughed at his witticism, when his whole face relaxed and you laughed again at the extraordinary transformation. This was Mr. Shaw as Josh Billings, our Yankee Rochefoucauld, who is a constant oasis and well-spring of wit in a great American desert of "alleged" humor. "I have written for seventeen years without missing a week for one story paper," he said in the course of a conversation. "I am nothing but a paragrapher, and acknowledge what I can't put in two lines I can't express at all. I have, finally, after a quarter of a century, whittled down all philosophy, all wisdom, and all ignorance into the paragraphs of Solomon, in which he acknowledged himself a plagiarist. "There is nothing new under the sun. The most a man can do with a thought is to sharpen an end of it so it will go in easier. There is no possible addition that can be made to the world of ideas. poor fellow picks it up and goes to whittling and sharpening again.

"I have to catch my ideas on the run.

If I don't they will get away. I put them down in this book, sometimes twenty a day." The book looked like a grocery or a bank book. It answered for the latter for Josh Billings' paragraphs are worth a dollar apiece. "I see you have drawn lines over several pages," I said: "are those condemned or useless jokes?" "No sir. I never correct anything after it is on paper. Those have been 'run off, copied off, I mean, and sent to the

[New York Herald.] What the treasury people fear in the future is that their paper issued may by duplicated by the means employed by the photo-lithographers. It is possi-ble with the aid of photo-lithography to duplicate every line of the most skillful and intricate engraving. This fact was brought to the attention of the department not long ago.

The statutes forbid any imitation of the currency of the country for the purposes of advertisement. This is not generally understood. A New York brewer recently devised a business card in the shape of a plate with several bills of different denominations lying upon the plate, being held down by a gold and a silver coin. He had employed regular bills as the models for the work, and the result is absolutely startling. What portions of the bills that show in the careless piling are absolutely perfect. They were re-produced by photo-lithography and then colored exactly like the originals. The plates were all seized, and the brewer notified that he was a violator of the law, although his intent was innocent.

This discovery has set the officials to thinking. With the right kind of paper any skillful photo-lithographer could get up millions in a very short time. To guard against the danger and to provide means of detecting such counterfeits are as yet unsolved problems. Pumping Out the Sea. The Dutch at one time thought of pumping out the Zuyder Zee, and asked Mr. Bookwalter, of Ohio, for an estimate for turbine wheels to be worked by the tide. They wanted 100 tur-bines, which would have cost $2,000 each. The work may yet be done. The total outflow of all the mineral waters of France is estimated at 10,334 gallons per minute. Kow Pretzels Are Made.

[Cleveland Press.]
Pretzels are made of the best yeast dough, such as is used in bread. The dough is rolled into a wide plastic expanse, a piece is cut off and rolled into long cylinder about the diameter of a bologna sausage. Then the strips are cut into sections about three inches long, tapering off at each end. Seizing each end of this section of dough with the thumb and forefingers the pretzel baker crosses his hands, presses the ends of this section into the middle of the mass, and lo! the pretzel is shaped. Then it, with a dozen or more of its fellows, is dropped into a kettle of boil-ing lye, from which they are fished in less than half a minute. That half a minute, however, suffices to give them that brown cast of countenance and crisp texture which makes them so agreeable, while just enough of the lve clings to them to improve their flavor.

Pretzels are said to be aids to digestion, the lye that remains on them stimulating the gastric juices. As soon as the pretzel is taken from the lye it is sprinkled with salt and baked rapidly in a very hot oven. The steam pretzel differs from the regulation German cracknel (for the word pretzel means cracknel), in that it is made of cracker dough, and after being boiled in lye, backed and placed in a box, is dried by steam. The soft pretzel is not a durable commodity. Indeed, it becomes inedible after two or three days, while the hard steam pretzel is as imperishable as hard-tack, and is a delicacy even at the mature age of six months.

By the Mississippi overflow of last year Louisiana claims to have been damaged to the extent of $60,000,000. A possession of honesty by some peo-ple makes us think of a blacksmith with a white silk apron on.
