DOLLY'S DESTINY

"I shouldn't be surprised any day. Dolly, to see David Wiggin tying his bony, to see David Wiggin tying his horse at your gate," said Mr. Blount, roguishly, gathering up the reins.
"Nonsense, brother! Anything the matter with his own hitching post?", retorted Miss Dolly turning in the doorway. Mr. Blount laughed. Everybody felt bound to laugh at Miss Dolly's crisp sayings that had kept her friend in good humor these forty years. "And when David does call on you, pursued Mr. Blout more scriously, "I do hope, Dolly, you'll give him his chance to do his errand. That'll be no more than fair, and the man won't be easy until he has freed his wind."

"What mischief are you the forerunner of now, James Blount?" cried Miss Dolly, about like a soldier on drill. "What facing upon earth have I to do with David's errands?"

"Well, his wife has been dead a year or more," said Mr. Blount, suggestively, shutting one eye, and squinting with the other down the length of his whipstalk, "and lately he has been asking about you. You can put that and that together to suit yourself." "Fiddlesticks!" exclaimed Miss Dolly, energetically.

"I sha'n't say have him or don't have him—though there isn't a likelier man living than David—but I do say, Dolly, you ought to give him a hearing." and having convinced himself beyond a reasonable doubt that the whip was all right, Mr. Blount tickled his horse with it and drove away.
"Oh, my sorrows!" ejaculated Miss Dolly, closing the door with afflicted countenance, and sitting down so quietly for once that a photographer might have copied her then and there. Not that he could have done her justice, for her expression was too quick and varied to be caught by a trick of chemicals, and without it Miss Dolly's physiognomy would have been rather characteriess but for her prominent Roman nose. This organ gave tone to her face. By which I would not be understood literally, as saying that she talked through a nasal whine. I mean simply in a metaphorical sense, this bald feature spoke loudly of ener gy. And Miss Dolly had abundant use of energy—else why the nose? Every two years during her childhood she had been tiptoed into the east bedroom to see a new baby, till at her mother's death, five little brothers fell The Stevens Separator, apron to her charge to be coaxed and scolded into manhood. "You can't bring up those boys," groaned a dolorous aunt. "They'll run square over you, Dorothy Almeda." "Let them run over me so long as it does not hart them!" laughed Miss Dolly, skewing her flaxen hair with a goose-quill and tying a calico apron over her calico longshort, preparatory to "bringing up" said youths.

From that day forward she went cheerily on, making the best of everything, though it must be confessed she often had odds and ends to work with, as people usually do have who are born with a faculty. Somehow she found time for all her duties except matrimony. If that were a duty, it was one she wouldn't and couldn't attend to while her father and children Plows, Harrows, Scrapers, and a greater needed her. Divers young men thought variety of Plow Repairs and Shovel this a great pity, among them David

Plow Blades than anybody else in this "Don't be silly, David!" said Dolly, when he hinted as much to her; whereupon David went off and married Olive Searle, the plainest looking girl in the parish.

David was again wifeless, and again the current of his thoughts turned toward Dolly, who still lived at the old homestead at the foot of Bryant's Falls. Her father had died some months before. Of the boys, James and Ezekiel had settled on neighboring farms and the remaining three had gone west. David's benevolent heart warmed with compassion as he remembered Dolly's lonely condition, and he felt that it would be exceedingly kind in him to offer her a home especially as he owned as good a place as you can find on the river, while the Blunt cottage was falling into decay He wouldn't let her formal refusal tell against her, for as he looked back, he couldn't really see how she could have married any one at that period. She ought to be rewarded for the devotion she had shown to the family, and, for his part, he felt magnanimous enough to give her a second chance to accept him. Such was the worthy widower's state of mind when he asked

"'Fly like a youthful—'" struck in a wheezy bass.

The sun bonnet tipped back like a cart-body. "Sakes alive!" cried Miss Dolly, not in the words of the hymn, as Mr. Wiggin strode toward her on his slightly rheumatic legs.

"I didn't mean to put you out," he laughed, shaking hands heartily; "but it seemed kind o' nateral to take part with you in 'Invitation.'" "You always had a way in falling in at the most heard of time, I remember," retorted Miss Dolly, saucily, re-covering herself and going on gathering catnip.

"You used to say I kept good time, only too much of it," pursued Mr. Wiggin, with a sudden inspiration; "but I tell you what, Dolly, time never did drag with me more than it does these

"It is a dull season," said Miss Dolly with exasperating simplicity. "I suppose the grashoppers have eaten most of your wheat—haven't they—so it'll hardly pay for reaping?"
"Just so," assented Mr. Wiggin dis-

He had not traveled five miles in the heat to discuss the state of the crops. "Wald in ane sit down, won't you?" said Dolly, with reluctant hospitality. Her apron was crammed to its utmost capacity. She devoutly wished it had been larger.

"Well, yes, I don't care if I do," answered Mr. Wiggin, after a hypocritical show of hesitancy. "I had a little business further on at the blacksmith's. No hurry, though, as I know," and he turned to let down the bars for Miss Dolly who meanwhile slipped through the fence, catnip and all. "Bless my heart! I don't see but you are as smart as you ever was," said he admiringly, as he puffed along in her wake. "Still you must be getting into years, Dolly, as well as I—no offense, I hope—and I was wondering whether or no it wasn't lonesome for you living here a woman so?"

"Oh, I never was one of the lone some kind," responded Dolly, briskly, seating herself in the patchwork cushioned rocking-chair, "and for that matter hardly a day passes without some of James' folks running in."

"Yes, I know; but if you were to change your situation, wouldn't you enjoy life better, think?" Miss Dolly, fidgetted at the green paper curtain, and intimated that her happiness would be complete if the grasshoppers would stop feeding on her garden sauce. "That's just it," continued Mr. Wiggin, eagerly; "you do seem to need a man to look out for your farming interests now, don't you, Dolly? a man that will be ready and willing to do for you, and make you comfortable?"

"I don't know," said Dolly, dryly.
"The year father died I did have Silas

Potter, and he is the most faithful creature living; but what with the extra cooking and washing I had to do for him, my work was about double, and when mud-time came. I was glad to send him off and hire by the day.

I made up my mind that men folks ored by others, or be happy. around the house cost more than they come to." "I guess we don't understand one another," said Mr. Wiggins, slightly disconcerted at this unflattering view of his sex. "I wasn't speaking of hiring help, Dolly. Naturally you would get tired of that. It's worrving to a woman. But if you was to have a companion, now-one that could give you a good home, with wood and water under cover—"

"Shoo! shoo!" cried Miss Dolly, flying out after an inquiring chicken on the door-step. Mr. Wiggins drew his red handkerchief from his hat to wipe his glowing face. Certainly he had not felt the heat so bad through haying. "How's your health, now-a-days? asked Miss Dolly, frisking back with a look of resolute unconsciousness. "Very good! Remarkable good! I don't know where you will find a man with a tougher constitution than I have got."

"Ah!" and Dolly blushed like a sumac in October. "Yes, I'm well." pursued Mr. Wiggin, persevering, "and I'm tolerable wellto-do, with nothing to hinder my maraying again, providing I can see a woman to my mind." "There's the deacon's widow," suggested Dolly, officiously; "she's pious, economical—' "She's left with means enough to carry her through handsomely," interrupted Mr. Wiggin, quickly. "Now I'd rather have a wife to provide for-one that needed a home. In fact, Dolly, I have my eye on a little woman I want this very minute." He had both eyes on her for that matter, and Miss Dolly was forced to recognize the situation, whether she accepted it or not. "I've managed to sweeten my tea so far, David, without calling upon my neighbors," chirruped she, stooping to lay straight the braided mat, "and I might as well keep on. I don't feel it a tax as some folks would. But there's Martha Dunning, she's having a hard time to get along. Why don't you take her, David? She'd appreciate such a nice home as yours." "It would seem as if most any woman might," said Mr. Wiggin in an injured tone; "all finished off complete, painted out-side and in-" "She'd be delighted with it-I'm sure of it!" broke in Miss Dolly, with an air of conviction, as she darted into the kitchen to lift the boiling kettle from the crane. "But you don't mean that you won't marry me, Dolly?" pleaded Mr. Wiggin, anxiously following her to the door. 'I have been doting on seeing you at the head of things at my house. "Martha is a good manager," said Miss Dolly, coolly. "David needn't think he can buy me with a new set of ping down the lid of the pug-nosed teapot. "I never did have the name of being croping."

"I tell you, Dolly, I won't have Martha. I don't like her turn!" cried Mr. Wiggin testily balancing on the threshold, yet not daring to step over it. Dolly gave her undivided attention

Be Independent and Helpful. It has been well said that there is nothing in the wide world that secures success so completely as does perfect independence. People who are always waiting for help may wait a long time, as a general thing. A little assistance, a little influence, is not to be had by asking, but there is always something one can do himself. Do it, whatever it is, with a will. If a young lady don't sit still and hope a rich man will marry you, while your aged father toils for your daily bread. Learn how to help yourself, and take care of yourself as much as possible. Rather be one who does things for others, than one who must have things done for you. Two hands, two feet, sight and strength—these ought to enable you to dispense with help while you are young and vig-

Men who can defy adverse circumstances, and can earn a living in any quarter of the world in which they are dropped down; who can roll up their sleeves and set to work at almost anything that offers; and who can even sew on their own buttons and make themselves a cop of tea when deprived of the help of woman-kind, are the ones who are really independent. The most helpful women are the kindest and the truest; and as for a man, never trust him in any capacity if he has not within him the true spirit of independence, without which neither strength nor sweetness may be hoped for. In the battle of life there is but one way to succeed-fight it out yourself. Give the helping hand when you may. Take it, if in some sore strait it s offered freely, but never ask for it Be independent as far as man may be, if you would honor yourself, or be hon-

What an Egg Will Do. For burns and scalds nothing is more soothing than the white of egg, which may be poured over the wound. It is softer as a varnish for a burn than collodion, and, being always at hand, can be applied. It is also more cooling than the sweet oil and cotton, which was formerly supposed to be the surest application to allay the smarting pain. It is the contact with the air which gives the extreme discomfort experienced from the ordinary accident of this kind, and anything that excludes the air and prevents inflammation is the thing to be at once applied. The egg is considered one of the best of remedies for dysentery. Beaten up slighty, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends, by its emolument qualities, to lessen the in-flammation of the stomach and intestines, and, by forming a transient coating on these organs, to enable nature to resume her healthful sway over a diseased body. Two, or at most three eggs per day would be all that is required in ordinary cases; and since egg is not merely medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise and the quieter the patient is kept the more certain and rapid is the recovery.

The Three Wishes. A gentleman, while sitting at the dinner table with his family, had these words said to him by his son, a lad of eleven years: "Father, I have been thinking, if I could have one single wish of mine, what I would choose. "To give you a better chance," said

His father suggested to him that fame, power, riches, and various other things, are held in general esteem among men. "I have thought of all that," said he; "but if I have a good character and good health and a good education I shall be able to earn all the money that will be of any use to me, and everything will come along in its right place. A wise decision indeed, for a lad of that age. Let our young readers think of it and profit by it.

That a girl who decks herself in the latest things out and parades in the street while her mother does the washing, isn't worth wasting much love on. That a fellow who deliberately pro-

Never lose an opportunity of reminding your husband that they do not bear the slightest resemblance to any member of your family. (This will been him.) of your family. This will keep him from fancying that they take after you. It is very necessary when a business man comes home after a day of harrassing care and continued struggles with powerful competitors that his mind should be distracted from such subjects. The best way to accomplish this is to spend the evening telling him about the incapacity and impudence of your servants. Always keep the love-letters your husband wrote you before marriage in a well-locked iron box in the darkest corner of the attic. Nothing puts a man in such a temper as to stumble across his former effusions and read a few pages of them. Some men under such circumstances have been known to kick themselves down stairs and be seriously injured. Always be in some far-away part of the house when your husband comes in and let him hunt you up. If he finds you in the lumber room covered with dust and dirt, slashing around with a wet cloth in your hand, he will know that you are faithfully doing your 'dooty." The disease is caused by a microscopic fungus which infests the leaves and stems, and is washed down by the rains till their spores reach the tuber, which they cause to decay quite rapidly. The disease is contagious, A correspondent of the Farm and Garden says he no longer poles his Lima beans, but uses brush for them. A liberal supply of manure is placed in deep plow furrows; mixed thoroughly with the soil, and seed dropped every four inches in rows three and a half feet apart. When well up the plants are bushed with heavier stuff than for tall peas. The vines having reached the top of the support are pinched in, which repression results to the advantage of the crop. By this method he gets a larger product from a given space than in the old way, and has a smaller surface to hoe.

A good shepherd dog, when properly trained, will drive cattle or sheep much more carefully and with much less worry to the animals than the ordinary boy; but when a careless boy and a worthless dog are set to chasing them, look out for trouble. Three chalk eggs are better than a single nest egg, and they appear to like large ones better than small ones. Pullets will commence laying earlier when nests and eggs are plenty and when other hens are cackling around them. Those persons who have been warned against lotteries and still persist in "trying their luck," had better be careful how they proceed, for, as is wellknown, there is a penal clause attached to the law against lotteries, which directs the imposing of a fine of from one hundred to five hundred dollars upon any one who knowingly deposits or sends by mail any letters or circular pertaining to lotteries. The Louisville exhibition, which closed last Saturday, has had an excellent influence on the city and its people. One of the things that the south has most needed has been intercourse with the outside world, not only as an educator and source of development of latent enterprise, but as an active agent in polishing off local prejudices and old pro-slavery ideas. The exhibition has taught the Louisville people by its exhibits, by its crowds, by its hints as to the ways of making money, and by its refining influence in making them value art and music. Already there are plans on foot to establish an art gallery and a cotton mill-two th ngs that show an awakening of difterent kinds of forces, yet each in its way sure to urge the city nearer to an ideal urban life. To cast aside narrow ness, to welcome every hint that will advance learning, wealth, true culture. and to aid in uplifting a once degraded race and to make it part of the potent life of the republic are parts of the general effort of the south to improve itself. Louisville plans also a musical festival in the spring, is anxious to have a national convention meet within its limits, and already speaks of another exhibition as a necessity. In some localities such activity is a matter of course, but in Louisville it is a

Those who are objecting to the use of railroad passes by "chief hired man" Begole, after professing great desires for reform in the use of railroad passes by officials, lose sight of the others of the same party who were elected on the same pledges, and because their constituents thought them pass proof. Those who had the least conscientious scruples gave the lie to their professions made before election, and accepted and used all of the passes offered. Others refused the passes and asked for mile coupons, while still others borrowed of their neighbors. The reform representative from this district says people must be fools to think that members are going to pay ther fare in riding back and forth between their homes and Lansing. The people's greatest display of foolishness was when so many of them placed faith in the truthfulness of the pretenses of these reformers before their election Reform of the reformer is necessary.

The New York World, in a long article on the overbearing, arrogant disposition of the Southern bourbon, as evinced in the recent campaign and election in Virginia, when every slight difference of opinion between this egotistical stock who believes that God took special pains with the clay from which he was made, and the negro, was made the incentive of a mob, in which the negro and as many others of his color who were unfortunate enough to be near were invariably shot down, advises the negro to fight. The bourbon knows no argument but the shot-gun, and the World advises the negro to meet his argument with the same kind until he gets enough of it, and either desists or moves to a more congenial clime. These same bourbons have been twenty years promising reform and howling because the bloody shirt has been flung at them, but do not change their actions in the least. Whenever there is a Chalmers or Butler to elect or a Mahone to defeat, the shot-gun is brought to its work and the negro suffers.

Brace Up. There is serious meaning in this expression. That wearied step, languid eye, and general feeling of lassitude come from "sickness." Be assured, a serious, and perhaps fatal, disease is close in its wake. The system wants cleansing of impurities: the sluggish blood needs to be sent in swift and clear currents through the veins. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" will do this: it will give new vigor to the body, brightness to the eye, a glow to the countenance, and elasticity to the step. One dollar a bottle. For One Year.

A Michigan Newspaper FOR MICHIGAN READERS.

Republican in its Political Principles, and Devoted to the Public Interest.

Unrivaled in every department of News and in Accurate and Comprehensive Market Reports.

Its various editions are now read weekly by more than 150,000 people. In our Literary department we shall furnish the choisest of reading matter, both in prose and verse, original and selected. The paper will be kept pure in character, elevated in tone, and in sympathy with the best moral sentiment. in character, elevated in tone, and in sympathy with the best moral sentiment.

The HEARTH AND HALL provides an admirable medium for exchanging views upon home subjects, and is especially devoted to topics in which the ladies are interested.

The AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT is under the charge of an experienced and practical agriculturist, and is invaluable to all tillers of the soil in Michigan, all its articles being expressly prepared for them, and especially adapted to their wants. In short, no effort or expense will be spared in making The Post and Trabune the most attractive, best arranged and most complete FAMILY NEWSPAPER ever published in Michigan. No Paper Published in Chicago or Elsewhere

Can begin to compare with The Post and Tribune in the fullness and variety of news of all kinds especially needed and desired by the people of Michigan.

The Presidential Year of 1884 Is at hand. Republicans must bestir themselves if their political supremacy is to be maintained in the State and Nation. There is no such certain means of inculcating sound Republican doctrine and convincing men that duty and interest combine in urging them to support the Republican party and its candidates as the wide circulation of

A Good Republican Newspaper.

For this reason we urge our friends everywhere to see that the WEEKLY POST AND TRIBUNE has the largest possible number of NEW SUB-SCRIBERS. Its circulation ought to roll up to 100,000, and can reach that figure if the proper effort is put forth. That such an increase would help powerfully to give the Republicans of Michigan an assured and glorious victory in this state next year there can be no manner of doubt. We confidently appeal to every good citizen, to every earnest Republican, to aid us in this good work. It will pay. Nothing shall be acking on our part to make THE POST AND TRIBUNE worthy of the confidence of every citizen of Michigan, whose present interests are ours and whose inture we expect to share.

About sixty million copies of The Sun have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months. gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all The Suns printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House square to the top of Mount Copernicus in the moon, then back to Printing House square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But The Sun is written for the inhabitants of the earth; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of The Sun during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading, night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

The Sun is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without tear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which therefore believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1881. It you know The Sun, you like it already and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know The Sun, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

Blood and Nerves, A special treatment for years. He is not a boastful, iguorant pretender, but an educated physician, seeking to do good, by devoting his talent and energies to the treatment of a class of maladies that have been with him a long and patient study. To be able to treat successfully chronic diseases it requires that a physician should be a sound, thorough scholar in the art of science and medicine generally. He should give his entire time to their study, be thorough in his investigations and have a long and varied experience. Dr. Brewer claims to work no wonders or to do any more than any well educated physician can do who devotes his whole time to the study and treatment of chronic diseases exclusively and has had his many years of experience. For years Dr. Brewer has visited the places he now visits, and has obtained his reputation by being honest in his dealings, candid in his opinions and reasonable in his charges. Those who are afflicted are invited to call, investigate and decide for themselves. It will cost nothing to do so. Address all letters to F. B. BREWER, M. D., Lock Box 350, CHICAGO, ILL.

Shall We Let the Child Die?

A hard-hearted political economist, looking at a pale and puny child feebly gasping as it lies upon a pillow, says that the child might as well die. It is so weak and poor that its life will never be worth much anyhow. There are already a good many people in the world who are of not much account anyhow. And what's the use of adding to their number another weakling, who has but slender chance of ever amounting to anything?

Now ask that child's mother what she thinks about letting the child die. About this time the hard political economist had better get out of the way. "Let my child die? No! No! As long as there is a remedy to be found that will save that child, the child shall not die! I'll spend my last dollar to save the child!" Well, try a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters on that child. See the poor little fellow pick up strength. He revives. He will live. Hosts of other children have been brought almost from death to healthy life by Brown's Iron Bitters. Your druggist sells it.

MR. RANKIN makes it one of the requirements of the graduating class in the high school, that they be able to pass a teacher's examination, and obtain certificates. Consequently the members of the class were at work at the examination last Saturday.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID SALISBURY, of Bertrand township, celebrated the twenty-first anniversary of their wedding day by entertaining their relatives and neighbors to the number of about forty, at their home, Tuesday. They received quite a number of presents.

THE Fox family, which includes Mr. A. J. Fox, Mrs. H. J. Howe of Berrien Springs, and Mrs. W. O. Hamilton of this place, have discovered a bonanza in shape of a fortune of a million dollars, in Europe, connected with a very fair prospect of their getting it. We cannot wish them any worse luck.

THE camp fire by the G. A. R. Post, last Friday evening, was one of the most enjoyable entertainments had in this place for a time. The adaptability of the South Bend quartet club to such occasions made their music highly appreciated.

THE body of an unknown man was found on the beach about one-half mile north of St. Joseph harbor, Friday, accidentally drowned. It had the appearance of being that of a man about twenty-five years of age, and from a note found about the clothes, evidently belonged in Chicage. There were $68

PROF. JORDAN telephones that they have a new boy at his house, in Paw Paw. Weight, ten pounds and two ounces. Don't forget the two ounces. The Professor is very particular about that. With the additional editorial force there may be expected a general improvement in the Courier.

REV. J. H. WRIGHT gave an entertainment in the christain church Tuesday evening and again last evening, with the Stereopticon with calcium light. Mr. Wright has a fine instrument and his views are excellent. Owing to the inclemency of the weather his audiences were rather small both evenings, but all who saw the views were well pleased.

THE Cornet Band are arranging for a concert to be held in Roughs' Opera House, next Thursday evening, from seven until nine o'clock, to be followed by a dance for the benefit of those who wish to partake of that enlivening amusement. The Niles orchestra have been engaged to take part in the concert, and furnish music for the dancing. A good time is anticipated. Go and enjoy yourself.

LAST week there was organized at South Bend a new railroad company, which was christened the South Bend and Buchanan Railroad Campany, and articles of association sent to the Secretaey of State at Indianapolis. This is the first tangible move in the direction of the extension of the St. Joseph Valley road. Full particulars will be made known as they develope.

AFTER this winter the RECORD proposes to do no more wood subscription business. It is not at all satisfactory, and we propose to do a cash business, so far as wood is concerned. The idea of paying $2.50 a cord for rotten slab wood and red oak knots, simply because it is to pay a subscription, makes a pretty full crop, and we want no more of it. There are a few who will pay an honest price in honest wood. but there are so many of the other kind that it takes off all of the charm.

ANNOUNCEMENT.-A series of meetings will be held in the U.B. Church. beginning Saturday evening, Dec. S, at 7 o'clock. These meetings will be conducted by the evangelist, Rev. J. R. Parett, assisted by the pastor, and as the sole object is the advancement of the Redeemer's Kingdom and the salvation of souls, all the friends of Jesus and his religion are cordially invited to be present and assist in the blessed C. W. PATTEE, Pastor.

BROTHERS-IN-LAW and outsiders to to the front Wednesday evening. The following named gentlemen with their wives, basket in hand, entered the M. E. parsonage unannounced, and after preparing a sumptuous supper, kindly inviting the parson and his family to partake with them, and then to molify the Rev. gentlemen, they presented him with a berutiful student's lamp. The names of the parties were Levi Redden, W. A. Palmer, H. B. Duncan, Ed. Howe, John Valentine, D. S. Brownfield. Many, many thanks.

C. G. THOMAS.

THE Recorder has figured up the cost to be $2,761.06, with a few items yet to come in, which will add $25 or $30 to the above figures. Notwithstanding the fact that the tax levy was no more this year than last, the present Council has paid for building the culvert, also an indebtedness of $500, and the ordinary expenses of the village without borrowing a dollar, which certainly speaks well for the good management of the finances of the village.

Mr. JERRY PAINTER, of Weesaw, had an experience with gas while stopping at the Massasoit House in Chicago, last week. After receiving instructions from the bell boy about how to manage the gas, he turned it off and retired. In a short time he imagined that he smelled the gas and got up to turn it off, thinking that he had left the jet partly open. Having done this he returned to his bed and went to sleep, to awake in a short time, feeling as if an elephant were rolling over him. He remembers trying to put on his pants and try to get out of the room, but when found he was lying on the bed, but it took several hours to resuscitate him. It is a strange phenomenon. Mr. Painter is a prominent Weesaw Greenbacker, and ought to be able to stand all of the gas there was in the city. It may be accounted for, however, by the fact that the city gas is not quite so thin as he has been used to indulging in.

As narrow gauge news is of interest in this vicinity we copy the following letter that appeared in the South Bend Register last week:

PAULDING, Ohio, Nov. 8, 1883:-There is a prospect for a narrow gauge railroad, called the Ohio River, Del-phos and Lake Michigan Narrow Gauge, and South Bend is aimed to be a point on the road. I will give a description of the line from South Bend this way: To Chillicothe, where it connects with the narrow gauge already built to the Jackson county coal fields There are coal fields in this part of the country, not reached by any railroad, which can be reached by branches from this road. The line from South Bend passes Wakarusa, New Paris, and keeping on the southwest side of the Elkhart river, to near Ligonier, thence crossing the river and also the Lake Shore air line, thence on the north side of the railroad to Kendallville, thence taking a southeast direction past Aubu n, Spencerville, Antwerp, Paulding, Delphos, Wapakonta, Degraft, Urbana. Card of Thanks.

At a regular meeting of Wm. Perrott Post No. 22, G. A. R., it was Resolved, That we extend a vote thanks to all who contributed toward the success of our first Camp Fire of the season, which was held at Rough's Opera House on the 16th inst., viz: The Buchanan Cornet Band; Wm. H. Marston, of Niles; Mrs. H. C. Rankin, of Buchanan; the Buchanan quartet, consisting of the Beistle Bros., Mr. John Mead and Miss Hulda Hahn; the South Bend male quartet, consisting of Cy. Trump, Henry Supy, Wm. Pavy and D. W. Gillen, who so generously contributed their services, which added largely to our musical part of the entertainment, and was fully appreciated by all who were fortunate enough to have heard them; we also extend our thanks to comrade Major S. Wells for his eloquent opening address of the Winter Campaign; and to comrade H. C. Rankin for his interesting ren.iniscences of the Battle of Chickamauga also to Mrs. Maj. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Lyon, Mrs. Geo. Merrill, Mrs. J. F. Barmore, and to comrade Beistle, for services rendered in the Commissary Department. M. B. GARDNER, Post Commander.

Furthermore, there is a dependent family who must have food and raiment. The taxes will demand payment; and many other unforeseen expenses to be provided for. Of course, there is a class of persons who will behold "milof constructing the culvert at Day's lions" in every passing breeze, but many a farmer will rise, on Thanksgiving morn, with a heart filled with

Nov. 19, 1883. Wind and all sorts of weather for a week past. "Old Probabilities" must have been kept busy watching his "glass." Many of our farmers wish it might warm up and remain so until the corn husking be finished. A very pleasant party of young people spent Wednesday evening last at Mr. William Denn's. A part of the evening program was the presentation of a very nice Bible to Mr. and Mrs.

Denn, by the young folks. The many friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Snavely assembled at their pleasant home, on the 12th inst., to remind them that fifteen years ago they had plighted their faith to go through life "as one." The occasion was a very pleasant affair, indeed. Children's day was very much enjoyed by the little ones, on Saturday last, at the Grange Hall. Two of our best young men, Martin L. Becker and Jerry Neaterer, have gone to Valparaiso to attend the Normal School the coming winter.

Our young friend Will Owen has gone to Liberty, Kansas, to take up his abode with a cousin living there. Jno. M. Ober goes to Oberlin, Pa., to-morrow, his former home. He goes to assist his father who is postmaster there. We wish him success in his new calling. Aunt Mary Shaffer lies at her son Urial's quite ill, caused from cold and over-exposure while on a visit, recently, to Pa. We trust she may soon recover her usual good health and spirits.

THE ARCADE W. A. SEVERSON, One Price Clothing House, BUCHANAN, MICH.

[ Taos (N. M.) Letter in Inter Ocean.] Archeologists say that the Taos, or, as they are generally called, the Pueblo Indians, of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona, are of the same race as the Aztecs of old Mexico. This seems very probable. The two people have many points of resemblance. Their appearance is the same. They both build their houses of mud; and their habits of eating and drinking are nearly identical. In New Mexico the largest pueblo is that of Taos, situated at the northern end of Taos valley, and having a population of some five hundred Indians. The other pueblos of Santa Clara and San Juan are located on the banks of the Rio Grande, and are further south. How long ago the Taos pueblo was built no one knows. To all appearances it has existed for thousands of years. It is as scarred and baked as hard as any of the monuments of Egypt, and it is certain that when the Spaniards visited New Mexico in 1540 they found this pueblo looking the same as once only have the Pueblo Indians shown any hostility toward the whites; that was in 1847, when they joined forces with the Mexicans and attempted to defend their village against the forces of the states.

At Taos are the ruins of an old cathedral which was demolished by the government forces when the Mexicans and Indians had taken refuge there. The crumbling walls of the old place are now used to protect the graves which have been dug in the weed-grown nave. Before 1847, and always afterward, the Indians have attended strictly to their own affairs. They live by agriculture and raising goats and sheep. Primitive in their manner of living, they are equally so in their style of working. Their wants are few, and they raise only what they need for themselves. They hunt with the bow and arrow; live mostly on fruits and cakes made from the wheat they have raised; have a simple form of government; are quiet, peaceful and contented, and dress in garments made by themselves, and which are picturesque and original.

It is a curious fact that hardly any two of the Pueblo tribes speak the same language. When the village of Pecos was almost decimated by smallpox, the pueblo was deserted by the few who were well enough to travel, but they had to pass by three pueblos before they found one where their own language was spoken; but notwithstanding this fact, the religious belief is the same between the tribs. Their ancient god was called Montezuma, and it is said that a sacred fire is kept forever burning to light the return of this mythological character when he shall be brought back by the eagle which carried him away. This connection between the eagle and the god of the people explains the reverence with which the bird is treated at the pueblos to-day. In any one of the pueblos the eagle has a home, and becomes the pet of all the children.

A few centuries ago-one very soon grows used to using the word—a high wall surrounded the Taos pueblo; but in this time of peace it has been allowed to fall down in many places. Just beyoud the town is a grove of sacred cottonwoods, lining the banks of a stream, and which is resorted to for the cool shade which is given there. At the northern end of the two piles of houses there are three deep caves, entered by a ladder through an opening in the roof, where the secret councils are held, and where, if hearsay is to be trusted, the flame to Montezuma kept burning. The peculiarity of the pueblo consists in the angles at which the several houses are planted, and the fact that the entrances are by holes cut in the roofs. Ladders take the place of stairs in all instances.

One climbs from the ground to the first house-top by one ladder, and then descends through a hole in the roof to the interior; and another ladder leads to the second terrace, so that the whole pueblo is covered with a net-work of stairways, up and down which the in-mates of the houses are continually climbing. No abode has ever more than two rooms, but both are equally clean and comfortable. The walls are of whitewashed adobe, and so is the roof and the floor. In some instances a narrow strip of paint runs around the lower part of the four walls, and the roof exposes the heavy timbers which support it. The rooms are not over eight by ten feet in size and seven feet in height, while in the topmost houses the ceiling is too low to admit of one standing in an upright position.

The younger children of the pueblos run naked, but the older ones wear a single garment which but half hides their brown-hued person beneath. The women wear a short skirt, reaching about to the knees, and a jacket which is caught over one shoulder and is drawn across the breast under the right arm, leaving the neck and one shoulder and a good part of the bosom exposed. Over the head they invari-ably wear a shawl, which is kept in place in some dexterous manner, no matter what occupation the woman may be engaged in. The men wear breeches and buckskin jackets, and are usually wrapped up in a blanket of gay colors. The breeches are in two parts and are separated near the loins, a "breechclout" or piece of cloth clinging closely to the body hiding the otherwise exposed person. Bucks wear moccasins, but the women indulge in such luxuries only on fete days, at which time they also wear a more elaborate dress and ornaments.

Railroad Statistics. [Demorest's Monthly.]

According to the most recent statistics, by the close of this year the United States will have 115,000 miles of railway, which is 10,000 miles more than all Europe combined. Should we continue building at the present rate, in five years' time we will have more miles of railway than all the rest of the world

The world consumes 2,000,000 tons of #### tobacco a year. Reckless Horsemanship.

[Inter Ocean.] It was early in the morning that the pilgrims were favored with an exhibition of horsemanship which is rarely seen. At one of the stations at which the train stopped there appeared among the small knot of natives a veritable cowboy, mounted and fully equipped. He wore a broad-brimmed felt hat over an honest, pleasant face, deeply tanned by the sun and atmosphere, a woolen shirt and a short, gray jacket and gray trousers. Over his legs, from his hips to his knees, extended a wide piece of leather, the object of which is supposed to be to protect him from rain and brush. He was asked if he owned the herd of sheep grazing near, and indignantly responded that he did not—that he was a cowboy.

"Let us see you lasso that cow."

"Huh! That's nothin'! The boys

'uld skin my head." "Then let us see you catch the train." Without a word the little pony was urged to the other side of the track, and, as the train started, horse and rider made a dash, going ahead of the train. Gradually as the train got under way it gained upon its opponent until it and the horse stood "neck and neck." Then, as if to tempt the rider to his fate, cigars were held to him from the car windows. Without a moment's hesitation the little pony was headed for the road-bed, which it reached by a plunge from the higher ground. The train increased in speed, and the cow-boy, being intent on the prizes offered him, gave the rein to the pony and his attention to taking the cigars from the hands of those inside the cars. Over washouts and uneven ground, through cuts and over eleva-tions the animal dashed, and so close to the train that the rider's feet came in contact with it. The animal was left entirely to itself, and one missten or a stumble would have thrown both horse and rider beneath the wheels. For fully three-quarters of a mile the race was kept up, and at the end of it the daring rider was greeted with shouts, which he acknowledged by a wave of his hat as the horse mounted the embankment.

The Crash of Worlds. [Popular Science Monthly.]

If ever two great worlds do meet in this way it is possible to predict some of the consequences. To use the technical language of science, "their energy of solar motion will be converted into various forms of molecular and potential energy;" which, translated into the vernacular, means that there will be evolution of heat and light, while at the same time the solids present will be wholly or in part liquefied, the liquids vaporized, and the vapors and gases rarefied and expanded. The intensity of the action will depend, of course, mainly upon the mass and swiftness of the colliding bodies; but an easy calculation shows that if our earth were ever to meet another globe like herself, and meeting with the same velocity, heat enough would be generated by the shock to transform them both into a huge ball of vapor; unless, indeed, the central core of the earth is much colder and more refractory than is usually supposed. At any rate, the quantity of heat developed would be sufficient to melt, boil, and completely vaporize a mass of ice fully 700 times that of both the colliding worlds—anice planet 150,-000 miles in diameter. If, however, the impinging masses were, to begin with, mainly gaseous (as the sun seems to be) the effect might be curiously different. Heat would, of course, be generated, just as in the case of solid bodies; but as a consequence, apparently most paradoxical, the result ing nebula might actually be cooler than either of the bodies before the encounter; of course it would be vastly expanded in volume. Just as a gaseous mass contracting under its own gravity from loss of heat by radiation at its surface, continually rises in temperature, so a similar mass, expanding against its own gravity from accession of heat within, may fall in temperature, nay, must fall, if the body is composed of "perfect" gas. Of course, immediately after the collision, and before the ultimate expansion bulk was attained, the temperature and brilliance of the mass would be for a time vastly increased, but the final result would be as stated.

Soothing the Victims. [Arkansaw Traveler.] Marwood, the English hangman, used to soothe his victims by whispering words of encouragement to them. 'Come on now," he would say kindly. "I won't hurt you, and it will all be over in a minute. It will be all right. Just leave it to me." A well known sheriff in Arkansaw is equally as kind. Some time ago he entered the cell of a man who was to be hanged the following day and said: "That little affair of ours comes off to-morrow, you know, and I hope that you will be quite ready for the performance. Hold yourself pretty stiff when the cap is drawn. Then you will go down straight and won't dangle. It's very uncomfortable to dangle and you will find the stiff method preferable."

Prison Morality.

[Chicago Herald.] A man who was convicted of theft and sentenced to the state prison in Philadelphia the other day astonished the judge by making these pointed remarks in court: "I worked three years your state prison making shoes, and I know as much about making shoes as I do about watches. They taught me to be dishonest. My principal work was to paste leather and pasteboard together to make a thick sole to impose on the public. The man who had the contract was a Christian, a member of the church, and at the time I called his attention to the pasteboard business he was foreman of the grand jury.

What His Idea Was. [San Francisco Bulletin.]

A New York merchant was speaking of a gray-haired comrade who had just married a third wife. "I can't understand it," he said. "I am a widower myself, but my idea has always been that if a man's first wife suited him, he wouldn't expect that another could fill her place, and if she did not suit him, he wouldn't want another to fill it."

Jeff Davis' Capture. A son of Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston, who was captured along with Jefferson Davis, gives the following version of the affair in an interview with 'Gath." published in The Cincinnati Enquirer: "Now I did not see the capture of Mr. Davis. The first thing I saw of Mr. Davis he was sitting in his tent. There were tents pitched there. He was under guard, and was in a fearful state of mind. I said to him something to the effect that at last we had been seized. 'Yes,' said he, 'and if I had not been pinioned by Mrs. Davis I would have thrown the scoundrel from his horse.' Mr. Davis had long before that told me how to throw a man from a horse. He said that if you would take the horse by the bridle and give him a jerk, and at the same time apply ever so light a movement under the foot of the rider, that the jerk and the upward push together would undoubtedly throw him on his head. So I suppose that his remark meant that he would have tried that trick on the countryman who seized him." "Did Mr. Davis have any disguise

"I believe that Mrs. Davis did throw a waterproof over him. Several of us had these waterproofs. Mine was a sort of brown color. I understand that when the attack was made on the camp Mrs. Davis threw her waterproof over her husband. That is, I believe, the extent of the story of his disguise. I had hardly spoken to Mr. Davis, when one of these officers, I think it was Pritchard, came up and addressed him in insolent language, something like this: 'Well, old Jeff, we have got you at last.' Mr. Davis replied: 'The worst of all is that I should be captured by a band of thieves and scoundrels.' 'Oh,' explained this officer, 'we have hed plants. claimed this officer, 'we have had plenty of that kind of talk. You're captured, that is the long and short of it, and are our prisoner.' With this another officer, who seemed to have more decency, came forward and said to the first man 'It is not worth while to talk like that,' and he led his friend away. The language they addressed to Mr. Davis was entirely unbecoming a man of character and the dignity of the prisoner. I somewhat regretted that Mr. Davis had lost his temper. He was in a very excited state of mind."

Woes of an Inventor's Wife. [Baltimore American.]

"It is all very well to talk about working for the heathen," said one, as the ladies put up their sewing, "but I'd like to have some one tell me what I am to do with my husband?" "What is the matter with him?" asked a sympathetic lady. "William is a good man," continued the first, waving her glasses in an argumentative way, but William will invent. He goes inventing around from morning till night, and I have no peace or comfort. I didn't object when he invented a fire-escape, but I did remonstrate when he wanted me to crawl out of the window one night last winter to see how it worked. Then he originated a lock for the door that wouldn't open from midnight until morning, so as to keep burglars out. The first time he tried it he caught his cont-tail in it, and I had to walk around him with a pan of hot coals all night to keep him from freezing." "Why didn't he take his coat off?" "I wanted him he take his coat off?" to, but he stood around till the thing opened itself, trying to invent some way of unfastening it.

"That's William's trouble. He will invent. A little while ago he got up a cabinet bedstead that would shut and open without handling. It went by clockwork. William got into it and up it went. Bless your heart, he stayed in there from Saturday afternoon till Sunday night, when it flew open and disclosed William with the plans and specifications of a patent washbowl that would tip over when it got just so full. The result was that I lost all my rings and a breastpin down the waste-pipe. Then he got up a crutch for a man that could be used as an opera glass. Whenever the man leaned on it up it went, and when he put it to his eye to find William it flew out into a crutch and almost broke the top of his head off. The other day I saw him going up the street with a model of a grain elevator sticking out of his hip pocket, and he is fixing up an improved shot tower in our bed-

Civilizing the Brahmins.

[St. Paul Pioneer Press.] The Hindoos can never become civilized, according to our standard, until they shall lose their old religion. This faith is so interwoven with the tissue of their every-day life that they are never free from it for a moment. By its influence they still plow with an iron-shod stick, reap with a sickle and thresh the grain beneath the feet of oxen. It gives them no idea of right and wrong, according to our standard. It inculcates child marriages and the terrors of widowhood: it fosters female infanticide by its doctrine of female depravity and worthlessness. In short it is a vast improvement over fetichism and Parseeism, but it falls short of the real needs of mankind, and it is only through this foreign missionary work and its active support that these poor, benighted, down-trodden and heartbroken sisters of ours can ever be lifted out of this utter darkness into the light of truth and happiness.

The God of the Bedstead.

[Chicago Herald.] The principal idol of Chinese women is the God of the Bedstead, which they worship religiously until the youngest child is 15 years of age. This god consists of a rice bowl, with two pieces of red ribbon laid on the bottom of it, two cakes of yeast, and twelve leaves, culled from as many different trees. The god is kept on a shelf, either above or under the bed, according to the fancy of the worshiper, and is appealed to at least twice a month by the woman and her children.

Courageous Princess Louise. [Montreal Cor. Scranton (Pa.) Regulican.] Her royal highness is very fond of sunshine, and the early morning visitor is welcomed by flinging back the curtains "the first thing of the day." Every morning before breakfast the princes takes a walk of three miles over the estate of the government house and the road beyond, walking briskly over the snow in winter, aided by a cane and accompanied by a favorite dog. She is more fond of sketching and painting than other accomplishments, but she is what the Germans call a notable house wife, and goes into the kitchen every morning to give orders for the day. The Canadian servants did not at all like this and rebelled, so her ladyship got out servants from "home" who were more used to the expression of supreme Like many energetic people, the princess is hot tempered, and the servants were disposed to think her as peremptory as the queen in the story of "Alice in Wonderland," who ordered "heads off" at every moment. She sets an example of industry, and certainly considers life quite worth living, as she sets apart for her work or recreation specified regular hours. She has musi playing in some part of the house nearly all the time, though the early morning strains are those most grateful to her husband's Scotch ear—the bag-pipe. ord Lorne has his own favorite pipe with him. The princess is a good cook and takes pride in this accomplishment. At her dinners en famille some one pretty, delicious dish is sure to have been cooked under her own supervision or prepared by her own hands. Some time ago a young woman and her babe who were visiting the princess, were taken ill of scarlet fever, caused by defective drainage, they say. None of the servants would go the sick woman's room, being afraid of the infection. The princess herself cooked all the food and carried it with her own hands to the sick visitor. She made the bed, smoothed the pillows, read and talked to her patient, and nursed the mother back to life, though the little one died and was buried in the ceme-

[Prof. Sturtevant.] There are a number of distinct races of Zea mays, L., the corn plant, which receives popular recognition by common names. Such are the Pops, Flints Dents, Sweets, Tuscarora or Softs, and the curious variety known as the husk or podded corn. These differ from each other more or less, in the structure of the kernel, and in the habit of ripening and growth. The flint corn kernel, when split open, is found to show three structures the chit, or germ, lying in a starchy substance, which is surrounded by a corneous envelope. This corn ripens from outward inward. The dent corn has the chit, the starch, and the corneous envelope, but the corneous portion occupies the sides, while at the terminal portion the starch comes to the surface. This kind of corn ripens from within outward. The Tuscarors or soft corn is composed of the chit, and a starchy portion, the corneous portion being absent. This ripens from the outside inward. The sweet corn shows the chit and the corneous portion without visible starch. To these four types we can at present refer all the kinds that we know of, and these types preserve a constancy which is truly

Raisins Better than Wine. [The Continent.]
. According to Sir William Gull, Queen Victoria's physician, and of course eminent in his profession, it is better in case of fatigue from overwork to eat raisins than to resort to alcohol. In his testimony before the lords' commission in London, a few months ago, he affirmed "that instead of flying to alcohol, as many people do when ex-hausted, they might very well drink water, or they might very well take food; and they would be very much better without the alcohol." He added, as to the form of food he himself resorts to, "in case of fatigue from overwork, I would say that if I am thus fatigued my food is very simple—I eat the raisins instead of taking the wine. For thirty years I have had large experience in this practice. I have recommended it to my personal friends. It is a limited experience, but I believe it is a very good and true experience." This is valuable testimony; we know of none better from medical sources; and we commend it to the thoughful con-

thy stomach's sake." Signs of Longevity

[Chicago Herald.] Lord Bacon, generally regarded as the keenest observer and profoundest thinker who has appeared on this planet, wrote much on longevity. His signs of short life are quick growth, fair, soft skin, soft, fine hair, early corpulence, large head, short neck, small mouth, fat ear, brittle, separated teeth. Some of his signs of long life are slow growth, hard, coarse hair, rough, freckled skin, deep furrows in the forehead, firm flesh with veins lying high, wide nostrils, large mouth, hard, gristly ear, strong, contiguous teeth. He adds that early gray hair is not significant, some of the longest livers having turned gray in early life.

But with Dignity.

[Chicago Tribune.] Grocer, who has lately joined the militia, practicing in his shop: "Right, left, right, left. Four paces to the rear, march!"—falls down trap door into the cellar. Grocer's wife, anxiously: "O, Jim, are you hurt?" Grocer, savagely, but with dignity: "Go away, woman, what do you know about war?"

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. Aver's Cherry Pectoral bas well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured. A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayen's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the Pectoral a permanent cure was effected. I am now &2 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your Cherry Pectoral saved me.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectolal, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the Cherry Pectoral had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AVER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine. PREPARED BY

DISORDERED LIVER,
and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fuliness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "seavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect.

A BRAVE LADY.

She Endures the Pain of a Severe Surgical Operation Without Taking

(From the Courter.) Mrs. Schoonmaker, of Creek Locks, Ulster reign C., N. Y., had the mistortune to entirely lose the sight of one of her eyes, through an accident, and endured painful inflammatory action therein for two long years; the other eye finally becoming sympathetically affected, her general health seriously suffering; indeed she was a more wreck, a walking skeleton. In this terrible strait she consulted Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., who told her at once that the injured eye must be removed. She quietly but firmly said: "All right, Doctor, but don't give me chloroform. Let my husband sit by my side during the operation, and I will neither cry out or stir." The work was done and the poor woman kept her word. Talk of solthe poor woman kept her word. Talk of soldierly courage! This showed greater pluck than it takes to face a hundred guns. To restore her general health and give tone as d strength to the system. Dr. Kennedy then gave the "Favorite Remedy," which cleansed the blood and imparted new life to the long-suffering woman. She rapidly gained health and strength, and is now well. The "Favorite Remedy" is a priceless blessing to women. No family should be without it. Your druggist has it. If not send to Dr. David Kennedy, kondout, New York.

Climbing the Spiral Stairs. land Pars nage.

"Yes," she said, "our children are married and gone, and my husband and 1 sit by our winter fire much as we did before the little ones came to widen the circle. Life is some thing like a spiral staircase; we are all the time coming around over the spot we started from, only one degree further up stairs."

"That is a pretty illustration," remarked her friend, musingly, gazing into the glowing coals which radiated a pleasant heat from the many windowed stove. "You know we cannot stop toiling up the hill, though."

"Surely we cannot, and for myself I don't find lauit with that necessity provided the advance in life is not attended with calamity or suffering, for I have had my share of that. Not long since my health utterly broke down. My system was full of malaria. My digestion became thoroughly disordered and my nerves were in a wretched state. I was languid, ate little, and that without enjoying it, and had no strength or ambition to perform even my light household duties. Medical treatment halled to reach the sent of the trouble. I he disease—which seemed to be weakness of all the vital organs—progressed until I had several attacks which my physicians pronounced to be acute congestion of the stonach. The last of these was a desperate struggle and I was given up to die. As the crisis and partially passed, my husband heard of the merits of PatkKER's TONIC as an invigorant in just such cases as mine. I took it and tell its good effects at once. It appeared to pervate my body, as though the biessing of new life had come to me. Taking no other medicine I continued to improve, and am now in better health than I have been for a long time."

ALL FOR NOTHING.

what Might bave Seen Done Without Him.

Without Him.

"Well, wife," said Dr. E.—. as he entered his house, which was situated in a cosy village in central New York, "I have got back from a long and dreary ride away down among the mountains, and all to no purpose whatever. The messenger said the man wouldn't live till morning, when the fact is he had only an ordinary attack of coile. If the sympletons had only had sense enough to put a BENSON'S CAPCINE POROIS PLASTER on his stomach be would have been all right in an hour or CAPCINE POROIS PLASTER on his stomach he would have been all right in an hour or two. But some folks are slow to learn," added the old physician, swallowing the cup of steaming tea which his wife had just poured for him. Dr. E.— was right, yet people do learn, even though slowly. The rapidly increasing use or Benson's plaster proves this beyond question, and the good doctors are certain to be saved much of their needless toil. In all diseases capable of being affected by a plaster Benson's acts efficiently and at once. The genuine have the word CAPCINE cut in the center. Price 25 cents. I believe, however, that it is not the liquor alone which produces the diseases generally attributed to it. It is rather in the fact that those who are supposed to fail in physical health by its use, or who use it to excess, do so because they create by their course of life or labor a morbid demand for the stimulant. I have already shown how a board of trade man may rush off to get a drink to prevent a reaction from excitement. It is so with many other vocations. Take a compositor on a morning paper. He will work all night, and have his slumbers broken in the day. He rises unrefreshed. He must work again. and, utterly prostrated, suffering from nervous losses, he drinks to restore him self. He continues this course for years, and becomes a wreck. Whether from the drink or the work for which he may have been constitutionally unfitted I could not say, unless I could determine what would have been the result had he followed either course and left the other

I am inclined to think, however, that the effects of liquor on a person following a nervous and exhaustive vocation, especially if it be used to brace up to greater efforts and harder work, is far more injurious than when used by such men as those who first peopled the west, and who drank it frequently and sometimes to excess. Their systems were strong enough to throw off its effects. Their occupations did not cause nervous prostration, hence they did not develop a seeming necessity in the system for it. It is not the peculiarity of modern liquor or the depravity of the present generation; it is the exhaustion induced by the terrible outlay of vitality in exciting business that makes drinking what it now is with a large class. My advice to all workers is to go slow. Do not brace up that you may overwork. Rest; that is nature's own magnificent and unri-valed remedy, that will cure when nothing else will. Take to the woods, the fields, the open air. Throw physics to the dogs, and do not sell your health for money, for you cannot buy it. A Plea for Little Men.

[Cor. Pall Mall Gazette.] Surely the anthropometrists will do narm if they encourage the craze of tallness. It seems one ambition of mothers that their boys should be tall. Napoleon and Wellington and Nelson were short. The Romans dominated Italy because individual physical inferiority made them perfect their organization. To say that the English is the tallest race is simply to say that they are hewers of wood and drawers of water for the rest. The tallness of Saxon invaders proves little. Although reach was of more importance in the days of sword and ax than now, the tall Saxon did not in point of fact oast the shorter Celt or Neolith except in places where command of the sea gave him power to concentrate rapidly. It is to organization, sanitary education, etc., and not to tallness, or even to weight, that one race must look to beat another now, as in the days when Rome beat the mountaineers. But if we are to admire physical condition, surely we should be taught to look to size round the chest in men, and to size, where size is wanted in women, and not to tallness in either case.

[Chicago Times.]

In the carriage-makers' convention in New Haven, Conn., after the committee on apprenticeship had reported in favor of restoring the old system of indenturing apprentices until they reach their majority. Mr. John W. Britton, of New York, said: "One of the serious wants of this country and of our trade is good boys. Our boys are deteriorating, as are our men. The greatest difficulty we experience in New York is that of getting boys who have brains and are willing to learn a trade thoroughly. The example of men who have made millions in a few years is held up be-fore our boys in school, and the boys become inflamed with the notion that they must make their millions and be able to found cross-roads colleges before they die. So they eschew trades and become poor professionals."

The Authorship of "Old Grimes." [Chicago Tribune.]
The New York Tribune has been trying to fix the authorship of the pa-thetic ballad, "Old Grimes." The weight of the testimony is in favor of Albert G. Green, a graduate of Brown university and author of "The Baron's Last Banquet." There is a pretty well authenticated claim, however, that the author was a student of the Vale college during the presidency of Dr. Dwight. In those days the janitor of the institution was an eccentric character, who wore "an old brown coat," and was called by the students Professor of Dust and Ashes. He died, and the claim is that one of the college rhymsters wrote the lines in question, which were sung by a lot of heartless students who assembled for that purpose on the roof of the college building.

A Useless Habit. [Chicago Times.]

The act of putting a lead pencil to the tongue to wet it just before writing, which is habitual with many people, is one of the oddities for which it is hard to give any reason-unless it began in the days when pencils were poorer than now, and was continued by example to the next generation. A lead pencil should never be wet. It hardens the lead and ruins the pencil. This fact is known to newspaper men and stenog-
