Arbor Day Proclamation. TO THE PEOPLE OF MICHIGAN:

In compliance with a concurrent resolution passed by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, approved March 16, 1881, and reiterated by the Legislature of 1885, requesting the Governor to call the attention of the people of the State to the importance of planting trees for ornament, protection, and shade, by naming a day upon which this work shall be given especial prominence, to be known and designated as 'Arbor Day,'" which custom prevails in many of the States.

Therefore I, Russell A. Alger, Gov ernor of the State of Michigan, do hereby designate Saturday, the Eleventh day of April, A. D. 1885, as Arbor Day, and earnestly recommend that on that date we plant trees by the roadside, by our farmhouses, in our fields, parks, villages, and cities, around the school houses, and in the cemeteries where sleep our beloved dead. Let us plant for use as well as for beauty. We may not live to enjoy the full fruits of this work, but our children and our children's children will receive the benefits of our labor.

In Testimony Whereof. I have caused the Great Seal of the State to be hereunto affixed, at Lansing, this 25th day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty five. RUSSELL A. H. A. Conant, Secretary of State. RUSSELL A. ALGER.

The appointment of Sorden Lister for postmaster of South Bend has been confirmed.

Report from Gen. Grant at 3:30 this morning states that he is rapidly sinking, and can at most last but a few hours.

The appointment of Judge E. J Phelps, as minister of England, is said to be at the request of Henry Ward Beecher.

It is said that Tim Tarsney is having life made a burden to him by about 1,500 applicants for post-offices in his district.

The reduction of the National debt for last month was $4$3,747 against over $14,000,000 for the corresponding month in 1884.

The enormous bill for medicine at the encampment under Begole and Shakespeare shows an unusually unhealthy state of affairs.

tioneer. On the following day this new apostle of reform granted a holiday to the clerks of his Department, because, forsooth, Jacob Thompson was dead, and he was once Secretary of the Interior, under President Buchanan. This day of respite from work, in a Department already notoriously be hind with its business, cost the Government $12,000 in the shape of salaries, and all to honor a traitor whom it were a kindness to forget. But the clerks enjoyed their freedom all the same, and blessed him for dying, if for nothing else.

In view of the present illness of Jeff. Davis it is probable that on one of these days the stars and stripes floating over the War Department will be lowered at half mast, and another obituary holiday ordered. In the light of the new dispensation the discovery would doubtless be made that the memory of the arch rebel should be honored, for he was Secretary of War during Pierce's administration.

Disappointment with President Cleveland's manner of distributing official patronage increases daily. There is an irrepressible conflict between him and members of Congress. The latter have long been in the habit of making recommendations for federal appointments in their respective States. This has grown to be an adjunct to Congressional honor that members value accordingly. If a man wanting office failed to get the endorsement of his Congressman, he had no chance of suc-

A False Issue. The only thing on which a serious public fight is made against Judge Cooley is the assertion that the court of which he is the foremost member has decided many railroad cases in favor of the companies. This point is specious and falsifying. The method on which the railroads treat their litigation leads to a private settlement on terms mutually agreed on in cases where that is practicable, especially in those in which they have a weak case under the law. They employ the best counsel, under strict instructions to avoid carrying contests into court if a private adjustment is possible and never unless the company's rights under the law are clear. The counsel's success depends on his conforming to these instructions, and the company has, in the results, a direct gauge to tell wheth-er due judgment has been exercised. With this degree of care in the choice of ground for litigation the roads cannot avoid winning the majority of the cases actually contested. These are a minority of the actual issues affecting public or private rights and any other class of litigants adopting the same caution would have similar success. The courts are bound by their duty to determine according to the law and the facts, not their feelings. The Michigan supreme court has the name of doing its duty without fear or favor. Judge Cooley's attitude in reference to the public interests and public rights is proven abundantly satisfactory by a great many of his principal decisions. It was under his leadership that the decision against voting public taxes and municipal bonds to railroads was made. What could more fitly show Judge Cooley's independence of pressure or influence? His decision in the Detroit street railroad case is another instance that shows the spirit of the court. On the very question on which Cooley is assailed, the chosen ground cess. The Bayarian Peasantry.

During the past ten years, a steady stream of humanity has been flowing out of the country and into the United States through every harbor in Germany. The men are the first to leave, then follow the families. Those who are left behind are, alas! the poor women who have neither husbands nor families: for there are not men enough to go around, nor has there been for 100 years. In Bavaria, as it is in Incland, it is one of the ends and aims of life to get to America - I speak, of course, of the poor country peopleand an American is always an interesting object to the peasantry. This is to some extent the case everywhere in Germany, but it is nowhere as evident as it is in Bavaria. The result of the exodus of the male inhabitants is that the women do the heavy labor, not only in a domestic but in a general sense. Bavarian women have never been so used to very delicate treatment, you are aware, and I doubt very much whether they expect it. Their lot has always been a hard one, and they have little conception of what is meant by life without never-ending, never-ceasing toil. The result of this, as generation after generation has come down to the present day, is that the Bavarian woman is not pretty. She has a large, muscular frame, rather a coarse face, and feet and hands several sizes too large for party purposes. Her skin is quite dark and inclined to be knobby or bumpy, and, if I must say it, she is not scrupulously neat about her person, as the Saxon and Prusian women invariably are. Well, it looks like a sin to see the way these poor women have to work, and it is amazing to see how well they do it. They plow as straight a line and as deep a furrow as the best Illinois fa mer, and they keep up their grit as steadily and as doggedly as a plantation hand. I have seen young girls at the plow - very young girls - wearing great heavy shoes and very coarse peachable. -- Kalamazoo Telegraph, gowns, cut short for convenience sakebut I have never scen anything of the

It is wonderful to see the immense bundles which these Bavarian women can carry on their backs, and it is still more wonderful to see the immense loads which they will carry in a wheelbarrow.-Letter from Bavaria.

in his misfortune. Soon after the merchant arrived in Smyrna he sent to Pope, as a present, a box of dried figs. At that time the poet had built a beautiful villa at Twickenham, on the bank of the Thames. and was adorning it with trees, shrubbery and flowering trees.

On opening the box of figs Pope discovered in it a small twig of the tree. It was a stranger to him. As it came from the East he planted it in the ground near the river, close by his villa. The spot accidentally chosen for the planting was favorable to its growth, for the twig was from the weeping willow tree-possibly from the bank of one of "the rivers of Babylon" - which flourishes best along the borders of water courses

This little twig grew vigorously, and, in a few years, it became a large tree, spreading wide its branches and drooping, graceful sprays, and winning the admiration of the poet's friends as well as strangers. It became the ancestor of all the weeping willow trees in England. There was a rebellion in the English-

American Colonies in 1775. British troops were sent to Boston to put down the insurrection. Their leaders expected it to end in a few weeks after their arrival. Some young officers brought fishing tackle with them to enable them to enjoy sport after their brief war. Others came to settle on the confiscated lands of the "rebels." Among the latter was a young officer on the staff of Gen. Howe. He brought with him, wrapped in oiled silk, a twig from Pope's weeping willow tree at Twickenham, which he intended to plant on some stream watering his American Washington commanded an army before Boston which kept the British imprisoned in that city a long time against their will. On his staff was his stepson, John Parke Custis, who frequently went to the British headquarters, under the protection of a flag, with dispatches for Gen. Howe. He became acquainted with the young officer who had the willow twig, and they became fast friends. Instead of "crushing the rebellion in six weeks," the British army at Boston, at the end of an imprisonment of nine months were glad to fly by sea for life and liberty to Halifax. Long before that flight the British subaltern, satisfied that he should never have an estate in America to adorn, gave his carefully preserved willow twig to young Custis, who planted it at Abingdon, his estate in Virginia, where it grew and flourished, and became a parent of all the weeping willows in the United States.

Some time after the war Gen. Hora tio Gates, of the Revolution, settled on the "Rose Hill Farm," on New York Island, and at the entrance to a lane which led from a country road to his house, he planted a twig from the vig-orous willow at Abingdon, which he had brought with him. Those who read the tirade of the Evening News against Judge Cooley, will remember that Mr. Cooley was one of the Judges who sustained the decision of the lower court in Mc-Lean-Scripps libel suit that cost the News something like $25,000. A sum that forms a good foundation for political opposition.

London papers seem to entertain the idea that if England and Russia fight, the peace of the world will be broken. When they get well at it those same papers can see the most peaceful and industrious nation that ever existed, if they will just gaze over in this direction. The happiness of Uncle Sam will be complete.

Last fall the Democrats were very solicitous lest Gov. Alger take undue advantage of his G. A. R. connections. It is all right and without political significance for Allen B. Morse to work the same string for political assistance. His party appear to imagine that his connection with G.A.R. to be about all of the qualifications necessary for a judge of the supreme court.

Already a part of the family of Uncle Sam, are beginning to reap a benefit from the rumors of war across the big pond. A number of large iron mills in Pennsylvaina are now working on large orders for armor plate for the Russian Government, some of them employing others to help fill their orders. The Remingtons have 1,300 men working on rifles and the Union Metalic Cartridge Co. making cartridges for 18,000 cans of canned beef for the British supply, and have cleaned out all of the can factories within reach. "'Tis an ill wind that blows no one good."

A writ of error has been recognized in the case against the ballot box thieves in Chicago, and they are at liberty temporarily, at least. Mike Mc-Donald is their chief bondsman for $50,000 each, and in making the bond swore that he owned $500,000 in real estate, free from incumbrance. It is but a short time since he wanted to be released from a bond, and in order to do so swore that he was worth nothing, and that his was a very precarious business. He may be worth half a million to-day and peuniless to-morrow. This move in the Mackin-Galligher case gives them one more chance to defeat justice. There is no question of their guilt, as charged, but this is a quibble about some technical point in the trial. Should the law fail to do its unfathomable workings of the minds of voters, the next House of Representatives may be a dull one. Mr. Reed of Maine is the only fun-maker left, and his is a sarcastic, bitter wit. Belford. of Colorado, Horr, of Michigan, and Ochiltree, of Texas, are all politically no more, and now, "poor Yorrick," the last jester, goes to Turkey, and the House will laugh no more at his strained efforts at mirth. Still there will be many new members in the House, and they may develop a talent for low comedy equal to that of their predecessors.

If this custom is to be strictly adhered to the War Department will ere long be closed and its flag displayed at half mast out of respect for the memory of Jeff Davis, who was at the head of that department during the term of President Pierce. There are several reasons why this public token of respect should not have been paid the memory of Jake Thompson. Mr. for the same market, while Armour & Thompson was the chosen instrument Co., of Chicago, have received orders of the Confederate government during the rebellion to import into the north infected rags for the purpose of spreading contagion among the wives and children of men who were absent fighting for the integrity of the government, and was also the leader of the band of organized incendiaries who were charg-

These facts and considerations should have prevented any notice of his death being taken by throttle again if a stream of warm the government instead of paying a tribute to his memory at an expense to the United States of about $15,000. The suspension of labor by the Interior Department for one day involves a loss of fully that amount in money and in addition delays action for twentyfour hours on thousands of applications for pensions from men who were phys ically disabled by the acts of such leaders. It may be urged that the same objection would apply in the event of Mr. Lamar's death. The case of Lamar, however, is not analogous with that of Thompson. The latter while Secretary of the Interior was plotting and aiding rebellion, and left the Interior Department with the deliberate purpose of destroying the government whose sworn officer he was, and never manifested any contrition for his treachery and treason. Encouragement.

Encouragement is something that we naturally look for.

A little praise, or word of hope, or a cheering smile - something for the hungry soul to grasp and the weary mind to rest upon, as we climb the toilsome mountain of life.

How many poor hearts have sunk into despondency, when a little en-couragement would have reassured them! How many have taken their lives in the hour of despair, when a friendly hand stretched out with aid might have saved them!

Sandal-Wood Trees Worth Five Thousand Dollars.

In the physical world South America is full of wealth, and nature has bestowed upon it a matchless grandeur in its rivers and its mountains. Prof. Fisher shows us that intertropical America (North and South) surpasses all the world in the number and variety of its plants, while Agassiz shows us how greatly the wonderful variety of its fishes surpasses that of North America. Of course, much of the country is now malarious and unhealthy, yet vast regions of elevated and most beautiful sections are most salubrious and healthy, and clothed with an incredible wealth of ceaseless production. Endless varieties of the most Inscious fruits and beantiful flowers, with birds of gorgeous plumage and gigantic but terfles, delight the eye on every hand, far up on elevations where neither the winter's cold nor excessive heat is even known, and all nature teems with health, beauty, and abundance. Even the low levels teem with endless wealth and invite a commerce that has scarcely begun, save in a few articles. East of the Andes, and intersected by many great rivers, is probably the greatest and most valuable forest on the globe, and almost untouched by the ax. Mr. Thompson, who held the position of Consul at Brazil, stated in a lecture, on his return, that in traveling on the Amazon he saw sandal-wood trees that here would each be worth $5,000, yet of whose value the natives seemed unconscious or indifferent.-Cincinnati Enquirer.

Bonamy Price on Education.

Bonamy Price, seeking to answer the juestion, "What is education?" from the Oxford point of view, says that it is the teaching of the young mind how to think, and the acquisition of knowledge. He maintains that "Greek educates by means of the most powerful force that can be brought to bear upon the young, the greatness of the minds with which they are brought in contact, the power of the writers and their works." the instrument of education science falls into the lower rank, in his opinion, and he insists most on Dr. Arnold's method at Rugby, which was to awaken the processes of thought in his boys. In his case teacher, pupil and the great Greek lived together in one common act of thinking.

But capital has bored arte- sian wells, run tunnels into mountains, and built dams across the mouths of valleys, making immense reservoirs, which hold water sufficient to irrigate many thousand acres of land, which will become very valuable in the course of time; and the deserts will soon bloom like the garden of Eden. These large tracts of land are being divided up into ten and twenty acre tracts, and are sold from twenty-five to seventy- five dollars per acre, and five years hence will be worth from three to five hundred dollars an acre, according to improvements. So here still remains a chance for a man with small capital and plenty of nerve and hard work to set out fruit trees, which, at the end of three years, will pay expenses, and at the end of five years pay a nice little income, beside the improved valuation of his property. A MEMORY.

Mrs. Munroe.1 She threw me a row, and enchantment Seemed filling my soul with soft music, And changing my life's angry torrent To a soothing voluptuous dream.

She smiled, and the love that lay hidden Far down in the depths of her being, Rose flashing before my dull vision, Like a goddess new born of the day.

And I cast my old life far behind me, With its vagrant fancies and idols, And I made all things fair for her presence, And she made all things sweet for my sake.

But she left me, and life is now over, And I long to get rest from my sorrow, A sweet, dreamless rest, and my pillow Quite close to her own neath the flowers.

FISHING FOR WATER.

Cold Springs at the Sea Bottom That Sup ply the People of Babrin. [New York Sun.]

"Did you ever hear of a place where the people are compelled to fish in the ocean for all the fresh water they use?" asked Ben Germley, a sailor who has cruised in every water on the face of the globe. "There is such a place, and I've been there. It's the hottest place I was ever in, and I've been to all the hot ones. Rain never falls there, and the tempera-ture never changes. I think it stands at 120 degrees all the year round. You're thirsty when you go to sleep, you wake up in the night thirsty, you're thirsty all day. Yet the people that live there appear to think they are in the garden spot of creation. That's natural, though, for it isn't likely one out of a hundred of them was ever in any other place. This delightful spot is on the Persian gulf, at Babrin, where they fish for the water they drink. I had the pleasure of staying there three days, ten years ago. "I don't know who discovered the fact, but there are numberless springs of ice-cold water at the bottom of the gulf, near the shore, where the water is about sixty fe t deep. This must have been known when they first set up the town, of course, or it wouldn't have been started there. This fresh water gets to be salt enough, though, before it gets far from the bottom, and so they have to send down after it. When a man's wife calls him to go after a pail of water and be quick about it, over in Babrin, he grabs a goatskin bag, yells at the first neighbor he sees stretched out in the sand, and the two jump into a boat and row out a short distance. The man who is after the water wraps the goatskin about his left arm, with the mouth of the bag in his hand. Then he takes in his other hand a heavy stone. This stone is tied securely to the end of a long and strong line, for stones are valuable property there. Without them no one could get out and fetch a pail of water, and they are very scarce. With the stone firmly clutched in his hand the man dives into the water, and down he goes to the bottom. When he reaches the cool, fresh water gushing up from the sand, he opens the mouth of his goatskin bag, drops the stone, and floats upward with the strong current. The bag quickly fills and the mouth is closed again. When the man reaches the surface his companion lifts the bag into the boat, and the diver follows. The stone is then carefully drawn up, and the men go home.

"The water is cold and refreshing when it first comes up from the depths when it inst comes up from the depths of the sea, but it soon gets flat and warm. The more you drink of it the thirstier you get, but the natives can get along on a few swallows of it now and then. The requirements of the climate keep the divers at work in the submarine springs for all they are worth, and the shore is lined with their boats all day long. The springs are said to be the outlet of large natural aqueducts in a range of mountains more than 500 miles from the coast, but I guess they would have a hard time to prove that theory if they were called on her feet. These were fastened on by putting the great toe through a loop. When she was a year old her hair, which had been shaved, was allowed to grow a little, and then tied on the top in a very funny fashion. Every year it was worn differently.

A Remedy for Street Noises.

A physician writes to The Lancet: "Some years ago, owing to illness and long residence in the tropics, I became morbidly sensitive to noise of every kind, and procured complete relief in the following way: I placed some spermacoti ointment in the centre of a little square of thin, limp cotton, brought the corners together, tied them with thread, and inserted one of the little plugs well into each ear, and after a little kneading with gentle pressure found that I was absolutely deaf to all ordinary noises, such as the loud bark-ing of dogs and the rumbling of heavy carriages in the streets.

"A couple of points must be carefully attended to. The ointment must not be too soft, the quantity about the size of a small pea, and the little bag must be somewhat larger than its contents, to allow the plug to take the shape of the auditory canal. If the bag be too small, or its contents larger in size than a pea, it cannot be inserted into the ear, and if applied only to the orifice, it entirely fails in its object. This little experi-ment is easily tried, and a daily ex-perience of over twelve months warrants me in saying that it will be found invaluable in the sick-room."

To begin with, the custom of women entering saloons at all hours of the day, stepping up to the bars and calling for brandy and water, or whatever liquors they fancy. And these are not of the lower order by any means. On the contrary, many of them are the wives of respectable merchants, and dressed elegantly. In the evening, when the theatres are out, every gin-palace within several blocks is crowded with men, women, and children just from the theatre. The whole family enter and call for spirits, and thus set a terrible example to the children accompanying them. At the bars at all hours of the day and evening there are as many female customers as male, and there is no affectation or nonsense about it. They don't drink from wine-glasses, but take their measured gill the same as men, and take it "nate" at that. They can get water at home. The consumption of spirits in England is appalling, and yet there is little public drunkenness.

They All Knew They Knew.

[Portland Advertiser.] A Portland man who had commonly mispronounced the name of Mrs. Hemans by giving the "c" a long sound attempted to find out from several of his acquaintances if they had fallen into the same error. Not wishing to give a clew to the point in question, he asked casually, as if for information: "Who is the author of 'The Breaking Waves Dashed High?""

The answer promptly given was, Mrs. Sigourney. The same day he asked another friend the same question: "Who is the author of 'The Breaking Waves Dashed High?

'Leigh Hunt." He persevered in this method and anxiously inquired from still another: "Who is the author of 'The Breaking Waves Dashed High?"" This one had no doubt whatever, and boldly replied, "Julia Ward Howe." The next time the question was asked it was asked in this form, "How do you pronounce 'H-e-m-a-n-s?""

A PRIVATE LETTER. Probably no man is better known or more highly respected than Mr. Julian S. Carr, President of the Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Co., of Durham, N. C. In every tobacco store in the United States, and in many foreign countries, Blackwell's Durham Tobacco is sold, and it is a wellknown fact that the sales of this Company known fact that the sales of this Company largely exceed those of any other tobacco manufacturer. That such success has been obtained is due to the energy, integ-rity and ability of Mr. Carr, who has so successfully managed the affairs of the Company. Such a letter as the following, written by Mr. Carr to a personal friend whose only interest in the matter referred to was a desire to do a friendly act is car-whose only interest in the matter referred to was a desire to do a friendly act, is cer-tainly worthy of careful reading. Durham, N. C., Feb. 25, 1885. My Dear "Mac":—I have delayed writing to you, with reference to the Ath-lophoros remedy, until I could hear from a friend of mine, a gentleman of high character, who used Athlophoros at my suggestion with very great benefit. He is a tobacco manufacturer of high standing. I have waited to hear from him in order that I might use his name officially. I am that I might use his name officially. I am satisfied, however, that he must be at the New Orleans Exposition, and my letters have failed to reach him. So I will not delay answering your letter longer. You want to know whether Athlophoros is really as good as you thought when you so kindly sent me a couple bottles. I had a sister who was a victim of neuralgia and rheumatism. She suffered intensely, and her condition gave her family and friends much concern. Every known remedy was tried, but without effect. - When the bottles you sent me came, I sent one to

My sister was so encouraged from the use of this one bottle that I put her upon a thorough treatment of Athlophoros. I certainly owe you and Athlophoros a great debt of gratitude for the relief the remedy has given her. She has almost completely recovered from rheumatism, so much so that she has stopped the use of Athlophoros and considers herself well. My sister-in-law, to whom I gave the other bottle, was suffering fearfully with neuralgia, she had become unconscious from the pain—the Athlophoros relieved her entirely. 1 gave a bottle of Athlophoros to an intimate friend who suffered such in tense pain in his head that he looked as if his eyes would start from their sockets, and by its use he has been greatly benefited, and tells me that he received such relief from it that he orders it by the box and keeps it at all times in his houses never without it—can't afford to be, this is the gentleman to whom I wrote. I wanted to send with this his opinion in his own handwriting, but as I stated he must still be at New Orleans. A very worthy colored man, a house carpenter, Jim Whitted by name, lives in the house adjoining "my man of all work." One morning my man of an work." One morning my man told me that Jim was suffering so intensely from rheuma-tism that the neighborhood was disturbed day and night by his cries of agony. Wishing to test Athlophoros before my own eyes on a genuine case of acute rheu-mation. I work the athlophore freematism, I wrote the Athlophoros Company stating Jim's condition, and offering, if they would send me the remedy, to see that it had a fair trial in his case. I confess, with all my confidence in Athlo-phoros, I doubted whether it could help Jim, but it was faithfully tried and I think the proudest man now in all this community is Jim Whitted. If claims to be entirely relieved of all his rheuma-tism and not only that, but he says the stiffness in his joints, which came with the rheumatism, has all been removed, Within thirty hours after he began to use Athlophoros, he felt like mother per-son. These instances have all come under my personal knowledge. I am very slow to speak of or recommend any medicine, but when a remedy has the virtue and the merit that I believe Athlophoros has, I cannot hesitate to recommend it. I have given you facts-don't they answer your question fully? Yourstruly, J.S. CARR. Interesting Incidents. [San Francisco Alta.] Sergt. Maurice Connell, of the Third United States cavalry, and a survivor of the Lieut. Greely expedition, is in San Francisco, having arrived recently from Washington. He said, in the course of a conversation with a reporter: "I've been in service in Arizona under Gen. Cook, the celebrated Indian warrior, and was also with him in his campaigns in Wyoming, Montana and Nebraska. Volunteers were called for -men who had been on the frontier or in the army and were inured to hardships—and in April, 1881, I joined the Arctic exploring expedition under Lieut. ORNO Greely.' "Cannot you tell me any interesting incidents of your northern expedition?' "Well, the history of the expedition has been very fully published and commented upon in all of the leading news journals, and you, of course, do not wish for any repetitions. Still, I'll try to give you some of my personal impressions, which may, perhaps, be worthy of publication.

"I was greatly surprised at the ice north of the eighty-first parallel, where it is from fifty to eighty feet in thick-ness. It is called for this reason, and because of its wide extent, the ancient frozen sea. North of the eighty-fifth parallel it is supposed that the ice never breaks, but remains always frozen. Between the eighty-first and eighty-second parallels we were plentifully supplied with game.

"There were musk oxen, ptarmigan, Arctic foxes, and wild ducks and geese. The musk oxen never leave that section HEALTHY BREAD of the country, but the darkness prevents them from being hunted in winter. They have been seen, however, so GR.PRICCO early as the 26th of April, and so late as the 1st of November. It is claimed by some writers that these oxen always follow the direction of the receding sun, but my observation is that the presence of an immense glacier makes that impossible. The musk oven weigh less than 200 pounds in April, but increase in weight to 400 pounds in July. The Sibe-rian wolves, that seldom if ever attack man, follow the oxen in the heaviest The best dry hop yeast in the world. We ascertained that by skinning them immediately after killin the flesh was reneved of a distinguished it. The ptarmigan is apparently a species of prairie hen. The the flesh was relieved of a disagreeable St. Louis. Mo. color of the male is always white, but the female, in summer changes its plumage from white to brown. The ducks and geese of this region are always flying north during the summer, in search of continual daylight, I presume, or else a quiet locality in which to breed, but after Aug. 15, they begin to return to the south.

"The pleasantest chapter in our Arctic experience was the two years' life at Fort Conger. It was cold, though, the mean temperature being 5 degrees be-low zero, the minimum 72 degrees below, and the maximum 52 degrees above zero. But we built ourselves a house and had an ample stock of provisions. We also discovered, only six miles dis-tant, a mine, out of which could be knocked a ton of coal with a single blow of the pick, so that by loading the coal upon our sledges and hauling it over the ice to camp, we experienced no dif-ficulty in keeping warm. About 100 miles northwest of Fort Conger I saw an open river running out of Lake Hazen. The head of the river was open for a distance of about three miles, although for three consecutive months 50 degrees below zero was the mean temperature The river was open in April, with indications that it had been so all through pagan Chinese often ask the same thing. The people say, Why go to the mandar-ins about this little difficulty? Let us ask the advice of the missionary. I need hardly tell you that justice, so called, is most horribly administered in China, and our relation to the oppressed Chinaman is nothing more than that of witness, or of a lawyer giving legal advice when they are in troublemore in the former capacity than the latter. We can not refuse a subpœna, and when we give advice it is oftener such as a village elder would give in some rural districts in Europe. He gives gratuitous advice in the interest of harmony, which those who appeal to him refuse or accept at their pleasure. The Catholic church in China wishes only peace and quietness, and all we do is in their interest. If the people ask who is to be observed, we invariably tell them their mandarins. We never try to hide them from justice or to shelter them from any just penalty, and, although in two or three cases some Catholics may have put up a lantern over their doors, which is the sign of a mandarin, we have never approved of such action." "In what way do your priests in China try to adapt themselves to the ways and habits of the Chinese?"

"The missionaries dress as the Chinese do. They eat rice, squat on the ground, use chop-sticks, and, in all ways not superstitious or immoral, follow the customs of those about them. Of the customs of those about them. Of the hardships they undergo I may be per-mitted to say something. In the inte-rior of China they live on rice, fish, eggs, and a little pork. Beef is not to be had, nor European wine. They do remarkable things with the very little money at their disposal. They spend very little of it on them-selves. I do not know of any European missionary in China who spends more missionary in China who spends more than $10 a month on his food and clothing. All the rest is employed to build churches, schools, orphanages, and to create other necessary means for carry-ing on his work. Bishop Calcross, who died in Fohkien four years ago, cele-brated his golden episcopal jubilee. He had been fifty years in China and never once left his mission. We have several inissionaries now who have been in the interior of China over thirty years."

"What do you teach in your schools?" "We endeavor to make the instruction we give as practical as possible. Of course, the missionaries first master the Chinese language. We touch the Chinese classics, because without a knowledge of them our pupils cannot get employment in China. Then we teach geography and arithmetic, having Chinese books for that purpose. We also teach algebra, geometry, astronomy, and physics in the higher schools in the cities, having works in Chinese on most of these subjects. Theology we teach, of course, to advance pupils."

"Are there Catholic monasteries and convents in China?"

"There are a few monasteries, maintained by some of the religious orders, but we make no novices. In making changes all of a particular order would have to go together, which would some-times prove inconvenient for our work." "Do your converts remain true to the faith?' "They have not the moral stamina of western nations, but we have every reason to be satisfied with the results of our labors."

Birth and Death in Cuba. [Pittsburg Dispatch.]

You can be born without the assist-ance of a doctor in Cuba, but it is nec-essary to have the aid of a priest to make your birth legitimate. The law does not recognize your existence unless your nativity is recorded in the records of the church. Nor can you be mar-ried without the padre, because civil and Protestant ceremonies are not accepted as legal in China. Much less can you be buried, because the cemeteries belong to the church, and the heretic
