POETRY FROM THE PRATRIES.

An Iowa editor who attended a party was smit-ten with the charms of a fair damsel who wore a rose on her forchead, and thus gushed about it:

Dear chin.

Stool, fool, Fool, stool, Old fool.

Madame Carrelle's school was a remarkable institution, and the madame was a remarkable woman. I was of what Byron calls the bread-and-butter age, therefore did not appreciate these things much: but I did appreciate the four lovely girls who were my intimates. Vestella Raymond was my fa-

A Midnight Invasion.

I shall never forget an incident related by her brother. She and her mother lived alone on their estate, and were one day alone in the house—the servants being all out -when a straggling ruffian entered the parlor where they sat and demanded their money and jewels. Mrs. Raymond was paralyzed with fear. Vestella feigned excessive terror; and taking a small box from her pocket she handed it to him with the key, saying:

"We were preparing for a journey and had packed our jewels. I believe this box contains them; will you open this and see? My fingers tremble so I cannot unlock it." The man laid his pistol on the sofa for the purpose of unlocking the box, when Vestella snatched them up and commanded him not to stir hand or

It was his turn to be appalled, for there was no mistaking the will flashing from those eyes, and there was no trembling in the finger that pressed the trigger. He remained motionless.

In a few moments the servants entered and he was secured.

This was Vestella's style, and she manifested it in various ways among us. But the steely vigor of her character was softened and rendered lustrous by the glittering polish of mirthss and frome. Her merry conversation was our unfailing antidote for homesickness. So cheerful and affectionate, so warm hearted and confiding. And what sarcastic observations she would make, not exactly upon "men and things." but upon things in general, and the madame in particular. At her instigation we five formed ourselves into a society "for the mutu-

such secrets as it seemed unadvisable to communicate to our many friends among the other young ladies in the Our rules provided that there should be no reserve upon any subject between the members; that any interview with a gentleman should be faithfully reported, and all that transpired at said interview; and that any member guilty of falling in love should have her hair cut short and woven into bracelets for the other four. Vestella was a rogue, a mischief, a very Amazon. She could skate, ride, swim, and, oh, dear, I cannot mention half her exploits. Yet, when I remember how she hung over me through the long nights when I was racked with fever, away from home and friends, how nearly she filled the place of a mother to me, I felt persuaded that if the members of our society had an opportunity to fall in love she would be the first to improve it. The house was built in a style uncommon in this country. Its peculiarity consisted in two square towers upon the front-one upon each corner-giving it the appearance of an Episcopal church. Vestella called it the double-barreled school house. The house proper was three stories in height, and the towers rose one story above the roof. The windows of each story opened upon a broad veranda, extending across the front of the house quite around each tower, and these piazzas were supported by slender pillars.

The upper story in each tower had formerly been used as a deposit for old furniture and other rubbish, but when Vestella entered the school her rambling disposition led her into one of those rooms, and nothing would do but it must be fitted up for her occupation. She had such a taking way with her, and the increasing popularity of madame's establishment had so often forced upon her mind the propriety of shortly enlarging her buildings, that Vestella carried her point and was installed in the "tower top." It suited the society, for we could discuss our secrets without danger of being overheard, and could vent the explosions of mirth which they often elicited without risk of a visit from the hall teacher. The lawns and gardens extended in front of the house for a great distance, with a great slope, terminating in a circular pond, surrounded by an artificial grove. It was my delight in the afternoons, at such hours as we were not required to be in our rooms or a recitation, to take my book or fancy work and slip away to a cunning little seat I had constructed in the shade of the grape-vines.

I was seated here one afternoon when I was startled by men's voices on the other side of the paling. My first impulse was to run; but thought perhaps I might gather some thing to report to the society. I cautiously parted the vine leaves and peeped through a crack in the boards. There were two young men, whom recognized as members of the collegiate institute. One of them, a tall gracefully formed young fellow with a laughing blue eye, was conversing and gesticulating with great animation. "I can do it—I tell you I can do it; will wager a dozen baskets of champagne that I can do it."

"Done!" exclaimed the other, grasping his hand. "But how on earth are.

or would you like photographs?" He was still silent, blushing deeper and deeper and deeper. "It is my duty to hand you over to Madame C-, that you may be dealt with according to law. What have you to say why sentence should not be

"Oh, ladies, I do entreat you to spare me exposure. I will submit to any terms you impose. I should be expell ed from the institute; my mother's heart would be broken by the disgrace; I should lose all my friends—'

"Listen, then, to the sentence of the court." Vestella whispered to us, and each took her stand in a separate corner of the room. "In consideration of your extreme youth and the distress which a knowledge of your foolish freak would bring upon friends, this court—the court of independent and honorable Misses -has determined not to make public your misdemeanor; but I do hereby adjudge you to kneel before each of these young ladies separately, ask their forgiveness, and give them your promise that you will never attempt anything of the kind again during your whole life.—Then return to me and sign a confession which shall write, and which shall be left with the court for your good behavior. After which you must have a cupful of cold water poured over your head. This you can show to your comrades as evidence that you won the bet.

Now. sir." He rose from his knees, and, walk ing straight up to Anna Vesey, knelt before her and executed that part of his sentence. Then to Florilla, and so on to all of us, using different terms to every one, expressing himself so elegantly and with such apparent sincerity, that we were secretly enraptured with and forgave him readily, though none of us spoke. Then came the water ceremony. Vestella filled a large cut-glass pitcher with water, and, making him stoop with his head over the wash-stand poured it over his head. Then we each filled it in turn, and poured it over his head and his neck until his curls were all straightened out and no two hairs were lying in the same direction.

"Now, sir," said Vestella. "you can sign this confession and then go down the way you came up. You are a good path-finder, and I hope you will not be caught again. Tell your comrades that you found the 'tall, fierce one' wide awake." He crept to the window.

We followed him to the balustrade, saw him reach the ground and run little more than an hour. Having assisted Vestella to arrange her bed, we settled back to our own.

So ended the "Midnight Invasion."

The Smallest Watch in the World A small, gold penholder, resting in a rich velvet case, lay on a jeweler's showcase in John street, last week. The end of the holder was shaped like an elongated cube, and was an inch long. A faint musical ticking that issued from it attracted a customer's attention. The jeweler lifted the holder from the case, with a smile, and exhib ited a tiny watch dial. 1-16th of an inch in diameter, set in the side between two other dials almost as small. One indicated the day, and the other the month of the year. The center dial ticked off seconds, minutes and hours. "This is the smallest watch ever made," the jeweler said, "and the only one of its kind in the world. It took a Geneva watchmaker the better part of two years to fit the parts together so that they would work accurately. It has been exhibited in London and Paris." The works of the watch were so that they fitted length-wise in the holder. The mainspring was an elongated coil of steel fitted to the wheels by a tiny chain, and worked like an old-fashioned clock weight. The works were wound by means of a ittle screw of gold on the under side of the handle. A good pen was fitted in the holder, and the jeweler wrote with it without disturbing the operations of the fairy watch. "What's the price?" the customer asked. "A round $500," replied the jeweler, laughing.-New York Sun. An editor died and went to the world's crematory. The devil met him with a tender smile of compassion and thus shot off his mouth: "For many years thou hast meekly borne the blames of the bad spelling that the printer has you to get up there?"

"Just as Cleth Hyles got into the chamber at Miss King's. He climbed up the pillars to the balustrade in front came here, and how you did it. There thy paper. An exchange says the very earliest bricks were not baked, being used for the council, a young man of 19, is said mud walls, and it is probable that the difficulty of drying such walls first led to the idea of dividing the material composing them into comparatively small blocks These unburnt bricks were first cubical, but gradually became oblong. Later the practice arose of mixing rushes with the clay, in order to make a more complete and rapid drying. Then it became customary to insert pieces of reed into the outside work for old Uncle Dan? He's the faces of the bricks so that this face might dry rapidly and form a hard surface to the wall. The drying probably took at least two years, even under the astern sun: but after this period the bricks became exceedingly hard and were perfectly secure under atmospher ic changes, especially when covered by some impermeable substance, such a bitumen or vitrified glaze. Such bricks uninjured by the lapse of centuries are found in the pyramids of Central America and at Bagdad. The latter drunk at the time your roner. I wush-

Shortly before the retirement of Mr. Dallas as chief of the dead-letter office in the post-office department he told me that a Jew had been discovered shipping an entire stock of goods from New York to Baltimore through the mails to save express charges, and the goods had been detained at the deadletter office. The dead-letter office has become the most interesting, if not the most important, branch of the postal service. It was established in 1825. A law of that year made it the duty of postmasters to return to the department as "dead" letters which had remained in their offices three months. These were to be examined and returned if possible to the senders upon the payment of postage. A subsequent law required the return of "dead" ters to their writers without postal charge.

During the last year there was received at the office an average of nearly fifteen thousand letters daily, or a total of about five million. These have been handled by 120 employes, mostly women. The dead letters are classified as "ordinary" and "unmailable," the latter being such as do not have a sufficient address, or which contain prohibitory matter. Misdirected letters will average 1,000 a day, and letters which have no address at all, 1,000 a month. It is an astonishing fact that the greater per cent of the latter contain money. Of the domestic letters opened the past year about forty thousand coutained money, drafts, checks, and meney orders, amounting to about $1,500,000 Nearly seventy thousand contained postage stamps. Every opened letter containing an inclosure of value is carefully recorded, and those, for which no owner can be found, are filed away, subject to reclamation within 4 years When the writer's name is attached to a valuable letter he is informed of the money being detained, and by satisfactory proof is able to secure it. A lady has charge of the misdirected letters. If possible they are sent to the person they are intended for. So proficient has this lady become that she is acquainted with the names of cities, villages, and streets as the average schoolboy is acquainted with A, B C. At her desk she has railway guides, directories, and books containing the names of newspapers, bankers, ministers, and the streets of all the large cities in the United States to aid her in forwarding letters to the proper person, city, or state. A letter was recent ly directed to "110 C street, Nashville cenn." It was returned to the deadletter office. At once the lady knew that the party addressed resided in Washington, as there is but one "C" street in the United States, and that is in that city. The letter was delivered. and the party to whom it was sent was found. In directing it the writer had placed the name of his own city pon the envelope—a common error. Oftentimes the lady is required to guess at the address; and in no place can a woman improve her faculty of guessing more than right here. She is not required to guess like the Englishman accupying a similar position in the department of Great Britain. A letter was received in that office directed: "My son, up three flights of stairs, London." To-day a letter came to the department at Washington addressed to Wine Dock." The name of the town to which the letter was sent is Wyandotte. "The principal reason for misdirection is carelessness," said the lady as she threw upon the table before her a pile of a hundred or more such letters. "It is a common practice to mix Illithinking of him, and the influence of nois, Indiana, and Iowa; Kansas, Ar' their minds unconsciously upon his kansas, and Nebraska; and Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota," "When it is impossible to forward

Keeping the head perfectly clean, says a writer in the Salem (Mass.) Gazette, is a great aid to health. A distinguished physician, who has spent much of his time at quarantine, said that a person whose head was thoroughly washed, every day rarely ever took contageous diseases, but when the hair was allowed to become dirty and matted it was hardly possible to escape infection. Many person find speedy relief for nervous headache by washing the head thoroughly in weak soda water. We have known cases almost wholly cured in ten minutes by this simple remedy. A friend finds it the greatest relief in case of "rose cold," the cold symptoms entirely leaving the eyes after one thorough washing of the hair. The head should be thoroughly dried afterward, and draughts of air should be avoided for a little while. The Christian scientists of Boston

A lunatic named Reaume had full command of a Wabash train from Kansas City to Chicago, Saturday, by the free use of his revolver, having exclusive use of two chair cars. He thought that he was being pursued by a lynching party, and was defending himself by shooting at every head that he saw. Several attempts were made along the line to arrest him, but it was not done until he arrived in Chicago, and had killed Policeman Barrett and had himself been shot. About 120 shots were fired during his ride and capture.

President Cleveland is finding fault with democratic congressmen because they recommend for appointment drunkards, defaulters, and nearly every other class of criminals. What are the fellows to do? They doubtless have great trouble to find any others among their party constituents who will take offices, and it will never do to let the blasted republican rascals hold them longer than is necessary.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—The decrease ment issued to-day for the month of May is $4,425,485, and for the eleven months $54,500,000. The surplus for the last fiscal year was over $110,000,-000. It will hardly exceed $63,000,000 this year. Compared with May 1, there is no change in the interest bearing debt, and the non-interest bearing col-umn shows a reduction of less than $500,000. The so-called decrease in the debt for the month, therefore, consists of increased cash in the Treasury which, deducted from the obligations shows that the treasury is stronger by the sum stated than it was one month go. The available cash balance is $162.-703,271, an increase over May 1 of $7,000,000. This is the largest balance held by the Treasury since July, 1881, when it exceeded $171,000,000, and it is doubtful whether the present balance has ever been so large with the single exception named. Most of the deficiency appropriations made by Congress have been paid, together with other large sums provided for extraordinary expenditures, such as Alabama awards and the New Orleans Exposiance is certain to be steadily increased during the coming six months unless the Secretary of the Treasury will call bonds for redemption.

During the month the net gold has decreased $2,300,000, and the gold not covered by outstanding certificates being $115,810,533. In the same time there has been an increase to the silver dollars not covered by outstanding cerificates of nearly $7,000,000, the number of these pieces now owned by the Creasury being 57,159,669. Since March , the date at which the present adminstration may be said to have assumed the direction of affairs, there has been an increase in the net silver holdings of the treasury of $15,000,000, a monthly average of $5,000,000. Deducting $6,500,000 for the coinage of the past three months it will be seen that in the period named the Treasury absorbed $8,500,000 of silver in addition to the entire product of the mints. For the same period in 1884 the increase in these coins was about $6,000,000. These igures do not include the amount of silver bullion, which varies very little,

Why should you go and stay in other people's houses? Another person's house is hardly better than a hotel; indeed very often it is worse. You must pretend to eat all day long; you must pretend to feel amiable from noon to midnight; you must have all kinds of plans made for you and submit to them; you can never read but in your own room, and, generally speaking, there is nothing in the library—if it be an English library—except Tillotson, Wordsworth and Darwin. # head of hair, as brown and fresh as he ever had. ***D** MRS. A. T. WALL, Greenfield, Cheshire, Eng., writes: "I have found the greatest beneft from the use of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER, it having restored my hair, which was raplly falling off, and returned its original color." ***D**TRIL SEIT, Detroit, Mich., certifies that "HALL'S HAIR RENEWER is excellent for hair growing, and gives back the natural color to faded and gray hair." MRS. S. E. ELLIOTT, Glenville, W. Va., says: "One bottle of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER restored my hair to its natural, youthful color." No injurious substances enter into the composition of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER, and it is not a dye. Its vegetable ingredients render it in the highest degree beneficial to the scalp as a preventive of disease. Its effects are natural and lasting, and it does not make the hair dry and brushy, like the so-called restoratives compounded with alcohol.

HAIR RENEWER:

AT MRS. HUNSBERRY, 344 Franklin Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., after a severe attack of Erysipelas in the head, found her hair—already gray—falling off so rapidly that she soon became quite bald. One bottle of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER brought it back as soft, brown and thick as when she was a girl.

AD MR. KESLING, an old farmer, near Warsaue, Ind., had scarcely any hair left, and what little there was of it had become nearly white. One bottle of HALL'S HAIR REFEWER stopped its falling out, and gave him a thick, luxuriant head of hair, as brown and fresh as he ever had.

Tire style of pioneer meetings has materially changed. When they were first inaugurated, a few years since, the entertainment consisted in stories of methods and privations of pioneer life by the old boys themselves; but of late years it has become fashionable to employ some flowery speaker from abroad to talk on some great moral subject. as foreign to pioneer life as possible, and usually by some young man who knows of pioneer work only as he has read of it. There are those who like the old way best.

Major L. A. Duncan has sold a half interest in the Niles Republican to Otis S. Eastman, from Manchester, N. II., later of Washington, D. C. The Major always worked well at newspaper work in single harness, and for the past seventeen or eighteen years has been giving Niles the best paper in Berrien county (excepting the RECORD, of course.) and with the aid of a live partner, as Mr. Eastman is said to be, we may expect still an improvement, BENTON HARBOR and other people at the north end of the county, and at Berrien Centre, continue to lightly agitate the question of removal of the county seat. They will probably not succeed, as each advocate of removal is positive that his own town is just the place for the county seat, and no other place will be satisfactory to him. Future railroad movements in this county will doubtless have some bearing on the removal question.

DECORATION DAY in Buchanan is always the chief memorial day of the year, and Saturday was no exception to the rule. The day opened rather drearily and damp, but by ten o'clock the rain ceased and there was no farther interference by the weather. The program was fully carried out, excepting that moisture drove the speaker to Rough's Opera House, instead of the old school house grounds. There was more than the usual number of people in town for this occasion, the procession to the cemetery reaching nearly the entire distance.

THERE was an entertainment in

Oglesby's Troubadours, and in the interest of the Alert Hose Company. That is to say, the Alert Hose Company agrees to pay license, hall, local printing bill, and do the posting for 371/2 per cent of the total receipts. This is a trick recently invented by traveling troupes, and specially those of a worthless character, as this one proved to be, to get their bills cheaply paid, as they well know that charges League is as full of business as the will be made lighter for local organisouth terminus of a "wassup." It is | zations, and especially the Hose combringing all kinds of law breakers to | pany, than for the traveling company, if any reduction in price is made. The arrest for keeping open store and actu- | local organization knows nothing whatever of the show until the advance agent reaches town, and is anxious for a "divy," which, in nine cases in ten, leaves the Hose boys to pay some bills out of their treasury, and feel as if the citizens had not patronized them. As a remedy the RECORD would suggest that those local organizations fight shy of all such companies that they do not know perfectly well to be first-class, and connect their recommendations with nothing that is not of that class. The people will soon learn that when -the Hose company recommends a troupe it is known to be first-class, deserving of patronage, and will be patronized. Besides, the class of entertainments that visit a town of this size is largely governed by the action of local organi-

New York Times Report l The shell of the oyster was next taken up. "What is the meaning," asked Prof. Albert S. Bickmere, in his lecture, of the black mark in an oyster shell It is sometimes called the 'heart mark. That is an error, as the heart is not located there. The black mark is the place where the muscles are attached to shell. The shell of r, as with the clam, brought apart by the electicity of a ligament. The moment an oyster dies its shell opens, for the mechanical elasticity of the ligament is retained." The black mark could be traced all down through the shell as it was passed down by the successive layers deposited from within. The stomach of an oyster was pronounced highly complicated. None of the bivalves had anything analogous to teeth, and the gastric juce secreted by the liver might be said to contain all the properties of the gastric juice of the human stomach, the saliva and the bile, heart of an oyster is composed of two parts. The convolutions around the stomach made the liver-like organ seen in ovsters. A convoluted nortion outside of the liver was where the eggs were formed in the female. "There are males and females in American oysters," was a statement of the lecturer that was met with considerable interest, "but the common oyster of Europe combines the two sexes. young in English oysters," he explained, instead of being wafted out to go it on their own account were carried into the gills of the parent until they filled up the substance, and it seemed strange that the animal could breathe. The young were about 1-500th of an inch in diameter. They were kept in the gills for some time, when they swam out and began life for themselves. The American oyster was about 1-250th of an inch in diameter when it struck out for itself. The babies had a great fondness for attaching and had great dissolving power. The selves to the shell of the mother, and this fact has been taken advantage of by cultivators, who scattered shells in the beds. The lower valve of an ovster was always the deeper one. A piece of seaweed to which were attached thousands of young oysters was shown much enlarged upon the screen. Every one of these oysters might have lived, for the seaweed would disintegrate and each would float off by himself. How many young two parents could produce in a season was a matter of conjecture, for the; could not be counted. The number had been estimated from 4,000,000 up to 100,000,000. An oyster would grow, probably, in proportion to the quantity of food which reached it. The number of layers in the shell had no connection with the age of an oyster.

"Oysters have been cultivated for use ever since the time of luxurious Rome, said the professor. "It was in the lake of Fusare that oysters were cultivated when the buried cities were above the ground. A canal was long ago cut to the Mediterranean, and it is now one of the most successful oyster establishments in Europe." Professor Bickmore said that great banks of oysters once existed on the coast of Maine, and there was no reason why they should not again, for further north, in the gulf of St. Lawrence, were found oysters of a very large si.e. The garden of the oyster, however was Chesapeake bay. The dimunition in quantity had been one-third in three The remedy was cultivation, which could be carried on to an endless extent. If everybody was allowed to go and rake off adult oysters they would disappear, just as in the Adirondacks the trees were going down. How large could an oyster be? In the mucould an oyster be? In the mu-seum was a fossil specimen twenty inches long. In closing, Professor Bickmore spoke of the pearl oysters, and described the methods of dradeing and raking for the bivalves.

> The Skeleton of a Sponge. [New York Times.]

"It is only the skeleton of a sponge that is commonly used in removing dirt," the lecturer said, "a substance that in the animal sponge is analagous to the finger nails of a human hand. The sponges are found in various portions of the world, gathered in masses below the surface of the water. The youthful sponge first makes its appearance on the outer border of the adult in the form of a cell, which gradually increases in size and complexity until it bursts through the maternal tissue and floats at freedom in the ocean. It is very minute, and for a time has an independent life. It is sowing its wild oats, so to speak, but as it increases in size it attaches itself to its more matured brothers and sisters and develops with them into adult form. Sponges are gathered by means of grappling hooks. They are floated to inclosed portions of the sea, where they are left until the exposure of the sun and the wash of the sea leaves nothing but the skeleton."

Costly Fur Mantles.

[Exchange.] The Paris Gaulois says that the supply of furs is becoming exhausted. It says that by and by a suit of sables will be dearer than rubies, if indeed, a good one is not so at present. Mrs. Mackay has a mantle made of the choicest bits of 10,000 black-fox skins, and it cost $16,000. Judic wears a mantle worth The most costly fur mantle in the world is said to belong to the duchess of Edinburgh, who inherited it from her mother. It is valued at $60,000. The present czarina has one almost a counterfeit of it. A suit of sable belonging to Adelina Patti is said to be worth nearly $40,000.

Swiss Mountain Hotels

[Boston Transcr'p'.] A correspondent in Switzerland says that many of the mountain hotels are preparing to lay down wires to connect with the nearest center at their foot, so that the intending visitor may, without cost, make all his arrangements before commencing to climb, and find his dinner waiting for him at the top.

Indecorous and Sinful. [New Orleans Picayune.]

It is not a sin to grow old, but it is sinful to usurp the place of youth, and borrow a giddiness that does not become one who is old and tough.

A Stingless Honey-Bee. LJscksonville Times-Union.] It may not be generally known to those who have been stung by the common black honey-bee or the still more dangerous "improved Italian bee," that in the state of Yucatan and some other of the Central American states there is a honey-gathering bee that has no sting, and that such bees will secure for their owner as large an amount of honey as do the stinging bees. The following extract from Mrs. Chester P. Walker, the daughter of Dr. Henry Perrine, who was murdered by the Indians in 1840 on Indian Key, will give some important knowledge of these wonderful bees, that may be cultivated in Florida. She says: "About the year 1835, I think, my father sent to Key West and Indian Key some hives of stingless bees. Three were sent to Indian Key, and when we were there in 1839 and 1840 one hive still remained. The other two in swarming had steered for the mainland and were lost. Those at Key West had also disappeared. Their hives were simply hollow logs. Their cells were entirely unlike the common bees', being an octagon about half as large as an ordinary marble and holding about a teaspoonful of pure. clear honey. This is as I remember them. At one time when a flag of truce was flying, the Indians reported to the officers at Fort Dallar that they had found a new bee that did not sting. It is possible that some of our pioneers must have found trees of such honey and yet been afraid to make use of them from the entirely different appearance of the comb and honey. They are worth seeking for, and if found will but add another to the strange and wonderful list of Florida productions. "Father sent at the same time of sending these to Florida a hive to old. Peale's museum in New York. Peale kept them a long time, feeding them on sweetened water and amusing himself with the consternation of his visitors at finding bees flying around the museum. These succumbed to the cold.' If any of these bees yet remain in Florida, as another monument to that illustrious man who did and sacrificed so much for the good of Florida, they should be carefully cultivated and increased in numbers. If not, others should be introduced from their original habitat. A National Press Intelligence Bureau [New York Town Topics.] Two well-known and able journalists have lately organized in this city a National Press Intelligence bureau, the idea and purposes of which are so excellent that it would seem as if it could not fail of success. There is a similar organi ation in London, but the one in question is the first to be started in this country. Its managers, recognizing the fact that public opinion is voiced through the press, and that there are housands of persons in public life and in the professions, to whom a knowledge of the public's idea of their actions, work and measures is most valuable, propose to furnish to any of these who may become subscribers to the bureau, all clippings from the newspapers of America and Europe relating to them in

It will be seen at once how manifestly impossible it would be for any one person to obtain more than a small number of these newspaper comments, and how a bureau of this sort, provided with the files of all newspapers and fully equipped with a body of careful clerks, etc., could supply them. It will be of advantage also to the newspapers, and bring their opinions and comments of men and measures oftentimes to the knowledge of those persons affected by them. managers purpose also the establishment of a reading room in a convenient locality for the use of subscribers, and many other advantages. They have already received subscriptions and letters of endorsement from many prominent public and professional men.

Physiology of Dessert.

[Medical and Surgical Reporter.] After the meal came the bread, cheese, and dessert. The bread will, no doubt, supply additional dextrin and the cheese additional albuminoids; but if we direct our attention only to the stomach and to the chemical changes which are going on in it, it is not quite easy to see why bread, cheese and dessert should be taken at the end of din-

If we turn our attention, however, to the circulation and the nervous system, and remember the effect which I have already mentioned as produced upon them by the mastication and deglutition of savory food, we can at once see a good reason for the common manner of terminating a dinner. In order to supply abundant gastric juice for the diestion of the food introduced into it, the stomach requires an abundant supply of blood, and the nervous system must be kept active in order to respond to the calls made upon it. The savory cheese, swallowed in small morsels, and the sweet fruits, which strongly stimulate the nerves of taste, or nuts, which require considerable mastication, cause an abundant flow of blood to the nerve centers; while the frequent movements of swallowing stimulate the heart and increase the rapidity of the general circulation.

WORKERS OF AMERICA.

Number Engaged in Gainful Occupations, According to Superintendent Walker.

[Boston Herald.] The number of residents of the United States engaged in gainful avocations is 17,392,000 or 34.6 per cent. of the total population, while of the whole population over 10 years of age 48 per cent. are workers. Students, those incapable of work from injuries received, and criminals, are not included in the working population. It is noteworthy that those males who have no occupation, but live upon their private fortune, form an insignificant part of the total population. The rapid increase of the proportion of workers in late years is due to the increase of factories and the extension of the principle of the division of labor. The former cause has been instrumental in bringing women into the field of labor, and thus largely increasing the percentage, while the influence of the latter cause constantly creates a new demand for labor. The number of persons engaged in agriculture is largely in excess of that in any other occupation, forming 44.1 per cent. of the total working population. The omission of slave labor in the seventh and eighth censuses has left no standard of comparison with the latter censuses, as the enormous amount of labor engaged in cotton production in the south was wholly unrepresented before 1860. At the present time about 4,500,000 of the 7,600,000 engaged in agriculture are independent farmers and planters, nearly 3,000,000 are farm laborers, and 130,000 are florists, gardeners, etc. It is safe to assume that agriculture furnishes the means of sus-tenance to one-half of the total population of the country. A vast increase of those engaged in mining has taken place in late years. Among the artisans, carpenters take the lead in numbers, having increased from 150,000 in 1850 to 373,000 in 1880. A reduction in the rate of increase is noticeable in late years, however, due to the manufacture by machinery of doors, sashes. etc., work which was formerly done by the job. The number of coopers and wheelwrights has suffered little change since 1850 for similar reasons. Among those engaged in personal and professional service, amounting to 4,421,000 persons, many grades of labor are included, from the lawyer, clergyman, physician and teacher on the one hand to the barber, bootblack and household drudge on the other. The number of clergymen has increased from 26,842 in 1852 to 64,698 in 1880; lawyers from 23,939 to 64,137; physicians, from 40,500 to 86,000; teachers, from 30,000 to 238,000; dentists, from 2,923 to 12,314. There are now 4,812 actors, 3,500 architects, 1,131 authors and literary men, 1,168 chemists. 8,261 civil engineers, and 12,308 journalists. A Remarkable Electric Engine. New Orleans Times-Democrat.

What is known as the Bidwell electric engine was placed upon exhibition at Philadelphia a few days ago. It is a remarkable electric engine, which lights, heats and propels a car by use of a dynamo, which can be operated by either steam or water. The electric current is conveyed by wire to the conductors and transmitted from these to the motor in the car. Its additional utility is demonstrated by the fact that the return current also lights the streets along the line of railway. At the exhibition the car was propelled a distance of 200 feet around a large room, with a dozen passengers, under perfect control by the engineer or driver; it was lighted and heated and large electric lights were made to burn along the line, receiving their current from the same dynamo that gave the propelling power to the motor. Bottomless New England.

[New York Times.] A queer delusion prevails among the more ignorant inhabitants of the New England states. It is a common belief, that most of the spring fed lakes which abound in that part of the country are, if not exactly bottomless, at least of unfathomed depth. Just how this belief arose nobody knows, but it is certainly widespread, and no amount of argument or demonstration can convince the natives to the contrary.

> Oldest Specimen of Glass. [Chicago Herald.]

The oldest specimen of pure glass bearing anything like a date is a little molded lion's head, bearing the name of an Egyptian king of the eleventh dynasty, in the Slade collection at the British museum. That is to say, at the eriod which may be moderately at more than 2,000 years B. C. glass was not only made, but made with a skill which shows that the art was nothing new even at that time.

He Was Not Seeking Beauty. [Chicago Ledger.] "I hear that Swarkins is married again. Have you seen his wife?"

"Is she good-looking?"

"Oh, no, she's a very plain body, but as strong as an ox. You see, he didn't care so much for beauty. What he wanted was a woman who could dig potatoes and make them youngsters of his walk the chalk-line."

Impaled on the Barb.

[Exchange.] In Maricopa county, Arizona, there is considerable barbed fence, and the vast flocks of wild ducks which frequent the valley often fly low, and, striking the barbed fences, become impaled thereon It is said that tons of ducks are gath ered daily by boys from the fences and sent to market.

[Arkansaw Traveler.] Evidence of the sanitary value of sunlight is afforded by the recent experiments in France of Mons. E. Duclaux, who finds that the light of the sun, in its action on germs, is fifty times as destructive as its heat.

"Let the Other Man Walk."

[Longman's Magazine.] There is in America a familiar tale, summed up in the phrase, "Let the other man walk!" It relates that a traveler in a hotel was kept awake long past midnight by a steady tramp, tramp, tramp, tramp on the floor over him. At last he went up stairs and asked what the matter might be. The occupant of the upper room said that he owed money to another man, for which he had given a note, and the note came due on the morrow and he could not meet it. "Are you certain that you cannot pay your debt?" asked the visitor. "Alas! I cannot," replied the debtor. "Then," said the visiter, "if it cannot be helped, lie down and go to sleep and let the other man walk!" Now this is a mere Americanization of a story of Poggio of an inhabitant of Perugia, who walked in melancholy because he could not pay his debts. "Vah, stulte," was the advice given him, "leave anxiety to you cred-

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Genesso, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE CREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten, "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both," Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

Muscles. 42 per cent
Organs in the chest and abdomen. 9 per cent
Fat and skin. 25 per cent
Brain. 2 per cent Therefore, supposing a person weighed 150 pounds, 63 pounds would be muscle, 37½ pounds would be skin and fat, 24 pounds would be bone, and 3 pounds More than half the weight of the body is bone and muscle. The amount of water in food is very large. A beefsteak contains 75 per cent. of water. In buying a pound only one-fourth of that pound is dry, solid meat. Cabbages contain 85 to 90 per cent. of their weight of water, and succulent fruits sometimes more than 90 per cent. Of substances most commonly eaten, rusks or biscuits are the driest, and watermelons the most watery of foods. When water is taken into the system it assists without doubt in the building up of new tissues, in the repair of old.

According to this view it is not merely a dilutent of fluids, it does not simply play an inactive part like a lubricant of machinery, but is in the truest sense a Life cannot be maintained on pure starch, sugar, or fat for a long time; on the other hand, a purely meat diet can maintain life indefinitely.

Sugar cannot be made the basis of diet, but rice can, so that, taking complex foods, rice heads the list. Of the three great foods on which, with very little addition, millions of human beings live-viz., rice, bread, and potatoesrice is nearly all assimilated, fine wheaten bread being almost equal to rice, while with potatoes there is nearly 40 per cent. of waste, or substances which pass away without being utilized. The population of London is sheltered by 550,000 dwelling houses, and the area of streets and squares embraces 122 square miles. Every day sees an average of 10,000 strangers enter the city, and 123 persons added to the population; while each year 28 miles of new streets are laid out, and 9,000 new houses erected. There are 129,000 paupers, upon which keep a close eye. The population includes 120,000 foreigners, than there are in Rome, and more Jews than there are in Palestine. Two thousand clergymen preside over 620 churches and 423 chapels, of which latter buildings the Independents have 121, the Baptists 100, the Wesleyans 77, the Catholics 90, the Calvinists 10, the Presbyterians 10, the Quakers 71 and the Jews 10. The number of cats kept by the people is so large (700,000) that "cat's meat" is daily delivered at the majority of houses. The 8,000 horses which die each week are utilized to meet this demand.

Ghost Hunting Parties.

[Town Topics.] An hilarious kind of amusement lately introduced in Philadelphia, is what is known as a ghost hunting party. The nvitations are printed on coffin-shaped paper and adorned with cross-bones, dungeon chains and other cheerful de vices. The party repair to some house popularly supposed to be haunted, and the entertainment consists in trying to scarce everybody into hysterics. Blue lights, mysterious footsteps, clanking chains and other adjuncts to every wellbred ghost are provided by the hostess, and the guests amuse themselves by firing pistols at imaginary apparitions and in unearthing hypothetical spooks. A Doctor's Discovery. [Exchange.]

Dr. J. H. Roberts writes from Liberia to The Boston Medical and Surgical Journal that he is convinced that the medicinal herbs grown in certain climates are especially adapted for the cure of diseases which prevail in them, though they may be useless elsewhere He finds the plants of Liberia much more successful in African fever than the best of drugs prepared in more highly civilized countries.

girls of good appearance are compara-tively a drug. In times of plenty they The marriage broker is ever a wel-come guest where there are daughters to marry, and also in houses where the sons wish to find a suitable bride. The young people are not consulted by the broker. She deals with the parents and generally with the mothers. Crafty as a horse-dealer, she runs glibly over the various advantages, mental, physical and pecuniary, of her clientele of both sexes. Such a one has brilliant prospects—has (important consideration) no other wife. As for Yusuf, how good-looking he is! And Hassan, no man was ever so good tempered. Of the other sex she sings the praises no less. The skill of Bebe as a housekeeper, the wealth of the ugly daughter of the banker, the dangerous charms of the portionless Zuleakha she can never say too much about. Her main business is to bargain for the sum to be paid to the father for his daughter's hand; a sum which is usually expended by that father in pots and pans (all of copper) and other utensils, which he presents to his child, as her separate property. The details being settled after much haggling, the young people are engaged, and the marriage broker gets her com-mission both from the parents of the bridegroom and those of the bride-elect. Among the poor and the laboring classes the bargain is arranged on other grounds. The peasant takes a wife for her thews and sinews, or her skill at weaving carpets or making cheese; while the bridegroom is or is not eligible according as he may be capable of hard work, or may hold some small office, or have a bit of land or a shop. Here the "marriage broker" is generally an amateur, who conducts the negotiations purely from that love of matchmaking which is such a blessing to the world.

The Prevalence of Cancer.

[Detroit Free Press.] Cancer, the disease with which Grant is afflicted, is more prevalent than is perhaps generally supposed. In Massa chusetts, according to The Springfield Republican, it is one of the twelve most destructive diseases, although not quite as uniform as other diseases, being more prevalent in some localities than others. It chiefly affects those between 40 and 70 years of age, and is more likely to attack women than men.

An English writer says it is increasing in that country, but more among the rich and prosperous than among the poor. On this account he attributes it to luxurious eating. The French statis-tics, however, show that the death rate among the rich is only one-third more than among the poor, showing that good living and luxury may aggravate, but does not cause, the trouble. Cancer prevails among domestic animals but not among wild ones. The only cure, and that is by no means certain, is the knife or caustic, the knife being much the less painful remedy. The Republican is of the opinion that Gen. Grant is a good subject for the disease. "Since his return from Europe he has presented the appearance of a man of good living, full habit, and very little exercise, still attached to his cigar. He has been abstemious in the use of wines, but his face, had become florid and heavy, his form stout and his gait soft and without elasticity of carriage. His head, always carried forward, has hung more heavily bowed, and it has been apparent that he would not see old age. Had it not been for the crushing reverses of the past year, however, he might have been spared to enjoy the fulfillment of the scriptural allotment of life. He will be 63 on April 27."

> Mexico's Coal Mine. [Chicago Tribune.]

The reported discovery of an extensive bed of coal in Mexico near the line of the Mexican Central railway and about midway between El Paso del Norte and the City of Mexico is the most important event in the history of that country. If this coal mine shall prove to be abundant it will be worth hundreds of millions of dollars to the Mexican people; it will make the railroad enterprises profitable, and develop the resources of the country at a rate which the most enthusiastic believers in its destiny have not anticipated.

The lack of fuel has been one of the most serious hindrances to Mexican progress. The mountains have been denuded of timber, and brushwood gathered by peons at a shilling a day commands $30 a cord, while a better grade of wood runs as high as $80 a cord. The railroads have been buying English and American coal, and hauling the former from Vera Cruzand the latter from the Indian territory and New Mexico at an enormous cost. If coal becomes cheap and plenty the railroad and mining interests of Mexico will double in value within a short time.

> Quail in California. [Western Letter.]

Quail are now so abundant in California that they throng the roadways. While rewards are offered by farmers in southern counties for killing quail the Alamedo and Contra Costa farmers say the bird is useful to them. It attacks their grain only as a last resort, and chiefly subsists upon insects. Their destruction of ants is of incal-culable importance. The quail's great foe is the wildcat. The latter animal is prolific in the counties named. A quail nesting will cover fifteen to twenty, and nearly every egg will hatch. They nest once a year, and during such periods the male is a most pugnacious defender of the mother and young. The wildcar as large as four ordinary cats, will stretch himself out and put out his tongue; the male quail will approach and peck it, whereat the cat seizes his toothsome prey.

Oldest Dynasty in the World.

[Chicago Herald.] The present reigning dynasty of Japan dates back 2,546 years and is considered the oldest in the world. The records of Japan are accurately preserved for that time. All the nations now called civilized, without exception, have had their beginning since then.

During the reign of King James I not one Englishman in a thousand work stockings.

A Great Year for Chewing Gum. [New York Sun.] This is a great gum year in Maine, especially on the Penobscot, and now that the sun is climbing up into the north a little and the lumbermen are coming out, the air is fairly redolent with the perfume of spruce. The logs, knees, and bark are not the only valuable parts of the great timber tree, for the gum is worth considerable, even in its rough state, just as it is hacked from the crotches of old trees. There are two or three firms here which buy large quantities of it from the lumbermen and gum-hunters for the purpose of refining it, as they say. But as a general thing the refining consists in adulteration with rosin. They throw it into a big kettle, bark and all, and boil it to about the consistency of thick molasses, skimming the impurities off as they rise to the surface. Then, if the purpose be to adulterate, some lard or grease and a lot of rosin is added, and in some cases a little sugar. The mixture then becomes thicker, and, after more stirring, is poured out on a slab, where, while it is yet hot, it is rolled out in a sheet about a quarter of an inch thick, and then chopped with a steel die into pieces half an inch wide and threequarters of an inch long. These pieces are wrapped in tissue paper and packed in wooden boxes. There are 200 pieces in a box. Some gum is treated in this way without adulteration.

The best gum comes from no particular locality, but always from the biggest trees. The doctors up here say chewing gum benefits the teeth. The loggers, in their many idle hours by the camp fire, whittle out miniature barrels from blocks of cedar or white pine, hollow them out, and fill them with the choicest gum the woods afford for gifts to their sweethearts, children, or friends when they "come down" in the spring. Others, who go into the woods for gum alone, bring down big bags of gum, and sell it to manufacturers of the improved article. Up there adulterated gum is called patent gum. Different Methods of Warming Rooms. [Ivan Vjoczoaski, Vienna.]

In England the ordinary method of warming a room is by means of an onen fre. It's a very cheerful way, certainly, but very dear, because not half the warmth given out by the burning coal is radiated into the room. It all goes up the chimney. In France there's an improvement by using stoves. Here in Austria it is still better. The stoves are large, about six feet high and two broad, but have a small place for the fire. So, when the fire is kindled, heat is given out to the sides of the stove before it can lose itself in the flue. In Russia, the stoves have a number of flues, usually six, up the first of which the heated smoke goes, down the second, up the third, etc., so that by the time it reaches the chimney it is almost cold. A handful of wood warms the stove enough to heat a large room. When the fire is burnt out the communications to the chimney and room are cut off, then the stove slowly radiates its accumulated heat into the room. Where I am writing this letter is a large, white earthenware stove six feet high and forty-eight square feet of surface. A pound of coal sets it going and keeps the day. Mail Facilities. [Norristown Herald.]

A small village in an adjoining county clamored for "mail facilities" for several years, and recently there was a postoffice established in the place. The mail the first week consisted of three patent medicine circulars, a package of public documents, and a "horned frog." Nothing booms a place so much as plenty of "mail facilities," the room warm for the greater part of
