TIT FOR TAT.

A CURE FOR FLIRTING.

The last dying cadences of a dreamy waltz were floating over the perfumed crowd in Mrs. Powys-Jelf's brilliant ball room; there were the stirs and murmurs of separating couples, and the ill-suppressed yawns of weary wall-flowers that follow in the wake of every fashionable waltz; Mrs. Elmore, a young American lady, blessed with great beauty and great wealth, and who, with her husband, is staying at the Alexandra Hotel, has succeeded in escaping her partner, and stands in the window playing carelessly with the tuberoses and jessamine of her bouquet; while her lovely blue eyes-so liquid and innocent—wander from place to place in search of some one whom she cannot find.

There were few more beautiful faces than hers, even in that fashionable throng, where half the bells of Belgrava had brought their diamonds and bright eyes to dazzle the peers and politicians and lawmakers of the land. A little below medium height, with the fragile delicacy of a fairy, her complexion had the transparent waxen bloom to be seen only in children, while her heavy golden hair lay over her low forehead in rippling waves of amber; her eyes were dark bluelarge and velvety and translucent as a sapphire, while a little crimson mouth, curved like Cupid's bow, gave piquanev to her face. She was as perfect a specimen of a picture gallery or a novel. Suddenly her cheeks flushed a delicate blush-rose tint, as a tall and elegantly-looking man laughingly sauntered towards her. "Stephen, I thought you were never

"Do get my wraps and fan, and we'll go home. It's after one, and I'm com-pletely carried out." "Couldn't, my dear," said Mr. Elmore, breaking a moss-rose bud form his wife's bouquet, and fastening it jauntily in the buttonhole of his coat. "I am engaged for three dances and a quadrille with Miss Dunbar, and she would never forgive you for detaining Bertha's lips curled haughtily, and a deeper flush stole over her sweet face. "Jealous-eh?" laughed her husband, pattering her bright head lightly. "Now, Bertha, that's two silly of you. Don't you know that a man is expected to make himself agreeable to the ladies? Pray, my dear, don't become so absurd.

"And so," interrupted Mrs. Elmore, bitterly, "your wife's wishes and convenience are secondary to Miss Dunbar's will."

"The green-eyed monster has invaded your peace, my love," said Mr. Elmore. Upon my word, I have given you credit for a little more common sense "Stephen," said Bertha, quietly, and without heeding the careless sarcasm of his tone, "I am weary of this senseless gaiety. I am sick of the whirl and vanities of the London season. Will you take me home to the dear old Rookery?"

"Why, Bertha, after all your anxiety to spend a season in London! You have been teasing me every since we were married to indulge you in

"I know it," Stephen," she meekly answered, trying to keep back her tears; "but I have learned the folly of seeking real pleasure anywhere but in our own home. My taste for gaiety is satisfied, and you can't imagine how homesick I feel-how anxious to see the little ones at home again. When can you take me home, Stephen?" "Next week, perhaps, my love, if you

"Oh, Stephen! why not to-morrow?" "Impossible, Bertha! I am possitively engaged for every day this week, for drives and excursions in the sub-urbs of the Metropolis."

"Engaged!" repeated Bertha, opening her blue eyes. "I know nothing of these engagements." "No, my dear! I suppose not," said

Elmore, lazily! "Did you imagine I was going to ask your permission if I wanted to drive out with a lady, or smoke a cigar with two or three gen-

Bertha's lips quivered, and she turned quietly away. Stephen Elmore looked after her with an amused expression in his eye, and a half-smile on his lips.
"She's jealous as I live!" he muttered. "Jealous of Georgina Dunbar and the preity little widow. Well, let her pout it out at her leisure; it will not do to encourage this sort of thing." If he could have seen her a few moments later (just when he was whirling through the waltz with Miss Dunbar, her beautiful brunette face touching his shoulder) sobbing in a quiet room up-stairs, to which she had retired under pretence of being unwell, but really to indulge in that one bless-ed source of relief that is always open to women—a good cry; if Stephen El-more could have seen his wife just then, the sight might do him good, though it is not always best to let a terred, as he paused before the winman know the full extent of his power over that poor captive, his wife, as the sex takes a delight in torturing its victim. So when Bertha wept showers of tears, making her eyes and face red

She shrank back as if some rude hand

The gilded hands of the Parisian clock on the mantal had traveled twice the circlet of enamelled figures before Bertha Elmore lifted her gaze from the bunches of velvet roses in the carpet. What was she thinking off? "Sitting up, eh, Bertha? Why, I thought you were tired to death," said Mr. Elmore, as he entered the room, and his wife welcomed him with a bright smile. "Yes; I've been so much interested in that delightful book," exclaimed Bertha, warmly, "I do wish I knew whether Sir Guy got that property or

The sunshine was golden, the sky was cerculean: while the vivid green of the foliage, the radiant and varied tints of the flower-beds, and the charming summer dresses in the vic-torias and baroches that crowded along the drive, with a sprinkling here and there of household Cavalry, made a most charming and effective combi-

There were handsome men, lovely women, and beautiful horses. Conspicuous among the equestrians were a lady and gentleman, both tall, hand-some, and very daik. The lady was superb in form, with a face of Southsuperb in form, with a face of Southern beauty, complexion of pale olive, and beautiful eyes of dusky blackness; her wavy, jetty black hair was rolled up in great colls at the nape of her graceful neck. They were attended by a handsome young groom, and all eyes followed them as they campered along the Mile.

with Dick Trevor, of the Household'. Why, its tit for tat. Here is Elmore out with Dunbar, and his wife with Trevor, the fastest fellow in town. What can it mean?"

Yes, it was Bertha Elmore, in her exquisitly fitting habit, and coquettish hat, and did not conceal the heavy coils of glistening golden hair that encircled her graceful head. Her companion was Herculean in figure and height, with long tawny beard and moustache, tawny, close-cut hair, and gray eyes.

"And with that man," hisses Bertha's husband, as if in answer to his own thought, and totally obvious of the presence of his own companion. "Your wife has just seen you with 'this woman', so it is enly tit for tat, my dear Mr. Elmore; and you don't know what a nice fellow Captain Trevor is, and how agreeable he can be among ladies,' says Miss Dunbar, with a covert smile. "Let us go back at once. I must see what this means," said the gentleman sternly; who, losing sight of his wife and Captain Trevor in the crowd, turned his horse's head to go in pursuit, while Georgina Dunbar's clear. metallic laugh rang out as she follow-

Bertha started, then smiling graciously, she said: "Not to-day, dear. I have barely time to dress for dinner, and I am going to the opera this evening with Capt. Trevor and his mother. Lady Trevor promised to take me up at eight o'clock. I suppose you are engaged this evening, Stephen?"

"No, no-n-I mean y-e-s," he stammered, with a severe twitch of conscience, as he remembered that he was to take Georgina Dunbar and her sister to the theatre. Bertha rang for her maid to help her

Her husband ran down to meet her; Captain Trevor escorted her up the steps, then lifting his hat with stately grace went forward to shake hands with Mr. Elmore, while his eyes followed the graceful figure of the lady in a way that made Stephen Elmore feel that he could have knocked him down for that look

Wires and bars are now produced direct from fluid steel, by pressing it out through dies in a manner similiar to the production of lead pipes from lead. An iron vessel, lined with refractory material, is provided with a manhole closed. At the bottom opposite the manhole there is a cast iron outlet pipe, through which passes a steel tube with water circulating round it exactly like a "tuyere," by which the steel pipe or die can be cooled. The inner end of the steel tube is lined with fire clay, where the very hot fluid steel meets it. The tube is plugged up by a steel stopper, and the liquid steel is filled into the vessel with liquid carbon dioxide drawn the liquid steel is forced out by pressure of the carbon dioxide in a red vessel into the rolling mill while still hot, and is there finished off. We may also add that steel is now produced di rect from the ore by a new process of a French engineer. The ore in a powdered condition is submitted to the ac-

Washington Correspondence. WASHINGTON, June 15, 1885.

The sessions of the Charity Congress, school commencements by the dozen, with the music, flowers, premiums, medals and declamations; the accident to the Washington Monument, and more victors with more spoils · are among the week's happenings in Washington.

Since the monument was struck by lightning, Col. Casey has been receiving communications daily from every part of the country giving advice and suggestions for the protection of the structure. Probably every lightning rod agent in the country has written about the peculiar advantages of his rod, urging that it be placed upon the monument to insure its future safety. Many of them evidently believe nothing has ever been done to protect the shaft from thunder-bolts. The scienentists who examined the monument's injuries agreed that its present electric apparatus is in perfect condition. They deem it advisable, however, to provide additional collective points for the lightning to strike. During the present week, the damages to the capstone will be repaired, and the new rods will be added.

There will then be twenty-nine lightning rods on the top of the monument. Every morning, shortly after eight o'clock now, a groop of people gather on the stairway, at the west end of the Capatol, to see the first rays of the sun fall on the monument. Striking the aluminum tip of the shaft, they make it sparkle and radiate for a few mintues, sometimes like a silver | ment has increased, until in this prostar, and sometimes like a brilliant electric light, then the dazzling brightness disappears.

Now that Gen. Grant's relics are in possession of the Government, the since parties began.—Cincinnati Com-Grant museum will be one of the interesting features of Washington. The collection comprises about two hundred articles, many of which carry associations that will endear them to the Nation. There is demand for their exhibition at the earliest day practicable, and it has been suggested that a room in the National Museum be set apart for them immediately. Greater facilities will be required to insure the safety of the articles than the museum now possesses. Congress will no doubt gladly vote an appropriation for fire and burglar proof cases in which to exhibit such interesting and valuble gifts of the country's most distinguished soldier.

The periodical rumors of discharges in the Executive Departments is again current. It is said that accompanying the half monthly pay, hundreds of employes will receive the dreaded "yellow envelope". The new fiscal year begins the 1st of next month, and whether the "clean sweep" so much talked of will occur on that day or not, Government employes look forward to it with great anxiety. Doubtless there will be many changes and dismissals. Members of the Cabinet have requested the heads of bureaus in their respective Departments to make a list of clerks who can be dispensed with, or whose places can be filled by alleged Civil Service appointments. Besides the first of July is the date for the regular bi-ennial revision of the Blue Book, and the new powers will endeavor to have the names of many new officials and employes ready for it as possible.

It is evident that the office hunters think there is to be general onslaught upon Republican office-holders at the current fiscal year. The city is full of the same men who came here at the time of inauguration.

President Cleveland's inexperienced Cabinet officers, and all of them may be said to be inexperienced in the administration of public business, have been laboring hard during the past three months to get some insight into the details of their Departments. Notwithstanding their official ignorance, they have entertained some novel and original ideas with regard to the transaction of business and have tried to introduce them in their several Departments. They have failed completely in some instances, for there are certain systems of routine which will have to be adhered to under any and all administrations. The new officials are impressed that they must do something different from their predecessors; decline to receive any information or defense.

suggestions from old employes, no matter how well informed or how sincere the latter may be. Another innovation that is talked of is to do away with the colored men messengers in the departments, and put in their stead small white boys, such as are now employed in the Senate and

Cleveland Sees Through the Sham. The President is getting acquainted with his party. The surprise is mutual. It seems incredible that Mr. Cleveland could be astonished at anything after his long experience with Tammany and anti-Tammany in all its forms, the County Democracy, Irving Hall, the long hairs and the short, and the other notorious varieties which land in New York and so quickly occupy and control it. But with all this experience his first attack of utter amazement over matters Democratic is said to have fallen upon him here. He finds the wild elements with which he has had to deal in New York, and which have such an unsavory reputation in the country, the most quiet, conservative, and well-behaved division of the party.

Those who set upon him as if they were the untamed savages of the organization, are the leaders whom he has heard described in political fable as "grave," "dignified," and "statesman-like" Senators and "able," "valuable," and "well equipped" Representatives. He is now undergoing the process of making the acquaintance of these leaders." He finds them dumb on all questions except those related to the offices. He expected help from them and he finds them an added load to carry. Instead of smoothing his way they are proving the worst obstacles After a lifetime of faultfinding with the Republicans and constant charges that the Government was in the hands of rascals, and every branch of its business was ill-managed and corrupt, they are found to be useless assistants in pointing out methods of reform. Worse than this, they ask for no reform, and give no evidences of having any in their minds. They only stand and cry aloud from daylight to midnight for offices. They take no care to recommend fit men, who would reflect credit on the Administration and their party They insist that the strikers shall be put in at any expense to the efficiency of the service. The only theory of fitness upon which they act is that the worst Democrat is better than the best Republican. So long as the President could discover nothing more against those who were recommended to him than that they had been ultra Democrats—that is, Copperheads, Secessionists, ex-Confederates, Knights of the Golden Circle, Sons of Liberty, and other similar lights of the true Democratic churchhe was not disturbed. These, equally with Union Democrats at home and War Democrats in the field, were entitled to recognition by a pure Democratic Administration, provided they were men of honest lives, fair ability and fitness for the public service. But when he came to look outside of the fulsome letters of recommendation in the files, and the encomiums passed by Senators, Representatives, and local party "leaders," and discovered day after day that his assortment of candidates thus fully indorsed included murderers, thieves, defaulters, Ku-Klux, habitual drunkards, and others, with a variety of questionable, and even criminal, records, he passed rapidly through the stages of surprise, amazement, indignation, and anger. Now he has settled upon a few "statesmen" and "leaders" whom he cannot trust, while the list of those he

On the other hand, these party men are trying to become acquainted with Mr. Cleveland. They cannot make him out. They are also astonished. Before he came they went up and down the city and halls of Congress expressing their fears that this unsophisticated New York Governor would fall into bad hands and be misled to commit himself to fatal errors before he got where they could advise him and shield him from the designing and give him such varied counsel as an inexperienced man would need. When he arrived they found not only his eye-teeth cut, but his wisdom-teeth too well develop ed to allow the success of their en chantment. Day by day their astonishcess of getting acquainted they were first puzzled, then impatient, next mad, and at the last denunciatory. Such an interesting mutual-admiration society has not existed in a political party mercial-Gazette.

It is now three months since the present administration came into power. During that time it has been sub cted to very considerable criticism from opposite directions, and been favored with a good deal of mild commendation, all growing out of the exercise of the appointing power.

The most censure has fallen upon the Secretary of State. Mr. Bayard deserves a blue ribbon as the champion blunderer. His knowledge of men is limited, and his range of ideas still narrower. To have been an enemy of his country in its hour of sorest need is a strong point in favor of an aspirant for diplomatic honors. At the present rate this government will be represented abroad almost exclusively by either active rebels or extreme copperheads. No war Democrat need apply at the State Department. The Attorney General seems to go upon the theory that what little patronage he has should go to his old chums, especially his college cronies. The other Cabinet officers, Leing somewhat hindered by civil service, are making haste slowly. There is every reason to believe, however, that before three months have widened into three years and the next Presidential campaign begins, Republican Federal officehold ers will be about as rare as winter

At a fashionable dinner party lately, a gentleman was observed hesitating whether to sit on the right or left of a handsome young widow. At length he said, with a very polite bow, "Pardon me, madame, but will you kindly say on which side you wear your revolver?

Mark Twain's wealth is stated thus: From the publication of his books, $200,000, the amount of the sum being due to the fact that he has always been practically his own publisher, and thereby made all the profit for himself; lecturing, $100,000; scrap book, $50, 000; wife's fortune, $75,000; total, recipient of Uncle Sam's bounty to the $425,000. > Swordsmen of the Deep. Imagine whales fencing with one another for amusement! It seems as if such a thing could not be; and yet there are whales fo a cer-> one another, but use their teeth for swords. It is the narwhal that fences. One of the teeth of the male narwhal always grows through the upper lip and out like a spear, straight in front of the animal. It seems as if all the material that should have gone to fill the narwhal's month with teeth had gone to the one tooth that grows out through the lip; for sometimes this tooth is eight feet long The animal itself, from head to tail, is seldom more than sixteen feet in length. Of what use such an enormous tooth is to the narwhal no one knows. Some persons say it is used for spearing fish; others, that its use is to stir up the mud in the bottom of the ocean in order to scare out the fish that may be hiding there; and one man says the tooth is for the purpose of breaking holes in the ice in winter; for the narwhal, like all whales, is obliged to come to the surface at intervals to breathe. Whatever the tooth is intended to be used for, it is certain that when the narwhal wishes to play it finds another narwhal of a like mind, and away they charge at each other till the long tooth swords clash together.

They are active as well as frolicsome and sailors tell of seeing them crossing swords in this way, thrusting and par-rying, and rolling and darting about with marvelous agility and grace. The narwhal is light gray in color, and covered with black spots. For a great many reasons it is valued by the Greenlanders. It furnishes a very fine quality of oil, its flesh is used for food, and its skin, made into a jelly, and called mattak, is considered a dain ty too choice for ordinary occasions. This "swordsman of the deep," as I have called him, is a warm-blooded animal and must not be confounded with the saw-fish or the sword-fish, both of which are entirely different from the narwhal. —John R. Coryell, in St. Nicholas.

The Butterfly and the Locust. "Whither away so fast?" said the Butterfly to the Locust, one warm "To take my place with the birds and the bees in the midsummer chorus," replied the Locust; "will you come too?"

"No," said the Butterfly, "I dorsing. My beauty is what I travel my wings are very much admired,

"Very true," said the Locust, i ly; "but don't you know that le some is that handsome does, and tualooks are not everything?" Just then a little girl made a sweep at the Butterfly with her net, and nearly caught him. "Well," said the Butterfly, "you may be right, but I think in my case looks came very near being too much that time."

"Z-z-z-z-z-z-z," said the Locust, as he went on his way.—St. Nicholas.

Bermuda's Coral Reefs.

"There's hills and mountains down there, sir," said an old sailor to me one day as we were scudding in toward the Sound; "and fields and forests, all made of coral. Of a clear day eight tewor miles outside, sir, with mywater- glass, I've seen things as you could hardly believe if I told you. Mighty big trees, and places like grass plats and onion fields, bigger'n any in Bermuda; groves, like palmettos, and buildin's and churches—cathedrals, I believe you call 'em—like they have in London, with hears of steeples and hig fish with heaps of steeples, and big fish going to meetin'!" No fairy tale, now, Captain."

"No, sir; all fact, except bout the

specially sherks, and marays, and gray mappers, you know." The coral reefs on which the Bermuda Islands are built extend a distance of from ten to twenty miles beyond the land west, north, and east, much of the intermediate space being dotted with islands and darkened by innumerable shoals that are of endless torment to sailors. The shores are with little exception rugged, broken, made up of over-hanging cliffs and peculiar terrace like layers of rock. In places the ceaseless action of the waves have made deep caverns, bored holes, carved fantastic shapes and made decorations that resemble stucco work. Sea moss carpets, many of them weird-looking structures, hang in long wreaths from escarpment and cornice, where mermaids and mermen can go to work housekeeping and find all sorts of beautiful and asthetic articles to embellish their interiors. Hermit crabs scramble awkwardly along the sharp ledges near the water, looking like criminals trying to hide, scudding for an untenanted periwinkle or vacant conch shell when pressed for time, while here and there, n natural aquaria, little tanks and bowls of water in the rocks, you can see pretty small fry that seem to have concluded to drop in there and rest till the tide comes up again and enables them to rejoin their congeners in the deep green sea.

Lightning Strokes.

Charts of the geographical distribution of the lightning strokes for 1882 and 1883, prepared from our fire records, show that they are chiefly confined to that part of the country situated north of the Ohio River and east of the Missouri River. In both years 85 per cent. of all the strokes occurred within this area. In the Southern States lightning seems to be comparatively rare, and seldom occurs outside of three states—Texas, Louisiana, and Georgia. There seem to be two principal centers of electrical disturbance, from the fireunderwriters' standpoint, and these are in the New England and Northwestern States. Sixty-five per cent. of the strokes happened in the summer; the remaining 35 per cent. are divided between spring and autumn in about equal proportions.—Insurance Chronicle.

Mothers rarely (if ever) stop to think that despotic rule of their daughters—the nagging and irritating sentinelship of every step—is a reflect ed insult to themselves. They needed the eyes of Argus, therefore their daughters are as little trustworthy. Logic so works it out.

A Safeguard.

The fatal rapidity with which slight Colds and Coughs frequently develop into the gravest maladies of the throat and lungs, is a consideration which should intell account would be a consideration of the control of th inpel every prudent person to keep at land, as a household remedy, a bottle of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. Nothing else gives such immediate relief and works so sure a cure in all affections of this class. That eminent physician, Prof. F. Sweetzer, of the Maine Medical School, Brunswick, Mc., says:—

"Medical science has produced no other anodyne expectorant so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It is invaluable for diseases of the throat and lungs."

The same opinion is expressed by the well-known Dr. L. J. Addison, of Chicago, Ill., who says:-"Il., Who says:—
"I have never found, in thirty-five years of continuous study and practice of medicine, any preparation of so great value as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, for treatment of diseases of the throat and lungs. It not only breaks up colds and cures severe coughs, but is more effective than anything else in relieving even the most serious bronchial and pulmonary affections."

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral

Is not a new claimant for popular confidence, but a medicine which is to-day saving the lives of the third generation who have come into being since it was first offered to the public.

There is not a household in which this invaluable remedy has once been introduced where its use has ever been abandoned, and there is not a person who has ever given it a proper trial for any throat or lung disease susceptible of cure, who has not been made well by it.

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has in numberless instances, cured obstinate cases of chronic Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and even acute Pneumonia, and has saved many patients in the earlier stages of Pulmonary Consumption. It is a medicine that only requires to be taken in small doses, is pleasant to the taste, and is proceed in every house where there are heeded in every house where there are children, as there is nothing so good as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for treatment of Croup and Whooping Cough. These are all plain facts, which can be verified by anybody, and should be remembered by everybody.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, evergreens, etc., and the exercises were designed to make a lasting impression upon the children and their parents. THE Lakeville correspondent of the South Bend Register pays the following high compliment to a Buchanan young lady. We think the young man must be somewhat smitten, although the compliment is a deserving one:

Miss Cora Mansfield, of Buchanan, Mich., who has been teaching in the schools of this township for the past two years, returned home last week. She made many warm friends during her stay here, and, as she is of marriageable age, it is not altogether unlikely that that event will soon occur. and with the happy disposition that possesses she will make a happy and pleasant home fit for a king.

A CHICAGO attorney, representing Mr. Ray, of Coldwater, who owns the patent on the cement sidewalks, was here Tuesday and made known his demands for royalty from those who are so unfortunate as to have any of his kind of walk, and for the purpose of fully considering his proposition and the probabilities connected therewith, there will be a meeting of those interested at Van Riper & Worthington's office to-morrow (Friday) evening. It looks pretty tough to be obliged to pay one man full price for a poorly made walk, and then to pay some other man for the privliege of using it. But such seems to be the predicament a number of the citizens of Buchanan have found themselves to be in. This brings forcibly to mind the bill Hon. J. C. than the Senate table, we cannot be benefited by it. Ex-Gov. St. John did not draw quite the crowd that was anticipated, although he had a fair sized audience, in Dr. Berrick's yard, that place being selected instead of the old school house yard, so that the speaking and band might not interfere with the closing exercises of the school. Mr. St. John is a pleasant speaker who can keep an audience in good humor and not tire them. His lecture differs from the ordinary temperance lecture only in being a campaign speech against the Republican party, which is the chief object of his attack, receiving two words of condemnation to one spoken against intemperance. This, however, is not more than should have been expected, for the Republican party did serve Mr. St. John a detestable caper in electing him twice as Governor of Kansas and refusing to elect him the third time when the balance of the ticket was elected by overwhelming majorities. and it is quite natural for man to indulge in revenge when so fine an opportunity presents itself, and the good pay of $50 per day, liberally contributed to by the Democrats, can at the same time be garnered. From a moral point of view he could find no more commendable subject, but politically his actions command neither the admiration nor respect of the intelligent

BUCHANAN, June 16, 1885. EDITOR RECORD:-I wish to say through the columns of your paper, that a very interesting time was had at the old school house in this place, last Friday afternoon. The two Primary schools, conducted by Miss Haller and Miss Beardsley, joined together. The two schools have enrolled about 140 scholars, and most of the little boys and girls had pieces to speak or sing, and a happier group of little children I never expect to see. 1-saw little boys and girls of seven or eight summers come out and speak in a manner that would well become a young man or woman twenty years of age. The two teachers of that building have done themselves great credit in preparing the little ones for the closing exercises, and not alone for that, but for the great care they have exercised throughout the school year. I was very glad to notice many of the patrons of the school present. To all patrons let me say, don't wait until the last day, but go several times during the year and the last day too. The exercises closed at half past three o'clock, and the leave taking was the most affecting part of the exercises. All my

An amusing incident occurred on the street Sunday, namely: One of our citizens was leading a cow down Main street, when the animal concluded she had been led quite far enough, resolved to change the order of the exercises. which she at once did by leading him at a rapid rate down the street, the principal part of the time on his back.

Mr. Albert Pierce came very near calling out the horse thief association, as he got up the other morning and | ing, in greater numbers each year, tourwent out to the barn to feed his horses, when lo, and behold! no horses were there; out into the vard, but no tracks or traces of the missing animals could he find. On reaching the road he heard a horse whinny, and looking up he beheld his team tied securely to the fence, as he himself had tied them the night before that they might feed and cool off. It is stated by good authority that Al's eyes have not got back to their right place yet. Some people in this town appear to be interested in other people's business. It is to be regreted that any one will so demean themselves as to attempt to scrutinize every action or word of their neighbor, and it would be a saving of a vast amount of time if mother Grundy would appoint some one of her followers to attend to home matters.

The Cholera. LONDON, June 14.-A letter from Marseilles confirms the belief that the cholera is already smoldering there. The authorties do their utmost to conceal the fact as long as possible. There are also private reports of its appearance near Perpignan, in the Pyrenees, where the people suffered so terribly last autumn. The epidemic is raging seriously in four provinces of Spain al ready, with a total of 200 deaths. It has broken out in one province in Portugal, and that country, France and Italy are all quarantining vigorously against Spain. The belief that Ferran is a fool or fraud is growing, and in Madrid it is the actual belief that he has been instrumental in spreading the pest. Vaccination for cholera is illogical, because one attack is no guar antee against others, and last year a considerable proportion of deaths in the hospital was of the people who had the disease in former years.

Dr. de la Granja, who has returned to Madrid from Valencia, where he went with a commission and has seen the experiments, declare that true Asiatic cholera of the most malignant type ranges there. There has been 50 to 75 per cent. of deaths in seven to forty-eight hours after the first at tack. He estimates the total at 1,500 cases to date. The worst cases were in the village of Burjasot, near Valencia. The disease was carried from Alcira by workmen who washed their clothes in a stream used for drinking. MADRID, June 14.—Two new cases of cholera were reported in this city today and there were seven deaths from the disease. In the city of Murcia there were fifteen new cases and twelve deaths, and in the province of Murcia, outside of the city, thirty-sever new cases and sixteen deaths. In the city of Valencia three cases were reported and in the province forty Few things are more fascinating in their way than a study of the subterranean history of man, whether in caves or in mounds, whether it be to corroborate written history, or to take testimony that ante-dates all writing. President Bartlett, of Dartmouth, contributes an interesting article on this topic to the July number of the North American Review. Another urgent question, which may soon make a very serious issue, the extradition of dynamite criminals, is debated by President Angell, of Michigan University, Geo. Ticknor Curtis, and Justice T. M. Cooley. Dorman B. Eaton, chief of the Civil Service Commission, gives his views of the results of that reform. William Clarke shows the futile character of any scheme for British imperial federation, and Thomas W. Knox gives a brief but interesting sketch of the progress of European influence in Asia. The other articles are one by Gail Hamilton, on Prohibition in prac tice, and one by Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, on the decline of Christianity. These, with the batch of free-hand Comments, make up a number of un usual interest. If the allotted age of man were sufficient for a magazine, we might have to part here with an old friend; for the Review has just completed its seventieth year. But outwardly it renews its youth with a new cover, and inwardly it seems more vigorous than ever.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly For July contains two articles which will attract considerable attention The leading one, "England's Last Struggle with Russia," in which the Crimean War and the causes that led to it are described by T. F. Galwey; the other article is on "Victor Hugo." Both are profusely illustrated and intensely readable. Marc F. Vallette contril utes a careful study of the "Early Life of Mary Stuart," which is accompanied by ten illustrations. American sub jects in this number are, "The Grain Commerce of New York," by Oscar W. Riggs, with seven illustrations; "The Aztec Eagle, and when it was Found, and other Mexican Topics, by Mrs. Em ily Pierce; and "Our Northern Lakes and Mountains," by James B. Town-send, with eleven illustrations. There are many shorter articles and poems, several interesting stories, including the new serial, "Of Two Evils," by Prof. Clarence M. Boutelle. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York, at 25 cents a number, or $3.00 a year, postpaid.

How to Reach the Resorts of Colorado. Colorado has become famous for its marvelous gold and silver production, for its picturesque scenery and its delightful climate. Its mining towns and camps, its massive mountains, with their beautiful green-verdured valleys, lofty snow-capped peaks and awe-inspiring canons, together with its hot and cold mineral springs and baths, and its healthful climate, are attractists, invalids, pleasure and busines seekers from all parts of the world

At each of the prominent Colorado resorts are spacious hotels so completely appointed that every appreciable comfort and luxury are bestowed upon their patrons. The journey, from Chicago, Peoria or St. Louis to Denver (the great dis-tributing point for Colorado), if made over the Burlington route (C. B. & Q. R. R.), will be as pleasant and gratifying as it is possible for a railroad trip to be. It is the only line with its own track between the Great Lakes and the Rocky Mountains, and the only line running every day in the year through trains between Chicago, Peoria or St. Louis and Denver. It also runs through daily trains between Kansas City and Denver. These through trains are elegantly equipped with all the modern improvements, and ride you over a track that is as smooth and safe as a perfect roadbed, steel rails, iron bridges, interlocking switches and other devices, constructed in the most skillful and scientific manner, can make it. At all coupon ticket offices in the United States and Canada will be found on sale, during the tourist season, round trip tickets, via this popular route, at low rates to Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo, Colorado. When ready to start, call on your home ticket agent or address Perceval Lowell, General Passenger Agent Burlington Route, Chicago, Ill.

ONE OF THE PLAGUE-SPOTS Which May Be Found Within the Limit of a Great City. Lice Howard's New York Letter.] It is one maze of tumble-down shanties, recking with all sorts of slimy and unhealthy nastiness. A visitor recently encountered a pig and fourteen goats while walking along the block. Piles of rank rubbish were stacked up at the sides of the ill-looking dens and behind them. Geese and ducks paddled in stagnant pools, broken or ignorantly constructed chimneys poured clouds of smoke into the streets, and the delicate and complex perfumes of horse and cow stables added to the general vileness. In one yard the visitor found two bleareyed men burning a heap of rotten vege-tables and other rubbish. A rut in the oozing soil was used in place of a sewer, and in it lay old pieces of bread, the putrid internal arrangements of some fowl and a gummy, varnish-like mass of some decaying substance.

Dogs, cats, goats and poultry walked and waddled in and out of the yards by the score. The greasy, scummy sewage of the community ran down piles of ashes and garbage into the street. It trickled and dripped from crannies in the rocks and poured from beneath stables. It lay in pools and soaked into the stinking soil, where the hot sun's rays coated it with the bubbling green danger signal that tells of deadly fevers and fat graveyards. High above the humid, shiny ground rose heaps of tangled, rusty iron, mounds of dirty rags, sinks with a horrifying mystery of uncleanlines, and noisome homes, in which little children, white faced and curly headed, inhaled death and sickness every hour.

There was one squalid cabin built upon the top of a rocky cliff, and upon the rickety wooden steps sprawling down the rough bowlders stood a number of little girls. The children who are the outcome from these holes are but social barbarians. They have no concept on of what "home," in its true sense means. Beauty and love are almost taken out of their lives. All existence to them is a struggle of squalor with sin, of passion and ignorance with hard materialism and the established order of things. Almost as soon as they can walk they are thrust into the street to beg or steal, or contribute in some manner to their parents' miserable Abused and beaten by those who should be their natural protectors, they soon abandon their "homes" and seek their own fortune. Strictly speaking, they have neither childhood nor toyhood. They pass from neglected infancy, almost by a bound, to an immature and unnatural manhood, compelled by a sense of self-protection to a rugged and semi-savage indepen lence. Long before their teens they are fighting against want and fate, like shaggy veterans, grappling with circumstances that would appall men who might be their fathers.

Lazy Mex'can Farmers

[Chieve o Times. A letter from Mexico says the poverty of the country may be traced diwhich prevails. The agricultural resources are enormous. Though only one-fifth of the best land in the great plateau is under cultivation, it supports millions of people with a style of farming that would produce starvation in the best sections of New York or Pennsylvania. The Mexican's sole conception of the utility of plowing is to scratch enough loose dirt to cover the seed; in a great majority of cases the ground is never touched after planting.

Color Blindness Among Girls. Chicago Times 1 An intelligent physician has discovered that color blindness is very rare among girls, though it is common among boys. From this fact he draws the conclusion that in most cases color blindness is due to a want of early education in discriminating between colors Girls are taught to become familiar with ceive no instruction whatever in colors. Hence boys frequently show an ignor-ance of colors which is confounded with true color blindness, but which girls rarely show.

Evart. Bon Mot.

[Chicago Herald.; Senator Evarts' bon mot gotten off at Mount Vernon to Chief Justice Coleridge has been wrongly quoted. What he really said was: "Lord Coleridge, I do not doubt that Gen. Washington threw that dollar across the Potomac. He was a man of great physical strength, and, as you will remember, he threw a Eritish sovereign across the ocean.'

Laconic Utterance. Exchang .. When Philip of Macedon wrote to the Spartan ephors: "If I enter Laconia will level Lacedæmon to the ground, he received for answer the single but significant word, "if." This is, yer haps, the finest example of laconic utterance on record.

Their Increase in New York-Accomm dutions and the Cost Thereof. [Cor. Brooklyn Eagle.]

The number of hotels in New York is increasing very rapidly, but it is a no-ticeable fact that nearly all of the new buildings are small. The only preten-tious hotel structure that has recently been erected in upper New York is the Murray Hill. The craze for mammoth hotels reached its climax in the pretentious failure at Rockaway beach. Ex-perienced hotel men are no longer enthusiastic about the number of acres their buildings cover, and they have learned a lesson from the histories of such hotels as the Grand Union and the United States at Saratoga. Just now the rage is for small and showy houses and cheap prices. Within two years more than a dozen hotels have been started above Twenty-third street, which offer admirable accommodations, not only for bachelors, but particularly for small families. The rooms are all arranged in suites of three-parlor, bed-room and bath-and the cuisine. though not so elaborate as in the larger houses, is satisfactory. People are moving out of flats and into small hotels as rapidly as they are built. A number of the large hotels, realizing that there is a profit in this movement, have been investing in small hotel property.

A conparison of prices between large and small hotels is highly favora-ble to the latter as far as bachelors are concerned. I have lived in a number of hotels in New York and speak from experience. At present I have three rooms on the second floor of one of these small family hotels, where the table is fully as good as it is at the Fifth Avenue, the service excellent and the location unexceptionable. My rooms have hot and cold water. bath, portieres, beautiful furniture, etc., and the cost of it all, including four meals a day-the last being a late supper—is $20 a week. When you take into consideration the number of comforts which such a hotel supplies, it will be seen that larger houses cannot compete with them.

Gen. Lee's Death. [Boston Budget.] Gen. Lee, shortly after the surrender at Appomattox, became president of Washington college, at Lexington, and and devoted himself to the duties of that position. He was taken sick on Wed nesday evening, Sept. 281870. As he was about to take his seat at the tea-table, he sank in his chair and became insensible. 'A reaction soon set in, however, and in the course of the ten days following he steadily improved, until it was hoped he was out of danger. But on the following Monday evening he became suddenly and rapidly worse, and continued to sink until death claimed its victim. During the early part of his illness he slept much and spoke seldom, but was rational when awake, and always recognized those at his bedside. At times his mind seemed to wander, and on several occasions reverted to the army. He once ordered his tent to be struck, and at another time desired that "Hill should be sent to the front." He suffere I but comparatively little pain during his whole illness, and expired very quietly and peacefully at 9:30 on Wednesday morn-

New Orleans Houses

["Carp" in Cleveland Leader.] After the Lrown stone of New York, the eye-burning white marble of Phila delphia, and the l'ompeiian red brick of fashionable Washington, the cool wooden houses of New Orleans form a decided relief. The residence parts of this city are of frame, and the architecture is peculiar to the place. Founded upon a bayon, and with only two feet of dry soil before water is reached, no cellars can be dug, and there are only two in this whole city of 250,000 people. The old houses here, with their tiled roofs, their narrow streets and their numerous galleries or porches, remind one of Spain, Italy or southern France The new houses, or those built by full-fledged Americans, have a character of their own.

The Sobbing Wren.

[Fxchange.] The house or sobbing wren is a bird peculiar to southwestern Texas. Its melancholy note is described as very impressive. It begins in a high, clear key, like the tinkling of silver bells, and, descending gradually from one chime to another, it suddenly falters, breaks off, and sobs like a child—the song dying away in a gasp. The song is heard only in the opening light of dawn, and is repeated but a few times The singer is rarely seen through the Rossini and Wagner.

[Char vari.] Rossini was one day discovered at the piano with a copy of "Tannhauser" before him; only the music stood on the rack upside down. "What are you doing there, maestro?" asked his visitor. "Don't you see? I'm trying to understand Wagner, and I can't manage it.' "But you have got the music the wrong way up!" "Oh, I tried it the other way, and it was no better."

Pear Juice as a Medicine. The juice of the Bartlett pear, in some medical cases, is used in California, both as food and drink. At first the invalid grows thin upon the diet, but in a few weeks gains strength.

Early English Agriculture. [Quarterly Review.]

Harvesting in the middle ages meant the return of plenty. On 250 acres in Suffolk, toward the close of the fourteenth century, were grown wheat, oats, peas, barley, and bolomong, a mixture or peas or tares and oats. The crops were cut and housed in two days. On the first day appeared thirty tenants to perform their "bederepes," and 214 reapers. On the second the thirty tenants and 239 reapers, pitchers and stackers. Many of this assembly were the smaller peasantry on the manor. The rest were wandering bands of cockers." or barvesters. A cook, brewer and baker were hired to supply dinner at 9, and supper at 5. Barley and oats, as well as peas and beaus, were generally mown, rye and wheat

But the harvest, as in Roman times, consisted of two operations: The first was to cut the ears, the second to remove part of the straw for thatching; the rest of the stubble was either grazed, or burned, or plowed in. The crops were wheat, rye, oats, barley, beans, peas, an l, in smaller quantities, flax and hemp. Of grain crops, rye was the chief; it is the hardiest, grows on the poorest soils, makes the toughest straw. Bye was then the breadstuff of the peas-It was generally mixed with wheat flour. Bread so made was called maslin. Wheat and rye were often sown together. Tusser condemns the practice, "lest rye tarry wheat till it shed as it stands," but it prevailed in Yorkshire in 1797 as a cure for mildew. By itself wheat was seldom sown. Barley was the drink corn, as rye the bread-corn, of the middle ages; drage was the commonest and best sort for malting. Oats were exten-sively cultivated in the north, but they were gray awned, thin, and poor. Abuse of High Health.

Companio 1.1 High health is one of our best blessings. It enables us to make the u ost of life with the least wear and with the greatest enjoyment. With it is conne ted a vigorous digestion. Its posneeded to supply nervous force to the machinery of the system, or to make good its incessant waste, for they are either unconscious of harm from undue indulgence, or they rapidly rally from its immediate effects. To this class belong those who live to eat, instead of eating to live.

The great pulpit orator of England once wrote, "I ate like a hog, and I preached like a hog." Many a man of lofty powers and position has been, for the time, utterly shorn of his strength through the depend made by his strength through the demand made by his stoma: h on his brain. He who is thus vielding daily to the sway of his lower nature can not reach the full capability of his higher. If he does not embrute himself, he must come far short of the full stature of his manhood.

But there is another penalty which falls upon our physical powers. more food is eaten than is assimilated, it is deposited as encumbering fat; or it undergoes chemical changes that give rise to gout; or it inflames the kidneys in their struggle to eliminate it; or it congests the stomach and liver; or it breaks down the brain with softening or with apoplexy. Men of high health ought to live 100 years; they are apt to fail of their three score and ten.

How He Got Even With the Town.

[Hallowell (Me.) Register.] Edmund Dorr was an oddity who lived in the suburbs of Hallowell half a century ago. On the 14th day of February he jogged into town on his horse sled and was arrested for violating a city ordinance requiring all sleighs and sleds to have bells attached. Dorr was arraigned before a justice of the peace and fined. He paid his fine, but swore he would have revenge. And on every 14th day of February for twelve years Dorr made an annual visit to Hallowell, seated in an ancient cutter and driving a ringboned mare, to whose harness nearly 200 jangling bells of all sizes and degrees of discord were fastened. There were sleigh bells, and cow bells, and dinner bells, and all sorts of bells on the rigging, and the old man made as much of a commotion as if he had been a full brass band. He repeated this per-formance annually till he died, and took a grim satisfaction in thus squaring his account with the city that had fined him.

Inow at the Equator.

[Scientific Journal.] Near the equator perpetual snow covers the mountains at the height of 15,207 feet, in latitude 60 degrees it is found at 3,818 feet, and in 75 degrees at 1,016 feet. The main cause of this is not that the solar rays possess less heat in the higher regions, as the con-trary has been proved, but that the por-tions of the earth's crust projecting far up into the atmosphere, as is the case with high mountains, possess less of the interior heat of the earth, being more subject to cooling by radiation, which has caused their temperature to descend to such a low degree that even a midday tropical sun can not raise it to 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Affected by Eating Loco,

[Chicago Times.] A great many cattle in southern Kan-sas are "locoed," as the cowboys term it, or rather affected by eating loco, a species of plant very numerous there, and which is a dreadful scourge on the herds of cattle roaming over the ranges. They never recover after eating it, or rather after they once commence to cat loco they never cease until it kills them. It affects them about the same as "fire-water" did the Indians; makes them feel as the "whole prairie belonged to them," and they walk as the Irishman did, "on both sides of the strate to wunst.'

"YES, SIR!"

[New Orleans Times-Democrat Translation. Among my mother's lady friends there was one beside whom I particularly leved to be, with whom I particularly loved to talk. She was the widow of a pianist who died very young, but very celebrated — Adolphe Gance. Her name was Alice. I assure you that Madame Gance was beautiful. Madame Gance attracted me, for beauty is a sweet thing; Madame Gance made me afraid of ber; for beauty is also a terrible thing.

I must tell you that when she came into the drawing-room that evening she threw to every one, even to the most humble person—myself—a crumb of her smile. I could not keep my gaze away from her; and I fancied that I detected an expression of sadness in her lovely cyes; the idea of her being unhappy absolutely upset me. You see I was an innocent fool. She was asked to play something. She played one of Chopin's nocturnes; I have never heard any nocturnes; I have never heard any thing so fine. I thought I could feel the ingers of Alice-those long white fingers from which she had removed the rings-touch my ears with a celestial

When she 'ad finished, I went as if by instinct and without being aware of what I was doing, to conduct her back to her seat, and to take my place beside her. Inhaling the perfume of her robes, I closed my eyes. She asked me if I was fond of music; her voice made me tremble from head to foot. I opened my eyes and saw that she was looking at me; that look made me lose whatever brains I had.

"Yes, sir!" I replied in my confusion. If the ground did not instantly open and swallow me up, it was only because nature always remain deaf to the most ardent prayers of men.

I passed all that night in my room alone, calling myself an idiot and a brute, and thumping my face with my fists. In the morning, atter long reflec-tion, I still refused to be reconciled to myself. I thought: "To wish to tell a woman that she is beautiful, that she is more than beautiful, that she knows how to draw sighs and sobs and veritable tears from a piano, and yet after all be unable to say more than 'yes, sir.' to her—this is a crime that ought by right to deprive one forever from the privilege of expressing his ideas in words. Pierre Noziere, you are a weak-minded idiot. Go hide yourself." Alas! I could not even hide myself altogether. I had to appear at table, at school, in public. Those two words-Yes, sir-forever rang in my ears. Their souvenir was ever vividly present—or, rather, by a horrible phenomenon of conscience; it seemed to me that time had suddenly paused, and that I remained living indefinitely at the precise instant when I had articulated the irreparable phrase, 'Yes, sir." It was no remorse that tortured me;-remorse is nothing at all compared with what I felt. I remained in a black melancholly for six whole weeks. Only this summer I again met

Madame Gance at a water-place. Half a century now weighs upon the beauty which caused me my first blushes and the most delicious embarrassments of my life. But that ruin beauty has grace still. And I, myself gray-haired, had long annulled the vows of my vouth. "Good-day, madame," I said to Madame Gance. And this time, alas! the emotion of other years troubled not my gaze nor my voice in the least. She recognized me without much difficulty. Cur memories united us; and we aided each other to while away the commonplace hours of hotel life in familiar chat. New ties soon formed of their own accord between us—ties only too strong-the fellow feelings of fatigues and the pains of age. Every morning we would talk, as we sat on some green bench in the sun, about our rheumatisms and our mournings for the dead. It was an an inexhaustible topic. In order to divert ourselves a little we began to mix up the past with the pres-"How beautiful you used to be, madame," I said to her one day, "and how greatly admired." "It is true," she replied with a smile. "I can dare to say it now that I am an old woman; I used to please. This memory consoles me a little for growing old. I was the object of such flattering homage once! But you would be astonished to know what mark of adoration touched me most of all I received during my life." I am very curious to know." "Well, I will tell you. One eveningoh! it was ever so long ago—a little college-boy felt so bewildered by looking at me, that he answered, Yes, sir, to some question I asked him. No mark of admiration I ever received so flattered and delighted me as that Yes, sir, -and the way it was said. I can't imagine what kept me from kissing the little rascal on both cheeks."

There are seven or eight dailies published in Havana city. The best of these costs $2 per annum. Two hours before a paper is distributed on the street a copy must be sent, with the editor's name, to the government officers and one to the censor, when the paper is returned with the censor's indorsement the paper may go out to the public. One of the newspapers disregards the law, publishes what it pleases, and distributes when it gets ready. Every few weeks the government fines the editor and suppresses the paper. The next day the paper appears under a new name. Its frequent brushes with the government advertise it, and people buy it to see what new indiscretion it has committed. A Temporary Life Preserver.

It ought to be generally known that a man's hat will serve in most cases as a temporary life preserver to those in danger of drowning. When a person finds himself in the water he should lay hold of his hat between his hands, keeping the crown close under his chin. and the mouth of the hat under water. The quantity of air contained in the cavity of the hat will keep the head above water for a long time-sometimes for several hours.

OUT-OF-DOOR RECREATION. Who Can Invent a New Pleasure?-The Englishman's Advantage.

|Boston Budget.1

Now that pleasant weather is at hand, every man should remember that it is his duty to indulge in out-of-door recreation. It does not matter so much what the recreation is, as that it shall somehow be had. The overstrained how is not more sure to break than are the over-tasked energies to break down or lose their faculty of tension. A man can not drive his business fourteen hours a day, or go without his food in order to be on 'change, or travel day and night, regardless of rest, with impunity. He may stand it well for a time, if blessed with a good native constitution, but the best constitution that ever was made will give out under a protracted course of such violation of the physical laws. What makes paralysis so common in this country? What but the fact that over-taxed brains and limbs are perpetually crying out, "You have worked me too hard; I can do no

It would be a wise thing if our people and especially our business men, would exercise some of that marvelous' fertility of invention which characterizes the American, in devising some scheme of recreation which should be at once cheap, pleasant and popular, Asthings now are, there seems a poverty of retively startling. Where are we to look for amusements wide and varied enough to suit all tastes, and prove an irresisti-ble attraction to those so sadly in need of them? A little opera, a little drama and a great deal of song and dance con-stitute nearly the whole bill of fare in the way of public amusements which even our leading cities have to offer. Is there nobody who can invent us a new pleasure?

The English have at least one advantage over us in this respect. They have naturalized among them certain outdoor amusements, which the whole people—at least of the middle and upper classes—take to with great relish and with the happiest constitutional results. It is only in England that what is technically known as "sporting" flourishes with true vigor and permanent success. Thousands of Englishmen, but for their indulgence in manly pastimes, might be stimulated by the horrible climate of their island to drink or to suicide. Doubtless, these active sports are one main cause of the superior solidity and stamina of the English constitution to the average American. How robust, ruddy and solid are the prosperous John Bulls we meet all over the globe! With all their faults and bluster, we always feel a kind of heart-warming toward such healthy, hearty specimens of humanity. No matter if much beef and beer go to the making of these rather brawny individuals; we must remember that there is brawn in their heads, as well.

The Largest Benevolent Scolety.

[Sau Francisco Chronicle.] The largest benevolent society in the world is that of the Ancient English Order of Foresters. According to the latest report the order consisted on Jan. 1, 1885, of 4,866 courts, with 633,288 benefit and 13,971 honorary members. These figures show an increase in membership over last year of 24,067 benefit and 378 honorary members. Among the latter are 3 bishops, 29 peers, 14 sons of peers, 29 baronets, 6 judges and 227 members of parliament. The total accumulated capital amounts to the enormous sum of $17,920,825. There have been some dissensions recently among this multitude of courts, possibly encouraged by the success with which the Dashaway funds in this city were divided up among a few schemes. The Ancient Order of Foresters is becoming too extensive, and the enormous sum in the coffers is likely to excite the cupidity of sharpers. Fasting in Acute Rheumatism [Canada Medical Record.]

Dr. Wood, professor of chemistry in the medical department of Bishop's college, Montreal, reports a number of cases in which acute articular rheuma tism was cured by fasting, usually from four to eight days. In no case was it necessary to fast more than ten days. Less positive results were obtained in cases of chronic rheumatism. The patients were allowed to drink freely of cold water, or lemonade in moderate quantities, if they preferred. No medicines were given. Dr. Wood says that from the quick and almost invariably good results obtained by simply abstinence from food in more than forty cases in his own practice, he is inclined to believe that rheumatism is, after all, only a phase of indigestion, to be cured by giving complete and continued rest to all the viscera.

> How Waxed Paper Is Made [Demcrest's Monthly.]

Waxed paper, such as is used for wrapping soap, is prepared by placing cartridge or other paper on a hot iron and rubbing with beeswax or brushing on a solution of wax in turpentine. On a large scale it is prepared by opening a quire of paper flat upon a table, and rapidly ironing it with a very hot iron against which is held a piece of wax, which, melting, runs down upon the paper, and is absorbed by it. Any excess on the topmost layer readily penetrates to the lower ones.

Prisoners' Evesight. [Chicago Times.] A dim light and rest from reading are not always helpful to the eyes, as the examples in the Russian prisons prove. The deprivation of books and gloom of the cells almost destroy the eyesight of the prisoners. Their eyes become in flamed, the lids swell and are opened only with great difficulty.

The Planter of Ante-Bellum Days. [William Falconer in The Current] The southern planter was a man in authority, bold, active, hardy, generous, affable, approachable and without dissimulation; the morale of his situation cultivated and demanded all of this, while his city brother was more conventionally refined in manners, more luxurious in habits, a man of affairs

There were no marble pillars, cornices, or marble steps. They were generally surrounded by large, tasteful grounds, but without marble fountains, statuary, grottos or tropical exotics. There were no servants in livery, as the slave was a prouder badge than the livery coat on the back of a hired freeman.

There was soldom a large balance in his favor. The nature of his wealth forbade it. Its increase and credit was in young negroes, and the surroundings of comfort and elegance. India's Excessive Heat.

["A Civillan's Wife in India."] The excessive dryness of the air, sometimes the humidity being as low as 8 degrees out of a possible 100 degrees, makes it feel like the blast of a furnace: it heats any ironwork, in the shade, till you can hardly bear your hand on it, and it heats the bath towels till they make me gasp as I dry my face! Everything possible is done to keep our house cool. It is almost hermetically closed and only thrown open during the coolest hours of the night. But though in this way we keep it down to 92 degrees in the day, we can not get it cooler even at night; and that is what makes it so wearing, that you never get any respite from the heat.

The deaths from heat apoplexy have been many, but that is the case every year. You, thinking of a hot English summer night, will think how delightfully cool and pleasant it must be; but I can as sure you it is only mitigated misery; the thermometer stands at 100 degrees.

Four pounds of fresh beef, moderately fat, will lose one pound five ounces in roasting, one pound three ounces in baking, and one pound in boiling. In all three cases the loss is partly due to the fat which is melted out, and in the two former cases the extra loss arises from the evaporation of water, which of course does not happen in the case of the beef which is boiled.
