

SENATORIAL PORTRAITS.

NEW MEMBERS AND THE WAY THEY ARE HAZED.

Senator Spooner and his wife. Senator Payne, the Grandmother of the Senate-Eustis, the Greatest of the President's Democratic Opponents. (Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The poorest seats in the senate are given to the new members. They are put on the back row, and are treated with a sort of condescension by the older senators.

"Great Scott!" Spooner is by no means seventeen feet five. He is not more than five feet five, and he looks like a boy as he sits there on the back row of seats, besides his fat, round cheeks. Senator Spooner does not look to be over 40 years of age. He has a round head covered with dark, wavy hair which stands out on every side like the scales of Medusa, a smooth shaven rough-skinned face which is remarkably open and friendly, and a little chest which is not much larger than the rest.

Senator Spooner is very generous. He gives good money, and he gives it with his own hands. He has a great deal of money in his life, I suppose more than $100,000 to-day.

ward, and speaks French fluently. He inherited a million and has practiced law for years. He has a fine residence in New Orleans, and now lives here in Washington in Justice Harlan's residence, in which he has a fine view of the Blaine statue.

Senator Eustis is a well-made man of 60 years. He is tall and broad shouldered, and he dresses in a well-made suit of a dark color. He is a very attentive man to the proceedings and reads or writes with a pair of black-rubber-rimmed eye glasses, fastened half way down upon his nose.

captured the choicest they could find. Then they laid it all their own way, except as they interfered with one another. The woman's dress and the man's dress were as simple as the stolen. The next step was to make them articles of merchandise, and as those who must be made to pay the price for the goods, they were made to pay the price for the goods.
