POLLY'S ALLOWANCE.

BY ISA CARRINGTON CABLE.

The ladies of St. Philip's Sewing Circle always spoke of Mrs. Fuller's six daughters as if they were an extravagance in which she had wilfully indulged, and by good management could have avoided. "If they had only been boys, now!" Mrs. Archdeaconess (as Poller Fuller called her behind her august back) Nevins would say. "But six good for nothing, useless girls!" Perhaps the reason Mrs. Nevins objected so strenuously to Mrs. Fuller's preference for the female sex was that she had had boys; that is, she had had one boy, college-bred, European-toured, with a fortune in his own right, to say nothing of his prospective heirship richest vestry-man in St. Philip's church. And this adored, petted and only boy was very fond of the Fuller girls, and so attentive to Polly, the prettiest of the lot, that Bloomingdale was agog with excitement on the subject. So she would repeat: "If they had only been boys-stalwart, hard working boys! But six girls!"

Now it was hard to believe-for the Archdeaconess was tall, grizzled, bony, and she might have left Jericho at any hour "for her beard was fully grown" -that she, too must have at one time been girl, as Mr. Burdell was once a single gentleman; but this fact did soften her toward her sex. If Jerry-

But we are anticipating. There certainly were six Fullers— Margaret, Jen, Julie, Polly, Lillian, Rose. They lived in a little crampedup rectory that belonged to St. Philip's, a poor little church on the outskirts of Bloomingdale. Their papa was a dear, wrong-headed, clever, impractical clergyman, who never could see his way to orthodoxy, and yet was not sufficiently hetrodox for his bishop's dismissal. So he put him where his scientific sermons could do least harm and his holy life most good. There mamma was only a shade better, as she proved by having six girls instead of boys. Her light bread was apt to refuse to rise, and her preserves had a way of working after the second week. If the archdeaconess could have broken off the engagement between the Alphonse Fuller and Susan, his wife. which had existed for twenty-seven years, and sent the six offending maidens back to chaos or to paradise, and married them both to more suitable and more practical people. I suppose it would have been better. Providence is a poor manager, compared to Mrs. Jeremiah Nevins; but she couldn't So St. Philip's had to put up with a thousand-dollar-a-year rector, his shift-

The Fullers were generally absurdly, provokingly happy. As long as one has no "object of bigotry and virtue," it makes but little difference if the cat does jump on the parlor table. If the carpet is worn to rags, the tears of the maid-of-all work may be tried with the reflection that a cinder or two dropped from the ash-pan will do little was borne on the minds of these six females that if they had an allowance they would all present much better appearances, and spend less money in doing it. And when the six Fuller girls made up their minds, there was an end of it. They interviewed their mamma, they bullied their papa, they built such splendid air castles of what they would do if they only could be allowed to judge themselves, that the long suffering martyr consented, and promised to let them have their way. Now a promise in the Fuller family was as good as a bond-better, for I have heard many a man beside St. Paul declare himself happy, especially after a panic in the street, except these bonds.

got their money they felt so enormous ly rich they could not contain themselves and it. They forgot it must last six months, and represented boots, gloves, gowns, bonnets - a thousand necessaries. They forgot the waste the lack of a parasol makes in the life of an American girl; they only saw the beautiful $- (no, I will not hold them up to ridicule), and they longed to spend it, and it burned in their pockets, till, alas! sometimes they live like prodigals, for three weeks, and starved and were almost naked the rest of the twenty-six. On this particular morning the whole family were in the sitting-room. It was a June day, a dewy, rosy, dimpled day, and "all the trees on the hills had opened their thousand leaves": the air itself was as fresh and sweet as the first day in paradise. Even the orphan-childern had come out the Sunday before in little-sprigged calicos.

All the Fullers but one had gone to church also in their neat spring suits, looking so stylish and jaunty, so sweet and violet-eyed, that the archdeaconess failed in her responses, and scanned each figure as it went up the aisle with a glance that Julie declared amounted to an indictment for larceny.

> personal vanity. She seldom looked in the glass. One reason was that the mirror was cracked exactly through the middle; another, that her sisters' criticisms held up to candid view all faults and defects. She never thought of her face or head. She throw on her by two grooms and a smiling host. Miss Miverton leaned back in a perfectly fitting driving costome, and gave her the friendliest of smiles—a little condescending, and it was slightly amused? That was not possible. To be sure, one dimpled hand was bare, but she had no right to suspect that the other glove would soon be used to cover it. White was always en regle and becoming, and she had on her fifteen-dollar bonnet. So Polly bowed and smiled back again, and was also sweet and lovely and like a June rose that Mr. Jerry Nevins had hard work to keep from declaring himself on the spot. The Kennels, at which the pologame was played was a very fashionable place. Everybody was out that afternoon. Polly was so happy - happy with the consolation religion itself does not always give of being appropropriately and becomingly dressed. To be sure, all her income was swallowed up; she was a wretched, penniless, forlorn creature on the morrow, but this was to-day. "Let to-morrow take care of the thinge of itself," quoted Polly, piously. "Everyone is so kind," she whispered to Jerry, confidingly. "See, they are all bowing and smiling." "How pretty Polly Fuller is!" she heard somebody say as she passed. "Poor little thing! Did you ever self up rather indignantly.

"They are commenting on my bonnet, and wondering where I got it-impertinent things!" Then she looked up and saw Jerry's eyes fixed on it, and there was the her alter ego, "that this is the first time I ever had anything nice, and he is sorry for me." And then she half wished she had not worn it. "Are you very fond of dress?" she inquired, presently.

"Yes, very; that is, I like a woman properly dressed, as I want my wife to be" (here Polly's hand—her ungloved hand - got the least possible little squeeze); "but what I care for more is rose adorned one side; the crown was garb." "But, indeed," said the guilty Polly,

But Polly had flown; the subject sometimes one yields to the temptation. You must not be too hard on Just then the bell rang. "A note people if they do not dress according to your ideas," she added, with tears in her big brown eyes. "I hard on you?" cried Jerry-it was She was a very black fisted Murcury, in the moonlight, and they went down a lane of flaming chestnuts—"I hard? I just love and admire you for it. I think you are the prettiest, sweetest thing in the world; I long to deck you with jewels and fine raiment, just to pay you back for all your bravery. Oh, Polly, I love you!" There! Miss Miverton and Mr. Reynolds occupied back seats; they both looked engrossed in each other. What Polly said I don't know—something that was satisfactory to the driver. Then she looked up conscious-stricken. "Oh, Jerry!" she cried, "It isn't I you love; it's my bonnet, and you have no idea what I sacrificed to get it. I spent all my allowance. I was the most extravagent creature; I got angry with all my sisters, even mamma and papa. Now you have loved me and told me so just because of it, I will

Hence one bad habit is confirmed by the introduction of another. It is impossible to whip terror out of a horse or pound courage into one. Kindness and gentle persuasion are the best weapons to correct the pernicious habit of shying. The less fear exhibited by the driver, and the less notice taken of the shying by using harsh means, the sooner it will be given up. NUMBER 8. Fatal Effects of Alcohol.

According to Dr. Richardson alcool cuts down by disease, in England and Wales alone, one thousand persons week. What, adds the Dr. if any other cause of mortality did the same? What if 1,000 persons per week died in the same area, from the bite of the rabid dog or the snake, by the swallowing of arsenic, opium, or prussic acid? What if some thousand persons a week were known to be killed by the secret devices of the slow poisoner, who, under the guise of friendship, went about and instilled into his victims some subtle drop which led to the shortening of their life and to the production of lingering organic fatal disease? What, indeed, then would be the cry and the action? Why, all through the ranks of the great profession of medicine there would be a tumult of labor and toil, such as never before was seen, to remove the calamity. Men would be ambitious to be first to discover by experiment, by experience, the cause of so fearful an evil, and to remove it instantly; While he who won the victory over the calamity would be extolled as illustrious, and, crowned with honor, become a household word from among the children of Esculapius. Yet here one single cause making this deadly havoc, a cause well known and easily removable, in spite of its evils and in face of its easy removal, is permitted to remain in sight with a majority of the army of medicine looking on in apathy, pitying us "poor foolish fanatics" who are exercising our limited powers to uproot it, and some, with

Down in the rich alluvial delta of Louisiana there winds to the sea a slow brown bayou called the Terrebonna. Near the mouth are the homes of many Acadians, for this was one of the streams along which they settled in Louisiana. They cultivate little rice farms and orange groves, and live in summer upon their fishing, and the produce of their gardens in winter. In among these little farms is a large tract of land, a melancholy, weedy waste. Some time at dusk there you will catch a glimpse of a bent figure skulking away from the door of a ru-ined cottage whose chimneys have fallen in, whose roof is a green pulpy mass of litchen, and whose walls totter forward to a fall. The neighbors will explain that it is only old Allandin, the wild man. He looks 70, but is not so old. Long gray hair hangs in filthy, matted locks to his waist and mingles with his great sweeping beard. Two large dark eyes gaze out from a wrinkled, pallid face, through the rough hair, with a glare like a cat. His hands are and he creeps silently away every night into the frosty swamps. Thirty years ago there was no more prosperous farm in the parish than that of Etienna Allandin, and none more respected than its rich young owner. He was betrothed to a pretty young girl who was to marry him in the next March. According to old Acadian usage he built a new house that winter, spending loving care upon the nest that was to hold his little mate. The wedding day approached. The happy bridegoom made ready the marriage corbeille, as was usual, only his gifts were the most splendid ever seen in that simple neighborhood. The wedding gown was of real white silk, the veil, wreath of wax orange flowers, with the white shoes and gloves had come all the way from New Orleans. Logan Met Burchard. Sometimes one would give a great deal more than a penny for another man's thoughts. A very tall and venerable-looking old man walked down Broadway. His face was benign, his clothes had just enough sedateness to show that he was a clergyman, his port was rather impressive, and altogether he had the look of being somebody or other. In point of fact he was the Rev. Dr. Burchard, who, by the utterance of a single sentence in the last presidential campaign made himself the hated of one party and ridiculed of the other. Just as he passed the portico of a hotel, Gen. John A. Logan, who, but for him, would now be vicepresident of the United States, stepped out into the street and gazed at him until he got beyond sight. What I desired intensely to know exactly what Logan thought about Burchard. What he said was this: "Indeed, was that Dr. Burchard? You don't tell me. Ah,

Once a gentleman who had agreed to try the novelty, and had even allowed the apparatus to be adjusted, at the last moment exclaimed, "Stop, stop, I've changed my mind!" "But I havn't, and you're a fool and a coward for your pains," answered the Doctor, pulling the trigger. In another instant the tooth was extracted, much to the timid patient's delight and astonishdown on a sleeping cat at Santa Rosa the other day and bore its qualling and scratching high in the air. When about 500 feet high the hawk lost its grip, and the cat came down with fearful velocity, but the hawk caught it again just before it struck the earth, and was carrying it off, when suddenly both fell like lead to the ground. The cat had bitten through the hawk's head, killing it instantly, and the fall killed the cat. Now here is a snake story to match the cat one: The Merced (Cal.) Express tells of a hawk seen flying with a snake in its talons. Presently a skirmish took place in the upper air, and the hawk fluttered and acted strangely. The bird finally came to the ground with a thud, when the snake was found coiled around the body tight enough to shut its wind off. The pair were left to fight it out, and the reptile won.

The figure of a dog in the window of a burning building attracted the attention of a sympathetic crowd. "Won't somebody save that noble dog?" asked a young lady. A fireman, touched by that call for bravery, ascended a ladder at the risk of his life to the window, smashed in the panes of glass, and suddenly paused. Leaving the dog to its fate, he quickly returned to the ground. To the questions of the crowd he gave the laconic answer, "Terra-cotta," and the imitation animal disappeared through the burning building.

Many a girl finds first in the frivolties and next in the iniquity of the streets that excitement by which remorse and regrets may be deadened. If she is too strong in principle, too pure and elevated in tone thus to sink down to one of the pitiful women of the streets, she may find herself in some cold garret, lonely, overworked, despondent and miserable. He shows by care-fully-compiled statistics that eleven barrels of flour can be grown in Denmark on the same amount of ground on an average that it takes to grow five barrels on our Western farms, and yet, on account of the price of land and taxes, etc., it is much more profitable to raise wheat in the United States than in Denmark. The point that he makes is, that our Western farms will in a comparatively short time be considerably impoverished, and it will then be difficult to compete in the markets of the world, for as the land becomes less productive the ongoing flood of emigration will continue to raise its price. He says that in Denmark the people are much better off than in Great Britain and France, for they turned their attention largely to the dairy and live stock some time

There appears to be no improvement in the striking business, excepting an increase in their number. On Monday 230 switchmen in Kansas City quit work, blocking the business of eleven railroads that center there, and as a consequence the large packing houses and smelting works have been obliged to close, driving their large force of employes to idleness. About 4,000 men are thrown out of employment by the strike of the 230. A special to the Inter Ocean, Tuesday, says: "At present the cause of the strike cannot be learned. Some of the men say, 'We had orders from the head-

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, (COLUMBUS, O., March 12, 1886.) A B JOHNSON, Esq., Decatur, Mich.: Dear Sir:—These seed companies are incorporated for the "sale of seed and grain," not for the fraudulent business they are doing. They are ALL doing business on the same principle, and it is a principle which amounts to a fraud and a swindle. However honestly these companies might try to conduct their business, if conducted for any length of time it becomes absolutely impossible for them to redeem their bonds. Thus, they sell a man 100 bushels of grain, and give him a socalled bond, binding them to sell 200 bushels for him at the same price, less a commission of 25 per cent. To sell the 200 bushels for him a bond of 400 bushels must be given to some one else. To sell the 400 bushels a bond of 800 bushels must be given; and so it doubles up each time-100, 200, 400, 800, 1,600, 3,200, etc., until a time must come, if the business is prolonged, when all the money in the State of Michigan would not redeem these bonds. In point of fact these companies have no intention of redeeming. their bonds except in exceptional cases. They have ruined thousands of farmers in Ohio. Our courts are flooded with suits. A bill is pending in our legislature making their operations a penitentiary offense. They have been public sentimen; into Michigan and here the people are more gnllible. These seed companies have no tangible property. Their capital is capital authorized—not paid in. Their stockholders are non-residents of Michigan generally, and unknown to parties there. You cannot warn your farmers too strongly. Very truly,
W. S. WALKER, Chief Clerk.

A reduction of telephone rates throughout the state is promised.

Encouraging Business Prospects.

While the following forms an encouraging business outlook, it also tends largely to increase friendship and sympathy for the organization, mostly of a negative character: Sr. Louis, March 23.-No one venures a prediction as to how or when the strike upon the Gould southwestern system of railroads will end. Mr. Hoxie has refused to confer with Mr. Powderly; the efforts of Governors Martin and Marmaduke have failed to effect a settlement; the management of the road declines to treat with any of its striking employes representing the Knights of Labor; the latter now announce that they will accept no terms from the company unless offered to them as members of that organization; and now, as a last resort, the strikers have called upon the merchants of this city to assist in a possible arbitration. Several business men state that such a course would be gladly pursued by them if both would agree to abide faithfully by their decision. An Arab Horse-Dealer's Warranty. The following is the literal translation of a certificate recently given by an Arab horse-dealer to one of his customers:

"In the name of God, compassionate and merciful, thanks be to God the Lord of the universe. Prayer and health to the most illustrious of the prophets, to his posterity and to all His friends. Thanks be to God that by his will the firmament moves, that by his mighty power He has created the world, the birds, horses, and every living thing, and to Adam also, whom He commanded His angels themselves to honor. To some of these beings living from the creation the Lord promised his favor, happiness and paradise, and for others He decreed scorn and His vengeance, which s the hell announced from eternity. Thus it is, as the Lord hath said, He has omitted nothing from the book which was for the pleasure of man. He has granted to him the passion of love for women, of affection for children, for thoroughbred horses, for birds, and for every living thing, and for gold and silver heaped up to hundred-weights. And he has also said, the stable of your horse shall drive away your enemies and those of your God. His shoulders are glory, his entrails are hidden treasures, and his serves to drive away the and his princes. Scarlet Fever in Cows' Milk. The latest theory-by no means a reorigin of scarlet fever is that it may be had "direct from the cow," and is, in short, the form assumed in human beings by some originally vaccine disease. An epidemic, or rather several epidemics, of scarlet fever in Marylebone, Hampstead and other districts has been traced to certain milk. Every care has been taken to discover whether the milk could have been infected after leaving the cow, and on full investigation this theory has been excluded. One of the cows, "the appearance of which was least satisfactory," has now been bought and conveyed to the Brown institution, where experiments are being made with the milk and other secretions. The sanitary officers of the Marylebone district certainly deserve credit for the promptitude with which they seem to have nipped in the bud what might have become a formidable epidemic, and for the care with which they have conducted an investigation which may lead to important scientific results.-Pall Mall

Invention of a Smoking Machine. M. Prenty, a Frenchman, has invented "smoking machine." Tobacco manufacturers make their cigars out of quite a large number of different leaves, whose physical and chemical qualities have to be so combined as to yield an article that gives out an agreeable olor and burns well. Combustibility, then, is a physical quality that must be estimated for each variety of leaf. Such estimate is made by measuring the time during which a certain style of cigar, made solely from the tobacco to be tested, holds its fire without drawing on it a second time. In this comparative determination the intensity of the lighting is the element that has to be determined and regulated. To accomplish this is the object of the machine, which is so constructed as to imitate all the motions of a smoker, who, at regular intervals, would inhale definite volume of air with a definite and constant force of suction.-

Boston Transcript. The Old Custom of "Round-Plowing." The village of Minussinsk, in Russia, has been troubled by the pest among its cows, and the conscript fathers of the community held a meeting to decide upon the best means of putting a stop to the calamity. It was agreed that resort should be had to the old Slavonic custom of round-plowing. A Russian paper gives an account of the process. Seven virgins, two old women, and a young bachelor of good character are elected. At midnight a procession of the peasants is formed, led by the two old women carrying pictures of saints. In the rear of the procession the seven maidens are harnessed to a plow, which is guided by the young man. MR. LANGLEY celebrated his 80th birthday by sawing a cord of hardwood at Royal Oaks yesterday. Nothing about "these degenerate days" in that -Evenina News.

Mr. Abijah Estes, of this place, can beat Mr. Langley's record out of sight and not think it worthy of newspaper mention, either. He has sawed about two hundred cords of hardwood since he was eighty years old, and is now earning a good living at that very invigorating employment. He is now 82 years old.

The regular meeting of Township Boards for the settling of all business of the townships for the year will be held next Tuesday, March 30, Persons having business to come before such bodies should have them ready for that

MR. CHARLES CORROLL is arrangingto remove from this place, and will embark in the grocery and produce business on his own responsibility, at Troy Station. The RECORD, among his many Buchanan friends, wish him abundant success in his undertaking.

One week from next Saturday, April , is Registration Day. If you have never voted in this township, or have been away during the past year, attend to having your name on the list, Those who live in the village must remember that it is not sufficient that their names are on the village register, as that and the township list are entirely separate.

MR. EDWARD ROUGH has completed his course of commercial study at Valparaiso Normal school, and is at home for the summer. About seventy-five of the friends of Edward, Frank and Miss Lillie met at their home, Friday evening and gave them a surprise party, as a welcome home. The latter two have returned to Valparaiso for the ensuing term.

FREE LECTURE-Hon. R. G. Horr will deliver a free lecture in Rough's Opera House, Saturday evening, April 10. His subject will be the one that is now all-absorbing in interest, "The Labor Question." As Mr. Horr's home is in the Saginaw Valley, where he has an opportunity for the special study of that question in all its phases, his lecture will likely be interesting.

ONE of the hardest parts of the present liquor law to enforce is that which prohibits one person from furnishing liquor to those who the law terms common drunkards, and who cannot procure liquor for themselves. MISS ADDIE GRAHAM, of Berrien Springs, and Mrs. J. M. Mathews, from this place, will start Tuesday for Kansas: Miss Graham, for a month's "life in a dug-out," with her cousin, will have served her time (six months) at homesteading, and will return at that time. Mrs. Mathems will go to her home in Sedan.

THE Bainton Bros' new grist mill is now working into one of the most successful basinesses in this town. They have nearly succeeded in clearing the home market of the Niles and South Bend flour that a short time since supplied the market. Besides this, they have flour in every market between here and Chicago, excepting Kensington. Their custom work for the present month will average over fifty bushels of wheat per day.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Senator Conger has presented to the Senate a bill to give $181,000 to the Pottawatomie Indians in Cass, Van Buren and Berrien counties for payment of the unfilled treaty stipulations.

THE Pentecost band has been stirring up the unregenerate of St. Joseph. The band had good material to work success. Not content with preaching the riches of grace, it must needs measure the depths of the pit prepared for sinners. In consequence thereof Lizzie Arnt and Lena Turner, who had attended the Pentecostal showers regularly, have become violently insane. The band continues its work right along.—Detroit Journal.

BERRIEN SPRINGS has for sometime past been the seat of a matrimonial bureau, whose vocation it is to furnish names and addresses for correspondence purposes, at the alarmingly low rate of twenty cents a name. A number of the school girls in this place, who have but recently grown into long dresess, have been availing themselves of the high privileges of the bureau, and "Oh, my, what lots of fun we do have" watching the mails for the tender missives they have been enabled to gather from all parts of the country, from Connecticut to Texas. It is truly amusing, ye know,

A TEST case, at which it is expected that the momentous question of whether hard cider is an intoxicating beverage, or not, under the laws of Michigan, is before Esquire Dick to-day; it being that of the People vs. J. W. Smith, of Galien township, for selling aged cider, on which some of the boys are said to have got drunk.

THE Evening Star is the name of a new daily paper just started in Niles, Vol. 1, No. 1, of which, reached this place this morning. Henry Deniston is the man at the quill, the mechanical part being equally divided between a Chicago Patent "Inards" establishment and the Niles Democrat office. The initial Star twinkles quite brightly, with an abundance of local matter and advertising. While Bro. Deniston has our best wishes for the success of his undertaking, we can not but entertain serious doubts of the long existence of the venture.

Blue and Gray. This superb War Drama will be produced by Wm. Parrott Post, on the evenings of April 7th, 8th and 9th. The Drama comes to us highly recommended. The Grand Rapids Telegram

"The play is much better written than the majority of war dramas, and excells in strong lines, clearly executed pictures and thrilling situations. It also abounds in the brightest of wit

The Coopersville Observer says: "The play is simply' immense-indescribably so, and must be seen to be appreciated.

The Lockport, Ill., Register says: "It has carried this place by a storm of popular enthusiasm only equal to to the fierce howl of the tempest rag-ing without. The Post made a decided hit in securing Mr. Copp, as he certainly is a model of perfection, push and energy in preparing his drama for presentation, and to this must be added the fact that he is an actor of remarkable ability."

THE article we copied from the RECord in regard to the illness of Prosecuting Attorney Roe, in some particulars is untrue. 1st, He was sick a few days instead of a few weeks. 2nd, His physicians did not advise him to give up his office, and he has no intentior of doing so. He is attending to his business as usual.—Niles Mirror.

There appears to be a desperate atempt to make the RECORD out a liar in this case. The facts in the case are that, while Mr. Roe was confined to his room but a short time, he had been suffering from nervous prostration several weeks, just as was stated in the RECORD. 2nd, His physician did recommend just as we stated; whether he meant permanently or not may be another affair. More than that, he was so sick that he sent to Florida for his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Roe, and brought them home somewhat earlier than they would otherwise have come. It is also true that he has resumed his official work and no one will be more pleased to see him continue it, with renewed vigor and the best of .health, than will the RECORD. We make this explanation, not because we care a fip for the rantings of the class of croakers of the Mirror, and a few others, but in justice to Mr. Roe, who is doing his best to give Berrien county a good Prosecuting Attorney; but we fail to see where it becomes any disgrace to him that his health should fail him under the strain.

EMEIL KOEINGSHOF, not satisfied with the judgment he has received against the township for damages for overflowing his marsh by the Clear Lake ditch, he has now served a notice on the owners of the property drained, commanding them to close the ditch. About twenty years ago the Clear Lake marsh filled with water until the roads crossing it at different points were under two or three feet of water, and for the improvement of these roads the property owners adjoining turned out with teams and scrapers and dug the outlet to that marsh, a ditch about twenty-five rods long and in places nearly thirty feet deep. A few years since that time Mr. Koeingshof bought the Drybread farm, on which is a lot of marsh land, a large portion of which has been so soft that cattle had to wear snow shoes in order to travel over it, and which is about eighty rods above the outlet of the Clear Lake ditch, and it is for overflowing this piece of marsh, that Mr. Koeingshof has obtained damages from this township, and for the safety of which he now asks to have that ditch of eighteen or twenty years standing closed. We cannot say he will not succeed. He has succeeded in getting judgment that is as unjust as was ever made by an American jury, and there is no telling what else he may succeed in obtaining in the matter.

There appears to be a prospect of at least checking the intolerable nuisance this town has been subjected to from the sling shots in the hands of boys. Two of the Treat boys and young Guyberson have been arrested for a too free use of these implements of destruction, on a charge of malicious mischief, and will most likely suffer what punishment the law allows in such cases. They were caught in the act of breaking the windows out of Jesse Roe's barn, using buckshot for ammunition. A few evenings since Mr. J. M. Russell was going along Day's avenue, when a stone from one of these slings struck him a stunning blow on the head. It came from a parcel of boys under the shade of a tree on the other side of the street. Not long since two pieces of iron from the power punch at the Wagon Works went through the heavy glass and curtain in the Music School, in the upper portion of Redden's block, and a third piece struck another window, shattering the glass, all in quick succession. There is one way to stop that kind of business, that is to jail every boy caught at it. A half-dozen or more of mother's darling dovs in Berrien jail ought at least have the effect of a warning to those left behind.

GALIEN ITEMS.

The Teachers' Institute last Saturday was well attended, and has not been surpassed in interest by any ever held in this part of the county. Mr. H. S. Cone came home from the South sick with an attack of pneumonia but is better, and able to be

The debate between the Mt. Zion

Debating Club of Dayton and the Galien Literary Society came off at the Town Hall Tuesday evening. The question was "Resolved. That high license is more effective than prohibition." The speakers for the Mt. Zion Club were to have been Messrs. Jakway, Currier, Finch and Lake for the affirmative, but Messrs Currier and Lake not being present, Dr. Bulhand and Robert Alcott of Galien were chosen in their places. The speakers for the Galien Society were C. A. Clark, Wm. Beach, D. W. Swem and T. Smith for the negative. The question was decided in favor of the negative. Excellent music for the evening was furnished by the Galien Cornet Band and the Galien Glee Club.

The Teachers' Institute, held at Galien last Saturday, was a success, notwithstanding the absence of the "big guns," Particularly noticeble was that part of the programme which was assigned to Miss Mary Martin and Miss G. Emery, who performed their part in such a vivacious and entertaining manner as to fill the room with a genial atmosphere. It seems strange that some young men cannot restrain themselves enough to even act the part of gentlemen while in church. Such persons ought to stay at home until they can obey the rules of society. In regard to that guardian matter, I wish to state, for the benefit of Bro. Hill, that Judge Hinman is entirely blameless, as he has only performed a duty required of him by law.

[Benton Harbor Expositor.] A little six-year-old girl, Emma Gerhert of St. Joe, was badly burned on last Saturday. She was alone in the house, her mother having gone to a neighbor's, and it is supposed the child was playing with the fire which caught her clothes and before the flames could be extinguished her face, breast and arms were fearfully burned.

If he receives the proper encouragement it will be done and the best blooded Jerseys will sell for the ordinary price of good common cows.... inspecting road and bridges. We have not heard any thing regarding his re-

Berrien Springs Era.] All the talk that has been heard about the disposition of the St. Joe Valley R. R. is a little premature. Some part of the stockholders have expressed a wish to put its affairs into the hands of a receiver. Others say they don't wish any such action taken. It is a little road and incapable of earning any great revenue, and it is safe to say that a receiver, in addition to its present load, would be more than it could carry. Receivers are not apt to be low priced men, and they do not work to any alarming extent. This road will not support any such luxury and also pay the cost of putting it into a receiver's hands. If the intention is to kill it, that might be a shewd move -not otherwise.

The Civil Service Commission is Again Rearranged-This Time It is with a View, It is Expected, of Forming a Permanent Body.

[Special Correspondence.] WASHINGTON, March 23.—The civil service commission of the present administration has become one of the most prominent features of the government, not so much from the duties it performs, but from the success of its members in keeping their names before the public. Not only has the make-up of the commission been altered, but the rumored resignation of its prominent members came with a frequency that became, to say the least, monotonous. Now another transformation has taken place in the replacement of two of its members with the intention, it is expected, of forming a permanent commission. The new members are John H. Oberly, of Illinois, and Charles Lyman, of Connecticut. They take the places of William L. Trenholm and Dorman B. Eaton. respectively, the remaining member of the mission being Alfred P. Edgerton, of Indiana. They have all been pedagogues in their lives and are therefore admirably fitted for 450 high school board examiners, which is about what their Charles Lyma was born in the New England states. He served in the army during a portion of the late war, but was CHARLES LYMAN. removed by Secretary Stanton before its close. In 1864 he was made a clerk in the treasury department, and in 1877 became chief clerk. In 1883 he was appointed chief of the civil service examiners, by President Arthur, from which he was appointed to his present position. Mr. Lyman has always been an enthusiast on the subject of civil service reform. He was an active member of the civil service board appointed by Gen. Grant during his administration. John H. Oberly, of Illinois, the newly apnointed head of the civil service commission comes from an old Pennsylvania family, being a great-grandson of Alexander Schaeffer, the founder of Schaefferstown in Lebanon county. His father was born in Schaefferstown, whence he went to Cincinnati, O., where John H. Oberly was born in 1835. From Cincinnati the Oberlys went to Wooster, a handsome and flourishing town in central Ohio, Here young Oberly learned the ? printing business, ind for a short edited a Democratic newspaper. Two or three years before the war he went to Memphis. but was Tenn.,

cause of his adhesion to the Union cause. He returned to Ohio in 1862 and married. The next year he went to Illinois, where he has sided. He was, in 1873 and 1874, a member of the Illinois legislature, and is the author of important railroad legislation in that state. He declined re-election to the legislature, and was appointed by Governor Cullom (Republican) a member of the railroad commission Subsequently he became chairman of the Democratic state committee. In 1885 President Cleveland appointed him superintendent of Indian schools. His term of service in that place has been short, but it is certain that the administration of the Indian school system has materially improved since he took charge transfer of Mr. Trenholm from th civil service commission to be comptroller of the currency places him in a position for which he is better fitted. William L. Trenholm was a commission merchant until made civil service com-vember. He is about 50 years of age, and was warm ly indorsed for the place of commis sioner by leading friends of the civil service reform novement north Cand south. He is a Son of the late Secretary Trenholm of the treasury of the

He served a short term under Secretary Lamar as one of the experts of the labo bureau. Perry Barton.

With Power as Great as the President. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers was organized in 1863 as a benevolent society by a few engineers. Since then it has grown to be one of the most powerful, as well as one of the most intelligent of labor organizations in the country. Its intelligence and power comes from the character of its members and the command of its chief. In a way his PETER M. ARTHUR. is a power over business a ff a ir s greater than the president him-But from the past course of the chief of the brotherhood, Mr. Peter M. Arthur, of Cleveland, O., little danger may be feared of his misusing his authority. By a wise rule of this organization the engineers of a railroad who consider themselves imposed upon cannot strike without first submitting their grievances to him. These he cooly and deliberately examines and if, in his judgement, the difficulty cannot be settled in any other way, he gives the order for a strike; otherwise no strike can

COL. NICK SMITH AFTER OUR MAR .. Twice a Widower, but He Has a Mort gage on Beauty. [Special Correspondence.] Sr. Louis, March 24.—Col. Nicholas Smith does not hesitate to say in his modest way that he is the most beautiful of living men. There is reason to believe that he thinks also that he is the most beautiful man that ever did live. Like Grosvenor, in the celebrated opera of "Patience," he has a mortgage on beauty. In the privacy of his chamber he, too, wrings his hands and exclaims:

"Curses on me fatal attractions!" He is 44 years old and does his snow white hair in quince seed lotion to make it curl

He is tall and black eyed, and a native of Kentucky. His first wife was a wealthy woman it is said, and he spent her money. In process of time he married Horace Greeley's daughter Ida and spent her fortune too. He likewise made away with that of her aunt. Mrs. Cleveland, who now live Tribune reporter made the story up, which he probably did. "Yes," said Mr. Abud, "I remember this Col.—er—Smith. We played three nights at Louisville, and I believe he occupied a pox at two of the performances. He is an old schoolfellow of Dr. Griffin's, and was merely presented to Miss Anderson, and I didn't hear anything of this sort of nonsense. When Dr. Griffin and I were standing in the rotundah of the hot-tel at St. Louey"—(the first part of this interview is presented in the United States language, to save time) "one evening, I er—said to him, you know, 'Why, doctah, here comes that er-extrahdinary er-man. TWO CITIZENS OF CINCINNATI. Dr. Wise, the Jewish Rabbi-David Sin-ton, the Millionaire. (Special Correspondence.) CINCINNATI, March 24.—This conservative wealthy old town has many distinguished citizens. They are public spirited, too, and have done much for the place of their habitation. The city has for years been cursed with and governed by rings of local politicians, first of one party, then the other. It is these that have given Cincinnati her bad name for riots, election unpleasantnesses and things. The city has within its borders at once some of the best and some of the worst people in the United States. Some of her best citizens are the two gen tlemen whose pictures appear herewith. Dr. Wise is the principal Jewish pastor. For many years he E PORTO has been known as the leader of the advanced and modernized Hebrew religious thought, not Sbut in all the adjacent region. He is a distinguished

Rabbi Wise is identified with the pest interests of morality and reform, both in Jewish and Christian circles. He is a bril-

ROBERT GARRETT'S NEW RESIDENCE ON MONUMENT F.IL .

The Little Portice Which Brought About a Law Suit That May Continue Until Doomsday-Will There Be a Colored Orphan Asylum Next Door?

(Special Correspondence.) BALTIMORE, March 23,-Mr. Robert Garrett is one of the few men of the country who has inherited a fortune and likewise some of the business ability that brought about the fortune. The fortune he received from his father was estimated at $12,000,000. Instead of immediately withdrawing himself from business and hoarding this wealth he has plunged into bigger enterprises, chief among which are the extension of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to New York, and the estab ishment of a telegraph system that will be second to none in the country; and last, but not least, the building of a million-dollar home for himself on Mt. Vernon place. Altogether Mr. Garrett is a citizen of which our city is exceedingly proud. Mr. Garrett's personal appearance does not afford an insight by any means satisfactory into his real character. His face is boyish. His eyes are blue, and have an irrepressible inclination to dance and twinkle, as and twinkle, as though brimming over with suppressed amusement. He is much given to hearty laughing. He stands a triffe over the medium height, and weighs fully 180 pounds. He is plump, but not corpulent.

But it is Mr. Garret's house, that he has just moved into, that is the great object of interest now, and uppertendom of the big cities is on the tiptoe of expectation, waiting for an invitation to visit it. This house has, during its construction, become notorious through the fight about the portico. This portico can be seen in the illustration, and appears like an exceedingly harmless affair; and yet it is the subject of a legal fight that has Lecome immortal, and threatens to go on forever. The trouble came about in this way: Mr. Garrett's hobbies run in the line of clothes and canes and shoes, but this portico is one of Mrs. Garrett's hobbies. Next to Mr. Garrett lives Mr. Henry Janes, the partner of Eroch Pratt, and a small, fragile, chipper n an, with mild gray eyes and a smooth face that belies his years. When the portico was Leing built Mr. Janes sought Mr. Garrett and inquired whether it was to be inclosed. "That was my idea," replied Mr. Garrett, with a scraphic smile.

"But it will obliterate my view down the square!" persisted the meek Mr. Janes in a "Cawn't help that, you know," was the "because this portico was my wife's scheme, and the's bent on having it just so, you know." Thereupon Mr. Janes and Mr. Garrett parted in a huff. Mrs. Garrett heard of the interview and resolutely declared to some of her friends that she intended to build that portico if she had to buy and tear down al the other houses in the square. Then Mr. Janes pranced into court and got out an injunction against the portico. The suit has gone through the lower courts and languishen. in the state court of appeals in the sleepy little capital of Annapolis. Half the town has become deeply interested in the issue, and society has arrayed itself upon one side or the other. The newspapers have gloated over the choice scandal. Not long since a rumor obtained currency to the effect that Mr. Janes intended to donate his splendid house to a colored orphan asylum. Mt. Vernon place, which reckons itself next to heaven in ultra exclusiveness was utterly paralyzed. Millionaire after millionaire hustled himself quietly into the resence of Mr. Janes, and in tones of anguish implored him to do no such thing. The prospect of having little "niggers" sitting around on their marble doorsteps was more than they could stand. Mr. Janes dryly denied the rumor, but that did not prevent Mt. Vernce place from being filled, for a time, with an admixture of profound dismay, disgust, indignation and profanity. Well, the portico is built. Mr. Garrett has moved in and it is needless to add that

ROBERT GARRETT'S RESIDENCE. The house is considered to be one of the finest private residences in the country. Exteriorly it has no striking features of architectural design. The front is brown stone, unrelieved by any other material. The interior, though, will rival any of the palaces of the old world in splendor. The most skilful artisans of the world have been engaged in the decoration of it. The furniture and curtains were purchased in Europe, and were the subject of a special trip by Mr. and Mrs. Garrett. The curtains contain designs on lace, so delicate as to be scarcely visible. This exquisite fabric cost $200 per yard. This will give some idea of the richdisplayed throughout. A brief summary of other striking original features of the residence are these: The carpets are Miltons, Axministers and velvets of special designs; the walls of the pedrooms are whitecoated in imitation of bedrooms are whitecoated in imitation of basket work; the ceiling of the main hallway is made in cherry as is also the grand spiral staircase. The ballroom adjoining the cast parior is the most gorgeously decorated apartment in the house. Its walls are wainscoated in Italian marble, indented with niches containing statuary. In the rear of the ballroom is the conservatory, said to centain the finest collection of orchids in the country. The most striking feature of the country. The most striking feature of the house is probably the mantels—these are of richly carved mahogany. The whole house is illuminated by both gas and electricity. The bath room would require a column description to give an idea of its grandeur, and so would many of the other beauties of the mansion. For the present this must suffice. A. J. BOTHWELL

MONUMENT TO GEN. LEE

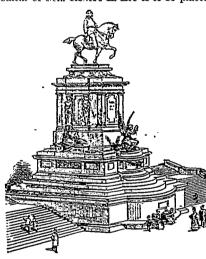

HOW THE BRONZE STATUE WILL LOOK WHEN COMPLETED.

The Richmond, Va., Ladies Give the Commission for Making It to Niehaus, of Cincinnati-American and Foreign Competitors.

ISpecial Correspondence.1 RICHMOND, March 23.--America is rapidly filling up with statues of her great men. The country being so big it is a good thing we have great men enough to go around. The late war produced a vast crop of them on both sides of the line. There are major generals and brigadier generals without end. If we shouldn't have any more wars for the next 500 years we shall not have more than used up the great names the late war left at our disposal for marble immortality. The revered leader of the lost cause himself at length to have a suitable mon erected to his memory. It is to be here in the city of Richmond; very fittingly, too, for here the chivalrous, melancholy soldier made the last struggle for the south, knowing full well that it would be the last, and that it hero the while. Richmond is a beautiful and interesting city, and is magnificently situated. A high land descends by a steep bluff to the James river. As one approaches the river and looks up or down the valley, a splendid sweep of country bursts on the sight. Really it is one among the grand natural views of the country. At a suitable spot, where the plateau is somewhat broken, the equestrian statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee is to be placed.

would be in vain, though fighting like a

PROJECTED STATUE OF GEN. R. E. LEE. The site of the monument is in a park. The foundation is to be a broad elevated terrace overlooking the city, the river and the valley. An avenue of approach to the statue has been designed which will make the effect still more

A massive pedestal supports the statue which is to be heroic size, on horseback. The pedestal is of granite, with inlaid tablets of colored marble. On each of two opposite sides are two caryatides in granite, four in all. They represent peace, justice, religion and patriotism. Fame, war and charity are also figured in brenze. At opposite sides of the base are bas-reliefs of "The Departure" and "The Return."

Six years will be required to make the statue and set it upon its pedestal. This will require another trip to Europe on the part of Charles A. Niehaus, the fortunate sculptor who got the commission. It has not been long since he returned from the old world with his completed statue of Garfield for Cincinnati. Every time an American artist obtains an order for any fine work in his native country he must go abroad to make it. America has not the facilities. For stone we have not the skilled marble cutters, if indeed we have the fine marbles. For bronzes we have not the art foundries. Americans with fine bronzes to execute usually go to Munich to the gov.

The history of this Lee monument is intersiing. Gen. Lee died in October, 1870. Three days after his death some Richmond ladies met at a private house and formed an association to raise funds to creet a memorial to him. The south was very poor then, especially Virginia, and ill prepared to subscribe for anything outside of the actual necessities of life. Nevertheless Virginia contributed largely. The people of Georgia, who are called the Yankees of the south, also gave generously. Other states

At length the ladies' committee opened ne gotiations for designs. This was a number of years after the project was first set on foot. A prize of $2,000 was offered for the best de sign for the monument, $1,000 for the second est, and an honorable mention for the third. Artists of all nationalities were permitted to compete at length. Fourteen sculptors entered designs for the prizes. France, Germany, Italy and Switzerland were represented among the foreign artists. Some of the foreigners' designs were exquisite, but they did not seem to catch the true idea of the soldier who was to be commemorated nor would their monuments have suited the site chosen.

tire of it and look around for some other toy. In this exclusive set in society there is but little originality of thought, so that if one of their number but stumbles against a novelty in the way of amusement it is likely to de-velop, into a craze for a season and be as quickly forgotten. A dozen years ago "Jim" Bennett fitted up a hall and introduced roller skating: It became the rage that winter, but was not heard of afterwards until its rec Nichaus, the successful competitor, is a popular revival. So it was with polo, which was brought over here by this same eccentric newspaper proprietor. It was considered so essential an accomplishment for the dude of that day that this continent and Europe were scoured to find ponies with low enough draft to permit the rider's feet to touch the ground while playing the game. To-day it is re-membered only by the name given to the grounds here and in Newport, which were The young man began life a poor boy. A SPANISH MANDOLIN PLAYER. It was not long since that the banjo was the rage, when all the negro minstrel-looking chaps in town that could raise a respectable suit of clothes were in demand as teachers. What possessed society girls to take up the banjo is as easily answered as the question, Who assaulted Mr. Patterson? The lanjo, besides being an imperfect instrument at best, is the one that affords the least satisfactory accompaniment to the popular arias of the day. Then it is not likely that their delicate fingers could ever become sufficiently callous to withstand the painful wear on the strings. So it is likely that it was for this last reason that the mandolin was adopted, as the strumming on the strings is performed with what is called a plectrum instead of the dainty fingers. The mandolin is an instrument of Spanish origin, and was possibly brought to the attention of our pub lic first by the numerous troupes of Spanish students who visit this country. It has eight strings, strung in couples, representing the same tone, so that the strings themselves repesent but four notes. The object of the double string is to produce the trill upon which the effect largely depends. Mandolins vary in price from $5 to $200, and it is said that one factory in Connecticut is running night and day, turning out the "imported" mandolins that average about $25 in price. With the rage for mandolins came the neces sity for instructors, and it is astonishing the number that have appeared, and the slight

And these are the gentlemen who are now admitted into the most fashionable parlors. The artist has also caught exceedingly well the awkward manner in which the instrument is handled by the American amateur. This primitive instrument itself is as much out of place in the elaborate surroundings of a fashionable parlor as its compass is fil adapted to the requirements of modern music, and it cannot be long before it will be ornamented and hung in company with its predecessor, the banjc, as a piece of wall decoration, and the future beaus will have it pointed out to them as one of the instruments on which the young ladies could play so "lovely." But for the present, inexorable fashion must have its fancy gratified, and when the dusky descendant of the Cæsars finds his present occupation gone, he will let his beard assume its old-time growth, once more sling the strap of the neglected hand organ across his shoulders and proceed to grind out his living as before. One of "Old Abe's" Stories. Said Lincoln: "Some friends are opposed to an accommodation, because the south began the trouble and is entirely responsible for the consequences, be they what they may. This," he added, "reminds me of a story. Out in Illinois, where I lived, there was a vicious bull in a pasture, and a neighbor passing through a field, the enraged anima took after him. The man ran to a tree, and got there in time to save himself, and, being able to run around the tree faster than the bull, managed to seize him by the tail. His bullship, seeing himself at a disadvantage, pawed the earth and scattered gravel for a while, then broke into a full run, bellowing at every jump, the man holding on to the tail and cu-sing him, and asking the question, 'D—you, who commenced this fuss? HEROIC SACRIFICE.

The commander of a Government post on the Niagara river during the early part of this century, was apparently at the point of death. His associates gathered around him, but neither they nor the Post Surgeon could do anything for his relief. His heart throbbed so violently that every one in the room could hear it beat, and the occasional spasm of anguish beat, and the occasional spasm of august that passed over his face showed how much he suffered. At length one of the officers spoke up suddenly:
"I know of an elderly lady who lives many miles away whose reputation as a nurse and doctress, I have often heard. I will bring her." I will bring her." And before any one could offer approval or disapproval he was gone. That night the snow came down in clouds. The wind had full sway and piled the snow in drifts. But in spite of the elements a man and woman, mounted on horseback, patiently toiled through the ctorm. At length they reached the post, and under the skillfully applied remedies which were administered the officer was brought back to health. But the effect of the storm and exertion of travel were too great and Chloe Hibbard, who had saved the life of another, was stricken with total blindness. Her's had been a peaceful life. She had loved been a peaceful life. She had loved nature and, in studying it, had discovered nature's remedies. She had loved human-ity and longed to relieve its suffering. She had seen men and women, racked by rheumatism in all is firms, and she had carefully studied to find a means of relief.

She succeeded in finding this means, and was gratified by seeing hundreds of sif-ferers restored to health. She realized that rheumatism was the cause of most so-called heart disease, and she saved so-called heart disease, and she saved many lives just at 'be point of death, as she did that of the F strommandant. But she sacrified herself ni on the altar of philanthropy, became blind, and died unrewarded. It is fortunate, however, that her good work goes on. Her nephew, Hon. Daniel B.
