REMEMBER BOYS MAKE MEN.

When you see a ragged urchin Standing wistful in the street, With forn bat and kneeless trousers, Dirty face, and bare red feet, Pass not by the child unheeding; Smile upon him. Mark me, when He's grown up he'll not forget it; For, remember, boys make men

When the buoyant youthful spirits Overflow in bovish freak, Chide your child in gentle accents; Do not in your anger speak. You must sow in youthful bosoms Seeds of tender mercy: then Plants will grow and bear good fruitage When the erring boys are men.

Have you never seen a grandsire, With his eyes aglow with joy, Bring to mind some act of kindness. Something said to him, a boy? Or relate some slight or coldness With a brow all clouded, when He said they were too thoughtless To remember boys made men.

Let us try to add some pleasure To the life of every boy. For each child needs tender interest In its sorrow and its joy. Call your boys home by its brightness; They avoid a gloomy den, Seeking elsewhere joy and comfort; And remember, boys make men.

-Town and Country. From the Yankee Blade.

PROVED TO BE TRUE. "Maud, come here at once!" she cried, eagerly, bounding up stairs, after watching the last of the Ironsides out of sight. "I have something of the greatest importance to tell you." "Well, you must be quick," said Maud, who was fastening on a blue breast knot, "for I have something else to do besides listening to you. Randolf is in the library."

"Oh, Maud—" Gladys stopped short, hiding her disappointment with difficulty. "I can't tell you till he is gone; so please -please don't keep him very long."

"Keep him! As if I ever try to keep him!" cried Maud, in hot indignation. "No, no, of course not, dear," said Gladys hastily; "but I mean, however much he may want to stay, send him away quickly, for in truth I want to speak to you." Half mollified, the ruffled beauty sailed down stairs, leaving Gladys to curb her impatience as best she could. Mistress Lutteridge was merciful. She sent her adorer away in an hour and a half-after which time Gladys found her in the library, seated by the fire, with a complacent smile on her pretty face.

"Still with your tragedy face on, Gladys! Unburden your mind, my dear girl. What is this awful intell-"It is awful indeed, Maud. Do von know that ever since the day on which Captain Wentworth, as you thought, left the house, he has been concealed in the secret chamber within a few vards of us?" Mand bounded from her seat with a scream.

"Good gracious, Gladys! Why on earth haven't you told me? Are you jesting? Does my father know?" Thereupon Gladys recited the whole story, and finished by explaining why she had not sooner effected the release of her prisoner. "And now, Maud!" she said, "we need only wait till it is dark, and then you can go down the well and bring him out.' "I? No, thank you! What do you mean, Gladys? 1 wouldn't go down that well for fifty thousand pounds!" "But to save Captain Wentworth's life?" cried Gladys, in blank amazement. "Not to save twenty men's lives!" "But you love him, and he is starving there! "I tell you some one elese must go!

The rope would break, or I should see "I heard you tell him with your own lips that you didn't believe in ghosts!' "I can't help it; no human power shall induce me to go down that well at night.

"Then I suppose I must go down, and you must wait by the well to draw me up." "I wonder what next you will propose Gladys! I wait—alone—in this bitter cold-in that haunted yard! I should lose all self-control—I should die of fright—I——" "Then, in the name of all that is womanly, do you propose that we leave Captain Wentworth to his fate?" demanded Gladys, who had grown white even to her lips and stood with her hands rigidly locked together. "No, of course I don't! It is you who are so silly," returned Maud, violently ringing a hand-bell. "Maud, are you mad?" cried Gladys, passionately. "Do you mean to alarm the whole house?" "No-only to send a servant to fetch Randolf back. How silly you were to let me send him away!" Gladys darted to the door and locked "Now, Maud, be reasonable. If you care—as I believe you do—for Captain Wentworth, please consider that, if von wish to see him in the hands of his enemies, you can take no surer way than by letting Sir Randolf Debrett into the secret. You yourself heard what he said about it. Now, once for all, reflect like a rational being, and tell me, will you help me to rescue your "Gladys, I daren't-I daren't! I tell you simply I am not like you. I am sure I desire Captain Wentworth's safety with all my heart; but I can't kill myself for him." For a minute Gladys surveyed her with a bewilderment beyond speech; then she turned to her with decision. "If you really mean that heartless, cruel speech, I insist on your promising to tell no one a word of what I actly as I please in the matter." "That is easily promised," said Maud, placidly. "And now, as you seem to be mistress here, perhaps you will con-descend to open the door."

Gladys hesitated a minute, her finger on the latch. "Do you mean all you have said, Maud? Is your love for Captain Went worth no stronger? "There!" broke in her cousin. "It would seem that you are in love with him yourself by the fuss you are makin the yard. Gladys must be the one to go down, as Martin assured her he would best be able to render assistance should any difficulty arise with the windlass. He was to be provided with a footman's livery to disguise the ingitive. Gladys was to take with her a lamp, a small bottle of wine and a tial provisions in readiness at the well's mouth. Every moment seemed an age to Gladys until Charles had gone to bed and the house was quiet It was a very dark night; inky clouds covered the sky, not a star was visible. There was no wind, and every sound was heard distinctly in the stillness. All was so black when Gladys arrived at the place of meeting that she could scarcely make out the figure of Martin till the glimmer of a small lantern directed her; and, running hurriedly over the rough uneven stone payement, she was soon at his side. "Bravely done, Mistress Glayds!" he whispered. "The rope is sound; you will have to cling tightly, though, to avoid a spill. Hast ever been down before, mistress?" "No, Martin, never. Do tell me what to do!" "Why, faith, I've never been down myself!" said Martin, "I know that about half way down you come to a small door with a small ring for a handle; and that's about all I do know.

You must find your own way after that.' The girl shivered.

"Courage, mistress!" said Martin. "I am not afraid," said Gladys Morren, quickly. Without further ado, she secured her lamp to her waist and stepped into the bucket; then it began to descend. The shiny, slimy green walls were lit up by the gleams of her light. Newts and insects crawled on them; there was a ceaseless drip, drip from somewhere beneath her; and no sound save the faint creak of the long-disused windlass was to be heard. It seemed to her that she had been descending slowly for hours when at last she descried the small door. Martin had given her one end of a piece of cord, which she was to pull once for him to stop and twice to be drawn up again. She pulled this, and the bucket swung poised in mid-air. With some difficulty she managed in her unsteady vehicle to grasp and turn the ring on the door that she had discovered. It opened, and before her there was a gloom that seemed impenetrable. Every fibre of her frame seemed to quiver with a nameless terror as she stepped into the pitch-dark passage. The bucket, relieved of her weight, swung back, crushing against the opposite side of the well with a thud that made her jump with terror.

fast evaporating; but her will, which was stronger than her weak flesh, carried her onward. Holding her lamp aloft, she crept down the narrow path. At last, embedded in the damp glistening rock, she espied a small door. It grated on its hinges with so dismal a creak that her heart almost leaned into her mouth. Tremulously she peered up the narrow stair which it disclosed. Dared she ascend? Suddenly from the echoing recesses of the vault came -probably that of some stone a sound which and fallen into the well beneath; but her excited mind attributed it to supernatural causes. Fear seemed to give her wings-she almost flew up the spiral, dark and filthy stairs

She felt that her maiden's courage was

ed with iron. Totally overcome by frantic terror and a wild desire to see a human face, she beat madly against the door, crying— "Open-open, Maurice! Save me!" The handle was turned, the door flew open, and the half senseless form of the girl fell forward upon the stone floor. Almost at the same moment she was caught up by a pair of vigorous human arms; her recling head lay at

For a moment or two she lay quite still in his protecting grasp, safe, as she felt at the moment, from all dangers, ghostly and bodily; she even put up her hand to feel his cheek; and the action was immediately taken advantage of by Maurice; for he bent lower till his lips rested on hers in one long warm kiss. The kiss aroused the girl; she started up, disengaged herself from him, and stood upright. Her lamp, which she had placed on the threshold, lit up a strange scene—a small square vault with a low groined roof. On a wooden table lay a few books, and a cup and plate which were empty. A mat-tress and some bedding were on the floor, near a lamp that had long since died out. And facing each other in this grim place were these twothe man tall and pale with watching and fasting, but with a strangly triumphant gleam in his dark eyes; the girl small, frail, trembling, and tears on her cheeks warring with the smiles on her lips, her hands half extended towards the tall figure that bent over her, and her tongue striving to say what the sobs in her throat hindered.

At last Gladys spoke: "And-and you are still living, are you not?" The question was too ridiculous.

Maurice Wentworth laughed outright, and with one stride caught Gladys Morven to his heart. "My dearest life, living indeedalive for the first time, if you will only say you love me a little!"

"Ah! Then you do not dispise me, after all?" "Despise you! Is it possible you do not know how I worship you? And you have risked your precious life for mine!' Then her womanly tenderness asserted itself, and she bethought her that he had had nothing to eat. So she made him sit down by the table, and knelt down by him, feeding him delicately with bread steeped in wine, the while she told him the whole account of her sufferings and of her wondering whether he was alive or dead; and he in return told her how he was almost. giving up hope of a rescue, and was beginning to try to dig through the walls of his chamber, and get out that way, at all risks; and how the thought of her had comforted him asleep and awake, and how he was almost despairing when he heard her voice at the but I don't think I need fear you as a door, and almost thought it must be rival, coz - your hoydenish manners some mocking fiend. "Gladys," cried Maud, drawing back the bed-curtains the rext morning, "where did you— Who gave you that ring on your third finger?"

"Oh, I—a friend of mine!" said

Gladys.
"I am sure I have seen Captain his finger!" Wentworth with it on his finger!" cried Maud, excitedly. "I don't believe he is down that well. You were trying to frighten me—you—"

"You are right in thinking that he is not down the well, Mistress Lutteridge; but he was till I got him out. He is away now, out of reach of his enemies and safe, I trust." "Gladys, you have played me false!" cried Maud, with a white, scared face. "Oh, no, Maud, I have not indeed," said Gladys, earnestly taking her hands. "I told you all. Ilad you loved Maurice, you would have dared anything for his sake; but when I saw you cared not, I began to wonder whether I had not made a mistake. So Martin let me down the well, and I found him. Oh, Maud, it is I, not you, whom he loves, and it is I, not you, who love him! And I have promised to be his wife; and I will wait gludly—yes, even for years-till he comes home, for, oh, I do love him very, very dear-It is the year of grace 1660-two years later—and a change has come over the face of all England. There is nothing but merry making and riot from shore to shore; for the king had come to his own again. The warmhearted, frank and sociable Englishmen have thrown off the yell of canting hypocrisy and feigned piety. There are no more cropped heads, no more sad-colored dresses—there is no more repression of all genuine feeling; and because nothing can be done in moderation, but all the world must rush into extremes, every man thinks it is his duty to conduct himself as one out of his senses; every good citizen who drinks the king's health deems that it behooves him also to get drunk; so if things are in any respect better than The infection of misrule and roystering and intemperance has not reached the remote mansion of Lutteridge which looks very beautiful and bright as it stands with a full June sunshine gliding its worn stone turrets, encircled by green foliage, undulating parkland stretching away on every side into the hazy distance. New comers mingling with the guests who throng the hall find that they have indeed penetrated into distinguished society. Sir Miles is advancing backwards and bareheaded, with every mark of reverence, up the room before a gentleman in court dress, with swarthy features, a profusion of dark, curling hair, and bold, black eyes. Surely this must be the Merry Monarch himself! He reaches the seat prepared for him at the end of the room, and grasps his host's hand with a genial and easy condescension which is very winning; and he has a kingly look as he stands and all of those fair hopes, and proved himself as mean a despot and liberline as ever sat on a throne. "So you are all home from church, and I have come too late for the wedding," cries Charles II., his voice ringing through the lofty chamber; "but I am not too late, I hope, to offer my sincerest congratulations to the newly married couples-eh, my most kind land; for the time has not yet come when he shall have disappointed each host? "With your majesty's most gracious permission, I must crave leave to present to you my only daughter and her husband, Sir Randolf Debrett," says Sir Miles, beckoning forward Maud, who stands blushing in her white bridal satin and pearls, with drooped eyelids and demure bearing. By her side stands Randolf, his cropped head hidden by a flowing wig of luxuriant curls, his attire all ruffles and velvet—a Royalist every inch of him, as he makes low reverence to his sovereign. Yet, although Sir Randolf and Lady

Debrett are being formally presented to his majesty, and though their bearts are swelling with pride and importance, the interest of the concourse of spectators seems centered in another part of the room, where another couple are standing together. The little bride's hand scarcely reaches to the shoulder of her comely bridegroom, who wears his own dark hair and has shining brown eyes lit up with a light Some would hardly recognize in the

of perfect happiness. Baron of Penistone, so debonair and loving, the dark, cold, reserved Captain Wentworth of two years ago, albeit the baroness, his wife, is wonderfully like shy Gladys Morven of former days, her carriage no more dignified, her dimples no fewer, her tawny locks just as irrepressible as when the parliamentary soldiers visited the Lutteridge mansion. This blissful couple are not to remain longer gazing into each other's eyes; for the king having received Randolf Debrett's expressions of loyalty, has spied the baron, and shouts out immediately:

"Ha, Maurice! There you are, my good friend Maurice! Come hither, Baron Who-ever-you-are—my tongue can frame no new-fangled titles for you-come and bring your bride, if she will do me the honor to allow me to kiss her hand!"

With the quiet simplicity of one long used to court manners, Maurice leads his wife up the long room. A murmur of applause is heard as Gladys bends in graceful courtesy before the monarch. Charles raises her instantly, and, in sight of all the crowd drops on his knee and puts his lips to the soft little hand. "So this," he says, looking with wonder at the youthful face and deep soft eves-"this is the lady who went alone at night down a haunted well to save the man she loved! Madam, I am proud to know that I have such a lady in my dominions!" Then, raising his voice so that all may hear, he cries-"I can wish my friends no greater blessing than that heaven shall send them, one and all, another such wife as Maurice's usually quiet face glows and there is a half-doubtful curl on his lip, as though he were defying the world in general to find another such priceless treasure as his Gladys. Martin's patience was almost ex-bausted. A Shying Horse. To the inquiry, Why does a horse shy? the National Live Stock Journal replies: Because he sees something he does not understand, and is filled with a greater or less degree of fear, something as the boy feels when he shies at the burying ground, and goes around to keep clear of it. It may be some new or unusual object that the horse sees, or it may be an imperfect view of it. Even a familiar object, if it comes to view suddenly and unexpect edly, it will cause a horse to shy or jump, just as an unexpected object or sound causes a nervous person to start. When a person is so startled, how much would it improve the matter to be scolded at or given a cut with a whip? Just as much as the same treatment would in the case of the horse. Harshness only aggravates the

The more the horse is scolded and whipped, the more nervous he gets; and every time he passes the place where the fright and whipping occurred, he will recollect the unpleasant affair, and he will begin to prick up his ears and fidget, ready for another jump. Give him the lines, and he will go by in a hurry. The proper way is never to strike or scold a horse that is startled or frightened. Speak to him coolly, calmly, and kindly; give him time to see and collect his scattered senses, and make him feel that you are his friend and protector. When he sees that all is right, there is an end to all further trouble. We have seen a horse refuse to cross an unsafe-looking bridge; but when the driver took him by the bits and walked ahead, the horse cautiously followed. Next time he required no coaxing or urging to cross the bridge. He might have been whipped into it at first, but was not the milder course, although a little trouble, the better one? The horse showed his confidence in the driver ever afterward.

The Sutro Tunnel. This great work is frequently talked of in a most ignorant way. The Christian Union explains it fully as follows: It is a huge tunnel that has been run under the mountains, to tap the famous Comstock Mines of Virginia City, Nevada, and afforded a sluice-way and escape for the floods of hot water with which the deep, lower levels of these mines are deluged. The temperature of the water is 1950, and twelve million tons, or three million gallons, are carried through the tunnel every twenty-four hours. The tunnel is four miles long, and the water is conducted through it by means of a closed pine flume, thus confining the immense masses of vapor that would arise from so vast a body of water. When the water leaves the tunnel it has lost but seven degrees of heat, and is utilized for mechanical purposes by the tunnel company, after use being conducted through a second water-way tunnel eleven hundred feet long, and thence flowing a distance of one mile and a half and emptying into the Carson river. The useful qualities of this vast stream of hot water are great, and have been recognized by the dwellers along its course. In one instance dams have been built, forming pools in which men and boys have the advantages of a hot-water bath, It is used also for all the purposes of a laundry, and a tract of a thousand acres, belonging to the tunnel company, is irrigated by it. In addition, there is a plan on foot to lead the water with iron pipes laid under the surface of the earth and passing near the roots of thousands of fruit trees, and also to make it further subservient to man's benefit by supplying artificial heat to hot-houses, in which early fruit and vegetables can thus be Glaser's Annalen says: After wood has remained a long time in centact with steam, hot water, or hot air pipes the surface becomes carbonized. ing the warm season, the charcoal ab sorbs moisture. When again heated, the moisture is driven off, leaving a vacuum, into which the fresh air current circulating around the pipes rap idly penetrates, and imparts its oxygen to the charcoal, causing a gradual heating and eventually combustion. The rusting of the pipes contributes a condition in which it will absorb oxygen to the point of red heat. The same article also notices that a building was set on fire by pitch distilled out of a pine plank placed nearly three inches above a steam pipe. which dropped on the pipe and took fire.—Sci. Am.

A simple and convenient way of obtaining the weight of cast-iron when the number of cubic inches is known is to divide the number of cabic inches by four, and then add one per cent. of the cubic inches. The result is exactly the same as if it had been multiplied

Major Daniel Simpson, the veteran drummer of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, died at his home in that city Wednesday, at the age of 96 years. most immediately and becomes in a few days extremely hard and solid. It may be improved by the addition of one part cement. A wart on his nose drove a California man to suicide, though Oliver Cromwell carried a wart of enormous size on his nose, and managed to make himself respected. The Californian was very foolish and impetuous. If he killed a cat, buried it at midnight. sprinkled the grave with blood and repeated a formula which any small boy could have taught him, the wart would have left his nose. It is to be feared that California lacks some of the more refined details of civilization.—New

Then mix in enough dry slacked lime to make it the consistency of soft paste, after which add about twenty-five per cent. of red lead, which causes the mass to set hard and dry. A mixture of caout-chouc in twice its weight of linseed oil, and the addition of an equal amount of pipe-clay, will form a paste that will resist the action of most acids. Col. Bill Snort, editor of the Crosby County Clation and Farmer's Vindicator, made a flying trip to Washington not long since. The Senate, last week, rejected the nomination of Clinton Rosette to be postmaster at DeKalb, Illinois. He is the editor of a newspaper at that place, and upon the death of General Grant published a vindictive editorial while attacking his memory. After declaring that "Imperial Grant" was dead, he said that his bones should be laid beside those of Benedict Arnold. He declared that Grant was a traitorthat he had tried to establish an empire in this country; and the entire article was shockingly abusive of the dead soldier. This article was read to the Senate, and without a dissenting vote the nomination was rejected.

Mr. Eugene Allen, of Milan. In recent experiments a sick sheep was placed at one end of the instrument and a healthy one at the other, and a very visible change for the better was the result in the sick one. The other was then allowed to bleed as long as blood would flow, and was resuscitated by blood taken from a calf. H. M. Morrison, one of the largest

We will also be able to make a great saving in the matter of cost of tion of machinery intended for the American market. My calculation is that, notwithstanding the higher price we will have to pay for labor here, we will be able to effect a saving of at least thirty-five per cent. Republican State Convention. A Republican State Convention, to nominate candidates for State Officers, and for the transaction of other business, will be held at Powers' Opera House, in the City of Grand Rapids, commencing at 3 o'clock p. m., on Wednesday, the 25th day of August

In accordance with a resolution adopted at Grand Rapids, May 10, 1876, every county will be entitled to one delegate for each 500 of the total vote cast for Governor, at the last State election (in 1884), and one additional delegate for every fraction of 300 votes, but each organized county will be entitled to at least one delegate. Under a resolution of 1858, no delegate will be entitled to a seat who does not reside in the county he proposes to represent. In accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the State Convention, at Detroit, June 23, 1880, the Secretary of each county convention is requested to forward to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, by the earliest mail, after the delegates to the State Convention are chosen, a certified list of such dele gates as are entitled to sit in the State ${f Convention}.$

Everything on our south-west looks as if a fight is close at hand. The Mexicans have tried Cutting and sentenced him to one year at hard labor, and the Mexican Governor has notified · the prison authorities that in case any attempt is made to rescue Cutting, to promptly decapitate him and present his head to his rescuers, with the Governor's compliments. Secretary Bayard has sent the Mexicans a peremptory demand for Cutting release which will most likely not be heeded. The cobwebs are being brushed off from some of the mementoes of war about the navy yards and arsenels in the East, and on the whole, the Mexican matters are an interesting aspect. Although Berrien county is credited with being always at the front with a supply of candidates and never getting anything else, the field of Congressional candidates appear to have narrowed down to Dr. Bonine and Wm. Chamberlain either of whom, with the united support of this county, can be nominated, but with a division here, neither can. When nominated either can easily be elected. The Doctor is, perhaps, the stronger of the two. If Berrien county wants a Congressman, now is the accepted time.

The later developements in the Cutting case shows that the best thing the United States can do is to allow the Mexicans to punish him to their entire satisfaction, and if anything reremain of him, that he be punished by Uucle Sam after the approved Texan methods. From the other side of the case it appears that Cutting is not an American citizen, but lives and published his libel in Mexico, was arrested and let off on a slight punishment, when he went across the line and had his libel repeated in a Texas paper.

The St. Johns Republican gives one A. A. Crozier, of Ann Arbor, a Prohibition leader of Washtenaw county, the following good notice: He is the same Crozier whom the writer of this has heard say that his first object as a Prohibitionist was to kill off the Republican party. To do this he opposes whatever the Republicans favor, even if it be prohibition; as witness his opposition to the submission of the prohibition amendment to the people of Michigan. The utterances of many of the leading prohibition speakers show that Crozier is far from being alone in this sentiment. A good share of them have asked and been refused political preferment at the hands of the Republican party, and enter this Prohibition, third party, more as a means of revenge, than otherwise.

One of the most demonstrative friends that the soldier has in the Senate is senator Blair, of New Hampshire. At every occasion he has abused the President for his vetoes and accused my of the pension system. It has now been most conclusively shown that this self-same Blair charged a poor war widow one hundred dollars to prosecute her pension claim, and because she did not pay at once he sued her, and ordered out an immediate execution upon the widow's home. What wonderful friends those Republicans are to the soldiers .- Michigan City

Now, if that be all true, why don't some good, patriotic, Democratic saint have Senator Blair arrested for violation of the pension laws, take him out of the United State Senate and put him into the penitentiary? He can do it just as well as not. The probability in the case is that most likely the Dispatch has lied just a little about Senator Blair, and ought to apologize to him at once.

The Sturgis Journal, after copying J. C. Burrows' interview as published in the Detroit News, and giving Judge Keightly a compliment, says:

If Mr. Burrows decides to reach out for the nomination, he may be able to secure it. The opposition to his nomination, which existed two years ago, still remains, but, possibly, somewhat less fierce. Yet it exists and we had hoped that he would have the good taste to keep out of the canvas; but no doubt his friends have urged him to stand for the nomination, and he probably will do so.

Perhaps the opposition to Mr. Burrows' renomination has lost some of its fierceness, but it has received an addition of those who voted for him two years ago, on the express understanding that he would not again be a candidate. Mr. Burrows has made an excellent record in this term, both in local and national affairs that has made new friends for him, but so far as we can learn, the old sores are still open. We want a Republican to represent the district, and in order to have such a representation, we must have a candidate who can be elected. It has been quite plainly shown that in Mr. Burrows' case a nomination is not always, by any means, equivalent to an election.

Democratic Extravagance.

A few days before the adjournment of Congress Mr. Cannon, of this state, made a speech in the House on the surplus resolution, which contained some very pertinent details of government expenses, important as showing the general character of the Democracy from a strictly adminstrative point of view. Those details deserve special consideration for the light they throw upon the pretensions of the Democracy

The Democractic press has tred very hard to make the people believe that this is an era of frugality. The numerous pension vetoes are cited as a proof of Mr. Cleveland's devotion to retrenchment. Something over a hundred such bills were vetoed, amounting however, to a saving of less than six months of his own salary. Over against this claim to economy must be set this indubitable fact, shown in detail by Mr. Cannon: In the first year of its power the new adminstration asks appropriations for the service of the government to the amount of $383,-715.676.11 for 1887, which is $53.821. 056.07 in excess of the expenditure of 1886. Notwithstanding this great sum, it is over $23,000,000 less than the estimates the heads of this Democratic adminstration asked for. The sum asked for in those Democratic estimates was over $100,000,000. Here it should be remembered that the appropriations for 1886 were made under a Republican adminstration, There is no escape from the force of these facts. It is utterly impossible to explain them away. Those who care to follow Mr. Cannon step by step in his facts justifying this resume can do so, for the Inter Ocean publishes his speech so far as it bears at all upon this point, but it is not neccessary to burden ones's mind with dry statistics in order to feel the force of the general facts in the case. Indeed, there is no escape from these facts. All the ingenuity of experts can not explain away the bed-rock on which this arraignment of the adminstration rests We do not doubt that the President would like to give the country an economical adminstration, but the trouble is he does not know how to do it, and is not trking the right course to learn. Instead of setting himself to the task of understanding the mighty engine which he is obliged to run, Mr. Cleveland busied himself with such utterly insignificant details as private pensions. Having a taste for that sort of trifles, he indulges it freely, spending the time which should be devoted to the great economics to trivialties. It is as if an architect, charged with intent only upon economy in the purchase of door-knobs. Mr. Cannon having shown the enormous increase of the appropriations for 1887 over the expenditures for 1886, pertinently asks, "If in the first grant of appropriations made under the Democratic adminstration, with the election next fall staring it in the face, expended the year before, what will the appropriations and expenditures be next year in event the people give the party further lease of power and it feels firmly seated in the saddle?"

Whatever answer may be made to this inquiry it is certainly high time for the people to realize the gravity of the present tendency, at least suffi-ciently to avoid being hoodwinked by the sham economy of a lot of private pension vetoes, which were undoubtedly inspired by a desire to please the South and divert attention from the record of extravagance into which the party has already drifted?—Inter

At Miladore there have been eight fatal cases of this disease. The state board of health are ready to start out on a tour of investigation, yet are inclined to doubt the accuracy of the reports.

It is the general impression in the North that slavery was abolished nearly a quarter of a century ago; but here is proof of the existence of a fugitive slave law now operative in Georgia. It would almost seem that this law was conceived in the same head that conceived the disfranchisement of Delaware in 1873-the "Roman-like head" of Mr. Thomas F. MEXICO, ANCIENT AND MODERN.

Prescott's Story a Fairy Tale-What Cortez Did-Modern Mexico's Resources. In a recent number of The Popular Science Monthly Mr. David A. Wells knocks the romance pretty much out of Mexico, ancient and modern. He intimates that Prescott's story of the conquest of that country is largely a fairy tale and that the rude Cortez with his Spaniards did not destroy a splendid civilization at all. In order to magnify his triumphs Cortez and hisfellow Spaniards portrayed these people in royal robes; set them up in palaces and adorned them with something of this nobility and grace of the Spanish hidalgos. But their tools and their weapons tell the story. These were all of stone. The Aztecs belong to the stone age, and their instruments are inferior to those used by the savages of Vancouver's island and the

Having no domestic animals or beasts of burden, or roads or any means of transportation except men's backs, it would have been an impossibility to sustain a population of 300,000 people in the City of Mexico with food or water, the water near the city being, then as now, salt and undrinkable. And it is now conceded that the population of all the Aztec tribes did not exceed 250,000. The great idol and sacrificial stone in Mexico belonged to the Toltecs, a superior race living further south, who with their fine steel tools were able to execute the famous sculptures of Central As to Modern Mexico, its resources

Poisonous Elements of Stale Medicines Recent microscopic investigation has shown that saline and acid solutions, tinctures, extracts, infusions and decoctions are fertile soil for the growth of a variety of plants. Probably nearly everything in the way of liquid preparations standing in their wrappers on the druggists' shelves, and the tinctures, extracts, etc., that are not fresh, will show vegetations under a moderately strong glass. These plants flourish at the expense of any medicinal virtue that the mixture may be supposed to contain, and in themselves are tonic or poisonous elements. producing in many cases serious distur bances of the mucous membrane and often changing the diseases for which they are swallowed into something worse. —Phrenological Journal.

How Distance Lessens Unfriendliness. My experience (surely a happy fact, which I take to be not less general than blessed) is that bittor and unfriendly feelings sink when a great space intervenes between companions. Across long distance naught reaches but light; if there be dark spots, they have no power to penetrate. What greater pleasure, says the stoic. than to sit down quietly thus and think of a friend; to brood over the noble things in him, the qualities which are his "book of steel," for us heart-binding! There are also further, in the way of embellishments, a double-sized colored fashion plate; a colored design for a tidy on Javy can-vas; and some fifty wood-engravings of the fashions, work-table patterns, etc., including a very interesting artical, illustrated, on "Venetian Glass and Murano." The stories are exceptionally Murano." The stories are exceptionally good, notably "John Comption, of Colorado," "Elizabeth," and Frank Lee Benedict's "Miss Manner's Discoveries." The novelet, "The Corsair's Captives," is finished, and ends happily, in spite of the Algerines. The other novelet, "The Millionaire's Daughter," grows in interest as it approaches the end. A very noticeable feature of this magazine is the Paris letter, monthly, on the fashions, written by Mrs. Lucy H. Hooper, the wife of the American Vice-Consul, and the highest authority abroad on such a subject. For a few weeks we shall send out a large number of extra Records, with a view to substantially increasing our subscription list. All who receive these papers will be called upon by our agent, within a few weeks and given an opportunity to continue the weekly visits of the RECORD, which, we trust will be found a welcome visitor. It is our aim to publish all of the Berrien County news, or as nearly so as we can procure it. This is the first and most important field of the local paper, and the RECORD will use every facility within its reach to fully fill this field. When our agent calls upon you we trust you may find it convenient to give him your order, and we will do our best to give you one hundred cents' worth of good work for each dollar you may be pleased to invest with us.

THE Niles Democrat. after devoting a half column to extracts and editorial comments adverse to the renomination of Hon. J. C. I should like to know which it is. MRS. DR. DUTTON.

THE Democrats of this representative district will most likely run Supervisor George Lambert, of Niles, as their candidate for representative in the legislature this year. In fact, they are about under obligations to do so, to pay for putting A. C. Roe for county Prosecutor on their ticket, two years ago, when he wanted the place. In case they make that nomination, the Republicans want some man who can hold him down to the limits of his own party ticket in Niles, and the only one they have at present in sight is W. Irving Babcock, the present Republican Mayor of Niles. There would be a "nip and tuck" contest as to which of these two has the strongest hold on that city.

THE Democracts held their County Convention, to select delegatef to the State and Congressional Conventions, at Berrien Springs on Tuesday. The following are delegates to the State Convention: W. E. Waldon, L. Pearl, Frank Morlock, John Dwan, J. H. Stover, Dr. J. S. Beers, J. A. Canavan, T. A. Walker, G. H. Ewalt, J. W. Beistle, Dennis Murphy, J. W. Badger, Hiram Edwards, J. L. McKie, G. H. Stevens, Edward Prince, Clayton Smith, Burns Helmick. The following will attend the Congressional Convention: I. W. Conkey, J. A. Canavan, Bartley Hannon, E. S. Curran, P. M. Kinney, P. E. O'Brien, Lewis Sutherland, J. S. Beers, G. H. Murdoch, Jr., J. M. Babcock, Frances Wells, Wm. Caine, W. R. Rough, J. M. Beall, G. H. Martin, Jacob Imhoff, Victor H. Thomas, A. W. Pierce. The following County Committee was appointed: John Mansfield, P. M. Kinney, G. H. Murdoch, Jr., J. A. Canavan and Jas. M. Babcock.

NIGHT VISITORS. - Burglars gave this place a thorough working Monday morning. They entered Wm. R from his clothes his gold watch, about so took Mrs. Rough's pocket-book with a small amount of change. Mr. Rough had a pitcher, of buttermilk on the table and they carried that away They went to his barn, got out Mrs Rough's pony, and were hitching him to an old delivery wagon, but were evidently frightened away by the watchman at the wagon works. At Mr. Twell's house, on Fourth street, they secured his watch and a small sum of money, and lert his clothes in Charles Treat's yard. At Geo. Seymore's they took a dish of cookies and some pie. They were seen at some other houses, but secured no booty. They left no clue by which they might be followed.

What is the trouble with the Demo Greenies of the county? From a conversation overheard the other day it looked to us as if a declaration of war was near at hand. We should judge that the arrogant chairman of the county committee suggested to a few of his pets to meet him at the Prosecuting Attorney's office in Buchanan on a certain day, privately mentioned, and resolve themselves into a county convention, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State convention at Grand Rapids, which pet scheme was fully carried out in the interest of some pet measures of the chairman. This kind of business is what the Greenbackers call legislation in the interest of the people and by the people. To our Republican Greenback friends, let us suggest, that in the most arrogant days of our party we never treated the masses in that shabby manner. Our business meetings have all been fully and publicly advertised and publicly conducted. It has been suggested to us that, perhaps, that party is now composed mostly of Knights of Labor, and that they now propose to conduct their political matters upon the same programme of their secret order. Let us Republicans look about us and see if we cannot find some one for chairman of our committee, with the concentrated wisdom of a great party; it will save the common voter the trouble of thinking for himself, and thus make political life easy.

THE PICTURESQUE BURIAL PLOT AT NEW LEBANON, N. Y.

The Great Democrat Sleeps Amid His. Ancestors in the Country Burying Ground-A White-Draped Catafalque. His Latest Portrait-Gramercy Park.

At New Lebanon, Columbia county, N. Y., the mortal remains of Samuel Jones Tilden were buried, Saturday, Aug. 7. There, in the little country hamlet, his life started, seventy-two years ago. When it had worn out the body and taken its flight to unknown realms, the clay mold it had inhabited was given back to the same kindly earth at New or without his consent. Rival candidates will undoubtedly breathe more freely now. old and infirm as the Sage of Greystone was. He was the shrewdest political organizer of his time.

Rumor had the distinguished old man be mothed to more women than was the luck of any other bachelor of his time, yet he lived and died single. There is not even the record of an early love disappointment, such as invested President Buchanan with romantic interest, to gild Tilden's blunt unvarnished bachelorhood. He appears to have remained single because he liked it best that way. Had he chosen he might have been a bachelor president. There is every reason to believe that he might have died president had he accepted the Democratic nomination in 1884. He could have had it also in 1880. As it was, he was a president maker, and perhaps that was as much consolation to him as having the office for himself. At any rate, it was far less bother. His letter of declination in 1884 gave the nomination to Mr. Cleveland.

THE PRESIDENT AT THE BIER. The president attended Mr. Tilden's funeral and stood with bowed head beside the coffin of the great master Democrat. Several members of the cabinet also came over from Washington to Graystone to be present. A striking and pleasing feature of the scene as the body lay in state at Greystone was the absence of heavy black drapery about the revered remains. The catafalque, where the body lay in state in his own room looking out over the Hudson, was covered with snow white hangings. It was beautiful and

Many famous men have "died like a tree at the top first," as Dean Swift said of himself. Mr. Tilden was spared that most sor-rowful kind of decay. For some years his body has been practically dead. He was so paralyzed that it is hard to see how he kept in the flesh so long. His vocal chords ceased to act several years ago, and he could only speak in a whisper, so low that the listener had to bend his head close to Mr. Tilden's lips to hear. His left hand was useless: his right hand shook so that if he wished to extend it in greeting to a friend it had to be shot forward with a sudden impulse to make it move at all. When he walked it was with a slow, shuffling step, painful to be seen. His hearing was the only sense that remained to him per fect. Yet his mind was strong, and crystal clear to the last. He was so helpless that for some years he has had to be fed like a child; yet within a few months he dictated and issued a document so vigorous and statesmanlike that it waked up the whole country. The document was his letter to Senator Hawley on our need of coast defences and fortifications. It commended ifself to members of both political parties.

The Tilden burial plot is of unique and beautiful design. Probably Mr. Tilden himself planned it, for it was the work of no ordinary mind. The plot is in the village ceme tery, and is laid out in circular form. In the center are buried the statesman's father and mother. A tall marble burial urn is placed above them. Then a circular walk runs around their graves. After that comes a circle of four burial plots, then another circular walk, then another round of grave plots. Four walks radiate from the central graves, where the Tilden ancestors repose, out to the circumference of the whole burial plot. Mr. Tilden is buried in the northwest corner grave of the inner circle. How his grave looks you

It is a peaceful country graveyard. The thoughts of the Sage of Greystone turned to that in his old days, rather than to the more pretentious cemeteries nearer New York city. His family were Presbyterians. Greystone is a beautiful country seat on a

Hudson river hill, above the village of Yon-kers, nine miles from New York city. Mr. Tilden's city home, at Gramercy park, in New York, was a luxurious and beautiful man-sion. It had been originally two houses, treasure is its vast library of 30,000 volumes. which New York city hopes to possess as a legacy from the sage.
At the age of 35 Mr. Tilden was a most successful lawyer. He became rich in railroad and mining enterprises before being elected governor of New York, in 1875. His estate is estimated at $7,000,000, to be divided among more than twenty heirs. THE ÆSTHETIC WEST.

ART SCHOOLS AND BUILDINGS IN INTERIOR CITIES.

Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis are Becoming Beautiful, if Not Good-Real Progress in the Industrial and Decorative Arts.

Numberg's hand Geht auf alle land.

Said the legend of the iron-hearted old burghers who made her fame and name. Not rich in classic scholars or the lore of the schools, not famous for prowess in war or shrewdness in government was the old walled city. She had not even great wealth, as wealth is counted among bankers in our day. Yet Nuremberg's hand laid itself like iron upon all the cities of the middle ages. Her com-mercial supremacy made itself felt among them all. Yet that passed away and left what? Nuremberg's hand still was upon all the lands. It is manifest to-day, not only in Europe, but in far America the influence of the quaint old her best days. int old city is as strong as it was in ST LOUIS MUSEUM OF ART. Ancient Nuremberg iron work and brass work, Nuremberg wood carving and ivory, painted glass imitated from her church windows made centuries ago, are studied to this day. In St. Louis young blacksmiths belonging to the School of Fine Arts study intently the exquisitely wrought iron work of the city which Longfellow has written about in one of his strongest poems. Wealth drops away, the supremacy of war and commerce depart but good work lasts forever.

It was Nuremberg's skilled mechanics that have made her glory enduring. It is the lesson for America to learn to-day. The true artistic spirt is that which advances the common industrial occupations and brings them to their highest excellence and beauty. Art is not a number of pictures hanging in gallery. It is that which makes beautiful the landscape, which makes the carpenter work solid in its construction and perfect in its finish. It is that spirit which prompts the worker to complete whatever he touches in the best possible manner.

This principle of the application of the artistic spirit to the common industries of life has taken deeper root in the west than in the east. The result is seen in all the large cities of the interior and of the west. In St. Louis there is, in the true sense of the term, one of the best art schools in the country. It is called the School of Fine Arts, and has been for seven years connected with the Washington university. It has a museum of curios and art works, presented by Wayman and Isabella Crowe. The director of the school is Professor Ives. Its wise aim is not to imitate old masters, but to give simply a training of the eye, hand and brain, which will assist the iron molder to make better stoves, and the tapestry designer to give us more beautiful wall paper.

The American landscape looks as a rule as though it had been clawed up and thrown around loose. The art spirit that is now being born and trained in the west will in time change this till the country will look like a series of lawns and gardens and beautiful pictures. "The work to be done in the west," says Professor Ives, of the St. Louis Art school, "is to do something with raw material "

There are not many copies of old European pictures in the St. Louis Art museum. But there is what is better, reproduction of works of the finer industries in metal, wood, ivory, porrelain, etc. The school is doing a noble work, and will make a great impression on that part of the country.

CHICAGO ART INSTITUTE. Chicago is a magnificent money-making city. Except in the buying of foreign pic-tures with the wealth made in Chicago the universal western art movement has not yet made itself greatly felt there however. It has an art school called the Chicago Art institute. The handsome structure shown in the illustration is at present in process of erection for the institute. Not much progress has been made in the one important field of the industrial arts. The only competent American designer and decorator in the whole city is a graduate of the St. Louis Art school. But all this will be changed speedily, Chicago people say. The city is too new to have done much but create wealth so far. The fire was a great blow, too. For many years nothing could be attended to outside of the line of strict bread and butter getting. Now there is more time, and Chicago energy will be equal to this call, as it always has been equal to every other. There is a pottery club in the city, and the art institute is at-

BUFFALO LIBRARY AND ART BUILDING. Skipping in a line east we find that the little city of Buffalo has made creditable progress in art. For twenty-four years it has supported a fine arts academy. A beautiful library building has been erected, and in this there are accommodations for the academy, which has so long upheld the banner of art in Buffalo.

The movement begins to show itself in improved and beautiful homes for the people, which are springing up all over the country. It is especially gratifying to note the change in the building of country homes and farm houses that has come about in the last ten years. This pleasing and artistic rural archi-

THE GALATEA.

THE ENGLISH CUTTER YACHT THAT COMES TO CAPTURE THE CUP.

Her Designer Expects She Will Fulfill His Ambition by Proving That Britannia Not Only Rules the Wave but is Mistress of the Seas.

From a I that has been said on this side of the Atlantic about J. Beaver Webb, the designer of the English yachts Genesta and Galatea, one would have imagined him to be a bearded and grizzly old tar who had spent his whole life among tar ropes and canvas. But in reality he is a type of a sporting gentleman. He is an enthusiastic student of sea racing and sea racers, just as we will find voung men giving ents to the developments of the turf Webb has had the ambition since a youth of developing a type of yacht that would be the

J. BEAVOR WEEB. fleetest in the world, one that would capture the international challenge cup, known as the America's cup, which the yacht America won over all the yachts in Europe in 1851, and which has been successfully defended by American yachts on several occasions since. Britannia may rule the wave, but she cannot in truth be termed mistress of the seas as long as that cup remains on this side of the Atlantic. So with this purpose in view, Mr. Webb has been studying and designing yachts for years.

The Galatea is an improvement on the Genesta, and so confident is Mr. Webb of her success in the coming races that he has given up yacht building to come here and engage Meeting him the other day in his sumptuous office, in Wall street, New York, he said: "Yes, I am satisfied with the Galatca. She did not show her best work last season, owing to the lack of a proper crew, but with the continuous drilling they have had during their transatlantic voyage, we expect to show you some fast sailing, and if the Galatea carries the cup home with her, you may say" (throwing a kiss with his fingers) "good-

The hopelessness of ever regaining the cup will not be due altogether to the lack of fast sailing qualities on the part of American yachts, but to the peculiarity of English yachting rules, which makes a virtue of small breadth of beam, so that the wider beam yachts of the Yankee type would have to give English yachts of the same length of keel a considerable time allowance, which would preclude their winning a race. Mr. Webb has suggested a mean of the yachting rules of both countries to govern these international contests, but neither side will listen

Mr. Webb is an extremely modest man. He would not give any of his life romance to the press. But on it being suggested that he did not look like an Englishman he said: "No, I'm an Irishman, but do not say anything about that." So we refrain. For thirty years or more the jolly Britisk tar has been making yachting a scientifical study, the result being the evolution of the cutter type of yacht, and with it the opportunity of recovering the America's cup. The challenge Mr. Webb sent last year was a double-barreled one. It was for the Genesta and also the Galatea, which was then on the stocks. The idea was that in case he did not bring down the America's cup with the first shot he would with the second. This challenge came at a time when the Americans were unusually ill-prepared. In running over the list of yachts we possessed it was found there was no sloop large enough to compete with the coming Britishers. But through the patriotic sportsmanship of a few gentle-men the Priscilla and Puritan sprang into existence within the six months allowed between the reception of the challenge and the race. So the Puritan and the Genesta measured their speed side by side, and though the Genesta failed she became a gauge by which other English yachts' speed could be tested, and as the Galatea has proved herself faste than the Genesta, the chances of our losing the cup this year are exceedingly great.

Lieut. Henn built the Galatea not only for the purpose of challenging for the America cup, but also with the object of having a cruising yacht which would be a home for himself and wife. How far he has succeeded in the latter respect is shown in the accompanying view of Galatea's main saloon, taken from a photo by West. This view shows clearly that the narrow yacht, above all other forms, affords the best space to the designer for interior arrangements. An absolute breadth of fifteen feet on a deck entirely unobstructed, together with high bulwarks, gives a great deal of deck room, while the apartments below can only be canaled in a large steamer or schooner. The main saloon is nearly liften feet wide, a large and elegant apartment, as is seen from the drawing, with more than ample headroom. From it a long passage leads aft to the foot of the companion and to the ladies or after cabin. On the starboard side is a large stateroom with another on the same side forward of the saloon, while under the floor is a large space for sails and storage. for sails and storage.

ROSS RAYMOND'S EXPLOITS.

One Whose Trail of Rascalities Extends Across the Continent. Ross Raymond, one of the most successful swindlers of the age, is now in jail in New York for indulging in his favorite pastime of passing bogus checks. Through the courtesy of Inspector Byrnes we are enabled to give his portrait, as secured for the Rogues' Gallery, in the hope that in case he escapes conviction this time newspaper men and hotel keepers, whom he has a perfect mania for swindling, will be chary of him.

Raymond's aliases would make a city directory in themselves. His American career began as a reporter on a San Francisco paper in 1872. Being possessed of a good presence 99 and an exceptionally fluent pen, he earned money rap-ties for swindling. When his iniquities began to pile up so that there was danger of his being imprisoned, he turned his face eastward, leaving a trail of swindles across the continent and along the Atlantic seaboard and in Europe. His exploits will be recalled in Virginia City and on The Denver Tribune, in Ogden, Omaha, Chicago and on The Times and Enquirer, of Cincinnati. Here he got into an altercation with the circus owner Robinson's son, and a sear which he received then has done him good service in his stories of his alleged war experiences. In 1877 he was on The Baltimore American and later in Philadelphia, and flually on The

New York Herald, where he wrote the de-tails of President Gardeld's sickness and death. He was doing first class work, making $125 a week and swindling right and left. About this time he learned that a Miss Lizzie Linderman, whom he had known in California had fallen beir to $100,000. He made violent love to her on paper, induced her to come east, married her and squandered her for-tune. He then paid attention to a doctor's wife. The doctor, getting one of Raymond's pictures from her room, used it for pistol practice for several weeks so as to familiarize nimself with Raymond's features. Afterward he is said to have used the pistol on

His career from this time on could scarcely be credited. He made a tour of the southern states marked by a constant succession of swindles and escapes. After touching at Boston he started a news burcau in London. He was next war correspondent in Egypt. Then he turned up in Australia and escaped trou-ble there by fleeing to the Sandwich Islands. He was next heard of in the East Indies. In Calcutta he ran a house with forty eight servants and the richest of equipages. In 1884 be loomed up again in Paris in a red fez and Turkish costume as Raymond Bey, a representative of the khedive of Egypt. In a few days he disappeared, leaving fabulous hotel and other bills unpaid. He then made a raid on our foreign consuls and few of them es-

Raymond has undoubted genius as a swindler. It was the experience of those who knew him that he could go into a place a perfact stranger and in a few hours so work upon the credulity of people he met that they would be more than willing to trust him with anything. As he usually wanted to be trusted, this mesmerizing faculty stood him in excellent service. It is estimated that only a small portion of his exploits are known. It is to be hoped he will now be effectually

THE PRESIDENT'S COUNTRY HOME. How His Cottage Has Been Enlarged and Beautified.

On the estate of twenty-seven acres purchased by President Cleveland on Georgetown Heights was a double two-story stone cottage having nine large rooms. Shortly after the purchase President Cleveland intrusted to Messrs. William M. Poindexter & Co., of Washington, the duty of preparing plans for completely remodeling and extending the cot-

We present here a view of the house at the time of its purchase by the president. In another is shown the remodeled structure which retains scarcely a vestige of the original dwelling. The two-story stone house seems to have entirely disappeared, and on the site stands as beautiful a suburban villa as can be found anywhere. There are few localities in this part of the country where the stretch of landscape is as diversified as it is at this ele vation looking southward from the president's private residence. Other executives have been owners of real estate at the capital, but President Cleveland is the first to build a country home for himself in the neighborhood of the White House,

THE REMODELED HOUSE The improvement in the house has been se cured through the addition of a roomy attic story and two-story piazzas on two sides of the building, facing south and west. A new addition has been made to the extension, also to be constructed of stone, which will contain the kitchen, with servants' rooms overhead, The interior of the building has been arranged to suit the wants and tastes of Mrs. Cleveland, whose interest in her suburban home is not less than that of the president. Nearly every afternoon since the workmen began operations Mrs. Cleveland has found it a pleasure to watch the progress of their labors, while the president also finds a new diversion from the cares of state in seeing the homely cottage transformed into a beautiful dwelling. Of course all the modern improvement conveniences and appliances for household comfort will be put in. When completed there will be a dining room, reception room, two parlors, one of which the president intends to occupy as his study, on the lower floor, besides the pantries and large kitchen. On the second floor will be three chambers and dressing rooms, bath rooms, closets and servants' rooms. The attic story will contain four commodious chambers. From the roadside the view will be very picturesque, with a good setting of trees and an extensive sloping lawn on all sides. The grounds have been very much improved during the president's possession of the property, and landscape garleners have been engaged to further adorn the grounds and lay out new approaches from the main road to the building, The president expects to take possession of the house about the 1st of October, and during Mrs. Cleveland's visit north next month arrangements will be made for furnishing her suburban home according to her own taste.

HERBERT SPENCER. Evolutionist, Philosopher and Author of

One of the great minds of England is pass ing away from among men. Herbert Spencer has been troubled for years with persiste insomnia and nervousness. When he visited America in 1882 he carried a hop pillow with him everywhere to produce sleep. But the obstinute trouble seems to be getting the better of him at last. Herbert Spencer is not a very old man, as we count age now. He was born in Derby, England, in 1820. He is not as old as Gladstone by eleven years, nor has his life been passed amid anything like the wear and tear through which the great premier has lightly carried his 76 years. Mr. Spencer was educated by his father who was a teacher in Derby. He early showed great fondness for mathematics and natural history.

He was intended for a civil engineer, and engaged in that profession at first. But so many other young men crowded into it that the field was overstocked. Young Spencer abandoned it to try literature. If he had had his beginning in our time he would have found the journalistic and literary field crowled to such a degree that the civil engineer's profession would be emptiness in com-

Next to Charles Darwin, Herbert Spencer has had influence on the scientific thought of his time. The two minds were similar, except that Darwin's ran rather to the field of active experiment and research among animals and things, Spencer's more to develop ing philosophical thought in the study and library. Spencer was as ardent an evolutionist as Darwin, but he was more interested in evolution as applied to government and society. When only 22 years old he published a series of papers on the proper sphere of government. He took the humane and enlightened ground that too much government was worse than none at all

His first important work was published in 1850, when he was 30 years old. It was "Social Statics: or the Conditions Essential to Human Happiness Specified, and the First of Them Developed." It is a striking fact in the career of this great thinker that that first book of his has never been excelled, if, indeed, it has been equaled, by anything he wrote later. t seems as if there was little to know. He is a quiet, elderly bachelor, and has dwelt in a London lodging house time out of mind FOR PUBLIC PRINTER.

Gen. Rogers, of Buffalo, Likely to Succeed S. P. Rounds. The position of public printer is considered a very important one in the government, as he controls about 2,500 employes and expends over $2,000,000 a year in the work of printing and binding the various government publica tions. Mr. S. P. Rounds having resigned, his successor is said to be Gen. Rogers, of Buffalo.

GEN, WILLIAM FINDLAY ROGERS William Findlay Rogers was born in Forks township, Easton, Pa., Jan. 1, 1820. His grandfather, Joseph Rogers, came to America from Ireland in 1786. His father, Thomas J. Rogers, was by trade a printer. He was an officer in the war of 1812. Gen. William F. Rogers imbibed his military spirit from both his father's and his mother's relatives. His first work was done on The Easton Whig as printer's apprentice. In 1834 lie went to Philadelphia and obtained work on The Philadelphia Inquirer. In 1846 he came to Buffalo and began "sticking type" on The Courier. This he left for work on The Rcpublic, a paper then entirely independent of The Courier, but which was afterwards consolidated with its larger rival, and which has solidated with its larger rival, and which has now suspended. Gen. Rogers established the first Sunday newspaper in Buffalo—The Weekly Republican. This paper, however, soon ceased publication. He then went back on The Courier, where he remained until the outbreak of the rebellion.

Shouth after his parture, from the way he outbreak of the rebellion.

Shortly after his return from the war he was appointed city auditor. At the next election he was made city comptroller, and afterwards was elected mayor. In 1882 he was chosen to represent the district in congress, whither his father had been elected at the beginning of the century. He was appointed major general of the Fourth di vision N. G., S. N. Y., in January, 1879.

SOLICITOR GENERAL JENKS.

The Senate Confirms John Goode's Successor Without Debate. The senate refused to confir Goode, of Virginia, after he had held the important position of solicitor general for a year, it was supposed there would be some difficulty in securing an incumbent for the position that would meet with their approval, but on receiving the nomination of George A. Jenks, of Pennsylvania, the senate paid him the high compliment of confirming his nomination immediately.

GEORGE A. JENKS. Mr. Jenks had but recently retired from the office of assistant secretary of the interior to take charge of the estate of the late Mr. Dubois, his millionaire client, but it after ward leaked out that the position was not an agreeable one to him. The position of solici-tor general has a salary of $7,000 attached to it. He is also paid $10,000 a year for managing the Dubois estate.

Mrs. Senator Dolph.

It seems to be just dawning on the mind of society that the wife of Senator Joseph N Dolph, of Oregon, is one of the most beautiful women in Washington. On Mr. Cutting's return to Mexican soil he was arrested a second time on Mexican soil and kept in jail a month, when he was offered by the supreme court of Chihuahua his freedom upon bail. This he is reported to have re-fused, on the ground that he had appealed to the United States government for redress, which seems to be slow about coming, and in the meantime the whole border becomes inflamed. occurence at Jackson caused a representative of this paper to visit that city. He registered at the Hurd House and engaged Hon. Frank L. Smith, its proprietor, and ex-member of the State Legislature in conversation. "Mr. C. D. Denio, a man very wellknown in this community, was probably the worst wreck physicially of any man Mr. Smith stopped suddenly, and going to the door called in a man who was passing. It was Mr. Denio, who said:

"I am what people call 'resurrected.'
From a slight attack of rheumatism, graying out of a cold I grew warse until growing out of a cold, I grew worse until growing out of a cold, I grew worse until my limbs were swollen fearfully, and my right side entirely paralyzed. Any one who has had rheumatism knows what I suffered. The doctors were very faithful, but they did not help me. They administered morphine constantly, but it could not kill the pain. Indeed, during my ravings I declared I would shoot the doctors if I ever recovered, which, of course, I was not responsible for. I looked and longed for death. But yet you see me in perfect health. Do you want to know what is was that saved my life virtually what is was that saved my life, virtually raised me from the grave after the doctors and my friends had abandoned me, and keeps me well all the while? "Mr. Denio was one of the sickest men that ever recovered. He was paralyzed from rheumatic poison, and no one ever dreamed he would get well. He is well though, and it is simply marvelous." "Dr. Charles H. Lewis, residing at 200 Blackstone street, attended Mr. Denio during his sickness, and said Mr. Denio had been a very sick man, had cone beyond the reach of the medical profession, and had been a ward as he declaration, and had been cured, as he declared, by the use of Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup.
