Never lived a Yankee yet But was ready to bet On the S. A. A.

It you speak of Italy's sunny clime, And boast it every golden hour, If you talk of St. Ann's fountain of fire, You rouse his ire.

In an injured way he would not be, 'I'll probably say, 'I don't think much of a smokin' hill 'We've got a moderate little still 'Kin make you an old volcano still, 'Four old Nixey boys the crater, 'N I guess 'twould heat her fiery water, 'I have doubtless heard of these ancient hills.

Manufactured for a prize; The reputation of each rose higher As he proved himself the biggest liar. Said an Englishman: 'Only 'tother day, 'Selling from Dover to Calcutta, or anywhere, 'I saw a man without coat or cap, 'Swimming across from the English shore, 'Manfully beating the angry sea, 'And shouting to the world, 'Mindful of all the three-tail tales, 'Whenever a Yankee to Europe sails, 'The people try every sort of plan 'To ruin his nationalistic ambition. 'San Brown was a fellow from 'way down East, 'Who never was staggered in the least. 'No matter how the Yankee beat or hit, 'He would not let the stories he had heard; 'No curious place or wonderful view, 'Was skill to 'Pondum, I tell you, 'But show him the nation's national can. 'San Brown was a fellow from 'way down East, 'Who never was staggered in the least.

From the beautiful Lottchenbank. They took him at last to ancient Rome. And inveigled him into a catacomb. Here they placed him with draughts of wine (This he vowed old ether was twice as good).

They piled old skeletons round the stone. Set a watch in a candlestick of bone, And made him to slumber there; and 'They were wailed from a distance the lazar's gleam, 'Waiting to hear at his drunken scream 'When he should awake from his drunken dream.

After a time the Yankee woke, But instantly saw through the mimic joke; 'So never a cry or shout he uttered, 'But rose and hurried to the window, 'I see how it is. It's the judgment day, 'We've all been dead and stowed away; 'All these stone sarcophagi steeple high, 'And the rest of the world, 'I don't know of 'em, 'United States is dead, I vum!

LIZZIE MOORE.

The dullest days, that would neither clear nor leave the honesty to own that it was ill-tempered indulging in a hearty shower; it was raining gray clouds that spread across the sky.

Lizzie Moore felt that she had put up with matters just as long as it was possible, she suddenly stopped in her growing up, and looking down the long veranda, and glancing into the parlor to make sure that Aunt Rhoda was busy with her knitting, she darted down the steps, meaning, at least, to get a drink of water.

But, of course, Lizzie woke up suddenly from a comfortable sleep, and indulged in a series of frisks and gambols, but she was not to be so easily lulled to sleep, for she was drenched in the undertaking.

The noise he made aroused Aunt Rhoda from her work, she called out once, "Lizzie, you're going to rain!" "You don't mean to go out! Why, it's going to rain!"

"So everybody has said since six o'clock this morning, but I'm not going to let it keep on saying it indefinitely, for I don't believe it will ever rain or clear up either."

"Don't be so unreasonable," Aunt Rhoda remarked in a milly reproving way, "I won't, Lizzie answered, with her merriest laugh; "but just now I feel that I must absolutely take a run at it, and I'm sure it will all become a lunatic before bedtime."

"At least put something over you, then," said Aunt Rhoda, rising and coming to the window, "mercy on me, going out with your hair in a bun, and no shawl, and it looking so black!"

"All right, aunty dear!" and Lizzie snatched up a shawl which she threw over her arm, and, forgetting to look at the clock, she started off through the grounds at a pace so rapid that Aunt Rhoda had no time to call out any more words of wisdom or advice after her.

Aunt Rhoda and Lizzie together for a good many years in that quiet old house; for Lizzie's father had married again when she was sixteen, and the stepmother was only too glad to convince Mr. Moore, and to get the right Aunt Rhoda should be gratified in her wish to have with her the child that she had neglected first wife, with whose history we have nothing to do—summing up in fact, in that one sad word I have employed.

Lizzie was twenty-five now; her father had been dead two years; her mother had never altogether a handsome woman; only an artist would have said that she needed more coloring. Happiness would have brought her every feature more into relief, but she had made her dreams living and real, and she had asayed both heart and soul. Well, I think it sounds silly, but she needed to be in love, and the opportunity had not been granted.

"Things happen so oddly in this world, that you need not accuse me of being either sensational or improbable, when I say that this moment Lizzie Moore was running listlessly forward to meet her love. She came down to the river, a lovely spot in sunshine or moonlight, but it looked dismal now, as paradise itself would have done in that gloom. A boat was just putting into a cove a short distance below the spot where she stood. Lizzie recognized the worthy old squire and the little craft with which he haunted the water every leisure hour he could command.

There was somebody with him, a strange gentleman, and as Lizzie looked a second time, they were both walking toward her, and the squire was waving his handkerchief to attract her attention.

So up they came and the squire called out, "What are you doing here, you insane girl? Don't you see it's going to rain at once?" It was just about to make a run for it to your house and beg shelter for myself and my friend here, I beg to say."

Miss Moore looked at Mr. Dudley, and became conscious that she was regarding the handsome man she had never seen in her life—too handsome, almost; one of those golden-haired, blue-eyed, tawny-bearded men, whose luck it is to get so much feminine worship in passion through the world.

A tall, splendidly-built fellow, with an air of pride that would not have misbehoen Lucifer, which made his deference to a woman whom he wished to please all the more charming. Such a man, grand look about him that one would have sworn he never could have harbored a mean thought in his life; and that the dark rings about his eyes, which added so much to his beauty, were not the result of hard study or patiently borne trouble, or anything in the world except dissipation.

And he was bowing to Lizzie and the squire was saying, "Now that's no time for ceremony. See that black cloud coming up! We must make a run for it, Lizzie, take my arm."

The first thing was to get into the house, and then to get to the front door off they started at a tremendous pace, and presently Mr. Dudley quietly took possession of Lizzie's other arm, and helped her along so effectively that she could not have fallen, and the first heavy drops began to fall.

Ponto had been capering and barking about them all the way, evidently thinking the whole affair had been going on for his amusement. Mr. Dudley was fully presented to Aunt Rhoda, and they all went in to tea.

Mr. Dudley had a letter of introduction to Aunt Rhoda from a friend. He was an old acquaintance of the squire's, and had come up to the quiet neighborhood to spend a few weeks and rest his nerves. He had just arrived, and Lizzie felt sure from some very important and persistent mental efforts.

BUCHANAN schools had during the month of September, 1886, 439 pupils enrolled, to 887 during the same month last year, and several names have been added this month. Much of this increase comes from neighboring districts, showing a healthy state of affairs of which patrons of this district should be proud.

THE Benton Harbor people consider the burning of the canning establishment a great loss to the entire community. Over 400,000 cans of tomatoes had been put up and the season was but about half through, and many of its small farmers place great dependence upon their tomato crop as a means to their support.

A movement is now on foot to improve the Paw Paw river power at Benton Harbor, with a view to supplying the village with waterworks and power for manufacturing purposes, and to secure the Blackmar paper mill that has recently been closed in St. Joseph and is now looking for a new location where they can have better water power and better facilities.

OUR Prohibition friends are requested to keep in mind the fact that their candidate for County Clerk is the publisher of the rankest Bourbon paper in the county. Of course it is useless to remind them that they are simply playing second fiddle to the scotchish ticket, but merely wish to keep in their minds the signs of the times.

UNDER the direction of Supervisor Alexander as chairman of the building committee, the Court House is undergoing some repairs. It finds the support of the floor in the Supervisor's room all rotted and useless. The time for the new court house is fast approaching. The question of location will first claim attention, however. When Berrien county builds a new house where that is, it will be under a different state of affairs than now exists.

FIRE.—Monday evening at about nine o'clock, Mr. Robert Curran's barn, on the old Curran farm, south of Baktown, was burned, with its contents, including a crop of hay and grain and farming implements, including a self-binder. Mr. Curran's loss will reach $1,200 to $1,500. The cause of the fire is supposed to be incendiary. The light was plainly seen from this place. Partially insured with the Farmers' Mutual.

MISS ELLA KOONTZ, a graduate of Ft. Wayne Conservatory of Music and highly recommended by that institution, has been engaged as associate instructor in Buchanan Music School in vocal and instrumental music. She is a finished musician, and will give special attention to vocal instruction in class. This is a valuable acquisition for the music loving portion of Buchanan, and Miss Koontz should receive the support her talents command.

THE Board of Supervisors were asked to audit the bills of the sheriff and all his deputies for attending the reunion at Benton Harbor and protect the gamblers while they openly plied their games on the streets and in the saloons. The excuse given when spoken to about it was that they wanted the gamblers out in plain sight where they could be seen. No effort was made to stop them. "Turn the rascals out", by all means.

ONE man counted 23 gambling devices on the Dowagiac fair grounds during the fair, all being operated in sight of the public. The festive "shell" and "drop the pigeon" men were on the deck. Three card monte was in full blast. Roulette, keno, chuckluck, favo, poker games, wheels of fortune, etc., were in full blast. In every saloon, also, was some clever device to rope in the unwary.—Niles Star.

THE above reads so much like the account of the reunion at Benton Harbor, that one would almost think the Dowagiac fair was within the jurisdiction of Sheriff Peck, but it isn't.

THE Republicans of Buchanan have been having a checkered experience with speakers. Hon. J. C. Burrows was advertised as mentioned last week, but failed to appear, owing to a failure in receiving Mr. Alexander's letter. Next, Senator Blair was advertised to be here Monday evening, and about the time the bills were well circulated a telegram was received stating that he had been called to his home by the sudden death of Senator Pike, of the same state, but Mr. Burrows was secured to fill the appointment. Rough's Opera house was crowded to overflowing, a large number being unable to gain admittance. Mr. Burrows' remarks, as usual with him were full of plain points. He was followed by Stephen A. Douglass of Chicago, son of the famous Stephen A. who was Abraham Lincoln's opponent for the Presidency.

MR. FRANK PRINCE and Miss Lillie Harris, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Monday evening, at the residence of Mrs. C. Bowen. The wedding was very quiet, only a few friends present.

THE old gentleman that we spoke of last week, as being knocked from the track, is much improved. His arm was amputated by Dr. C. J. Bulhand. Those who witnessed the operation state that it was a very fine piece of surgery. The old gentleman left for Battle Creek, Monday morning, where he has relatives.

MR. BITZLER, an old gentleman living at Three Oaks, was struck by an engine, about one mile west of here, as he was walking to Galien, Tuesday evening. He had several ribs broken, and hurt otherwise internally. He lived only a few hours.

IF it had been known that Hon. J. C. Burrows was to have spoken at Buchanan, Monday night, there would

W. O. CURTCHILL and Wm. Lewis started yesterday morning for a pleasant trip, with a well made skiff, nicely covered and protected by side curtains. They have their outfit drawn by teams to Crum's Point on the Kankakee, when they launch for a ride down the Kankakee, Illinois and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans. They take a tent, cooking utensils, guns and other accoutrements for a pleasant trip. From New Orleans they expect to go across to Florida, and remain all winter. The prime object is the preservation of health and secondary the pleasure of the experience.

THERE is said to be a cloak of loneliness hanging over Berrien Springs that is almost suffocating, since the narrow gauge was closed.—Buchanan Record. There is no denying the fact that the narrow gauge was of some convenience to us, and as a matter of course we feel it in a business way, since traffic has ceased on that road, or the time being. But it is self evident that as long as that excuse for a railroad was in operation nothing further could be done, and it is true that some of our citizens were anxious to see it stopped, for the reason that something can now be accomplished. Henceforth it is to be railroad business, and not railroad wind. We are going to have a railroad, keep this in mind Mr. Record and watch for results.—Berrien Springs Journal.

THE Niles fair association is not fully satisfied with the treatment and patronage accorded them in Niles, and there is an expressed or implied willingness to move the institution bodily. We wonder if Buchanan can not accommodate them with good grounds and they give them fairs that they will not be ashamed of, and treatment they cannot call shabby. There is a tract of land near the Michigan Central railroad now used as a ballground, that if large enough and suitable can be had at a reasonable price. Will some of our citizens who have interest in that direction investigate the matter and see what may be done.

ATTEMPTED MURDER.—Another tragedy was enacted Sunday afternoon, in Clay township, on the farm of Mrs. Thos. O'Neil, about two miles southeast of Bertrand. Mrs. O'Neil and daughter Ida, aged sixteen years, left the house about four o'clock for a stroll in the orchard near by, and after being away a short time the daughter returned to the house and laid upon the couch to rest. She had been there but a short time when John Heppenstall, her cousin, who had worked on the farm but had been discharged a short time before, came out of the bedroom where he had concealed himself. Miss Ida arose and ran from the house, when Heppenstall followed, firing two shots at her as she ran, one taking effect in her right arm. When in the yard he shot again, the ball striking her in the side, from the effect of which she fell. He then placed the revolver to her head and fired again, fortunately making only a scalp wound. Thinking her dead, he started for Mrs. O'Neil who, having seen the murderous work, fled for the neighbors. He fired two shots at her but without effect, when he fled to the woods. The first object of the entrance to the house is supposed to have been robbery, as some trunks in the room where he was concealed had been opened and their contents strewn about the room. While at work for the O'Neils he professed his amorous attentions to his cousin, but while she treated him kindly refused to recognize his advances, and it was when he neglected his work to attend to love-making, that he received his discharge. The young lady is in a critical condition. The wound in her side being considered a dangerous one. Heppenstall is still at large. He is Irish, talks quite five feet eight inches in height, has a long, rough-looking face and wears no beard. His hair is dark. When last seen he wore blue jean pants, tucked in his boot tops, blue striped shirt, stiff dark hat with a hole in the top. He had no change of clothing with him. Sheriff Rockstroff, of South Bend, has offered a reward of $100 for his capture.

THREE OAKS ITEMS. Oct. 12, 1886. Never was the surrounding country more beautifully adorned in nature's garb than at present. The sunny days add to the splendor, and we have a garden of Eden, except as to the dress of the inhabitants, and in this we are somewhat imitative.

OUR young drug proprietor went to visit "his girl", and donned his new style out pantaloon (with barn-door front attachment), and was notified by one of the boys of the family that he had his trousers on "hind side afore". The sparking hereafter is to be done in other localities. It is strange how mixed up a drug man can get.

THE foundation wall is now being put in for the business house of Hon. J. L. McKie.

Henry Bennett, the President of our village, has taken his family and moved to Racine, Wisconsin, and left our burg without an official head.

A Mr. Smith, from Grand Rapids, opened the campaign here for the Republicans, on Tuesday evening.

STREVE.

GALIEN ITEMS. Oct. 13, 1886. Mr. Frank Prince and Miss Lillie Harris, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Monday evening, at the residence of Mrs. C. Bowen. The wedding was very quiet, only a few friends present.

THE old gentleman that we spoke of last week, as being knocked from the track, is much improved. His arm was amputated by Dr. C. J. Bulhand. Those who witnessed the operation state that it was a very fine piece of surgery. The old gentleman left for Battle Creek, Monday morning, where he has relatives.

MR. BITZLER, an old gentleman living at Three Oaks, was struck by an engine, about one mile west of here, as he was walking to Galien, Tuesday evening. He had several ribs broken, and hurt otherwise internally. He lived only a few hours.

IF it had been known that Hon. J. C. Burrows was to have spoken at Buchanan, Monday night, there would have been a goodly number to go down from Galien. We see no reason why such things cannot be advertised as it is not very often that we have the privilege of hearing such a man as Burrows.

Our townsmen, C. A. Witte, received nine premiums on his vegetables at the Niles fair. He exhibited one squash that weighed seventy-six pounds, and a beet that weighed twenty-seven pounds.

Mr. Leonard Scott, of southern Indiana, brother of Rev. C. Scott, is spending a few days with friends at Galien. Bert Teters is learning to make harness, under the watchful eye of our efficient workman, Mr. Ed. Phillips.

A. Emery, of Buchanan, was in town a few moments Monday morning. Dr. Belknap, of Niles, gave us a hurried call Monday morning.

G. A. Blakeslee returned from his western trip Tuesday afternoon. C. A. Clark is babying his right hand; says he is getting tired of sitting up nights with it.

There was a sawing bee at Dave Wright's Tuesday evening. Not much of a turn out. Quite a number from Galien took advantage of the last excursion to Chicago, Tuesday morning, to attend the exposition. U. N.
