BUCHANAN RECORD.

JOHN G. HOLMES, Editor.

THURSDAY, SEPT. S, 1887.

Two steamers which arrived at New York Monday, brought $2,195,000 in German and English gold coin.

The supply of black and gray squir rels is said to be good in the woods about South Bend.

While Robert Lincoln is quietly attending to his law business his Presidential boom is quietly and steadily growing, South as well as North.

Fred Douglas writes: "I would rather be with the party of freedom and progress in defeat, than with the party of the Glenn bill in victory." And Fred is noted in this country as carrying a pretty level head.

It is now stated on the evidence of a railroad employe who was at the scene of the disaster, that 126 persons lost their lives in the Chatsworth catastrophe. This is twenty-six more than has ever been recorded of any previous railroad disaster.

The Rev. Sam Small in one of his discourses recently said: "I was born a Democrat, raised a Democrat. I studied its principles fully. I worked for it. I have spent money for it. I have lied for it. I have stolen ballots for it. I have stuffed boxes for it. I did all it told me, and it took me within a half mile of hell."

A Michigan City firm has commenced suit to compel the telephone company to furnish them two telephones at $5 per month, the legal rate, the company having taken the instruments out. It is claimed that the company has no choice as to its patrons but is obliged to serve all who demand it at legal rates so long as they do business within the state.

The latest political rumor is that the Democrats are scheming to get new Democratic States. One rumor is that certain Georgians are moving to make one of North Georgia and parts of Tennessee and North Carolina. Thank you. North Carolina will hardly be dismembered. Another project is to divide Texas into two states. It ought to be cut into at least four or five.-Wilmington Star (Dem.)

Yes, and there's Dakota, too. If she voted the same way Georgia and Texas she might be divided too, perhaps.

A man was buried at Cadillac at Solitary Confinement at Louvain. The rules of the prison are such that the convicts must replace their hooded masks as soon as the doors of their cells open. They cannot expose their faces even to their wardens. If, perchance, a face is seen by a doctor, it is paled by the long sunless shadow in which it lives and the want of bracing, blowing air, for even the daily walk of an hour in the prison yards is at best only exercise in cramped passages between two high walls, partly roofed, shut in by iron gates, stretching out like the sticks of a gigantic fan, and where a few stunted plants soon wither and die.

The prisoners have that flaccid fleshiness which comes from absence of movement and stimulating activity; yet in contradiction to the opinion prevailing in France that no man could stand solitary confinement for ten years without succumbing or getting insanc, it has been found not to be the case at Louvain. Two of the inmates have dwelt there since 1864, the date of its foundation, being transferred to the Central house after a ten years' imprisonment at Ghent They had been condemned to death, but owing to the virtual abolition of the penalty of death in Belgium, the king had commuted their sentence to the perpetual entombment of their present abode. In Place of Dynamite.

Wood powder has recently been introduced as an explosive in the Belgian army in place of dynamite. The powder is obtained by treating ordinary sawdust with a mixture of nitric and sulphuric acids, which is afterward formed into cartridges by means of powerful presses. To protect these cartridges from moisture they are afterward covered with paraffined paper. The instantaneous production of the gases arising upon the explosion causes the air in contact with the face surface of the cartridge to act to some extent as a light tamping, and the power of the explosion is directed to the other face. In comparative experiments made with wood powder and dynamite it was ascertained that, for equal weights, charges of the first substance were at least as powerful as those of the second, and the results were more regular .--- Bos

How the Chinese Plant Pearls.

Owners of grounds at the Pearl Islands, in this bay, and which islands have been unproductive since the pearl yielding oysters died off, might take a hint from the Chinese, who practice oyster culture to a considerable extent, and whose bamboo oyster fields are prepared far more carefully than a field for the growth of the sugar cane. Holes are bored in old oyster shells, and these are stuck on pieces of split bamboo about two feet in length. which are then planted quite close to gether on mud flats, between high and low water mark, but subject to strong and tidal currents. These are supposed to bring the oyster spat, which adheres to the old shell and shortly develops into er's Drug Store. tiny oysters. Then the bamboos are trans planted and set some inches apart, until within six months of the first planting they are found to be covered with well grown oysters, which are then collected for the market,-Panama Star and Herald.

JUBILEE OF THE GOETVINGEN UNI-VERSITY FITLY CELEBRATED.

The Institution was Founded 150 Years Ago and is Flourishing Still-The Grimme Brothers-Something About the Ducls of German Students.

The present may be called the era of jubilees, Germany, especially, seems of late to be seized with a veritable rage to revel in jubilees and kindred festivals, the latest of which was the recent celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of the University of Goettingen, a city of about 22,000 inhabit-ants, in the Prussian province of Hanover.

The University of Goettingen was founded in the year 1737 by George II, king of Eng-land and elector of Hanover, and its history has consequently more than common interest for those of our readers whose ancestors were English. The city of Goettingen occupied as such, in mediæval times, a far more prominent position than it does now. It was a member of the mighty Hansa bund, a powerful organization of free cities of Germany, and her cloths, velvets and silks were greatly sought after in far distant lands. It was also one of the chief wine emporiants of Germany. Above all other things. Goe tingen was renowned for the warlike spirit of its inhabitants, who were almost continually embroiled in some feud with the nobles the neighborhood, and sometimes with the ruler of the land even, whom the city would never fully acknowledge. But in the beginning of the Sixteenth century the pestilence ravaged Goettingin and half of the population died; and upon the heels of that came the thirty years' and the seven years' wars, entailing fearful misery upon the city, and Goettingen has never recovered her former prominence as a commercial place.

During the first years of her existence the new university labored under great difficulties. The place was then so impoverished that scarcely tolerably decent quarters could be found for the professors; the 400 students, who were mostly rich and scions of nobility, had to be quartered in all sorts of holes that handly deserved the name of lodgings.

The astronomical observatory was in an old tower and the lecture hall for anatomy was in a cellar. However, year by year th

THOMAS WILDEY, Founder of the Order in the United States. But these annual meetings are not purely social. Last rear the Grand lodge was held at Boston. During the sessions the reports of the grand sire and grand scoretary are read, and various matters relating to the order in differ-ent parts of the world are taken up and disposed of.

The order was first organized in Amer-ica in 1819 by Thomas Wildey and four-others, in Baltimore. Previous to this the order had flourished in England for a num-ber of years under the title of the "Ancient and Honorable Loyal Good Fellows," and the "Union Order of Odd Fellows." Shortly after the establishment of Lodge No. 1 in Balti-more, lodges in Philadelphia and Boston were chartered, and the order began to spread rapidly, until at the present time every state and territory in the United States is represented. Some idea of the results that have been achieved during the last quarter of a century can be gained from the following figures: In 1804 the number of Odd Fe?lows in the whole world was 137,623. In 1885 they num-B bared 517.310 members, an increase of nearly 400,000 in twenty-two years.

In the same period the expenditures for the relief of the ick and distressed, the burial of the S dead and the education of orphans amounted to over J. N. ROGERS, $31,000,000, while Dep't Commander, Colo.

the amount paid into the treasury of subordinates amounted to over $$0,000,000. In 1864 the order was represented in the New England states and the lower provinces of Canada by 10,000 members. The same territory is now represented by more than 65,000 Odd Fellows, a sevenfold increase. The Odd Fellowship of 1819 now flourishes in Au-tralasia and Germany, the Sandwich Islands, Switzerland, the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Chili, Peru, Mexico and Cuba. Since 1843 the order in America has had no connection with the order in England.

Mr. John H. White, a lawyer of Albion, N. Y., who was at one time a candidate for supreme judge, is the present grand sire. A good illus-tration of the energy of the Odd Fellows is given in a successful project they carried on in New York last April. They wanted a library, and gave a grand benefit to which the admission tickets were GEN. J. C. UNDERWOOD. Looks. None but good books were taken, and reserved scats were charged for at the rate of two books or nore, according to the location. Over 50,000 columns were realized from this benefit.

CASTLE GARDEN AT NIGHT. Castle Garden has gone through many transformations. Once it was a genuine fort, with guns, sentinels, commandants and martial music. Again it was the favorite resort of the rich and lovely of New York. That was thirty years ago, when it was a concert hall. Today it is the headquarters of the immigrant. In 1854 its spacious interior was semicircular, with a high, wide gallery, in which seats were arranged as in an amphitheatre. It was lighted by large chandelies dependent from a frescoed ceiling. The auditorium faced a spacious stage.

There Mario and Grisi sang, and there in 1850 Jenny Lind first appeared in America. Night after night the house was packed. When it was known that the proceeds of the first concert were between $35,000 and $36,-000 the Lind concerts became the sensation of the entire country. That was the beginning of high theatro prices in New York. Ladies at ended these concerts without bonnets, and

On Aug. 13, 1872, Franklin was issioned a captain and placed in command of the steam frigate Franklin, in the European station, where he was on duty from 1873 to 1876. In 1877 Capt. They also provide the owners with temporary substitutes during the time their horses are in the homes, while another object is to afford an asylum for old favorites whose owners wish to avoid selling or destroying animals which have served them well and have become superannuated. The Lindo home is also a place where people can learn things about the care and training of horses. Men who know equine nature deliver lectures and give practical illustrations of the art of giving horses good manners and curing rearers and jibbers. They also show how it is possible to ride and jump without reins by simple balance.

MISS LINDO AND HER FIRST PATIENT. Patients in the home mainly come from the shafts of London cabs. Poor persons are able to get their animals taken in free on presentation of letters from subscribers. The secretary of the home is Mr. S. Sutherland Safford, and the offices are at 13 Victoria buildings, Victoria station, S. W. The picture of Miss Lindo represents her on Ken, the gray horse bought when broken down and restored to beauty and vigor. The evolution of the horse is an interesting feature of general history. We are only now entering the era of knowledge which enables us to see that the horse, whether he has a soul to save or not, has a body and some feelings to be abused and wounded. Originally the horse was sought after only for food. Then, as man learned to cultivate the soil, he looked about for some animal to assist him. Vari-ous ones were tried, and without success, until by natural ascent he reached the horse. The primitive home of the horse was the country lying between the Tigris and the Euphrates in Mesopotamia. From this point he was brought to Egypt, where we find fre-uent mention of him in the earliest record of the human family. In profane history Sesostris, an Egyptian king, is represented as the first one who taught men to train horses and use them for pleasure. From Egypt horses were taken into Assyria and Persia, and finally all over the world. The Romans learned their horsemanship from the Greeks and soon rivaled their teac ers. They carried their affection for the horse to the point of folly and madness. Caligula invited his horse to sup with him, giving him food from golden vessels. Finally, he made his horse high priest and consul. Perhaps this was not so foolish, after all. Has not history bristled with stories of officials beside whom horses sors who had been secured for the new university possessed talents of the first order, Goettingen gradually became a much preferred scat of learning, which so excited the envy and anxiety of other governments that they enjoined their professors from accepting calls to Goettingen. The success of the university was principally owing to the wise administration of Baron Adolph yon Munchhausen, the minister of George II, who had intrusted him with this important task. Munchhausen selected suit-able men and availed himself of the most efficient means for the furthering of the

One of the foremost professors who leut luster to the renowned university was Christian Gottlob Heyne, who was born Sept. 25, 1729, the son of a poor weaver. For a long time misfortune pursued him, so that in those turbulent, war times he even lost his books. When he was found and engaged for a professorship he was found and engaged for a pro-fessorship he was very poor and lived in some out of the way place. But the man became n'star of the first magnitude for Georgia-Augusta—the official name of the aniversity-and faithfully continued with it for almost fifty years, notwithstanding he repeatedly received the most tempting calls other places. But he would not swerve from the promise given to Munchhausen not to leave his post. Heyne was a famous antiquarian, and was the first one to introduce scientific treatment for Greek mythology. A Disgusted Circus Man.

Old Dan Rico was an odd character and fiven to terse sayings. He once advertised for a double somersault performer and there were fifty applicants. One man said he "used to" do the act, but was out of practice. Another said he believed he would soon "get there." And so on. When they all made their excuses, claims and promises, old Dan, with deep disgust, said: "Twenty-five 'used to be's' and twenty-five 'going to be's,' and not a ---- 'is-cr' in the lot. I want an 'is-er.'" --Globe-Democrat.

A Dutch Man o' War.

A picture is here given of the Dutch frigate Konningin Emma der Nederlands (Queen Emma of the Netherlands) as she lay recently in the Erie basin, Brooklyn, for repairs. This vessel is a good specimen of the modern Dutch man o' war. As she lay in the dry dock her port holes were all thrown open and a typical scene of life on a man o' war was presented to the spectator. The vessel registers 3,000 tons, and carries a battery of fourteen guns of Krupp and Hotchkiss manufacture. Six of these guns will carry a shot 6,000 yards. Five torpedo boats are lashed to her bulwarks. She can go through the water at the rate of fourteen knots an hour. She was built in 1879 entirely of steel, with a composition sheathing of wood. She hails from New Dieppe. Her crew numbers 525. This vessel figured actively in the war that the Dutch waged against Sumatra in 1881.

There the horse is the intellectual companion of man, outranking wives. The Arabs have a proverb: "He who forgets the beauty of horses for the heauty of woman will never prosper."

Dean Swift's satire on humanity, wherein he makes horses the superiors of human beings, and represents them as placidly sitting in carriages while men drew them, is not entirely without a suggestion in history. Homer ropresents horses as weeping, and also as speaking. It is said, too, that the wildest and fiercest Arabian horse, when mounted by a woman, will grow suddenly mild and gentle. They have a remarkable fondness for the weaker sex.

SHOEING Horses are capable of great attachment for each other, as well as for their masters and human friends. That the animal once so worshiped by older and nobler races should have become a creature on which the temper of ignorant men could vent itself, and the victim of the inhuman and the careless, speaks but ill for our moral progress. Miss Lindo, with her home for horses, has done something toward bettering the world.
