'MID FERNS AND FLOWERS

Popular Buchanan Young Lady Becomes a Bride

WILL LIVE IN CHICAGO

Bridal Party Left for That City on the Evening Train.

A very pretty wedding took place at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Noble, when their daughter, Miss Winifred, became the bride of Mr. Fred Setchell, of Chicago, in the presence of about fifty guests.

The ceremony was performed in the parlor which was tastily decorated in green and white. Ferns, palms, smilax and chrysanthemums were used in the decorations.

At the appointed time, Mrs. G. E. Smith, who presided at the piano played the wedding march "Flowers and Hearts," and the Misses Winifred Starrett and Ruth Noble and Master Donald Noble ribbon bearers appeared making a pathway for the bridal party, who preceded by little Cecil Mutchler as flower girl, marched through the rooms to one corner of the parlor, where the decorations were arranged to represent a bower, under which Rev. C. E. Marvin, of Niles, pronounced the words that made the young people husband and wife.

The bride was attended by Miss Bay Redden, and the groom by Mr. O. N. Beardsley, of Chicago. The bride was dressed in white and carried white roses. Miss Redden was also dressed in white and carried pink roses.

The groom is a prosperous young business man of Chicago, and one of the finest young men it has been our pleasure to meet.

After the ceremony the guests were seated to a wedding supper in the dining room, which was decorated with pink and white ribbon, ferns and smilax. The decorations were executed by Mr. Harry Mansfield, of Niles, and speak well of his ability as a decorator.

Many costly presents were received by the bride. She was especially well remembered by the Happy-Go-Lucky club of which she was a member.

The out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. James Setchell, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sawyer and daughter Blanch, Mr. and Mrs. P. Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Starrett and family, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Noble and Mr. O. N. Beardsley, of Chicago; Mrs. P. D. Noble, of Ann Arbor, grandmother of the bride, Mr. Walter Noble and children, of Niles, Mrs. Riley Hinkle and Miss Lou Morris, of South Bend.

The happy couple left for Chicago on the 7:47 train last night, where the groom has a home all furnished for his bride. The RECORD joins with their many friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

Notice.

At a meeting of the school board and the health officer, held Nov. 25, it was decided that school should remain closed until Monday Dec. 5, on account of fumigating and cleaning the school building, also on account of many children being vaccinated and unable to attend school.

Raffles

"Raffles is the antithesis of "Sherlock Holmes and greater than Sherlock Holmes." Such is the opinion expressed in New York and elsewhere of Kyrle Bellew's famous drama, "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman" in which he and a splendid company, including E. M. Holland, are appearing at the Grand Opera House, Chicago. The drama was written by E. W. Hornung and Eugene Presbrey who used as a foundation one of the sketches published in two volumes by Mr. Hornung under the titles of "The Amateur Cracksman" and "Raffles" respectively. The authors go to daring lengths, seeming to argue that crime is a disease and that criminals are irresponsible. The detectable adventure of the Melrose diamonds is the one wisely selected for presentation of this argument and to give the stage an entirely new and fascinating character of Raffles, the gentleman-burglar-philanthropist. For conflict of forces the authors furnish a specialist in crime who would plunge Sherlock Holmes into despair and make his good friend, Dr. Watson, weak with amazement. This is Captain Bedford, the detective, who appears in no less person than our friend E. M. Holland whose last time in Pinkerton guise was as Captain Redmund in "Jim, the Penman." Raffles and Captain Bedford have it nip and tuck throughout the entire play, but Bedford is not the only person on the stage whom Raffles foils. First he foils Crawshaw, the bungling original thief of the $100,000 necklace. Then he foils Crawshaw again when the latter comes to his (Raffles) London apartment to effect a "divvy." Next after foiling Bedford a dozen times, he foils a woman who is infatuated with him. In fact he foils everyone except his friend Bunny and Gwendolyn, the girl who loves him even after she knows the truth about him. We are told that Sherlock Holmes originally was out for the part now filled by Captain Bedford, and we shudder to think of the humiliation that surely would have befallen our ideal sleuth if he had been pitted against the dashing, infinitely resourceful and all-conquering Raffles.

A Startling Test

To save a life, Dr. T. G. Merritt, of No. Mehoopany, Pa., made a startling test resulting in a wonderful cure. He writes, "a patient was attacked with violent hemorrhages, caused by ulceration of the stomach. I had often found Electric Bitters excellent for acute stomach and liver troubles I prescribed them. The patient gained from the first, and has not had an attack in 14 months." Electric Bitters are positively guaranteed for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Constipation and Kidney troubles. Try them. Wealth without Working

The great fever of trying to make $1 earn $5 is growing more and more contagious. We see even women secretly going into brokers' offices and "bucket shops," investing everything they have in all sorts of schemes, drawing their deposits out of the banks, sometimes pawning their jewelry—even their engagement rings—and borrowing, hoping to make a lot of money before their husbands or families find it out and then to surprise them with the results, but, in most cases, what they invest is hopelessly lost.

Thousands of young Americans are so tied up by financial or other entanglements, even before they get fairly started in their life work, that they can only transmute a tithe of their real ability or their splendid energies into that which will count in their lives. A large part of it is lost on the way up, as the energy of the coal is nearly all lost before it reaches the electric bulb.

The grading of an addition to the old cemetery at Gros Gap, three miles west of St. Ignace, has brought to light a quantity of bones, skeletons and Indian arrowheads, spearheads, beads, etc. This is supposed to have been the site of the old Indian village known as St. Louis, where the massacre of the Hurons by the Iroquois continued after commencing at St. Ignace, March 16, 1649. Three priests perished in this massacre.

THEY NEVER FAIL

That is What They Say About Them in Buchanan, and It Is Therefore, Reliable.

Another proof, some more evidence, Buchanan testimony to Doan's Kidney Pills. Read this convincing endorsement of the claims made for that remarkable preparation:

Henry Blodgett, of Main street, proprietor of the Tile and Brick works, says: "After a careful and varied experience I have not the slightest hesitation in endorsing the claims made for Doan's Kidney Pills. At intervals for over two years I was not only annoyed but I actually suffered from severe pain in the small of my back and it was always worse if I did a hard day's work. Any cold I caught aggravated the pain, weakened my kidneys and too frequent action of the kidney secretions ensued. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills, got a box at W. N. Brodriek's drug store and took them with the result that the backaches entirely disappeared and my kidneys were strengthened. Mrs. Blodgett also used Doan's Kidney Pills with the same good result. We both are pleased to recommend so valuable a remedy."

For sale by all dealers, price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute. 25

How The Farmers' Son May Make His Future Financial Success Certain

By taking one of the short courses to begin at the Agricultural College the first week in January, 1905, and continuing eight weeks. The courses are: "Live Stock and General Farming," "Fruit," and "Creamery," with a four week's course in "Cheese-making" to begin February 27 and end March 24. Write to C. D. Smith, Agricultural College, Mich., for a circular fully describing the courses.

The Live stock course gives a thorough drill in stock judging, feeding, veterinary medicine, the management of soils and raising crops, the fruit orchard and something of agricultural chemistry, botany, and bacteriology. The Creamery course fits men to manage creameries. The Fruit course pays special attention to the vegetable garden and the fruit orchard, plant diseases, insects, budding, grafting and spraying.

The college is abundantly equipped to make these courses most valuable and expert and experienced teachers are provided. Every farmer's son, every man who expects to own a farm or live on a farm is invited to attend. The charges are reduced to a minimum. Every reader of this paper is invited to come and bring his neighbor with him. The state provides the courses to help you. Will you do your part?

Epidemic Scare at New Buffalo

New Buffalo is in a state of high excitement because of a threatened epidemic of diphtheria. The school will in all probability be closed and the health authorities will quarantine nearly a score of homes.

A school boy was attacked with the disease about four days ago and no quarantine was established. He was in constant communication with scores of other children. Tuesday the situation became so grave that a hurried consultation between the village president, health authorities and business men was called, with the result that the village is practically under quarantine.

A Sure Thing

It is said that nothing is sure, but death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. VanMetre of Shepherdstown, W. Va., says "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by all druggists. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c and $1.00.

THE AUTO FACTORY

Will Move From Detroit to Buchanan Next Week

ANOTHER GOOD INDUSTRY

Letter Just Received by Mr. House Gives Particulars

About two weeks ago the RECORD gave its readers some information regarding the Michigan Motor and Machine Co., stating that the factory would be moved to Buchanan in about three weeks. Since that time someone has started the story that the factory was not coming, but the following extracts from a letter received by Mr. House, yesterday, will put the people at rest regarding the locating of the factory:

DETROIT, MICH., Nov. 22, 1904.

MR. AMOS HOUSE,
BUCHANAN, MICH.

DEAR SIR:—I have been very busy here, packing up, etc. I think I will be able to ship one carload of tools about Saturday. The other tools will follow some time next week. I expect everything will be there about December 1. Will you kindly make arrangements with Pierce & Sanders for enough room to store these tools until they can give us the building. I may send one or two men to Buchanan about Monday or Tuesday to look after the unloading, etc.

Hoping this will find you in good health and awaiting an early reply, I remain

Yours Very Truly,
W. F. KOELLER.

Hunters Returning

The Buchanan hunters who have been in the northern part of the state this fall, have been extremely successful in capturing deer. Frank Lamb and Geo Richards came home Wednesday with four deer, the first that have been brought into town this season.

J. L. Ricards Jr. and Clare Coveney returned Wednesday evening, they also shot four deer. Zed and John Jarvis will not be back until Sunday, and when the rest party left the woods they had three deer.

The Chicago Market Letter

Weekly review of grain trade and exceptional market conditions furnished exclusively to the Buchanan Record by the house of Fyfe, Manson & Company, Board of Trade, Chicago.

For the present wheat buyers on future contracts are in the dumps. They are up to their necks in wheat and over their heads in doubt. Things have not turned out to date as expected. There is more wheat coming forward than any one looked for. At present writing there is little prospect of a let-up. It looks less hopeful for higher price advocates and easier sailing for the bears than at any time since wheat got over $1. last summer. Wheat traders are doing some hard thinking. Will the 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 bus. a week from Russia fill up Europe until supplies can be had from Argentina? Will fine weather give the greatest Argentine harvests on record in the next thirty days and show an exportable surplus of 100,000,000 bus. or more for Europe? Will this country be left to eat their own wheat? The trading situation turns on the large or small marketing from this on. The very high cash prices, the fine weather, anxiety of spring wheat raisers to market their low grade wheat have combined to continue the great run to market. The elevators are full, the mills are over supplied, the shipping orders on flour slack, every wheat owner looking straight down his nose and wheat prices on the toboggan. Will there be a bump soon? It is easy to oversell this year. If a break up in the weather and the drop in prices shut off the offerings from first hands will not the speculative market shoot up very fast from its present depression.

Manitoba wheat was sold to Chicago cash grain houses this week, 25c duty paid. Manitoba wheat went to milling point in New York the same way. Such wheat imports raise an argument. The bears regard it as evidence that prices are altogether too high. The bulls declare that bringing in wheat at such a cost indicates remarkable shortage of high grade grain both for milling and mixing.

Conditions are good for a rattling big trading market. The last real weak turn carried the May price back to about $1.08. It has been to $1.15 since then and back to $1.09. The Southwest is dry, very dry, and Hessian fly complaints are numerous. One Duluth authority says large receipts will run all winter. Other Northwest leaders say that country nearly drained of its wheat. The speculative trade is in doubt. High grade wheat is in good demand at fancy prices. Anything may happen soon.

Corn traders who have been fighting shadows for weeks had to meet the real substance this week. The country not only reported husking a great yield but sent the corn forward in a way that changed the whole outlook. Some new corn came from west of the river, an unusual thing at this date. Illinois roads brought a flood of new corn. Cash prices for the new $4 and no grade damp corn dropped 2 to 3c in one day and for the week lost 6 or 8c. As the chances for making contract corn for December increased that month began to break under closing out sales. The run of 500 to 700 cars a day to Chicago soon ended the talk of shortage in supply. The May price hesitates a little over 45c. It may get some rebound on period of bad weather. If so, all the believers in an overabundance from the 1904 crop will be sellers for a lower figure than yet made. Leaders in oats trade think prices low enough. Yet they say stocks are so large that it is useless to work for an advance at present.

CORRESPONDENCE

PORTAGE PRAIRIE.

Mr. Geo. W. Rough entertained the P. P. Visiting club on Wednesday of last week.

The Youth's Companion as a Gift

What other Christmas present can you choose that will give so much pleasure for so little money as a year's subscription for The Youth's Companion? The Holiday Numbers and the Calendar, a good gift in themselves, are but the foretaste of a whole year's feast to come. The mind is entertained with the numbers in hand and the imagination revels in the pleasure that each new week will bring until Christmas comes again.

If you desire to make a Christmas present of The Youth's Companion, send the publishers the name and address of the person to whom you wish to give The Companion, with $1.75 the annual subscription price, stating that it is to be a gift. The publishers will send to the address named in a parcel to be opened Christmas morning, all the remaining issues for 1904, published after the subscription is received, including the double Holiday numbers, The Companion's "Carnations" Calendar for 1905, lithographed in twelve colors and gold, and subscription certificate for the fifty-two issues of 1905

Illustrated Announcement, fully describing the principal features of The Companion's new volume for 1905, will be sent to any address free.

Better than ever are the Spiro Fall Clothes for Men and Boys

IT is a fact that "nothing succeeds like success"—and it is the success we have had in selling better made, better fitting and better wearing garments for less money than any one else that has made the standard of merit in South Bend, and brought us the greatest clothing business in the city. Of course, we have a decided advantage over other stores when it comes to prices, inasmuch as we buy for four stores at South Bend, Ind.; Springfield, Jacksonville and Quincy, Ill., enabling us to buy in very large quantities and at quite a saving in prices over others saving which we gladly share with our patrons. It's the combination of low prices with the highest possible quality that has proved the irresistible inducement.

Progress is our Motto

We give you this fall better cloth, better tailoring, better lining, better trimmings, etc.—lowering prices where prices can be lowered—in short always striving to give you a little more than you expect. This is why we keep old friends, make new ones and satisfy everyone who wears SPIRO CLOTHES. And this is why our clothes are better this fall than ever before.

Come in and see our new Fall Styles

We show an immense line of new fall suits and overcoats for men and boys.

An entirely new stock of fall hats, caps and gloves.

The largest stock in the city of fall furnishings, neckwear and underwear.

is in many respects similar to a railroad engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination, it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the old iron heap. Likewise your watch; you put it in your pocket and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken confidence, do not consult the watchmaker and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skillful attention. A reliable watch is a faithful friend; your reputation largely depends upon promptness and punctuality in your private and workaday life, and you cannot practice this virtue without a reliable timepiece. The maintenance of our business and high reputation is dependent upon the putting of our best efforts into every watch left with us. If you want your watch to be true to you, you must be true to your watch. Bring it to us today. Every watch repaired at our establishment is guaranteed for one year.

"Shove off, men! Pull hard!"

A few moments of hard rowing in the heavy sea put them some little distance away, and the boat waited under just enough way to give them command of her. The men of the ship kept their stations; calm and peaceful they also waited. The ship settled lower and lower. A man stepped hurriedly aft, and a moment later the bold and brilliant ensign of old England, which never waved over braver men, fluttered out in the heavy breeze from the wrecked masthead, the vivid red of the proud flag making a lurid dash of color against the gray sky line. The ship was lower now. Now she plunged forward; the water rose; the captain raised his hand; three hearty cheers rang out; the drums beat; the marines presented arms. She was gone! The flag streamed out bravely on the surface of the water, and then it was drawn down. A confused mass of heads and waving arms was seen in the water, and they, too, in a moment were slowly drawn down into the vortex caused by the sinking ship. The woman again hid her face in her hands; the colonel laid his arm across the shoulder of his daughter; Desborough and the men in the boat stared horribly at the spot left vacant. A deep groan broke from them; they rose on the crest of a wave, sank down again, rose once more and the wind was fair and the sail set, they simply drifted on.

One by one the sailors died. Waking from a troubled sleep of short duration, Katharine one day found Chloe's dead hand around her feet, her cold lips pressed upon them. Some of the men grew mad before they died, and raved and babbled of green fields and running brooks until the end came, and still the little boat drifted on. Few and short were the prayers the living said as day by day they cast the dead into the sea. Desborough, the resolute, with undying strength kept steadily at the helm. Once only did he speak to Katharine in words of love. As their situation grew more and more helpless, and even his resolute optimism began to fail him, he bent down and whispered in her ear:

The ship settled lower and lower.

"I would not trouble you now, Katharine, but before we die I must tell you once again that I love you. Will you believe it?"

"I will believe it," she answered dully, giving him her hand. Oh, he thought in agony, as he bent over it and kissed it, how thin and white and feeble it was!

One morning, after hope was dead, he was listlessly scanning the line of the horizon as the rising sun threw it into relief, more from habit than expectancy, when his heart almost stopped its feeble beating, for land was there before him if his strained eyes did not deceive him. Doubting the evidence of his weakened senses and fearing the delusions of a disordered imagination, he refrained from communicating his impressions to any of the others until the light of day determined the accuracy of his vision. Then he whispered the news to Katharine, the apathetic woman told to the sinking colonel, and then Desborough cried it to his dying crew. The wind sprang up at the moment, too, and in a few hours they beached the boat upon a low sandy shore, with the waves breaking gently over it in long easy rollers.

Desborough, as the strongest of the party, started inland, finding by and by a little stream of fresh water, and farther on, on higher ground, seeing a house, the smoke curling from its chimneys showing that it was inhabited. To the bubbling spring he half led, half dragged, his shipwrecked party. They drank sparingly by his direction and were refreshed, for with the cool water life and hope came back to them once more. Then he left them again on the shore of Virginia, and the people of the house welcomed and cared for the poor castaways, sharing with them their humble store with the kindly hospitality for which the land was famous. Their long voyage was at an end; their troubles were over. The colonel and Katharine would be free again; they might go home once more, and Desborough would be a prisoner.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

IT was springtime again in Virginia. The sky, its blue depths accentuated by the shifting clouds, was never more clear, wherever it appeared in the intervals of sunshine, nor the air more fresh and pure, even in that land famed for its bright skies and its mild climate, than it was this April day, which, with its sunshine and showers in unregulated alternation, seemed symbolical of life—that life of which every tender blade of grass, every venturesome flower thrusting its head above the sod, seemed to speak. There were health and strength in the gentle breeze which wantonly played with the budding leaves of the great trees, already putting forth little evangels of that splendid foliage with which they decked themselves in the full glory of summer. That merry wind which swept through the open boathouse at the end of the wharf laid a bold hand upon the curls which fell about the neck of the young girl sitting there by the door near the water on one of the benches, gazing out over the broad reaches of the quiet, ever beautiful Potomac, rippled gently by the wind under the late afternoon sun. The gallant little breeze, fragrant with balm and perfume of the trees and flowers, kissed a faint color into her pale cheek and seemed to whisper to her despondent heart in murmuring sounds that framed themselves into the immortal words "hope, hope."

The young girl had but yesterday entered upon her twentieth spring. Four months ago there had not been a merrier, lighter hearted, gayer, more coquettish young maiden in Tidewater Virginia, and today she thought as she looked down at her thin hand outlined so clearly upon the vivid cerise cloak she wore, which had dropped unheeded on the seat by her side—today she was like that man in the play of whom her father read—a grave man; no, not a man at all.

Once, in her enthusiasm, she had fondly imagined that she had possessed all those daring qualities of energy and action, those manly virtues which might have been hers by inheritance could the accident of sex have been reversed. But now she knew she was but a woman after all—so weak, so feeble, so listless. What had she left to live for? Once it was her father, then it was her country, then it was her lover. Now? Nothing! Her father, at the request of congress, would soon resume his interrupted duties in France, now become more important than ever. He was a man of the world and a soldier, a diplomat.

The hard experiences of the past few months were for him episodes, exciting truly, but only part of a lifetime spent in large adventure, soon forgotten in some other strenuous part demanded by some other strenuous exigency. But she! No, she was not a man at all, but a woman, unused to such scenes and happenings as fate had lately made her a participant in. Her father might have his country. He had not lost his love; his heart was not buried out in the depths of the cruel sea. What had become of that Roman patriotism upon which she prided herself in times past? Her country! What had changed her so? There were many answers.

There was Blodgett's grave at the foot of the hill. She had played in childhood with that faithful old soldier. Many a tale had he told her of her gallant father when, as a young man, he gayly rode away to the wars, leaving her lady mother in tears behind. She could sympathize with waiting women now and understand.

There, too, far away in another state, lay the lover of her girlhood's happy day—the bright eyed, eager, gallant, joyous lad. What good comrades they had been! How they had laughed and played and ridden and rowed and hunted and danced and flirted through the morning of life! How pleasant had been that life indeed! He was quiet now. She could no longer join in his ringing laugh; the sound of his voice was stilled. They might never play together again. Was there any play at all in life? That was another answer.

There was the white haired mother, the stately little royalist, Madam Talbot, who slept in peace on the hill at Fairview Hall, her ambitions, her hopes and her loyalty buried with her, leaving the place untenanted save by wistful memories. She, too, had gone.

Answers? They crowded thick upon her! There were the officers of the Yarmouth, Captain Vincent, Beauchamp, Hollins and all the other officers and men with whom she had come in contact on that frightful cruise. There were the heroic men who had stayed by their ship, who had seen the favored few go away in the only boat that was left seaworthy, without a murmur at being left behind, who had faced death unflinching, unrepining, sinking down in the dark water with a cheer upon their lips. There was the old sailor, too, with his unquenchable patriotism, her friend because the friend of her lover; and Philip, her brother; and there was Seymour himself. Ah, what were all the rest to him! Gone, and how she loved him!

She leaned her head upon her hand and thought of him. Here in this boat-house he had first spoken to her of his love; here she had first felt his lips touch her cheek. There, rocked gently by the light breeze, upon the water at her feet was the familiar little pleasure boat. She had not allowed any one to row her about in it since her return, in spite of much entreaty. It was this very cloak she wore that day, nearly the very hour. The place was redolent with sweet memories of happy days, though to think of them now broke her heart.

It all came back to her as it had come again and again. She briefly reviewed that acquaintance, short though it was, which had changed the whole course of her life. She saw him again as he struck prompt to defend her honor in the hall, resenting a ruffian's soiling hand stretched out to her. She saw him lying wounded and senseless there at her feet. She saw him stretched prone on that shattered deck on that ruined ship, pale, blood stained, senseless again, again unheeding her bitter cry. She would have called once more upon him save that she knew humanity has no voice which reaches out into the darkness by which it may call back those who are once gone to live beyond. She did not weep; that was a small thing, a trifle. She sat and brooded.

Four short months had changed it all. How young she had been! Would she ever be young again? How full of the joy of life! Its currents swept by her unheeded now. Why had not God been merciful to her that she could have died there upon the sea? she thought. Ah, poor humanity never learns his mercy! Perhaps it is because we have no measure by which to fathom its mighty depths. She saw herself old and lonely, forgotten, but not forgetting. But even then lacked she not opportunity. Womanlike, in spite of her constancy, she took a melancholy pleasure in the thought that there was one still who hungered for the shattered remnants of her broken heart, who lived for the sound of her voice and the glance of her eyes and the light of her face. One there was, handsome, brave, distinguished, gentle, of ancient name, assured station, ample fortune, who longed to lay all he
