"Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch."

Four stars of the near future are playing in a single cast at the Grand Opera House in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which since its initial production has been the pride of its management as the best played piece seen in America in a generation. The numerous exacting roles are fitted to their portrayals with the snugness of a glove, and the result is perfect artistry. Now it is announced that within the next season Mrs. Madge Carr Cook, the Mrs. Wiggs of the play, will be starred in a genre comedy. She has been conspicuous on the international stage for many years, and her brilliant work in a score of high class productions has abundantly qualified her for a stellar role. There are few who have been privileged to see her as Mrs. Wiggs, who would place any sympathetic role beyond her ability. Mrs. Cook as is well known is the mother of Miss Eleanor Robson, who also has triumphed internationally.

Miss Helen Lowell, the Miss Hazy of the play, who has devoted herself to the delineation of spinster types, is to be starred by Liebler & Co., in an old maid play. She has been given carte blanche to arrange with playwrights for a stellar vehicle, with Richard Harding Davis, Augustus Thomas and Clyde Fitch preferred as authors. She, however, is anxious for the one special type that she desires to play and that alone, and she has now arranged for a long talk with Mrs. Mary Wilkins-Freeman, whom she considers the one person of all others to draw for her a great spinster type. "Mrs. Wilkins-Freeman's insight into the soul of the New England spinster is nothing less than clairvoyant," declared Miss Lowell yesterday, "and I purpose having my role drawn by a master hand."

Will T. Hodge, the mirthful Mr. Stubbins of the play, will be starred in June as already announced, in his own play "Eighteen Miles from Home." His book of the same name is published in Boston and is a heavy seller. Stubbins is regarded by the shrewdest managers as being the legitimate successor of Sol Smith Russell and James A. Hearne. He has the best qualities of both and certain elements of strength which were possessed by neither.

Miss Bessie Barriscale-Lovey Mary has been offered a star role in a new play of the "In Old Kentucky" order. Her triumphs as Madge in that play are still fresh in the public memory. However, the role of Lovey Mary is very dear to her.

LINE TO BUCHANAN

MGR. SMITH INTERVIEWED

Says Contractor Townsend Could Lay the Track in Six Weeks Time

The following article is taken from yesterday's Niles Star and will be of interest to Buchanan readers:

Not only is Niles to have interurban connection with points to the north of the city, but a line will also be built from this place to Buchanan within a few months, if a franchise is granted to the Niles & Buchanan Railway company. This morning the writer had an interview with J. MacM. Smith, general manager of the Indiana Railway company, who played an important part in organizing the Niles & Buchanan Railway company, and that gentleman stated that within a few weeks, at longest Mr. Kennedy, who is president of the Indiana Railway company, and himself will come to Niles to revive the franchise matter and consult with the mayor and the members of the council, with a view to arriving at an understanding as regards the building of a bridge across the St. Joseph river, at this place. The bridge question proved a stumbling block with the old council, but there is no doubt but that the present council will be able to solve the problem, especially in view of the fact that the railway people merely ask that the city do what is fair.

Mr. Smith says that, in the event of a franchise being granted, Contractor Townsend, who is building the line from Niles to St. Joseph, can after he gets the work on the latter line well started, put a gang of men at work on the Niles-Buchanan line and complete the undertaking in short time, as there would be but comparatively little grading to be done, the abandoned roadbed of the Michigan Central, which belongs to the Niles & Buchanan Railway company, being in shape for the track to be laid. And Mr. Smith declares that Mr. Townsend could lay the track over the entire route in six weeks' time, hence the line may be in operation by September or October.

Mr. Smith says that the Niles-Buchanan line will cost from $85,000 to $90,000, and that the Niles-Buchanan Railway company is strictly independent and has no connection with the Indiana Railway company, which latter would have been the case had the old council granted the company a franchise, in which case the line would have been provided for when the Indiana Railway company recently gave a mortgage for $3,000,000. However, Mr. Smith says, the company has the money to go ahead and build the line without floating any bonds. He says Mr. Kennedy has been very busy financing other matters of late, but that just as soon as he is at leisure, the Niles-Buchanan matter will be taken up and the preliminary arrangements made.

Mr. Smith says the Indiana Railway company has bought the LaPorte and Michigan City lines, and that they will either build west from South Bend or Buchanan. In any event, the above named lines will be hooked up with the Indiana Railway company's system.

Saved by Dynamite

Sometimes, a flaming city is saved by dynamiting, a space that the fire can't cross. Sometimes, a cough hangs on so long, you feel as if nothing but dynamite would cure it. Z. T. Gray, of Calhoun, Ga., writes: "My wife had a very aggravated cough, which kept her awake nights. Two physicians could not help her, so she took Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, which eased her cough, gave her sleep and finally cured her." Strictly scientific cure for bronchitis and La Grippe. At all drug stores, price 50c and $1.00; guaranteed. Trial bottle free.

LANSING LETTER

The Form and Terms of Michigan's Primary Election Law

BE TO SETTLED THIS WEEK

Will Probably be Established-Bounty for Sparrow Killing Again Provided

Lansing, May 8, 1905.

The storm center has been in the senate, the past week, with high and low areas shifting from one side of the chamber to the other and back again, the conflicting elements winning now on this side and now on that, and a net result that leaves the situation outwardly unchanged. The disturbing force, of course, was the primary bill, which came out, and went back again where it was, and the prediction here made a week ago is still adhered to, that the bill will finally be passed by the senate not greatly altered from that which the senate received from the house. Senator Baird, as chairman of the elections committee made good his promise, which was taken perhaps as much as a threat as a promise, to bring the bill out with provision for all state officers or none. He reported the bill Wednesday, with endorsement of a majority of the committee, amended to include all state officers, and also to require a majority vote of the primaries to nominate. Senator Brown, of the committee, offered a minority report supported by two members against the majority three, but it was held to be not in order under the rules of the senate, and after an earnest struggle the report was accepted by the senate by a vote of twenty-five to six, and was made the special order for Wednesday, May 10.

The next day, however, saw the situation changed. Effective influences had been at work, and a motion of Senator Brown to take the bill from the special order precipitated the conflict anew. After a debate even more vigorous than that of the preceding day, the motion prevailed by a vote of sixteen to fourteen, and the same gentlemen moved to re-refer it to the elections committee, with instructions to report it back on Tuesday with recommendation that it be made a special order for Wednesday. This motion was carried, and so the bill stood just where it did a week before. There is this difference in the situation, that the committee now has a definite instruction as to time of report, and indication of the sentiment of the senate as to the sort of report that would be approved.

At the same session of the senate, the house bill providing a bounty for killing sparrows was passed, twenty-two to five. Also, unanimously, the house bill extending to the United Spanish war veterans the same protection against the unauthorized use of their button and badge that is afforded by law to the Grand Army of the Republic and the Loyal Legion. The senate also passed unanimously a bill to establish a state highway department, under authority of the amendment to the constitution adopted at the recent election.

The new, game bill completed by the senate committee includes what is known as the Audubon bill of the national society for prevention of cruelty to animals, which makes it a misdemeanor to kill a song bird or any non-game bird, or to wear the plumage of birds for personal adornment. A much needed protection in another direction is proposed in a bill of Representative Herkimer, of Monroe, forbidding telegraph, telephone and electric railway companies to mutilate trees along the highways without written consent of the owner of adjacent property or permission of railroad commissioner.

Representative Gordon's slot machine bill, which was taken up by the house Monday night and passed by a vote of fifty-eight to eleven, was sent to the judiciary committee in the senate, Tuesday, where it falls into unfriendly hands, and is likely to find a hospitable grave. Then the house scored, when it reached Senator Baird's Sunday observance bill on the general order Wednesday, voting to strike out all after the enacting clause which is thought to be the genteel method of killing a bill. The measure was discovered to be "loaded," so the members declared, operating to repeal existing Sunday laws. It will be remembered that an amendment to include in its prohibition pool rooms, ball grounds and theaters, as well as groceries and meat shops, was rejected when the bill was under consideration in the senate. At the succeeding session the house reconsidered the vote striking out the enacting clause, and laid the bill on the table, where it still shows some signs of life.

The house also killed a bill of its own, which it had passed in committee of the whole, the one to prohibit for three years the killing of deer in the lower peninsula, which was rejected, fifty-two to eleven. The upper peninsula members made a spirited attack upon it, as a proposition to make a park of our section, and a public hunting ground of theirs which they resented as an insult. Another measure in the interest of the fleet footed deer, as well as of the mild-eyed sheep and the juicy pig, was agreed to in house committee of the whole, Mr. Gordon's bill-raising the bounty on wolves from fifteen dollars to twenty-five dollars, and on wolf whelps from seven dollars to ten dollars.

There was considerable activity in temperance legislation last week. The Hudson bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in places of amusement and in store where groceries or other merchandise is kept, was passed by the house Wednesday morning, fifty-seven to twenty-one. Senator Cropsy introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor for any person to falsely represent to a druggist that he is over twenty-one years of age, for he purpose of inducing the druggist to furnish liquor. It was referred to judiciary and promptly reported out with recommendation that it pass, in the house, also, Representative

Lord of Detroit introduced a bill Thursday, requiring application for saloon license to be made to the county treasurer, with ten citizens of the voting district certifying to the good character of the applicant. The Hudson local option bill has been reported to the house by the liquor traffic committee, as indicated in this correspondence last week it would be, amended to apply to wards and townships, and is made the special order for next Wednesday. That committee also reported the Kelley anti treating bill, introduced two weeks ago. McKay's one thousand dollar license bill has been defeated. Finally, it is reported from Senator Glasgow that if the judiciary committee does not report out one of the cigarette bills in its charge this week, a new one will be introduced.

Spring Styles

The fabrics for men's suits were never so beautiful as now.

We show many new shades and designs in gray, soft brown, and "Continental" blues.

The shapes too are almost as novel as the fabrics, single breasted straight cut, round cut and double breasted with many variations of each style.

The shoulders are cut broad, the backs loose or close fitting; the lapels are long or broad; vents in back, some on the side and some in the middle.

They are beautifully designed, and expressing the very latest ideas, with faultless lines, and clever hand tailoring. They charm every man who tries them on.

Wreck on Pere Marquette

A wreck occurred on the Pere Marquette, about six o'clock last night two miles this side of Berrien Springs, at the Van Patten place, caused by the falling of a large rock onto the track from the high embankment above. Just as the train approached the spot where the wreck occurred the engineer and fireman saw the rock fall, but the train was so close that it was impossible to stop it in time to avoid the accident, although every effort was made to do so. The engineer and fireman jumped from the engine, the fireman, Chas. Fuller, landing in such a manner as to severely strain his foot. Aside from this no other injury is reported.

The force of the collision was so great that the locomotive was raised up bodily and placed crossways of the track, the tender and coaches did not leave the track.

A wrecking crew was at once sent to the scene of the accident, but owing to the peculiar location of the wreck, the work of clearing it up was slow, at and noon today the engine was gotten back on the track. On one side is a high embankment, while on the other the bank slopes down 40 to 50 feet.

Two Injured in Explosion

Two men were seriously injured, the smelting furnace demolished and a portion of the foundry damaged by an explosion at the Truscott boat manufacturing company's plant at St. Joseph late Tuesday, while a crucible of molten brass was being lifted from the fire.

The injured are: Gus Mutz, residing on Pine street; right ankle broken, head badly cut, and body bruised. Injuries serious. Henry Scherwer, residing on Court street; right leg severely hurt and body bruised.

The explosion was caused by the formation of gas from coke and occurred just as the lid had been lifted from the crucible containing the molten brass. The liquid metal fell back into the furnace, and fortunately no one was burned by the flow. The force of the outburst demolished the furnace and tore away a portion of the brick wall. Several workmen were stunned by the explosion.—News Palladium.

Regular meeting of the Royal Neighbors will be held Friday evening. All officers are requested to be present for the practice of initiatory work.

Spring Blossoms.

Apple blossoms sweet and fair
Shed your fragrance to the air.
Sweetly swaying to and fro
In your pride of colors rare.

Oh! you pretty futile things,
My heart is full of peace and love
Whenever I see you blossom, Oh!
I love, I love, I love you so.

I'd like to fold you to my heart
And never never from you part,
I'd watch so tenderly your leaves
That ere no harm should you invade.

I'd kiss and fondle all you sleep
And then so quiet all would seem
That no harsh words could e'er disturb
To wake you from your pleasant dreams.

No blossoms yet that ever grew
Has had the charm for me as you,
I hope when done with earthly toil
To o'er me then your blossoms strew.

And then to close the coffin lid
Upon us both so calm and still
To thus awake in a brighter world
Where you can blossom undisturbed.

A MILLION POUNDS STEEL

Size of Order Placed for the Electric Road

Fifteen cars of steel, or 1,101,050 pounds' has been ordered by the South Bend & Southern Michigan electric railroad for the huge bridge that will be thrown across the St. Joseph river at Berrien Springs. Shipment of a portion of this has already been made and the freight on the total amount will reach $1,379. A small fortune will be expended on this single span across one of the largest rivers in Michigan.

The structure is to be nearly a quarter of a mile in length, crossing the river at one of its most picturesque points.

Up in the former county seat the town is filling up with supplies and business looking strangers drop into the village now and then and poke about in odd corners mysteriously, all of which is causing the citizens to take a brighter view of life than hitherto.

It is a prevailing opinion that not many days will elapse before work on the big bridge below the town will be begun. Cement for the concrete work has already arrived and a number of buildings belonging to the Berrien Springs Canning company have been rented by McSmith and will soon be in his possession.

The annual meeting of the St. Joseph River Baptist association, which concluded a two days session Friday evening, was one the most enthusiastic and the largest in point of attendance ever held by the association. Rev. A. B. Strickland, pastor of the Niles church, was honored with selection as delegate to the World's Baptist congress, which will convene in London, England, in July 1905. This is the first time the Baptists have arranged for a world meeting and it is expected, therefore, to be a notable event.

Up in the twin cities and the outlying territory a pretty custom has been established that finds its inspiration in the miles and miles of fruit orchards that make of this section of Berrien county the fruit garden of the United States. So pleasing was the sight of miles of blossoms that ten years ago it was agreed among leading citizens and fruit growers that one day to be known as Blossom Sunday and this the first Sunday in May, should be christened and set apart as a day in which the annual visitation to the country and orchards should be made. As a result thousands of people go out every year to see the beautiful sights and drink in the fragrance that burdens the air which is exhaled by the blossoms, which later develop into a fruit crop worth fully six millions of dollars.

corpse who went in the disguise of a jester to be near her, to win her for himself—and then declare his identity. Well may you look scornful. Love—it is not such a romantic quality—at court! A momentary pastime, perhaps, but a deep passion—a passion stronger than rank, than death, than all!”

Above the face of her whom he addressed his glance rested upon Jacqueline, and he passed. The princess could but note, and a derisive expression crept about her mouth.

“Once I would have told you all,” he resumed. “That night—when you were lady of the lists. But—”

He broke off abruptly, wishing to spare her the bitter memory of her own acts. Did she remember that day, when she had been queen of the chapel, when she had crowned him whom now death and dishonor had overtaken?

“The rest, madam, you know—save this.” And, stooping, he picked up the ornament that had dropped from Louis of Hochfels’ neck. “Here, princess, is the miniature you sent me. He who used you so ill stole it from me in prison; through it he recognized the fool for the duke; with an assassin’s blow he struck me down.”

A moment he looked at that fair painted semblance. Did it recall the past too vividly? His face showed no pain, only tranquillity. His eye was rather that of a connoisseur than a lover. He smiled gently; then held it to her.

Mechanically she let the portrait slip through her fingers, and it fell to the moistened grass near the form of him who had wedded her. Then she drew back her dress so that it might not touch the body at her feet.

“Have I your majesty’s permission to withdraw?” she said coldly.

“If you will not accept our poor escort to the king,” answered Charles.

“My ladies and myself will dispense with so much honor, sire,” she returned.

“Such service as we can command is at your disposal, madam,” he repeated.

“It is not far distant to the chateau, sire.”

“As you will,” said the emperor.

With no further word she bowed deeply, turned and, slowly retracing her steps, mounted her horse and rode away, followed by her maids and the troopers of France.

As she disappeared, without one backward glance, the duke gazed quickly toward the spot where Jacqueline had been standing. He remembered the young girl had heard his story. He had caught her eyes upon him while he was telling it. Very deep, serious, judicial, they seemed. Were they weighing his past infatuation for the princess, holding the scales to his acts? Swiftly he turned to her now, but she had vanished. Save for rough nurses, companions in arms, moving here and there among the wounded, he and the emperor stood alone. In the bushes a bird which had left a nest of fledgelings returned and caroled among the boughs, a clarifying melody

He looked at that fair painted semblance.

after the mad passions of the day. The elder man noted the direction of the duke’s glance, the yellow ribbon on his arm.

“So it was a jestress, not a princess, you found, thou dreamer,” he said, half ironically.

“The daughter of the constable of Dubrois, sire,” was the reply.

The emperor nodded. “The family colors have changed,” he observed dryly.

“With fortune, sire.”

“Truly,” said Charles, “fortune is a jestress. She had like to play on us this day. But your fever?” he added abruptly, setting his horse’s head toward camp.

“Is gone, sire,” answered the duke, riding by his side.

“And your injuries?”

“Were so slight they are forgotten.”

“Then is the breath of battle better medicine than nostrum or salve. In youth, ’tis the sword point; in age, turn we to the hilt cross. But this maid—have you won her?”

The young man changed color. “Won her, sire?” he replied. “That I know not. No word has passed.”

“No word,” said the emperor doubtfully. “A knight errant and a castle-less maid!”

The duke vouchsafed no answer.

“Humph!” added Charles. “Thus do our plans come to naught. If you got her and wore her, what end would be served?”

“No end of state, perhaps, sire.”

“Why,” observed the monarch, “the state and the faith—what else is there? But go your way. How smooth it may be no man can tell.”

“Is the road like to be rougher than it has been, sire?”

“The maid belongs to France,” answered Charles, “and France belongs to the king.”

“The king!” exclaimed the duke fiercely.

Involuntarily had they drawn rein in the shade of a tiny thicket overlooking the valley. Even from this slight exercise, bowed and weary appeared the emperor’s form. The hand which controlled his steed trembled, but the lines of his face spoke of unweakened sinew of spirit, the iron grip of a will that only death might loosen.

“The king!” repeated the young man. “He is no king of mine nor hers. To you, sire, only I owe allegiance or my life, at your need.”

A gentler expression softened the emperor’s features as a gleam of sunshine forces itself into the somberest forest depths.

“We have had our need,” he said. “not long since.” His glance swept the outlook below. “Heaven watches over monarchs,” he added, turning a keen, satirical look on the other, “but through the vigilance of our earthly servitors.”

The duke’s response was interrupted by the appearance below of a horseman, covered with dust, riding toward them and urging his weary steed up the incline with spur and voice. Deliberately the monarch surveyed the newcomer.

“What make you of yonder fellow?” he said. “He is not of the guard nor of the pretender’s following.”

“His housings are the color of France, sire.”

“Then can I make a shrewd guess of his purpose,” observed the monarch.

As he spoke the horseman drew nearer and a moment later had stopped before the emperor.

“A message from the king, sire!” exclaimed the man, dismounting and kneeling to present a formidable looking document, with a great disk of lead through which a silken string was drawn.

Breaking the seal, the emperor opened the missive. “It is well,” he said at length, folding the parchment. “The king was even on his way to the chateau to await our coming when he met Caillette and received our communication. Go you to the camp”—to the messenger—“where we shall presently return.” And as the man rode away, “The king begs we will continue our journey at our leisure,” he added, “and announces he will receive us at the chateau.”

“And have I your permission to return to Friedwald, sire?” asked the other in a low voice.

“Alone?”

“Nay; I would conduct the constable’s daughter there to safety.”

“And thus needlessly court Francis’ resentment? Not yet.”

The young man said no word, but his face hardened.

“Tut!” said the emperor dryly, although not unkindly. “Where’s fealty now? Fine words, fine words! A slender chit of a maid, forsooth, without lands, without dowry, with naught save herself.”

“Is she not enough, sire?”

“Francis is more easily disarmed in his own castle by his own hospitality than in the battlefield,” observed Charles, without replying to this question. “In field have we conquered him; in palace hath he conquered himself and our friendship. Therefore will you and the maid return in our train to the king’s court.”

“At your order, sire.”

But the young man’s voice was cold.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THUS it befell that both Robert of Friedwald and Jacqueline accompanied the emperor to the little town, the scene of their late adventures, and that they who had been fool and jocularist rode once more through the street they had never expected to see again. The flags were flying; cannon boomed. They advanced beneath wreaths of roses, the way paved with flowers. Standing at the door of his inn, the landlord dropped his jaw in amazement as his glance fell upon the jestress and her companion behind the great emperor himself. His surprise, too, was abruptly voiced by a ragged, wayworn person not far distant in the crowd, whose fingers had been busy about the pockets of his neighbors; fingers which had a deft habit of working by themselves while his eyes were bent elsewhere and his lips joined in the general acclaim; fingers which, like antennae, seemed to have a special intelligence of their own. Now those long weapons of abstraction and appropriation ceased their deft work. He became all eyes.

“Good luck! Who may the noble gentleman behind the emperor be?” he exclaimed. “Surely ’tis the duke’s fool.”

“And ride with the emperor?” said a burly citizen at his elbow. “’Tis thou who art the fool.”

“Truly I think so,” answered the other. “I see, believe, but may not understand.”

At that moment the duke’s gaze in passing chanced to rest upon the plucked and overcurious face of the scamp student. A gleam of recollection shone in his glance. “Gladus gemmatus!” cried the scholar, and a smile on the noble’s countenance told him he had heard. Turning the problem in his mind, the vagrant philosopher forgot about pilfering and the procession itself, when a soldier touched him roughly on the shoulder.

“Are you the scamp student?” said the trooper.

“Now they’ll hang me with these spoils in my pockets,” thought the scholar. But as bravely as might be he replied, “The former I am; the latter I would be.”

Moore's Stoves Always Please

Is She Guessing?

No! Moore's Oven-Thermometer shows exactly the heat of the oven. Its use does away with guessing, and makes baking a sure thing. It takes 240 degrees to bake sponge cake. Ten degrees either way and the cake is spoiled. Can you always guess it close enough? Moore's Thermometer tells in plain figures. Saves a lot of uncertainty and never makes a mistake. A pleasure to show it to you. Also the Hinged Top, Controller Damper and the many other points in which Moore's Ranges excell all others.

Terrific Race With Death

“Death was fast approaching,” writes Ralph F. Fernandez, of Tampa Fla., describing his fearful race with death, “as a result of liver trouble and heart disease, which had robbed me of sleep and of all interest in life. I had tried many different doctors and several medicines, but got no benefit, until I began to use Electric Bitters. So wonderful was their effect, that in three days I felt like a new man, and today I am cured of all my troubles.” Guaranteed by all druggists; price 50c.
