Pleasantly Surprised

By His Many Friends at the Home of His Parents on Front Street.

A few pleasant, social hours were enjoyed on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Clevenger on Front street. The occasion being a little surprise and farewell to their son Walter, who has accepted a position in Appleton, Wis.

A host of friends thronged the house, while he was purposely detained elsewhere. On his return, he was met by smiles and words of joy, which had a tinge of sadness.

The evening was spent in social converse and song until a late hour. When Elder Shook with a few earnest kindly words in behalf of his friends, presented him with a beautiful chair, as a slight token of appreciation and esteem. His reply was heartfelt and sincere.

Refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and candies were served.

At the moment of parting, we found it hard to say goodbye. He will be greatly missed. No one can fill his place, but we bid him God speed. As we looked on his earnest face and heard his request for prayer for Divine guidance, we feel sure that he by the grace given unto him, stand firm, and dignified whatever position he may have to fill, and adorn his profession by a well ordered life and a Godly conversation

Press Notes for October Designer

Prominent among the pleasing features of the Designer for October is the opening chapter of "Jiu Jitsu training for Women," by Saki Sugaki, of Tokio, Japan. Much has been written about Jiu Jitsu, but this is the first time its value has been set forth as a promoter of feminine health and good looks. Japan and Russia are closely connected in public interest these days, therefore it is not out of place to find in the same number of the magazine "Jiu Jitsu Training" and "Housekeeping in the Land of the Czar," of which latter Laura B. Starr writes most entertainingly. "The Circulating Library" is the suggestion Bertha Hasbrook makes this month, "In the interest of Bread Winning." To a book loving woman nothing could be more congenial, especially as the idea includes an opportunity for obtaining fresh air while thus making a livelihood. Mary Kilsyth tells of "Wall Coverings," and Jessie Garwood Fritts continues her pleasant and instructive series "At the Sign of the Silver-smith." Two short stories are supplied, "The Man Across the Aisle," by Florence Seyler Thompson, and "Pop-Mommy Jim," a tale for little folks, by Clarissa Dixon. Alexander Hume Ford gives pleasant glimpses into the lives of "Children as Art Models," and illustrates his text with charming photographs of tots who are famous for their grace and beauty. J. L. Harbour contributes one of his humorous monologues "The Way of a Woman," and Eleanor Marchant tells how to give "A Witch Party for Halloween." In work for deft fingers there are "Chinese Embroidery," "Lace Making," "Knitting," and "What can be Made from Cigar Boxes," "Points on Dressmaking" instructs how to make collars, cuffs, and pockets for coats and jackets and the "Millinery Lesson" explains the making of an evening hat. A special fashion article illustrates coats and jackets for autumn and winter, and the kitchen kingdom supplies, among other delicious recipes, directions for making a wedding cake. The fashions for this issue are most attractive advance styles for the coming autumn and winter.

SEPTEMBER, 8, 1905.

The observance of last Monday, Sept. 4, as labor day, was more general and more noteworthy in Michigan than ever before. There are many good reasons why the laboringmen of every state in the union should be in a celebrating mood at this time, but the laboring men of Michigan have some especial reasons for gratification and jubilation. Our state's crops have this year been good, orders for the products of our factories and mills have been large and satisfactory, wages are as high as the highest in the state's entire history and the outlook for the coming winter and the coming year contains no necessary element that need give any fear or trouble to Michigan's grand army of workingmen and working women.

The legislature granted an appropriation of $55,000 for a dormitory building to replace Wells Hall at the Agricultural College, Lansing, destroyed by fire during that session, and the building is now in progress, but will not be completed for use during this college year, and the students will have to draw more heavily for accommodations upon the city and the village that is rapidly growing up around the college grounds, three miles east of the city. In spite of the large expansion of of both city and village, there is a steadily increasing pressure for living accommodations, which will be now more pronounced than ever.

Half, or less, of the $60,000,000 spent annually in "improving" the roads of this country might be spent to much better advantage in sending all the highway commissioners on an educational trip to Europe, where the people know how to make and maintain public roads.

The annual meeting of Sylvia Chapter, No. 74 O. E. S. occurs on Wednesday evening, Sept. 13 for the election of officers, receiving reports, and other annual business. By order of Worthy Matron.

REUNION OF FAMOUS RAIDERS

Survivors of The Andrews Party Will Meet at Chattanooga

An incident which will be of unusual interest all over the country will take place during the regimental reunions at Chickamauga Park and Chattanooga, which are to be held September 17-19, in the reunion of the survivors of Andrews' Raiders, who on the morning of April 12, 1862, ran off with the engine, "General," which now has a resting place in the Union Depot at Chattanooga.

The Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway has made arrangements to bring all the survivors of that picked squad of men to Chattanooga on that date. It will be seen from the following list that the men will come from a considerable distance to attend the reunion, which will be a unique occasion.

The survivors of the eight men who escaped from the military prison at Atlanta were: William J. Knight, a former member of Company E, Twenty-first Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and now a resident of Stryker, O.; John R. Porter, of the same regiment, Company G, and now residing at Winfall, Ind.; Wilson W. Brown, likewise of the Twenty-first Ohio, Company F, and who now lives at Blissfield, Mich.; Daniel A. Dorsey, formerly of the Thirty-third Ohio, Company H, and now living at Enid, Okla.; Jacob Parrott, of Kenton, O., formerly a member of Company K, Thirty-third Ohio, and William Bensing, of McComb, O., who belonged to Company K, Twenty-first Ohio, were among the number paroled.

The conductor of the train at the time of the raid, Capt. W. A. Fuller, now a resident of Atlanta, and who with Anthony Murphy, are the survivors of the pursuing party, will also be present.

The episode which the reunion will commemorate was one of the most daring of the many exploits which fill the pages of a history of the war between the States.

On the morning of April 12, 1862, Capt. W. A. Fuller left Atlanta in charge of the passenger train on the Western & Atlantic Railroad. When he reached Marietta a party of strangers, dressed in citizens' clothes, boarded the train and paid their fares to different points. They claimed to be refugees from the Yankee lines joining the Confederate army, but were disguised soldiers, volunteers from Sill's brigade, Mitchell's corps, U. S. A., commanded by James J. Andrews, a citizen of Flemingsburg, Ky.

At Big Shanty the train stopped for breakfast, and most of the passengers and train crew left the train. The passengers had taken their seats at the table, Captain Fuller facing the train. He saw through the window some strangers get on the engine in an excited manner and start off rapidly. He remarked to his engineer Jeff Cain, and Anthony Murphy, then foreman of the western and Atlantic shops, that "some one who has no right to do so has gone off with our train." All three arose and hurried out of the house just as the engine passed out of sight.

Captain Fuller, Murphy and Cain commenced pursuit on foot. They soon secured a hand-car, and in spite of the obstructions placed on the track by the raiders, made rapid progress. At Etowah they found the engine "Yonah," and the pursuit then was at such a rapid pace that serious damage to the railroad by the raiders was impossible.

The General was abandoned by the raiders at a point about half way between Ringgold and Graysville, on account of lack of fuel and the close pursuit of Fuller and his party. When the fugitives abandoned the engine their leader said, "Every one take care of himself," and they left in squads. Four of them were run down in the fork of the Chickamauga River at Graysville, and one was forcibly persuaded to tell who they were. The militia, mounted on fresh horses, scoured the woods that afternoon, and in a few days the last of the fugitives were captured. Later there was a trial by military court, and eight of the number were executed in Atlanta as spies, six were paroled to City Point, Va., and eight escaped from prison in Atlanta.

The object of the raid was to burn the bridges on the line of the Western and Atlantic Railroad and thus cut off the Confederate army from its base of supplies. There were twenty-two men engaged in the enterprise, twenty from Ohio, and two from Kentucky. They were to receive $60,000 in the event of success. Prominent among the pursuers were—Smith, Steve Stokely, Peter Bracken, F. Cox, A. Martin and H. Haney.

The survivors of the Andrews' Raiders have erected a monument in the Chickamauga National Park to the participants in the raid. Two monuments with tablets have also been erected by the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway, one marking the spot where the General was captured and the other where it was abandoned. A monument has also been erected in front of the General where it stands today as a monument to American valor. On top of the monument erected in the park is a miniature representation of the General.

Weekly Climate and Crop Bulletin

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 4, 1905.

The mean daily temperature for the week ended September 4 was 67.4 degrees, or 3.8 degrees above the normal; the average precipitation was 1.00 inch, or 0.47 of an inch above the normal; the sunshine averaged 47 per cent of the possible amount.

Most of the week has been very favorable for the maturity of corn, beans and buckwheat and the progress of field work. The heavy rains of Saturday and Sunday have been detrimental to late potatoes and checked the early bean harvest, but have put the soil in excellent condition for plowing and seed-bed preparation. The abundant moisture is considered detrimental to fruit of all kinds; the peach crop, which is a very large one, would be much improved by ten days of dry weather during its final maturity.

Corn has matured quite rapidly and continues very promising. Beans are well podded and indicate generally good yields. Early beans are now being harvested. Buckwheat is filling and maturing nicely and in the more northerly counties being harvested. Potato blight is becoming quite general and the prospect for good yields, except on high and light soil, is rather poor. Plowing for winter wheat and rye is well advanced in most counties and early rye seeding has begun. A few correspondents report wheat seeding.

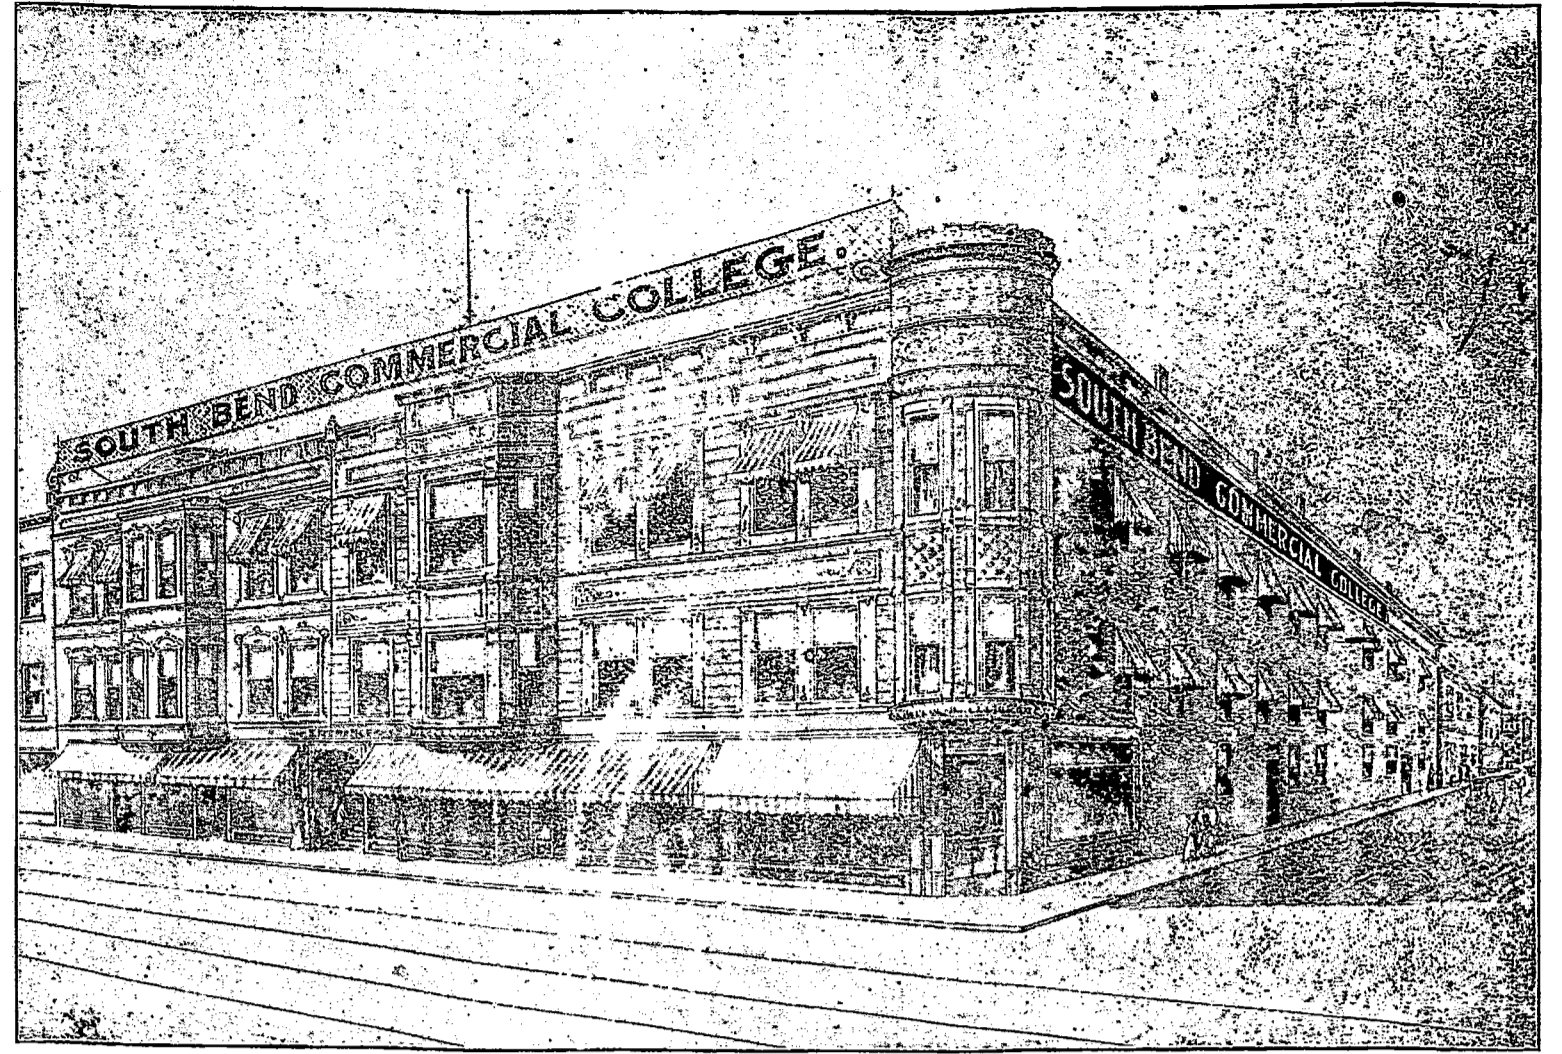

The apple crop will be a poor one. Plums are quite abundant, but rotting badly. Peaches are very abundant.

C. F. SCHNEIDER, Section Director.

Kleene Gawn (making his party call) "May I—er—come again tomorrow evening?"

Gladdie Kister—"Certainly. You—er—have some other engagement for this evening, perhaps?"

"Do you love me?" the fond lover cried to the maiden who sat by his side, "First I must learn how much you can earn," Said she, "before I can decide."

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. State Institution Managed and Governed by Boys and Girls

INTERESTING EXPERIMENT

Visit of our Correspondent to the New York Home of the Juvenile "Citizens"

The writer had the privilege of visiting last week an institution for boys and girls which is of most remarkable interest. It is the George Junior Republic, located at Freeville New York, a small village midway between Ithaca and Cortland. The "Republic" occupies a large and beautiful farm, once the boyhood home of William R. George, who a dozen years ago was living in New York city, and with his wife was actively interested in mission Sunday schools, a number of which he superintended. They would come up to the old home on the farm for summer vacations, bring some of their waifs with them for fresh air outing; and out of that was developed in his mind the idea of a permanent colony for boys and girls in need of more wholesome influences and better opportunities to develop the good that is in them. Ten years ago the George Junior Republic was established, with the George farm as its home, and Mr. and Mrs. George as resident directors, and necessary assistants and teachers. It is incorporated, with prominent citizens of the state in the directorate.

The "Republic" is a republic in fact. Its citizens are the boys and girls who have been committed to it as juvenile delinquents by the courts, as boys and girls are committed to our Industrial School for Boys and our Industrial Home for Girls; but there they mingle freely on terms of equality, as in public society. The citizenship also embraces boys and girls entrusted to the institution by parents who find themselves unable to govern them. These "citizens" elect officers and administer the laws, maintain order, conduct public and private business, and receive through their own institutions the rewards of industry and the penalties of transgression just as in the larger community outside, and with more certainty. They carry on various businesses besides the work of the farm, and receive regular wages for labor and for the half day's school attendance required of each one. This currency is aluminum coin, and they conduct a bank in which the "citizen" carry deposit accounts and effect loans. They publish a monthly paper called The Junior Republic Citizen, and operate a considerable printing office, with a Taylor cylinder press. At the time of our visit they were printing blank warrants for the use of their court. There is a store at which they buy clothing and other needed articles with their currency; a bakery where they produce goods for the outside market; a cabinet shop where they make much of their own furniture; a laundry, and three hotels furnishing three grades of board according to the resources and the tastes of the patrons. The boys may earn a dollar and a half a day, and board at the best hotel if they choose, or if they earn but a dollar they cannot pay the price and must go second class or third class according to their circumstances. Their financial and social standing in the republic depends upon themselves.

This is brought out prominently in their execution of the laws; and it is remarkable to see the vigor and the dignity with which they do that considering that it is done by a community of boys and girls from twelve to fifteen years of age. It was our good fortune to hit upon one of the regular terms of court, which occur Wednesday evenings. The first business was an examination to develop the culprit who had poured a bottle of quicksilver into the hat of an old gentleman who was visiting one of the school rooms. The judge was a boy of eighteen, whose decisions were prompt and business like, and all the proceedings were as dignified and serious as in any court. And the court is by no means a joke or a lark. One boy was arraigned on a charge of trespass to which he pleaded guilty, and so there was no disclosure of its nature; but the judge in pronouncing sentence said it was very serious, though in consideration of the prisoner's good record he would be lenient. He sentenced him to pay a fine of nine dollars, and that the boy must pay out of his earnings.

Adjoining the well arranged court room was the jail, containing a block of sixteen steel cells with two cots to each, all empty when we saw them, the prisoners being in school; but the clerk said there were twenty-two then committed, and we saw them marched in from supper by the officers while court was in session. Some of them are in for periods of several months. Excepting the jail, there is no unusual restraint, but runaways are pursued and brought back by the boy officer. One little fellow not long ago was sent to Boston to arrest a fugitive. He found his man, and brought him back in handcuffs. At Albany they were taken in charge by the police, who thought the appearance of two unattended boys handcuffed together looked suspicious. The young officer had no papers, and only upon identification by distance telephone, and showing himself possessed of the key to the lions, was he allowed to proceed with his charge.

There are now one hundred and twenty-eight resident "citizens," two fifths of whom are girls, besides thirty-one by permission living outside in employment. The buildings including a chapel and library and school rooms, form a village of themselves, and cottages are distributed over the farm. A highway runs through the farm, and the Lackawanna railroad runs along its rear and the "Junior Republic Bus" attends the eight daily trains, and carries passengers wherever they wish to go. The cost of living is borne by the county or the person sending a youth there, and donations furnish means for carrying forward improvements, but the individual citizens must still pay in republic currency the cost of what they consume, even of articles that may be sent for them by their friends. And, now, does it work—this novel and daring experiment? It seems to. The Republic is now ten years old it has steadily grown, the state and the people continue to commit juveniles to its care, and the opinions of neighboring people and communities are favorable. More than half of the members have money in the bank, as shown in the census report published in their paper, and many have cash, personal property, and loans, and only seven have debts the total accumulations being near three thousand dollars. The theory is captivating, and the fruits, so far as seen, justify the theory. The George Junior Republic is worth studying by all who have at heart the rescue of imperiled youth.

BORTON.

The Question Nowaday.

The question of fuel nowadays is such an important one, owing to the price of coal, wood, coke, or in fact any fuel that will produce heat, that the heating of the average house in this climate is quite a serious problem and one that can't be too carefully investigated. In every city, there are of course, many different methods of home heating and to a certain extent the cost of fuel in that vicinity still determines the selection of the heating apparatus for the homes.

It is a curious fact that nothing has yet been discovered in economy of fuel or heatful heat to equal a really first class furnace, but it is also to be regretted that many of the furnaces now on the market are furnaces in name only and are not constructed with that thoroughness and care that should make them fuel savers as well as heaters.

The manufacturers of the Round Oak stove—which is the most popular stove in the world—are making a furnace now that is acknowledged the best furnace that has ever been put on the market. Unquestionably, there would be no furnace of any other make sold today were this furnace sold as cheaply as any of those on the market now. But the Round Oak people are a very old and reliable concern; they have a splendid business in stoves and if they cannot sell a furnace of good quality at a fair price they don't want to sell any furnaces at all. This is a rather unusual stand for a furnace manufacturer to take as there is so much competition in the furnace business, but it perhaps accounts for the wonderful success of this Round Oak Furnace which is certainly the best furnace that has ever been built in this country.

Mr. E. S. Roe, the local agent here, reports that every Round Oak Furnace that he put in this vicinity has led to more sales and that he has yet to hear of a dissatisfied customer who has purchased a Round Oak Furnace.

HUBBY DID NOT HOLD HER

Spouse Thought He Would Silence His Wife with a Query, But Effort Is Vain.

She is a clubwoman with a sense of humor, but the other day when she decided to attend a federation session in another town she had some misgivings, says the Chicago Record-Herald. She told her husband that she was possessed of a premonition of evil and cautioned him to be especially careful of the children. He merely laughed and said that he guessed they would be all right; then remarked jocosely: "If you get worried, you might telegraph."

In the evening of her second day away she did worry and sent this telegram to her husband: "How are the children?"

The messenger boy came with the dispatch just as the man was about to retire. He read it, smiled and then penned this answer: "They're all right. Why?"

"I guess that will hold her for awhile," he said to himself, and then he went to bed.

He felt so good over what he considered to be the shrewdness of his reply that he laughed to himself, forgetting for the time being the old adage: "He laughs best who laughs last."

It was three o'clock in the morning when he was aroused by the violent ringing of his doorbell. Slipping into bathrobe and slippers, he went to the door and admitted a young Mercury, who handed out a yellow envelope. It was torn open quickly, read, and then the husband kicked himself back to bed as a recollection of his question in his message to his wife impressed itself upon his sleepy consciousness. Her reply was in one word: "Because."

Extravagant Monarch.

Within the limits of his ability the sultan of Morocco is among the most extravagant of monarchs. He has spent in the few years since he took up the reins of government not only the whole revenue of his country but also the saving of his predecessors. Few of the things he bought gave him any pleasure. Photography amused him for a time. A camera of gold at $10,000 came from London; 10,000 francs' worth of photographic paper arrived in one day from Paris.
