ODD FORM OF GRAFTING.

Curious Effects in Woods That Have Been Secured by the Mexicans.

Some owners of forests of valuable woods are trying experiments in the southern part of Mexico with the walnut trees. It is not generally known outside the trade, says Pacific Fruit World, that there are many kinds of walnut woods and that only part of them have so far been considered valuable from a commercial point of view. Now the scheme is to make these less valuable or worthless walnuts commercially valuable. And the process is a curious one.

It consists of opening the roots of the trees and inserting one or more nuts, which are quite small, from the best varieties of walnut trees. It is said that these nuts, which are carefully sealed in with wax or a stuff, waterproof stopper, impart a new or closer grain and coloring to the tree. The southern Indians of Mexico have for centuries been in the habit of securing curious effects in coloring on fine woods by inserting in the above manner nuts of other trees into the roots of the living tree. An enterprising planter in Tabasco has been following out this Indian idea with curious results. He mentioned this to other haciendados, and now several of them are experimenting with the coarser kinds of walnut trees with encouraging results.

SINGING DEMORALIZING.

Too Many People Who Have No Voices Insist on Appearing in Public.

"Far too many people want to sing and try to do it, with the result that our ears are tortured and demoralized, and year by year the art of singing is dying out."

In the above words John F. Runciman, the musical critic, sums up his views on the decaying art of singing.

"A man without fingers," he says, "does not try to play the piano; one without legs does not try to ride a bicycle, but anyone who can get out the most lamentable croak thinks himself or herself justified in getting up in a drawing room and howling sentimental balderdash.

"A society should be formed for the suppression of singing save in the strictest privacy. It would meet with the most violent opposition from the fashionable singing masters, at whose doors you may see on any fine day in the season rows of carriages.

"They wait until stylish ladies without voice receive 20 minutes of oily flattery and absurd instruction from a man who knows nothing of the voice, nothing of music, nothing of the art of singing, but rakes in guineas all the day long.

"The fashionable teacher of singing is the enemy of mankind and a curse to music."

WHAT FIRST STOVE WAS.

Simply the Hut or Cave in Which Primitive Man Made His Dwelling.

The most important uses of fire were taught by fire itself, writes S. E. Forman, in "Stories of Useful Inventions" in St. Nicholas. As the primitive man stood near the flames of the burning tree and felt their pleasant glow he learned that fire may add to bodily comfort; and when the flames swept through a forest and overtook a deer and baked it, he learned that fire might be used to improve the quality of his food. The hint was not lost. He took a burning torch to his cave or hut and kindled him a fire on his floor of earth. His dwelling filled with smoke, but he could endure the discomfort for the sake of the fire's warmth, and for the sake of the toothsome of the cooked meats. After a time a hole was made in the roof of the hut, and through this hole the smoke passed out. Here was the first stove. The primitive stove was the entire house; the floor was the fireplace and the hole in the roof was the chimney. The word "stove" originally meant "a heated room." So that if we should say that at first people lived in their stoves we would say that which is literally true.

A BURRO AND A THISTLE.

Favorite Food of the Diminutive Burden Bearer and How Obtained.

The Rocky mountain burro, one of the most sagacious of animals, seeks the thistle as a favorite food, and the pungent spines with which it protects its leaves at every angle are doubtless a recognition on its part of this fondness of grazing animals for it. Few experiences of frontier-life are more amusing, says Country Life in America, than to watch the donkey's attack upon a large bull thistle. He walks about it, seeking for a favorable opening, projects his lip gingerly against its spines and jerks back as he feels its prick. He surveys it pensively for a moment or two and then slowly raises his foot and strikes it, pausing to watch "the effect of the blow. He then perhaps strikes it from the other side and watches again. The blows become rapid, and at length it is broken down and thoroughly trampled, after which it is consumed to the last vestige.

Snappy Styles for Young Men

Adler's offering in suits built especially for young men who like to keep abreast or a little ahead of the current styles, is most attractive. We do not wait until styles become common before we show them, but at all times are first in the city to introduce the latest fads. Look at this illustration of one of our popular young men's suits, notice all the little kinks that help to make it stylish, see the way it hangs, etc.

Try an Adler suit this spring and you can't help but be well pleased.

The two houses of Congress continue, session after session, to do some heavy batting on a pure food bill. But always manage to keep at a safe distance from the home plate.

Government inspection of meat products may be more of a success now that Dr. Roosevelt is behind the microscope. Pure food will be quite as much of a boon to the country as pure politics.

The adulteration of food products, and uncleanness in handling them, are matters that no enlightened government neglects. Sanitation requires that they be treated with vigilance carefully maintained all the time.

A recent American visitor to Japan says it is a country without beggars or drunkards, where all are polite and good natured, and everybody works. It will have to be concluded that the Japs are among our most interesting and original neighbors.

State Items

Ex-Gov. Bliss' coop of choice chickens with pedigrees, was raided by Jesse Waldron, colored, of Saginaw. The thief with the birds in a bag was pursued a mile by a night watchman and was captured. He dropped his loot and the chickens scattered and Mr. Bliss has not a fowl left. The thief was jailed for 20 days.

The death of Mrs. Willard Linesay of Eureka is believed to have been from grief for her two children, Maude, the only daughter, overtaxed her strength in riding a bicycle to escape a storm and died after a lingering illness. Glenn, the only son, aged 21, fell down an elevator shaft in a Grand Rapids store where he was employed, and was killed. The husband and father surviving alone, is a comparatively young man.

Patrick Carroll, and old soldier, of Grand Rapids, tried to cross in front of a street car Friday morning and was crushed to death. The old man thought it was a Soldiers' Home car and made a desperate effort to get on the right side of the street to signal it. He had been drinking. He was frightfully mangled, one leg being jammed into the motor and the flesh torn from it. He was found under the rear trucks and the car had to be lifted with jacks before his body could be taken out.

Lansing's ice supply is badly depleted, according to the statements of the ice dealers themselves, who declare that they will not have enough ice to last them during the season. In fact, some day that a long period of real hot weather would consume the supply in no time. It is not known as to the exact date which the newly formed company to manufacture artificial ice will commence operations, but it is understood that it intends to begin before the summer is over, if possible. This would relieve the situation somewhat but it is apparent that the greater part of Lansing's ice supply this season will come from outside points.

Jackson prison will have a new and modern factory building, in place of the old wagon shop, destroyed by fire April 12 last. Warden Armstrong, who has just returned from a conference with the board of state auditors at Lansing, announces that pursuant to his request it has been decided to rebuild with a fire-proof factory building, 60x220 feet, three stories, of concrete and reinforced steel. The cost will be close to $48,000, and Prof. Wrenmore, of the university, who took charge of the new cell block, will have charge of the work. Payment for the new building will be made out of a sinking fund. The state carries its own insurance on all its buildings, applying a sum equal to the premiums to a sinking fund, and it is from this that the new building will be constructed. It will be adapted to any sort of manufacturing business which may be done in the prison.

CAPTURING WOLF BOUNTIES.

Methods Employed by Michigan Hunters to Obtain the Animal's Pelts.

The method by which a Marquette county wolf hunter secured $54 in bounty was to bury a quantity of meat in the snow of the early winter, and above the meat to place traps, which were also covered by snow in the regular course of precipitation.

In due time, says the Detroit News, the meat ripened sufficiently to give hints of its whereabouts, and was then sought by the wolves, which digging downward, sprung the traps and—the bounty. One, more cunning than his fellows, avoided the trap by tunnelling under it and securing the bait without exchanging his hide for it.

The method of catching wolves by trapping is a fair one, but what shall be said of the L'Anse man who, capturing a female wolf, taught her to become a decoy for the gallants of her tribe? With a long chain about her neck made fast at one end, she was allowed a wide range of captivity. She sang for company, and when admirers appeared flirted desperately with them.

The wolf slayer took position outside of his cabin door, in his jaws the stem of a cob pipe, across his knees a long range rifle. A sneaking gray form from the woods, a coquetish salutation from the captive the crack of a rifle and the whistle of a bullet, forged each a link in the chain of tragedy that placed $175 in the purse of the cabinier as the profits of a few weeks. The gay deceiver who stood for this treachery was a fast friend to her captor and seemed to enjoy the havoc wrought on the chivalry of her race.
