Tom Payne, the negro convicted of murder in the second degree and in St. Joseph Thursday afternoon. sentenced to Jackson for from 20 to 30 years with a recommendation of 25 left the county jail Saturday broken spirited.

Ever since Payne escaped the officers at Sodus and led them a long chase into Indiana, only to be brought back to the county jail, he has passed as a genuine bad man. He has been a leader among the toughs and crim inals locked up in the jail and his supreme disregard for the law and the penalties which it might inflict upon him for his crime made him a hero in the eyes of his companions.

He was not slow in stating that he did not fear Jackson and that he would as soon go there as to be free Incidentally he boasted that he would never be convicted, he was too foxy, he stated for a bunch of country sheriffs and lawyers to catch him and up to the end of his trial continued to boast. When he was con victed he laughed, and said that a few years in Jackson would do him no harm, but when the sentence of 30 years came, all of which he will doubtless be compelled to serve. Payne was staggered.

His companions watched him closely and Saturday morning saw the first signs of a break down. The negro could not eat, he roamed his cell rest lessly and refused to talk with the other prisoners. The climax, ho wever came when the officers appeared to take him away Payne almost refused to leave his cell and with his head dropped forward on his chest and shaking in every limb, he was led out by Sheriff Tennant. There were laughs from the various prisoners as they gathered about to see him go and not one offered his hand to the man who will spend the majority of the remaining years of his life behind prison walls.

Prisoner Suspected of Dynes Murder Prepares His Own Defense

Will Smith, charged with adultery suspected of the murder of Lloyd Dynes, the Galien operator, proposes to take a hand in the proceedings, He has engaged Attorneys William C. Hicks and John J. Sterling of Benton Harbor, and the attorneys have gone about it to clear their client of at least the greater charge that is hanging over him.

It is expected that the attorneys vill appear before the court in a few days, and ask that Smith be released on bail. In order to hold the prisoner without bail the sheriff will of necessity be compelled to make a showing to the court somewhat stronger than he has already given to the public. In the next few days interesting developments are exp ct-

RAILS AND WIRE FENCING.

Old Style Fencing Giving Way Slowly. But Surely to the More Modern Method.

Much of the old rail fence is still in use in many sections. Though not so neat and attractive as the wire or board fence, it has some points of advantage over other kinds. The rail fence can be easily opened to pass through from field to field with binder or other machinery. Also rails make handy cross fences or hog lot fences, being easily taken down and put up again, so as to change size of, or subdivide lots or fields. About the first rails made were split out of white oak and many of these, after 40 or 50 years' use, are yet sound. The same may be said of chestnut rails, but those made of black oak are not so lasting. Stock, especially horses, are seldom hurt by rail fences, yet many are ruined or blemished for life by barbed wire cuts.

The barbed or woven wire fence is a necessity in places where little other material is to be had, and eventually, when the wooden fances have all rotted down, we must use the wire, which is neat, looks well, takes up little room and fewer posts than the rail fence. It will stand up longer and better against wind and proves an effective barrier to passage of farm stock or some wild animals.

As fast as needed supplant rails with woven wire about 37 inches high of nine strands. Two inches above it stretch a barbed wire. This will turn horses, cattle, hogs and sheep, but another wire eight inches higher makes it safer for horses or unruly stock, says the Farm and Home. Posts should be placed about eight feet apart and alternate ones need only reach to top of woven wire, and these might be of old rails cut five feet long. Long posts should be of heavy white oal and six and one-half to seven feet long, inserted two to two and one-hal' feet in ground. Stretch all wires tight ly and anchor end or corner posts wel with heavy braces. Such a fence with two barbed wires will be about 49 inches high and cost for wire and posts from 30 to 35 cents per rod.

Sir John's hand was at his blouth. He stood up his full six feet two and looked hard at his son, whose eyes were level with his own. They were ideal representatives of their school.

"And what do you propose marrying upon? She, I understand, has about eight hundred a year. I respect you too much to suspect any foolish notions of love in a cottage."

Jack Meredith made no reply. He was entirely dependent upon his fa-

"Of course," said Sir John, "when I die you will be a baronet, and there will be enough to live on like a gentleman. You had better tell Miss Chyne that. She may not know it. Girls are so innocent. But I am not dead yet, and I shall take especial care to live some time."

"What is your objection?" inquired Jack Meredith after a little pause.

"I object to the girl." "Upon what grounds?"

"I should prefer you to marry a woman of heart."

"Heart?" repeated Jack, with a suspicion of hereditary cynicism. "I do not think heart is of much consequence. Besides, in this case surely that is my province. You would not have her wear it on her sleeve?" "She could not do that; not enough

What struck her at once was his gravity, and he must have seen the droop in her eyes, for he immediately assumed the pleasant, half reckless smile which the world of London society had learned to associate with his name. She saw the diamond ring and looked upon it with the beautiful emotions aroused by those small stones in the female breast, but she did not seem to recognize her own finger with-

International Live Stock Exposition,

Union Stock Yards, Chicago, December 1 to 8, '06. When you are seeking opinion on 3 90 subjects of vital or legal importance you employ the best professional talent because they are supposed to know 40 00 what to do for you, therefore when you seek business advice it is safer to counsel with men who have made a 10 60 success in their particular line. On 9 00 breeding and feeding su jects and their collateral branches that great breeder and fitter, I.M. Forbes, of Henry, Ill., is surely competent to advise, and when he speaks of the value M. C. R. R. Co., freight on car 83 82 of show yard experience and shows as 75 a place to go for guidance, he is at 75 home on his subject. In speaking of 98 the International Live Stock Exposi-1 18 tion, Mr. Forbes said:

> "In my opinion the International show as an educator has no equal in this or any other country. While our state and county fairs are supposed to be held strictly for educational purposes, there are so many fake shows allowed on the grounds that the attention of those who most need the object lessons on display is diverted, so that these shows lose much $828 62 of what they are intended for. While! the International show is free from anything, but what is beneficial to any one, being much the largest stock show held in the world, and practically all but the car lots under one roof, and the whole display made up of the choicest animals of all tle different breeds of improved stock, this show affords the greatest opportunity for the man who is undecided. Here he can compare the choicest specimens of the different breeds in greater numbers than at any other show in the world. Therefore it is conceded by those who know, not only from our own people but many from abroad, to be the greatest edu cational show on earth, and it is my opinion that the International show management is doing more to educate the people and promote the interest in live stock than it is getting full credit for."
