A BILLION IN 10 YEARS.

Less than 10 years ago radio in the home was something that fascinated only the tinkers of the nation. This year the experiment which has become a commercial proposition is expected to reach the billion dollar mark by the turnover in all the branches of radio industry, according to Federal Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount. The dramatic rise of the radio business has few, if any, equals in the business world.

Lying behind this unprecedented development no doubt are the American mastery of mass production and American prosperity. The fact that this nation has been going through a period of depression doesn't seem to have dampened the enthusiasm of radio manufacturers who are preparing for their biggest year just ahead. The export field for the radio, it is true, will be exploited in this year's plans, but the bulk of business is expected to be done within the boundaries of the United States.

It needs a mind more than used to big figures to visualize a miraculous growth from scratch to a billion dollars in 10 years, but that growth is no nearly a fact that the business feels it already is accomplished.

A System Works.

System is an invaluable aid to accomplishment. Without it force and energy is dissipated unprofitably. The new currency which has been in use for more than a year was devised not only for the convenience of the public and as a saving to the government but also to lessen the evil of counterfeiting. And the system of uniform engraving has done just that, according to the treasury department. It is more difficult now to raise bills of one denomination to bills of another because the public is slowly learning that the portraits which appear upon a bill of one denomination appear upon no other bills. The system is a simple one but it strengthens the government immeasurably against criminals. Most counterfeiting in the past was done by raising the figures on bills, but now that is made so difficult that it has become almost impossible. And a simple system did it.

The Revival of Whiskers.

Whiskers are reported to be coming into style among the younger set in London. Among the upper classmen at Cambridge and Oxford the Vandyke has achieved foremost prominence but the wildly flowing Scotch style of whiskers has its champions and is seen more and more as weeks provide greater growth of the wind-blown product.

No one appears to know just what caused the revival of whiskers. The only public pronouncement on the subject was by a society photographer, who has been appointed court photographer, that whiskers mark the man, and only occasional instances have been found in all English history of a truly great man who did not wear whiskers.

Men who have worn whiskers, either the boyish bob or the wind-blown, free and wandering, would not welcome the style that required whiskers to be worn if one cared to comply with the demand of polite social customs. At best or worst they require much attention and are continually in the way. Unless closely cropped at short intervals they never fail to become unattractive, even suggestive of the need for sanitation.

If the young men of England insist on trying to popularize whiskers we hope they keep the custom in their own country. If the custom is transplanted to this country it would be possible for a man to defy custom and continue to dally with the razor each morning. Wearing whiskers is a man's own fault as George Ade once remarked.

Up in the Air.

The attempt of a scientist to go 10 miles above the earth in a balloon captivates the human imagination and appeals to the human sense of daring. The fact that he has failed in his first attempt to get off the ground, even, merely adds to the dramatic effect when he finally does go up, as no doubt he will. In this case it is the superficial which holds interest for the public. The scientific value of the proposed expedition is subordinated to the fact that the balloonist will risk his neck to go higher than any man ever went before. If the information—which is the important reason for the expedition—could be obtained in a laboratory there would be no stir at all about this man's activities but, because he is forced to go up in the air for it, the eyes of the world are centered upon him. And if he is successful in his attempt he will be acclaimed by his contemporaries for daring and not for the bit of knowledge he adds to the sum total already known.

New Cattle Rustlers.

The old west has definitely passed. The last vestige of the wild and woolly days has undergone a radical change and has become modernized. Cattle rustling, a crime peculiar to the west immortalized in fiction, is now done by motor truck. That puts the cowboy and Indian clear out of the picture and deadens the color to a drab gray, leaving it less picturesque than Chicago or New York. The characters that Owen Wister made live for us in "The Virginian" are no more. The cattle rustlers of today are just common thieves. Somehow it doesn't seem right.

Gangsters Fare Badly in Europe.
 Apparently some European countries have laws that are administered for the protection of the public against those who disregard individual rights and public welfare. A Chicago gang leader found it convenient to quit his usual haunts while some investigations were under way and planned a trip to Europe. Because England knew of his coming and had decided to prevent his landing there he proceeded to Belgium. There he was promptly arrested and escorted to the border where he entered Germany, only to be placed in jail again.

In a free country, like our own, individual rights are given so much consideration that crooks and others of their like are able to stay outside of prison. Most of our customs we do not want to trade for those of the old world, but we ought to revise our police methods along the line of simple directness in dealing with men who are known to live from the proceeds of crime. We are far too sensitive of the rights of the accused for our own well being and that fact is seized upon by the gangsters for their advantage when they run afoul of the law.

It is easy to fall into a line of flabby sentimentality in upholding the rights of a crime leader in court. Why should any city restore freedom to a known gang leader? Why is Chicago standing by stupidly pretending to fight Capone and others, when these men travel the streets with perfect freedom and plan new crimes? Some of our criminal laws need revision to suit present day conditions.

See America First.

Improved highways and dependable motor cars have brought a larger world to thousands of tourists who have traveled about and been amazed at the vast display of beautiful scenes within driving distance of their homes. Their own state has given them unmeasured joy as they hunted out its scenic beauty and natural attractions. The tendency, however, is to travel to other states and out of that has come the cry to see and know America before going to the Old World.

During the summer just past two millions of people visited the national parks in the United States each week. The visitors were too numerous to be comfortably accommodated. Additional facilities must be provided for the coming year, and the federal government has plans for launching a nation-wide campaign to arouse interest in seeing America first.

Thus far in the development of national park travel the advertising and development work has been done wholly by the railroads that were prepared to carry tourists who went by rail. They have been the missionaries preaching the attractiveness of our natural beauty spots and encouraging the people to come, see and enjoy. The new plan would make the federal government an active partner in preaching that fine gospel and in educating Americans to see and know the beauty of their home land.

This is a work in which the government may engage with perfect justification. It has quite as much possible value to the people of the nation as many other activities which larger sums are expended. Let us preach the story of Yosemite, Glacier, the Yellowstone, the Garden of the Gods, and their swing back to the more revealed beauty, the Great Smoky Mountains, an ideal place for late fall tourists. It would be worth quite while to interest the people in making our geography something real and personal.

A political platform is the scaffold on which a party sometimes hangs itself.

A political platform is the scaffold on which a party sometimes hangs itself.

Some politicians convey the impression that while in Washington they actually sleep with the president at least three nights a week.

Educators no doubt regard with satisfaction the great forward stride in the science of education afforded through night football, taking as it does, the place formerly devoted to study.

Maybe the reason that frail 200-pound slip of a girl failed to beat Truddy Ederle's record in swimming across the English Channel was that she was carrying half a dozen stowaways.

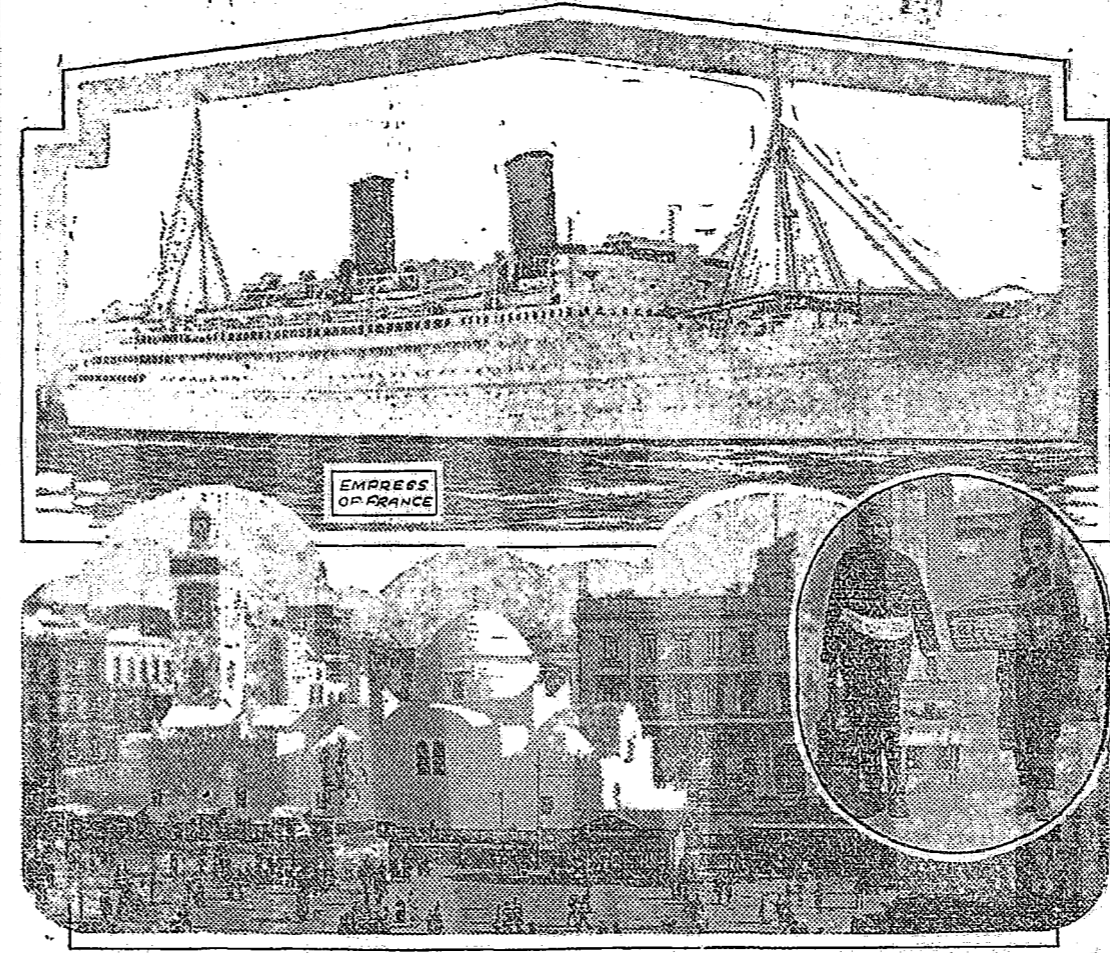

When they harness all waste energy they should put endurance sitters to work hatching eggs, although as a matter of fact the outcome, regardless of the kind of eggs used, would be cuckoos.

The thoughtful young man talking over the future with the girl of his choice tells her he will do everything to make the housework light by providing her with the best can opener money will buy.

Despite persistent rumors that Madame Lupescu, the red-haired conflagration, is lurking in the vicinity of his castle, King Carol has not become alarmed enough to order the guard doubled.

The time may come as predicted when all housework will be done by radio, but it would be terribly embarrassing to have company, tune in on a chicken dinner and then because of static, get nothing but scrambled eggs.

"Empress of France," Prince of Wales' Favorite Liner, to Make Another Cruise to the Mediterranean in 1931

The countries bordering the Mediterranean Sea, long known as the cradle of civilization, will be visited by thousands of travelers during the forthcoming winter. Americans, particularly, are coming to appreciate more and more the value of first-hand acquaintance with the lands representing the older civilizations—the lands of Columbus, Vespucci, De Soto, De Leon—and they are eager to include the storied Mediterranean in their itineraries.

The steamship companies, realizing this increasing demand for transportation to the Mediterranean, have organized special Mediterranean cruises, arranging the ships' itineraries so as to include the highlights and omit the non-essentials. One of the most popular vessels scheduled to leave New York during the winter of 1931 is the 18,350-gross-ton Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of France," favorite ship of the Prince of Wales and thrice chosen by him for his journey to and from England and his ranch in Alberta, Canada. This speedy, yacht-like steamer will leave behind the inclemencies of our North American climate on Feb. 3, 1931, and sail on a 73-day cruise to the sunny Mediterranean.

Members of this cruise will visit Gibraltar, a great British fortress guarding the entrance to the Mediterranean; Algiers, once a seething nest of pirates; Athens, with its Acropolis, Parthenon and Tower of the Winds; Constantinople, where West meets East—the old Byzantium of pre-Christian days; Jerusalem, with its Church of the Holy Sepulchre and Wailing Wall; Cairo, capital of ancient Egypt, just off the path of travel between the Occident and the Orient, with its bazars, its colorful mosques and its heterogeneous population; the Pyramids and the Great Sphinx near Gizeh, remarkable tributes to the industry and ingenuity of the ancient Egyptians; the Valley of the Kings where the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, recently unearthed, revealed the high state of Egyptian civilization prevailing centuries before Christ, and other places of historical and cultural interest.

The Old Timer's Corner

John Holmes Recalls Days When City Was 'Het Up' over Gas Find

Editor Record,
 In the summer of 1893 some one started a small sized excitement with the story that natural gas was bubbling up through the waters in the pond at Dave Gazley's mill, five miles north from Buchanan, and as gas experts, Peter English and I went out to investigate, taking along a gallon sized glass bottle and tin funnel. We found the gas without trouble and poured our bottle full in about a minute or less. The gas burned with a blue flame and was intensely hot. The one wrong thing was the very limited supply. The shores of that pond are grown with oak timber, which drops a good crop of leaves into the water each fall, these settle to the bottom and as they decay there is this gas formed, known to chemists as "Marsh Gas." It would most likely take the entire supply of all the lakes in the state to furnish the city of Buchanan with cooking gas for one day. How did we "pour" it into the bottle? Simply by filling the bottle with water, and inverting it so the neck was under the surface, inserted the funnel, and while one held the bottle in that position the other stirred the mud in the bottom of the pond, and the gas was poured upward.

Buchanan was at one time possessed of the persons of John D. Ross and "Billy" Paxton, two of as jolly a pair of joshers as ever graced a community. One day they met on Front Street and Ross said, "I have made up my mind about you." How is that, asked Paxton? "Some folks are just as smart as anybody." A short time after they met again and Paxton opened with, "I have been thinking about that and believe I have it all studied out." "How is it?" "There isn't any body meaner than some folks."

When the "Narry" gauge road was built, the graders uncovered a bed of white marl in the field of the John Stearns farm. The deposit was about two feet in thickness, and the covering perhaps three feet. I have never known that any one has ever done anything to develop it, or that it is worth it.

 The home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Kiehn on Liberty Heights was the scene of a pretty children's party Thursday afternoon, from three till five, when Miss Elizabeth was hostess to sixteen little girl friends invited to help her in celebrating her birthday. Games and refreshments were enjoyed.
 The Birthday Club held its fifth party at the home of Mrs. Floyd Sanford Wednesday afternoon, and pleasantly surprised Mrs. George Ditto and Mrs. Floyd Sanford. An enjoyable time was spent and a dainty lunch was served. Two guests and an out of town member, Mrs. Perham of Three Oaks, were present.
 The Monday Club held the postponed meeting with Mrs. Hayes, as the president was out of town, the vice president, Mrs. Terriere, occupied the chair. After the opening exercises an excellent program was given. Mrs. Worthington gave a splendid paper on "Jean Francois Millet."
 The South Rod and Gun Club will hold a pigeon shoot Sunday, Oct. 27, on North Front Street, out of Niles, near Dowagiac Creek.
 Mrs. Mary Day Matthews of Denver, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Kingery. Mrs. Matthews, who is 93 years old, is one of the pioneers of Buchanan. She came here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Day in 1836. The family home was at the corner of Front and Portage streets and for years the family was prominent in the social and business life of the village. Mrs. Matthews had many interesting things to tell of the earlier history of Buchanan and enjoys meeting her old friends.

BERRIEN SCHOOLS COLLABORATE IN SERIES PROGRAMS

PLAN SERIES OF MUSICAL AND SPEAKING EVENTS THRU YEAR.

Plans for a county-wide program of school activities to be carried on during the coming year have been announced by Supt. F. W. Crawford of Niles, chairman of the Berrien County School superintendents association, which include a series of music, debating and speaking events.

The music programs open with a vocal concert at Niles on Dec. 12, when Prof. Mable of Western State College of Kalamazoo will direct the county glee clubs. The second musical program will be an orchestra concert at St. Joseph on Feb. 12, and the third will be a band program at St. Joseph on May 29.

The extemporaneous speaking program will involve reading three magazines, the Literary Digest, Review of Reviews and Current Events, over a period of two months. At the time of the contest the student will be handed three strips of paper and will be given a minute to choose one subject for a five minute discourse.

NEW DORMITORY FOR WOMEN AT U. OF MICHIGAN

RENT CHARGE IS $105 PER SEMESTER; BOARD IS $7 PER WEEK.

Mosher-Jordan Halls, largest of University of Michigan dormitories for women, opened during Freshman Week with accommodations for 450 students in the great Gothic structure which overlooks Palmer Field, women's athletic center. The building is a fireproof structure five stories in height and is divided into two identical units, the north wing being known as Mosher Hall, the south as Jordan Hall, after two outstanding former Deans of Women at the University.

Every care has been taken to make the dormitory for women students as pleasant and modern as possible, and it has been furnished throughout much as a home might be. On the ground floor are four dining rooms opening on a terrace with a view across the wide field. There are also service rooms and a few student rooms, primarily for graduate students.

On the second floor, which is on a level with Observatory Street, are business offices, lobbies, small reception rooms for entertaining callers and four living rooms. Two of these are more formal and are a few steps below the level of the halls, which permits the use of the space between lobby and room as a small stage for informal dramatic productions or recitals. All living rooms have spacious fire places and have book nooks or sun porches adjoining. The directors' suites are also on this floor, as are a number of student rooms.

Third, fourth and fifth floors are devoted to student rooms and great care has been used to make them ideal for study and rest. Each floor has individual sun rooms, sewing rooms, kitchenettes with ironing equipment and a number of rooms for overnight guests.

Despite the size of the building intimate social life is assured by the number of dining and living rooms which allow for smaller groups to gather together. The arrangement of student rooms in groups on each floor further promotes more intimate social contacts, which educators feel is one of the greatest advantages of college life outside the classroom.

Most of the rooms are for two girls and are tastefully furnished with twin beds, double desk, study and easy chairs and floor lamps. Charge for double rooms is $105 a semester per student. A few single rooms are $115. Board is $7 a week for all. Student waitresses are employed in the dining rooms which allows some girls to reduce their expenses.

The dormitory houses students of all classes and was filled before the structure was completed. At present there is a waiting list.
