Twister Damages Buildings, Stock and Orchards South of Buchanan

Now Here's the Proposition

Speaking Of Energy A local man with a marvellous memory for this and that tells us that when Preston Bradley of Chicago, delivered his former commencement address here for the class of 1927 he made a statement that if the energy latent in the atoms of substances could be harnessed, it would furnish prodigious power.

Our informant does not remember just how much power, but he asserts he does remember that the Berrien County Record, in its report of the speech, got a bit off the beam in its rendition of the word "beam", and rendered it "beans" instead.

Well, that was the year before we arrived here, and no such outrageous contortions have occurred since. And anyway beans do contain a lot of latent energy, so what?

Murphy Makes A Threat Some time next week, E. H. (Mickey) Murphy is scheduled to return from tonsorial practice after 53 years of barbering in this burg. Mickey says that on his last day, before he gives over his quarters to the Sausman Tailor Shop, he is going to do something no barber ever did before in God's world, and you just wait and see what.

It's quite a bill of goods he has undertaken to deliver at that, for if there's anything conceivable in this world that some barber hasn't done, at least the failure can't be assessed against the good intentions of that ancient and honorable profession.

Something no barber ever did before, well, it's got to be good. This department wants to be on hand at that time.

2. Mechanical Wizards Collaborate Perhaps you haven't heard but Fern Hess not long since hatched an invention that is believed to be destined to turn the business of fishing upside down. It's a pistol grip handle at the end of a fish line, with a pair of peep sights so that, when you sight a rainbow or a speckled, you can draw a bead on him and nail him with the hook without any bait.

He is now working on a suggestion by Ted Rouse, who like Fern is just lousy with ideas (and how lousy some of them are), to install a hook-on-the-fur-end-of-the-rod that will debone the fish as it is whipped in.

The many people in the Buchanan community who have had the pleasure of hearing the young singer for several years will be listening in and pulling for him at that time. He successfully passed his audition test several weeks ago. He is the director of the choir of the First Methodist church here and his beautiful baritone has been a feature of many public programs during the past several years.

After returning from Chicago yesterday, Blake announced that his song will be "Myself When Young."

Wrecks Barns At Farms L. Huebner And Mary Swartz

Wind Funnel Tears Trees Up By Roots, Injures Several People A small cyclone traveling in a northeasterly direction angled across Portage Prairie between 4:30 and 5 p. m. Friday, wrecking a barn on the Leo Huebner farm and another on the Mary Swartz farm, in addition to lesser damages on a number of other farms in that district.

Mrs. William Eisele saw the cyclone coming while it was still south of the Oliver York farm and said that at that time it was coming directly toward her home. Then it veered to the east and missed her place by a mile and a half. She stated that a very distinct funnel was spiraling downward from a boiling black cloud. The funnel was long and comparatively narrow and surged up and down as though on springs.

Press reports stated that the funnel first touched the ground in Porter county, Ind., where it leveled two houses, three large barns and a filling station. In La Porte county two houses were destroyed and a man and woman were taken to a Michigan City hospital for treatment for injuries.

Uprooted trees fell across the New York Central right-of-way near Hudson, Ind., so that a special eastbound mail train had to be halted until the tracks were cleared.

The funnel dipped at the Arthur Mahler farm south of South-Clear Lake, destroying a barn and other buildings and an orchard. A cow was killed there by a falling limb.

At a farm owned by Oliver York and located just south of his home farm the cyclone tore up about 40 apple trees. Large trees were pulled by the roots out of the ground. Three fence posts were pulled from the ground by the suction of the wind. The funnel missed the barn about 50 feet.

The tail of the funnel dipped again at the Leo Huebner farm, destroying a cement block barn 24x36 feet in dimension, built three years ago. The cyclone moved down entirely the north and south cement block walls and partly demolished the ends of the building. The roof was torn to pieces and carried 100 feet northward. Some household furnishings stored in the barn were destroyed and about 75 orchard trees demolished. Damage at the Huebner home was estimated at $2,000, partly covered by insurance.

At the Mary Swartz farm home about 200 yards northeast of the Huebner home the cyclone missed the house, but tore up the barn and a 10x14 brooder house, killing 35 8-week-old chickens and injuring a number more. At the barn, not only was the superstructure demolished but part of a cement floor was torn up.

At the Clare Truckel home a trailer house, the home of Lyle Scamehorn, was picked up from its cement block foundation, moved ten feet and lodged against a fence. Scamehorn was in the house at the time and was knocked down and bruised. He estimated the damage at $150.

City Commission Continues Tax Levy of Eighteen Mills

The city commission voted at the budget meeting Monday evening to continue the present 18-mill levy, dividing it however into a 17-mill general levy and a one-mill recreation levy.

The general levy of 17 mills will raise $86,916 75, and the one-mill levy will produce $5,112 75. The proceeds of the general levy were appropriated to the following funds: General fund, 7 1/2 mills, $38,345 625; street fund, 2 1/2 mills, $12,781 875; interest and sinking fund, 2 mills, $10,225 50; contingent fund, 5 mills, $25,563 750.

The board passed a resolution introduced by A. B. Mur that any surplus money as of July 1, 1946, should be placed in a savings account in the Union State Bank, to be drawn on at need.

At the end of the meeting of the Board of Review Thursday of last week, that body reduced most of the residential assessment, raises announced April 1, 1946, back to the 1945 assessment levels. However the taxes on the ten new homes, on the further construction of the experimental laboratory of the Clark Equipment company, and the plant of the Hubbard Tool and Gauge, which had been exempt from taxation previously by city agreement, increased the assessment roll by $48,725. The removal of raises on residential properties was the result of a storm of protests which kept the board busy during its three-day session.

Frank R. Sanders, a leading Berrien County attorney for 45 years and formerly assistant state attorney general and chairman of the board of labor and industry during the administration of Governor Alex. Groesbeck (1921-27), died at Pawating hospital at 11:57 p. m. Thursday following several weeks of illness.

The son of a former merchant of Dayton and Buchanan, Atty. Sanders was closely identified with the life of Buchanan during his entire career. He was graduated from the schools of Buchanan and from the law department of the University of Michigan. During young manhood he was known as a skilled athlete, a member of the Buchanan Blues baseball team and also of the Buchanan fire department in days when that institution was a social and athletic as well as a protective organization.

During his long legal career he was known as an able attorney, whose opinion was especially valued in land and real estate matters, as well as in the general practice of law. For many years he was retained by local corporations and industries, and for nearly twenty years was village and city attorney of Buchanan. His stature as an attorney was attested by the fact that during his tenancy of the chairmanship of the Michigan board of labor and industry he was required to make many legal rulings, none of which were ever reversed.

He was born in Dayton, Mich., May 3, 1875, the son of Ephraim and Louise Rough Sanders. He was married Feb. 15, 1917, to Ada Dacy-Wood of Niles. She is his sole survivor.

The funeral was held at 3 p. m. Sunday from the home, with Rev. Carl Trueschel, former pastor of the Portage Prairie Evangelical church and now pastor of the Benton Harbor Evangelical church, preaching the funeral sermon.

Burial was made in Oak Ridge cemetery. Fall burials were Frank and Louise Rough Sanders, Wayne Smith, C. V. Dunbar, Lee Mathe, Carson Houswerth.

D. L. Boardman, Merchant Here 54 Years, Dies

Funeral To Be Held Friday At 2:30 P. M. At Swem Funeral Home

D. L. Boardman, a leading business man of Buchanan for 54 years with a brief interval of absence in 1902 and 1903, died at his home at 112 Clark street at 9:45 a. m. Wednesday, May 29, following an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Boardman had suffered an attack of pneumonia in February, and after a satisfactory recovery, he returned to his work at his store too soon. A relapse followed and he was unable to rally again, weakening slowly until he entered a coma the last few days.

He had always been very active in the conduct of his business and it was his good fortune that he was able to continue until nearly the end.

He was born March 15, 1864, in Cattaraugus county, New York. He grew up there and was graduated from Chamberlain Institute and taught school in that vicinity four years.

He came to Michigan while a young man and entered business at Three Oaks in 1889. In 1891 he came to Buchanan and opened a store. In 1902 he moved to Benton Harbor, Mich., where he enjoyed a copper boom. His venture there proved unsatisfactory when the boom collapsed and he returned to Buchanan the following year, remaining here the rest of his life.

In 1891 he married Kate Sherill of Three Oaks. She died 12 years ago.

At the time of his death Mr. Boardman had the oldest drygoods store in Buchanan and also the second oldest local business, being preceded in his entry here only by Harry Binns.

In his more active years he was a moving spirit in the business and social life of the community. A flower fancier, for many years his annual gladiolus shows in his store were real events. The community confidence in his integrity and public spirit was attested to by his election to several local offices.

His members of the First Presbyterian church of Buchanan, of Buchanan Masonic Lodge F & A M No. 68, of the Modern Woodman and a charter member of the Buchanan Lions Club.

He is survived by a foster daughter, Mrs. O. Gaylord Maish, and by several nieces and nephews.

The body will lie in state at the Swem Funeral Home until the services at that place at 2:30 p. m. on Friday. His nephew, Rev. Harold Reese, pastor of the Baptist church of Williamston, Mich., will officiate, assisted by Rev. Malcolm D. McNeal, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Buchanan. Burial will be made in the Silverbrook cemetery at Niles.

Spittle-Bug Hurts Local Hay Fields A small gray bug with a round, humped body like a turtle and protruding eyes pecked on top of its head-like an aviator's goggles is at present working to cut down hay yields in the Buchanan district, according to reports, coming in from the farms.

The insect roosts in ditches on the hay stalks and sucks the sap out of them until the plant appears lifeless. The common name is the spittle-bug. The bug usually thrives along river bottoms and in low wet places. However in weather such as prevailed here the past month the bug spreads out over the uplands. The only cure in the fields would be warm and dryer weather.

In vegetable and flower gardens a spray of black leaf 40 and soap tends to discourage the spittle-bug. The formula is about a cubic inch of common laundry soap in a gallon of spray.

May Rainfall Still Under Month Normal

May rainfall, totaling 3.44 inches yesterday morning, still had a fifth of an inch to go to reach the normal average of 3.65 inches, according to the Indiana & Michigan hydroelectric plant records.

Farmers report that the soil is now in fine shape for moisture and that the rains, totaling 9.4 inches during the past week were not too much. They did come at a time when corn planters were ready to start in many corn fields, but stopped that work only two or three days. Rain in the past week was as follows: Thursday 3.2, Friday 5.4, Saturday .08.

The cool weather and lack of prevailing winds prevented evaporation, resulting in a cold wet soil condition favorable to the operation of cut worms. On Tuesday clear and warmer weather returned.

Crow hunters who only wing the target sometimes can count on the barred owl for assistance in finishing the job. Bared owl pellets examined by John Winchester at Rose Lake wildlife experiment station contained both crow bones and feet and several lead shot.

Ross Reynolds Is Honored On 91st Anniversary Birth

Ross Reynolds celebrated his 91st birthday anniversary in his home at 109 South Detroit street Saturday, where he lives with his brother, Abe, and sister, Miss Mary Reynolds.

Mr. Reynolds, a resident of Berrien county for 72 years, is healthily blind but enjoys good health and has an unusually agile mind for a person of his age. He is intensely interested in all national and world happenings and rarely misses listening to radio newscasters and forums pertaining to these affairs.

When he was 21 years old he cast his first presidential vote for Rutherford B. Hayes and since then has never missed a national election and has always voted the Republican ticket.

He was born May 25, 1855, in St. Joseph county, the son of Virgil and Nancy Ann Reynolds. His maternal grandfather, Dr. Peter Crum, was a well-known physician in Wayne county, Indiana, and later at Plymouth, Indiana. His father was a Civil War veteran and his paternal grandfather, Samuel Reynolds, was a Texas Ranger.

In 1874 the Reynolds family came to Buchanan township and from 1888 to 1905, Ross and Abe Reynolds operated the homestead five miles north of Buchanan. Since 1935 they have lived in their present home.

Abe, who is 86 years old, is confined to his bed. Miss Reynolds, a retired schoolteacher, taught for a number of years at Eldon high school, Chicago. Neither of her brothers or sister ever married.

Only the family and a few friends will join Mr. Reynolds in observing his anniversary.

O. J. Kenton Has Granddaddy Berrien County Peach Trees

O. J. Kenton wants someone to tell him whether there is an older producing peach tree in Berrien county than the one now heavily loaded with fruit at his farm home northwest of town.

Kenton states that when he bought the farm in 1918, 26 years ago, the tree was already producing fruit and must have been several years old. Since that time the tree has borne continually, producing some peaches even in years when the crop in this district was an entire failure. In all that time it has never had a single spray application.

The trunk is now about ten inches in diameter, the branches dividing about three feet from the ground. It produces a free-stone peach, with a good flavor and light-colored flesh.

Kenton will appreciate it if anyone who knows of a tree of comparative age will tell him or write him at the following address: O. J. Kenton, R. R. 1, Buchanan.

Sorrowful, yet proud are the prayers in our hearts this Memorial Day for the brave men who fought and died in World War II.

Sorrowful because so many lives were lost, so many families broken. And proud because these American men and boys had the courage and faith to pay the supreme sacrifice for all they held dear.

Designer Organizes To Produce New Car With Plastic Body

Howard Darrin, automotive designer, who drew the plans for the bodies of the Kaiser, Frazer, and Packard Clipper cars, has formed a new company, the Darrin Corporation, in Los Angeles, for building a radically different car. The new car will be known as the Darrin and about 500 will be built in 1946. Production schedules call for 50,000 cars in 1947. The car will be custom-built, said Darrin, who annually custom-designed about 150 car bodies, principally for motion picture celebrities. The first 500 cars will have plastic bodies, either painted or with the color mixed into the plastic, as the buyer directs. It will sell for about $2,000. Production of 50,000 cars in 1947 will be carried on in Grand Rapids, it is reported. Continental Motors Corporation is reported to have designed the engine for the new Darrin car, which will be a 90-horsepower, 6-cylinder power plant. The new car will be 175 inches overall and will have a wheelbase of 105 inches. C. J. Reese, president of the Continental Motors Corp, issued the following statement in connection with reports linking Continental Motors Corporation and Howard Darrin in the manufacture of automobiles. "Recent newspaper stories have incorrectly inferred that Continental Motors Corporation is planning to enter the automobile manufacturing business in cooperation with Howard Darrin, well known automobile designer and builder of custom built cars. "To the extent that these stories may have created the impression that Continental Motors proposes to engage in the automobile manufacturing business either directly or indirectly, they are erroneous. Continental Motors builds engines for passenger cars. Any participation by Continental Motors in the Darrin enterprise would be only as a supplier of engines and would entail no financial participation whatsoever. "The Darrin Company will be privately financed, Darrin said. An unidentified group of eastern financiers are said to be interested in the new venture.

P. T. A. Council Endorses County Health Department

One of the fundamental considerations of the Berrien County Council of Parents and Teachers is to ensure the best possible environment for the children of the county. We know that health is the primary factor in this environment. We believe that a Berrien County Health Department will provide the services which will make safer, healthier living possible for our children. As parents, we are interested in ALL children, and we feel a special responsibility for underprivileged children. We know, too, that all children share schools, movies, churches, etc., and a health hazard to one is a health hazard to all. The doctors and nurses in Berrien county have been most cooperative and have been a great help in protecting the health of our children. Public Health, however, is a special field, and a county health department offers services which are not available under our present set-up. Health Education plays an important part in teaching children how to grow up to be healthy adults. Preventive measures are as important as curative ones, and less costly in lives and money. This applies also to the elimination of bad sewage disposal conditions in the county, which are the sources of certain diseases which we dread most. We believe we owe it to our children to provide the safest, most favorable health conditions possible. We do not expect the millennium Disease will doubtless be with us for a long time, in spite of all we can do. Nevertheless, science has demonstrated and proved that many of the old risks can be eliminated, and children's lives can be safer and healthier,

State Forestry Land Up 1500 Pct. During 25 Years

When on July 1 the state lands administered by the conservation department's forestry division will amount to 3,200,000 acres, the division will be directing forestry operations on 3,000,000 more acres than it had when it joined the department in 1921. Though state forests were then 21 years old, their great growth came after inclusion with other conservation agencies in the department which is now marking its 25th anniversary. Early progress, just after the turn of the century, was discouragingly slow, for some still believed that the pine plains could be farmed, that pine would not burn was gone forever, and that any appreciation of the young science of forestry who told them otherwise was a bit queer. When state forests ended their independent existence there were but eight of them, covering 180,000 acres, with 37,000 additional acres not under management. Among other chores in the state forests of those days was the raising of half to three quarters of the hay needed to feed horses used in forestry work. Even in 1921, when the present department was formed, fire prevention was recognized as "most important in the bringing back of trees to this state." At that time each forest had its own towers and fire-fighting system, since superseded by the state-wide forest fire fighting organization. But planting had high priority then also with an annual goal of 4,500 acres. From 1904 until World War II halted all planting operations, 293,000 acres had been stocked with more than 200,000,000 trees. Some of these early plantations had grown enough to yield much needed forest products in the critical war years. Seven years of CCC work and selective wartime timber cutting have brought state forest timber stands to the greatest value they have ever had, and the forests themselves, grown largely on barren, tax-abandoned sand plains are counted among the state's prime recreation assets. They have long been popular with hunters, anglers and trout streams; and thousands of campers prefer their remoteness to more developed camp sites in parks. Without harm to these recreational values

Washington Looks Away While Chicago Turns On More Water

Chicago needs the water to step up power production at the Lockport plant, for use by the sanitary district. Washington has to look the other way because a Supreme Court decision in 1937 ordered diversion of water from the Lake at Chicago to be cut from 3,000 cubic feet a second to 1,500 feet. Swelling the flow through the locks at the mouth of the River from 1,500 to 3,000 cubic feet is quite illegal, but everyone, including the White House, is agreed that it must be done. Mr. Truman has let Mayor Kelly know that he won't be sent to Leavenworth prison. There's a paradox probably in the fact that whereas that decision grew from complaints of neighboring states that diversion of water through the Chicago River was lowering lake levels dangerously, there have lately been increasing reports of property damage along the lake—due to its high level. Lake Michigan seems to be washing away the case against Chicago diversion. Some look for a new court decision before long.

Receive Money For Money-Saving Ideas

Democracy is paying dividends in Detroit. Municipal employees are winning money awards as a result of a suggestion contest sponsored by the Bureau of Government Research and financed by an anonymous donor. One employee won $500, and the City will save $160,000 a year as a result of his suggestion that the purchase and handling of coal be centralized. A high school teacher won $50 for her idea on uniform text books for identical courses in all high schools.

Tales of An Old Town

An Attempt to Reproduce a Cross-Section of The American Scene, As Witnessed Here Through the Past Century

Memorial Day is one of those rare occasions when the average person, not too much preoccupied by fishing excursions or the Indianapolis speed races, has a little time for solemn thought of those who have checked in ahead.

It is a day for visiting graves of the remembered dead if they be not cared-for cemeteries where the growth of underbrush does not prohibit entrance. It may be that recent comers and the younger fry in Buchanan do not know that the first town cemetery here was the present site of Kathryn Park. It remained the town burying ground from the late thirties to the late sixties, or about 30 years. Then the present Oak Ridge cemetery site was acquired.

At first both were used, and at the time of the first Memorial Day observance in Buchanan in 1863 the procession went first to the "old cemetery" where Kathryn Park now is, and then to the "new cemetery" at Oak Ridge, with speaking at both places. When the old cemetery was finally abandoned as a burying place, most of the occupants of the graves were moved to Oak Ridge. It is said that some remained under the oaks on Moccasin avenue. There they doubtless sleep quietly while the children frolic in the playground overhead. Oh well—what pleasant headstone than an urchin's slide or swing?

Those who believe that men and women have less chance these days than then may learn something from a visit to an old country cemetery. They will learn that even though economic opportunities in the form of cheap lands and other unclaimed natural resources were thicker, life was a struggle against death that attacked in the form of vicious disease, against which there was little known defense except the unprepared gift of an iron constitution.

Aside perhaps from the Howe cemetery, the best-kept rural burying plot in the vicinity of Buchanan is the old cemetery on the Morris estate east of Buchanan. There, where E. M. Morris reconstructed that beautiful replica of the old church at Williamsburg, Va., is a cluster of 23 marked graves, those of Timothy Ives and wife and his descendants, and in-laws.

And here's the story. Those 23 graves have the following inmates: Timothy Ives, died at age 63; Sophia, his wife, died at 49; six women all wives, but one who died at ages ranging from 26 to 39, mostly around 30; four men who died under forty; 11 children, all of whom died in infancy and nearly all at less than one year old.

There seemed to be two hurdles in life which took all but the founder of the clan and his wife. The first was death in infancy, very likely from dietary troubles, as our forebears did not know what to feed infants to keep them from illness, or what to do for them when they became ill. Over 50% of the buried died at the age of less than a year. Truly in the midst of life they were in death.

Just to the northeast of the foot of Father Timothy's grave was that of a daughter, Edith, wife of M. R. Wade. She died at the age of 39, a year after the passing of her father, and on the headstone was inscribed (probably at her own request) "Here at my father's feet I lie." The women those days were humbler than now.

Another daughter, Pamela, wife of Joshua Covert, died at 30 years. On her gravestone is the following verse, probably the original contribution of her spouse or some one else. "Your friends—this lonesome way will pass—And with a sigh move slow along, Still gazing o'er the spears of grass, With which your grave is overgrown." The next hurdle was the age period of from 25 to 35, when the chief instruments of the Grim Reaper were tuberculosis and child birth. Babies stepped on each other's heels in the pioneer families—and the young wives were ground between the millstones of hard work and too many children, the majority dying early.

When the building goes up, few know anything of the substructure of work. The "sandhog" works in the depths, and it is the structural worker on the upper levels, the mason, the welder and the riveter, who are more visible and audible and consequently get the public's attention. Nevertheless no building can be better than its foundation, and so it is in the school. To follow the analogy, the elementary teacher, like the structural foundation worker, is usually the "forgotten man" of the teaching force. His work must be well done, or the work of those who come after him will be in vain.

Grade Teachers Are The Sandhogs Of School System

They Lay Foundation On Which Superstructure Is Erected

It may be said that the prime aim of the public school educational system is the creation in the individual child of a competent, conscientious and responsible citizen and so a member of the governing body of democracy.

The work in the formation of a combination of intelligence and character first and foremost is the individual child. It is the foundation of the building and in this labor the work of the elementary teacher may be compared to that of the workmen who lay the foundation of the building. The labors of such workmen are not spectacular. They are the "sandhogs" of the construction crew, the workmen who attempt to go down to bedrock to lay the substantial foundation on which the superstructure will rest.

When the building goes up, few know anything of the substructure of work. The "sandhog" works in the depths, and it is the structural worker on the upper levels, the mason, the welder and the riveter, who are more visible and audible and consequently get the public's attention.

Nevertheless no building can be better than its foundation, and so it is in the school. To follow the analogy, the elementary teacher, like the structural foundation worker, is usually the "forgotten man" of the teaching force. His work must be well done, or the work of those who come after him will be in vain.

But as a rule he is among the comparatively unknown and unappreciated public servants. There are few lines of public or private endeavor where competent and conscientious work gets less reward in substance or appreciation than that of elementary public school teaching, aside from that reward that the worker gathers for himself in devotion to the job and to the human materials with which he or she works.

In writing this article the writer can say that he has received much criticism for failure to report the messy details of public or private scandal, but none at all for any shortcomings in appraisal of the quiet and unobtrusive service of a grade school teacher who may have devoted his or her life to conscientious service to the community.

The work of the grade school teachers from the kindergarten through the sixth grade centers principally in instructing the child in a workmanlike use and understanding of that greatest of human inventions, written and oral communication. In plainer words, reading and writing get the works.

The foundation is laid in kindergarten, where the aim is the formation of the proper mental habits and skills that underlie competent use of the tools of reading and writing.

The actual reading and writing drill starts with the first grade and gets heavy emphasis through the second and third grades. Secondary but important stress is also laid on the acquisition of concepts of number—but that is after all only another branch of reading and writing, aiming at the understanding and use of the symbols of number.

In the first grade the pupil is started in the study of the recognition of the word symbol, and in spelling and writing what are necessary to the proper reproduction of that symbol. In this grade he is taught to recognize and reproduce letters in manuscript, a form of printing, as an aid to understanding the printed page. In the material which he is given to read, are health, science and other stories which are preliminary to the chief aim in the higher grades, the use of reading as a tool for the acquisition of objective knowledge.

In the second grade he begins to learn the flowing script writing which he will use in personal communication. Through all three of these grades, first through third, there is cumulative drill in the elements of sound and form of words, including phonics, spelling, word drill.

By the fourth grade the pupil is expected to have arrived at the stage where he can read independently, using his competence to gain information through his own effort. In this grade the formal and separate study of history, science and health is begun, marking the transition in the educational process from development of the reading skill itself to its use as a tool in further education.

Here is started that hard task of dividing the bewildering mass of knowledge that is required for understanding of his world into separate topics. Preliminary drill is started in the use of the study skills necessary for independent work—use of the encyclopedia, dictionary, map, graph and other devices.

The process of education in the lower grades has not consisted entirely in the evolution of new methods. Occasionally the teacher goes backward to pick up and refurbish discarded methods. This is the case in reading. For a long time the formal reading class was discarded after the fourth grade on the belief that subsequent development would come with the use of reading as a tool in studying other subjects. Now the formal study of reading as an object in itself has been restored to the entire grade system.

In the fifth and sixth grades the formal study of grammar as a means of grasping the logic of language is begun. It has this difference from old-time grammar instruction, in that sentence analysis is limited to the sort of word combinations that the child will use in ordinary speech. Out the window are the inverted diagrams of intricate sentences, literary masterpieces, which served older generations more as a form of mental gymnastics than as a means of understanding the speech they used.

In the sixth grade only the fundamentals of sentence analysis are attempted, as the recognition of subject and predicate. The diagramming of simple sentences is continued in the grammar study of the junior high school.

The aims of the elementary school are not entirely academic. An attempt is made to develop desirable social attitudes and attributes. In discipline it is the aim to allow the pupil as much freedom as he can use. The rigid behavior patterns that were required in school behavior in past years have been replaced by the trend to free and easy attitudes of natural living.

Among the reading tests in constant use in all of the six grades represented in this article are the weekly editions of a small newspaper. All of these papers have a standard size of 9x12 1/2 inches, and are titled "My Weekly Reader," with the subtitle, "The Children's Newspaper."

These editions do not deal in what adult newspapers call "spot news," but rather in articles about news happenings that the pupils of the successive grade may comprehend because of their relation to their lives.

For instance, the edition for the first graders for the week of May 20-24 deals almost exclusively with "The Circus," and is predominantly pictorial, with short one-line sentences in large type under each picture. Featured in the stories are imaginative characters including: Guy, the dog; Peek, the Brownie; Willie Quack, the duck and Bibs the kitten.

The third grade edition for Dec 4-8, 1944 featured the manner in which G. F. Fox was spending Christmas overseas. The fourth grade edition of Sept. 17-21, 1943 featured a story on the new battleship, "Missouri," the work of the telephone, a science article on the mouth of insects; a health article, and on the back page a quiz.

Hoffman Announces Position On Issues

The UAW-CIO, the CIO-PAC, and practically every Red organization in the country—to say nothing of the New Dealers—are all out to defeat me at the Primary.

That is the public announcement made at at least two conventions of the UAW-CIO.

That is the purpose of August Scholle, President of the Michigan CIO Council, who recently appeared on a public platform with and spoke for my opponent at the June 18 Primary.

That is the purpose of Sidney Hillman's Political Action Committee, which has announced its intention to spend upwards of five million dollars to defeat Senators and Congressmen who have not been who, if re-elected, will not be its stooges in Congress.

Ever since I came to Washington, I have vigorously, consistently spoken—and voted—against the New Deal, its fallacious policies, the subversive activities of the Political Action Committee and of the Communists. As long as I remain here, I shall continue to do so.

The people now realize that the New Deal's policies, since the fighting ceased, have, through the arbitrary rulings of the OPA, increased the cost of living, created a scarcity. Here we are, the fighting over, the most productive country in all the world, yet because of New Deal policies, there is a scarcity of the essentials of life: bread, butter, meat, clothing and shelter.

People now, knowing of these things, realize what the stakes especially the coal strike of

8,000 Bu. Wheat Delivered Here To Be Shipped Overseas

A total of 8,000 bushels of wheat sold for the ceiling price plus the 30 cents bonus for overseas shipment had been taken in by Buchanan Co-ops by Monday.

The wheat movement had drugged off the normal incoming supplies for domestic purposes until there is a shortage of bran for feed mixes, and also for use in mixtures to fight cutworms in gardens and truck patches.

The cold wet weather of May has been ideal for cutworm operation and there has been demand in Buchanan by truck farmers in the north end of the county, with no supplies to fill the orders.

FORTUNATE, indeed, is the woman who owns an Electric Range. She appreciates how true it is that the time clock guards your family's meal . . . controls the cooking—flavor and tenderness—and does it economically. The Electric Range owner has much more freedom from kitchen drudgery, yet basks in the approval of the family when the electrically cooked oven meal is served, complete from meat and vegetables to dessert, piping hot and right on the dot.

If you are not one of the lucky women who now own an Electric Range, plan to purchase one as soon as it is available. Ask anyone who cooks electrically—she will tell you that for economy, tenderizing flavor and automatic freedom from needless time in the kitchen, there is no better than an Electric Range.

The picture is filled with thrills and features two new song hits. The second feature on the bill is "Up Goes Maisie" with Ann Sothern and George Murphy in the new laugh hit of the Maisie series.
