FAME

While the High School for Performing Arts is visited by Board of Education inspectors, dancer Leroy (Gene Anthony Ray, pictured) has bigger problems when his brother comes home from prison carrying a gun, in "Tomorrow's Farewell," on NBC-TV's "Fame," THURSDAY, JANUARY 21.

Dance teacher Lydia Grant (Debbie Allen) proves to the inspectors that the school doesn't need a gymnasium after her students "win legs down" in exercise competition over athletes from another high school. Meanwhile, Leroy inadvertently gets arrested trying to ditch the gun. His trip back on the right track is aided considerably by the understanding Miss Sherwood and common-sense advice from Bruno.

$300,000 Grant For Research

In a search for alternatives to animal testing, the Bristol-Myers company has awarded two grants totaling $300,000 for research programs both in the U.S. and the United Kingdom.

Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health has received $200,000 and $100,000 will go to the Fund for the Replacement of Animals in Medical Experimentation (FRAME) in Great Britain
 Part of the Hopkins grant will be used to fund a symposium in late 1982 to explore issues related to pharmaceutical safety testing.

Scientists seek safe ways to test products in the laboratory without the use of animals.

Johns Hopkins spokesmen, in receiving the grant, praised it as a "positive step in the further development of partnerships between industry and academia in dealing cooperatively with some of the important problems we face as a society." They stress its value in expanding the Center's focus to problems of testing for systemic toxicity, in addition to priorities already given to seeking alternatives for eye and skin safety tests. The eye and skin safety testing will be funded, in part, through a previous Bristol-Myers grant of $200,000 made through the Cosmetic, Toiletory and Fragrance Association.

The company's ultimate goal in animal testing is to develop products which can be used safely and effectively by humans. Product testing must also conform with legally imposed safety requirements
 Although Hopkins spokesmen caution that the need for animal tests will continue for some time, they are optimistic that the efforts of the Center will help reduce that need significantly.

FACTS & FIGURES

Thanks in large part to consistent gains in telephone company productivity, residential phone users need to work fewer hours for a month's basic local service. A recent study on the relative cost of phone service shows that the working time needed has declined from nearly six hours in 1971 to just over one and a quarter hours in 1981.

The study taken by American Telephone & Telegraph Company compares the monthly charge for individual residence telephone service with 100 local calls which cost $6.04 in 1971 and $9.16 in 1981. In 1971, the average manufacturing worker had to work an hour and 48 minutes to pay for phone service. Today, the time worked to pay for the same service is one hour and 16 minutes.

To achieve this productivity gain, the Bell System has invested well over $100 billion in its construction program over the past ten years (with an estimated $18 billion budgeted for 1981), much of it in new equipment to serve its customers better and more efficiently.
