Industry is laboring under many difficulties and uncertainties. To "insure" yourself against a shortage of certain foods this winter, and to "insure" people of foreign nations of having enough to keep away starvation, do more canning. Although some contend that because of sugar shortage, they cannot can fruits, it is recommended that one pound of sugar be used for four quarts of finished fruit. That allows 40 quarts of canned fruit per person on the basis of the ten-pound allowance. Michigan State college and U. S. Department of Agriculture bulletins on modern canning, freezing and preserving methods are available from the offices of county extension offices or from The Bulletin Office, Department of Public Relations, Michigan State College, East Lansing, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hansen had as their guest last week Mrs. John Samuel of Oak Park, Ill. Mrs. Frank Roti Roti of Chicago, spent a few days last week with Mrs. Joseph Roti Roti and family. Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Pangborn were their guests for two weeks in their daughter, Mrs. W. H. Fowler, of Big Rapids. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Gibbs spent Sunday at Magrison Lake, Battle Creek, as guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Martin. Joseph Roti Roti returned Friday from Rochester, Minn., where he was a patient at Kahler hospital two weeks, following an operation.

Canning Army Is Called Back To Battle Stations
The 25 million housewives who put up more than four billion jars of food during one year have been called back to their battle stations. One million new recruits are needed to reach the 1946 home food preservation goal. July 21 to 27 has been set as National Home Food Preservation Week. Michigan State college extension specialists are urging that the people of the state cooperate in taking out a little "food insurance". The world food situation has brought the American housewife face to face with shortages of certain canned fruits and vegetables this spring and summer. Never before have certain items been unavailable for months at a time. Michigan State college specialists say the needs for food for shipment overseas continues to be enormous and the processing industry is laboring under many difficulties and uncertainties.

State Beer Supply Curtailed 27 Pct.

Full effect of the curtailment ordered by the Government in the production of beer, in order to increase food shipments to starving peoples in Europe, currently is being felt by brewers as well as by the beer-consuming public.

There should be a deep metal container for hot ashes near a coal stove or furnace, and the coal should be stored in a deep bin in a dry place, with no kindling or other combustibles nearby.

few exceptions, they are showing substantial gains in sales. For instance, production of Pilsners is up 24.1% for the four-month period. Menominee shows an increase of 27% up to May 1.

The beer shortage is reflected in the importation of beer from breweries in other states. Out-of-state beer has always been a big factor in the total Michigan supply, but these sources are suffering curtailment the same as Michigan producers and there is a market falling off in the amount of beer coming into the state from outside sources.

Again it will be noted that many out-of-state breweries, whose beer has not been too popular in the past, are increasing their shipments due to great demand for beer of any brand by the consuming public.

MSC Scientist Wins National Honor For Discovery In Milk

Dr. Ezra Paul Renneke, research scientist in the Michigan State college physiology department, recently became the seventh member of the MSC faculty to receive the National Borden Award. These awards, granted annually to recognize and encourage research in the dairy industry and related fields, amount to $1,000 and a gold medal.

Dr. Renneke, who came to Michigan State a year ago from the University of Missouri, did most of his research in milk producers, studying the compounds in the blood which are changed into milk. He also was able to prepare a thyroid hormone, called thyroxine, starting from the casein in milk. Most of the work was accomplished at the University of Missouri where he was an assistant professor and received his doctor of philosophy. He is a native of Minnesota and received his bachelor's degree at the University of Minnesota.

Others now at Michigan State college who have received the Borden award include: Dr. Carl F. Hartman, research professor in dairy nutrition; Dr. Margaret A. Ohlson, head of the foods and nutrition department; Dr. I. Forest Huddleson of the school of veterinary medicine; Dr. G. Malcolm Trout of the college dairy department. Two other recipients, Dr. I. A. Gould and Dr. Lane A. Moore, formerly of the dairy department, have since left the institution to become associated with other colleges of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Conclusion Of "Go West, Young Woman", Story

Last Chapter Of Vacation Odyssey Of Record Employee

Last week we had journeyed as far west as Grand Coulee, Wash., this week we will visit Soap Lake, Seattle, Puget Sound and start home.

Leaving Grand Coulee and journeying west to Soap Lake, you leave the most beautiful Soap Lake is a large health resort. The government is planning to build a hospital which will specialize in skin disease, as the lake water contains certain minerals which are good for the skin. If you have dandruff—and wash your hair in the lake you will cure yourself of this disease, we are informed. Around the lake white alkali deposits could be seen on the ground where little pools of water had evaporated.

The next stop-over was near Shelton, Wash., about 35 miles south of Everett on Puget Sound. The particularly place where we stayed, an island, lay in the middle of the Sound and a government-owned and operated ferry made six runs daily to the island and back.

During the time we were there, the weather was cool and plenty of that "liquid sunshine" rained down on us. The country in this area reminded us a great deal of northern Michigan, the land was hilly and heavily wooded, hence lumbering was the principal occupation. Many people living near the Sound owned tide land (land which is affected by the outgoing and incoming tide water). On a large percentage of this land oyster beds were staked out in plots about 30 feet square. We ate oysters that were as large as your hand, we also had clams and crabs.

Hatstone Island, the island in the middle of the Sound, was 2 miles wide and 11 miles long and had a population of 136 Gaiques, which were raised for the wineries, were the main crop. Many acres on the island were dense forest land, having never been cut over. About in the center of the island a forest fire had devastated the land, leaving nothing but burnt stumps. Many families don't leave the island for weeks at a time. They have their own church, community house, grocery store, filling station, grade school and daily mail service.

The ferry that carried the passengers and cars looked much like a landing boat used in the war, as it ran up on the beach. It could carry 10 cars. The ferry made six trips a day, seven days a week, the first trip at 7:30 a. m. and the last at 6 p. m.

To go to Seattle, we went to Bremerton and took a ferry to Seattle, the ferry trip took one hour. At the docks and in the harbor many warships could be seen. Aircraft carriers, destroyers, battleships and landing craft were a common sight. Many of these ships maintained only skeleton crews and lots of the ships lay rotting away.

Seattle is the sailor's city, everywhere you look its "bell-bottomed trousers and coats of navy blue" Seattle is a city with a thousand faces, miners, lumberjacks, southerners, sailors, Occidentals and Orientals, all in the city built on the side of a hill, all in a city where ships of the world come and go. One of the most interesting places to visit in this city of cities is the open air market with its endless stalls of food. Here we bought head lettuce as large as medium-sized heads of cabbage for five cents, three bunches of radishes for ten cents and that hard-to-get item, mayonnaise. You can buy all kinds of fresh fruit, vegetables, baked goods and sea-food. As you get near the coast and large cities meat was almost impossible to buy. On the west coast, the resentment toward the Japanese is much stronger than in the middle west.

As we left Seattle we passed over a floating pontoon bridge. The bridge looked like any other bridge and was the same to ride over. Leaving Seattle we traveled north to Route 2, the most northerly U. S. highway. Much of the time we were only twenty-five to fifty miles from the Canadian border. The climate became quite cold as we neared Idaho, the most beautiful state in the West, with its green fertile valleys and high mountains with the cold, swirling, trout streams and forests filled with wildlife.

At Belton, Mont., we entered Glacier National Park—53 miles of scenic mountain views. Here we really noticed the height, our ears snapped and we had headaches. The roads were often one-way traffic and followed the edge of the mountain. When you looked down, it was several thousand feet to a tree-covered valley floor below. Along the side of the road there was snow, thirty feet deep from Ginnell Glacier. It was cold enough to see your breath and wish for your long red flannels. We saw a brown bear. It wasn't very large, only about a year old. The mountain streams are swift, clear, cold and rocky bottoms.

Leaving the park at St. Mary's, we entered the Blackfoot Inyan Reservoir. We spent one night in town, Mont., in the midst of the reservation.

A small camp of Indians had gathered on the edge of the city for a "big Fourth of July celebration and rodeo." They lived in teepees and small duty shacks. It was a common sight to see an old Indian squaw with a papoose on her back as she serenely sat eating an ice cream cone. The older people and a few of the young wore long braids and moccasins. The women wore brightly-colored "Indian" skirts, blouses, and colored beads around their necks. The blouses looked much like the American cowboy except they may have a bright leather stuck in the Band of his black ten-gallon hat. The Indians were just the way we read about them in books. Maybe the mountains didn't seem so high or the cowboys forgot to carry six-guns but the Indians still the "Great Man." Many Indians ran the land the government gave them to the white people.

As we traveled homeward across northern Montana and North Dakota we would expect to find a wilderness country much like northern Michigan but the country is gently rolling green plains that seem to stretch far beyond the horizon. Again the towns were miles apart and cowboys could be seen tending herd in the distance. One young Indian cowboy who was heading 2,000 head of sheep and 50 head of cattle sold us a little about his job. As he came down out of the hills to the highway his horse and clothes were covered with mosquitoes that breed on the stagnant water in the irrigation ditches. He received $120 a month plus food, supplies. Fresh food was brought out about every two weeks. He also said that the coyotes had been killing off his sheep lately. Here was a real cowboy complete with a rifle.

As many people have had the opportunity to visit Minnesota and its—lakes, lakes, and Wisconsin with its large prosperous-looking dairy farms, I will not go into detail about it.

The entire trip took 19 days and we traveled a total of 5,575 miles. A person could talk or write about the mountains, valleys and prairies forever and you could not really conceive their real beauty or get the thrill of being 10,866 feet high. Go West, fellow travelers, to its land of cowboys and Indians in all its glory.

Ill. University Offers Advice On Heating Houses

Storm Windows Demonstrate Saving Of 15% To 25% Of Home Fuel Cost

Urbana, Ill.—Here in Urbana, there is a pleasant six-room house that looks like any other good, modern, medium-priced home. But when you go inside you find it full of odd contraptions for measuring temperatures.

There are temperature-taking devices in the middle of the living room, while in the basement you find a control panel that looks like the fore part of a transcontinental plane, together with recording equipment that might belong to a weather bureau. Fifteen miles of the one-coupled wire for taking temperature readings are strung through the house.

This is a research home of the Institute of Boilers and Radiator Manufacturers. It is completely furnished and occupied so the Institute can make its studies under actual home conditions.

Many things the inexperienced home builder would like to learn about heating his house are being found out here. Under direction of Prof. Warren S. Harris, through publications of the Small Homes Council, and the Engineering Experiment Station they are being given out to the public.

Here are some of the practical findings:

Storm Sash Pays—Studies show a 15 to 25% saving in the fuel bill as a result of putting tight storm windows through-out the house. Weatherstripping accomplishes much the same thing but is more expensive. Storm windows have the added virtue of making the window panes warmer in cold weather so there is less discomfort due to loss of body heat to glass. Either type of window protection prolongs the life of heating equipment by reducing the load upon it.

Radiant Baseboard Heating—Conventional radiators are usually unsightly, awkward dust-catching objects. What can one substitute for them? A metal baseboard that looks like any other baseboard but which actually radiates heat has been proposed as the answer, and tests conducted by Professor Harris in the research house prove it practical. In an insulated house a radiant baseboard of normal baseboard size provides sufficient heat in a house that is not insulated, the baseboard must be wider than normal. Professor Harris says that radiant baseboard temperatures yet achieved, giving out heat in the cold stratum of the room, that nearest the floor. It is just going on the market.

Panel Heating—Prof. J. T. Lendrum of the Small House Council staff says, "Stay away from panel heat (pipes buried in the floor, ceiling or wall) when there is no expert on hand to design the system and supervise its installation. It will have to be developed further before local builders can design such a system with a certainty of success."

Tests made here and also in the College of Engineering experimental laboratory point out some facts about radiation, such as these:

- Asbestos paper covering. Pipes wrapped in asbestos paper look well insulated. As a matter of fact, laboratory tests show that shining metal of the pipe itself is a better insulator. It takes five layers of asbestos paper to equal the insulating qualities of the gleaming metal. The answer is—don't cover them.
- Type of paint. Bronze or aluminum paint on radiators provides undesired insulation, reducing efficiency as much as 10%. Use ordinary oil-paint on radiators.
- Basement heat. Don't worry about letting some heat from your fuel unit escape into the basement. This heat helps heat the house.
- Thermostat. Place thermostat as far up the wall as is usually done. Gauge the warmth of the room not for the person who is standing, but for the one who is seated in a chair.

Don't Ask Miracles In Hay Fever Drugs—That period of discomfort for hay fever victims, when sneezes tend the air and the world is seen through watered eyes, is drawing near. To the unfortunates, the daily pollen count now assumes the importance of waiting communications.

Dr. John M. Sheldon, head of the University of Michigan Hospital Allergy Clinic, has this word of caution for the "sneezers"—don't expect miracles from a new group of drugs. These new drugs, identified in the anti-histamine group, have been found to be of benefit in some cases of hay fever, hives and asthma, the doctor asserts, but in many cases are known to produce annoying effects such as drowsiness and fatigue. More experimentation must be done with such drugs, he adds.

But the picture for relief from hay fever isn't all pessimistic, Dr. Sheldon hastens to add. He makes the following suggestions: Most hay fever sufferers can be helped by being hypo-sensitized. This means having extracts of the pollen to which they are susceptible injected into their systems to build up an immunity.

The ideal method is to go to a region in which the pollen to which the victim is susceptible is not found in sufficient quantities to cause discomfort. In Michigan, the region above the Muskegon and Bay City line is a haven of relief to many pestered by hay fever, particularly from mid-August to the first frost.

Early morning exercise, provided golf and swimming are excluded, will provide partial relief for some unfortunate. Golf causes exposure to an increased amount of pollen, while swimming irritates sensitive nose tissues. And high speed driving with the automobile windows open also is a good way to be exposed to more pollen.

Mentholated cigarettes may bring temporary relief to a few sufferers but generally discomfort is increased almost immediately after such a cigarette.

Filters which clear the air of pollen can be placed in rooms and will bring considerable relief. Using this method, many sufferers could spend a few hours outside without too much discomfort.

Inhaling the vapor of penicillin may have some curative effect on some bacterial allergic cases but on the other hand—the mold may cause symptoms in persons sensitive to penicillin. Grain smuts and rusts also cause hay fever.

M.S.C. Advises On Grain Preservation During Bin Storage

Ray Hutson, head of the department of entomology at Michigan State college, doesn't believe farmers would put their monetary savings in bins to which the bugs and rats had access. But he is afraid many are going to throw their equally valuable 1946 small grain harvest into similar storage containers and hope it will keep.

With DDT now available, the control of weevil and other insects is much easier.

For safe storage, the first requirement is a bin which has been thoroughly cleaned. All old wheat or grain should be removed and the bin swept clean. This is the way to tell whether the bin is tight. The second requirement is making the bin tight so insects and rodents cannot enter. After those two chores are accomplished, the spraying can be done.

For grains stored for feed or cereal products, a spray containing 5% or less of DDT in refined, deodorized kerosene or in water suspensions or emulsions should be used. Applied to the walls and woodwork at a rate of not more than one gallon of spray per 1,000 square feet it will do the job. The spray should be applied and allowed to thoroughly dry before the grains are put in the bin.

If the grain is to be stored for seed purposes, a different treatment should be used. Hutson said DDT of 3% DDT in pyrophyllite, thoroughly mixed with the seed, one-half ounce of dust to one bushel of seed, or 3% DDT in magnesium oxide, applied in the same manner is the proper treatment. This method, however, is not recommended for stored grains or cereal products to be used for food.

Under normal conditions, these precautions will take care of normal insect infestations. Should abnormal infestations arise and fumigation be necessary, the county agent should be consulted, Hutson said.

Farmers Have Poor Safety Record Says State Specialist

Contrary to popular opinion, farming is not the safest occupation, and neither is home—the safest place. Fred W. Roth, extension safety specialist at Michigan State college, reveals that more than 16,000 farm people were killed in 1945 and 1,500,000 were injured. Agriculture employs about one-sixth of all the workers, but has one-fourth of the occupational accidents, which give it a death rate 1½ times higher than the all-industry rate.

More farm people lose their lives by accidents in the home than any other place on the farm. Last year accidents in and around the farm home took a toll of 6,500 lives. Falls and burns were the chief causes of accidental home deaths every year. Stairs without handrails, broken steps, slippery rugs and floors, and improvised ladders are the most common conditions causing people to fall to their death. Burns from gasoline and kerosene explosions, and those resulting from failure to escape a burning house, are responsible for a large share of the home fatalities, Roth reports.

Fatal farm work accidents are chiefly due to improper handling of machinery and livestock. Tractors and other machinery are not particularly dangerous when properly operated, but they will maim and kill when carelessly handled. Roth reports a great deal of time and effort has been devoted to the development of safe design, but any machine is only as safe as its operator. Most fatal accidents with farm machinery are not due to mechanical defects, but instead, to careless or improper handling of equipment.

Farm animals are seldom vicious, yet many farmers become victims of livestock accidents each year. Runaway horses are one of the most frequent types, usually out to harness and equipment being in poor condition. The "gentle" bull annually cuts short many farmers' careers.

Food Locker Space May Be Saved By Boning The Meats

From 30 to 40% of your freezer storage space can be saved if meat is boned before packaging, according to L. J. Bratzler, extension agent of animal husbandry at Michigan State college. Boneless cuts are easier to wrap, can be wrapped tighter, and will store better than comparable bone-in cuts, he adds.

He also advises the housewife to plan the meat cutting to the family's tastes. If steaks are not enjoyed, the cheaper cuts can be ground and used for meat loaves, chili and hamburgers.

Ground meat, he says, does not store as well as steaks or roasts. If pork sausage is to be frozen and stored, it is recommended that all of the seasoning ingredients except salt be mixed in with the meat. The salt can be added during the cooking process. Salt, he believes, accelerates the development of acidity and should not be added to the pork sausage before freezing.

Cured meats do not store well in a frozen condition because of the salt.

Bratzler recommends that all meat be tightly wrapped with a moisture-vapor proof material that is elastic, tough and pliable. Beef and lamb supplies should be consumed in six or seven months, while pork and veal should not remain in lockers over three or four months. Thus, he believes, will insure the meat being at the best quality.

BALANCES the budget

"You have to be a trained seal to balance a budget these days!" complains Mrs. Brodie.

"Everything costs so much! Take clothing—when you can get it," says Mrs. Brodie, "and look at the price tags! And food—that's simply skyrocketed! Housefurnishings—if you can find a house to furnish—are way up!"

"But not electricity!" says Mrs. Brodie. "No, indeed!" says Mrs. Brodie. "Electricity has been coming down steadily for years!"

"Electricity," says Mrs. Brodie, "is just about the easiest thing in my budget to balance!"

If you have a budget to balance—and who hasn't?—you'll appreciate that the low cost of electricity is no accident. It took plenty of practical planning and experience on the part of the folks in this company who—like Mrs. Brodie—have budgets to balance, too.

(Don't take Mrs. Brodie's word for the rise in living costs. The U. S. Department of Labor will furnish you the figures, if you're interested.)

With The Boys In Service
 Hubert Paul Writes of Shanghai
 The following was received recently by Miss Adeline Paul from her son, Hubert, now serving with the U S Navy in the West Pacific.
 Shanghai, China, July 3, 1946
 Dear Mom We pulled into Shanghai June 29 and I was transferred yesterday to this ship for duty. It was originally an LST but was converted into a repair ship.
 It's a clean little ship with about 200 men aboard. I think I'm going to like it. There is only one lated man in the gallery and from all indications I'll get my rate the first of August.
 I had tried to make a liberty here in Shanghai and pick up some sort of curio. They have some swell silk garments here, they say "But our orders say to leave here Saturday, to proceed to Japan to pick-up an APL (floating barge) and tow it to Pearl Harbor. So it looks like I won't get a chance to see much of Shanghai.
 When newspapers and magazines talk of the pitiful way the Chinese live here they are not exaggerating a bit. Day before yesterday we threw overboard some grapefruit rinds and the Chinks were right there with their little boats to pick them up. When they left there wasn't a rind left in the water. All day long they are after our garbage to feed their families.
 The most shocking sight I have ever seen in my life happened the same day. The grapefruit rind deal took place. Another ship's cook and I were standing near the rail and saw a Chinese coolie rowing his tampa (a small "two-by-four" cradle-shape boat) up the river and as he neared the ship we could see he was towing something behind him. When he came closer we could make it out plainly. It was a small baby not over 10 months old and its arms and legs were swollen almost twice their natural size. The water soaked or diseased. When the coolie passed he just waved and smiled as unconcerned about the baby as if it were not there.
 I'll never forget that as long as I live. It still makes icicles up my spine when I think about it.
 Loads of love, Hubie

Dale Florey, S 2/C, son of Mr and Mrs. Anna Florey, arrived home Saturday on boat leave. He received his training at Green Bay, Ill. He reports back to Great Lakes August 1.

Asks Churches To Join Efforts In Banishment War
 that "the supreme duty of statesmen and churchmen at this crucial hour is to use every means at their command to prevent another world conflict and to bind up the unhealed wounds left by the last one."
 "This is no time for them to resort either to subterfuge or aggression as a means of extending the political influence of any church or state," the statement said.
 Continuing on these lines, the Directors insisted that "there is no room in the church for politics, and in a democratic system of government there is no room in politics for the church. There is, however, always room in politics for the moral sense of religion."
 Applying that statement with equal force to national and international affairs, the Directors added: "It makes little difference whether it be a conflict between political ideologies and religious dogmas—or an open warfare between armed forces, the results are always stultifying."
 "If those who are today engaged in the grave task of building a world government for the purpose of establishing permanent and universal peace on earth, fail to turn to God for guidance and fail to make spiritual integrity the very foundation stone in their structures, they will have labored in vain."
Here's Proposition
 milk, he rears back and spouts milk like a North Atlantic whale blowing off, sprinkling over all the surrounding landscape, including yourself. Also as the calf gets enthusiastic over the meal he registers his approval by a series of butts. His mamma would stop this by squaring around and lifting the calf with a retreating butt, but this is not a satisfactory comeback when the costume of the feeder is already drenched with milk.
 The way to stop the butting is to tie a bowline knot with the calf's tail and one ear. This stops the butting, as the calf has to lean back and then lunge ahead. The tie-up tends to lift his hind feet off the ground as he goes back and his front feet off as he goes ahead, which effectively takes all the power out of the butt. However, if it don't work it's a good idea to have a towel handy to swab yourself with.
 Bill reports that the calf now weighs close to 100 pounds and is putting on 2 to 3 pounds daily by throwing the calf around a bit every day, and developing his muscle as the calf grows, Bill is confident that he will still be able to throw him around when he is a full-grown bull two or three years hence, weighing 1,800 or 2,000 pounds. Ordinarily we would consider him overcontent, but knowing something of Bill's ability in the throwing line we're betting on him.

Sees Victory Over Common Cold
'Good' Microbes Will Conquer 'Bad' Ones; Hit Infantile Paralysis
 A prophecy was made that "good" microbes would some day bring under control the "bad" microbes that cause the common cold, infantile paralysis and tuberculosis.
 This prediction was made by Dr. Selman A. Waksman, of Rutgers University, discoverer of streptomycin, the "wonder drug" that already has shown some signs of combating tuberculosis.
 Dr. Waksman's audience included some of the world's greatest scientists who, with engineers and educators, attended the George Westinghouse centennial forum.
 Dr. Waksman told them that the "time is not far distant" when such diseases as the common cold and tuberculosis will be controlled.
 "Microbes are everywhere. They can't be seen because they're the tiniest of living beings. Some live in waste products of animal or plant life; some are in rivers and oceans. Others live in the tissues of animals and plants. Some of them cause disease. But by far the greater number are the saprophytic microbes, which are beneficial to man."
 Fortunately, the good microbes destroy the microbes that cause disease and epidemics in man and animals.
 Microbiologists, said Dr. Waksman, have by careful study succeeded in isolating a variety of the good microbes and in separating from their cultures certain chemical substances called "antibodies."
 "These are the ones that have been domesticated to render service to mankind."
 "Some of these antibodies," Dr. Waksman said, "give promise of exceeding in usefulness the sulfa drugs which have proved to be so valuable in recent years for combating many human and animal diseases."
 Treatment of disease with chemical agents is called chemotherapy. And chemotherapy, beginning with the use of salvarsan, the introduc-

Archers Are Warned Crossbow Ranks As Dangerous Weapon
 Sportsmen thinking of investing in crossbows as currently advertised in Michigan papers and illustrated in fancy models in archery magazines are reminded by the conservation department of two attorney general's opinions controlling their use in Michigan.
 The first opinion, dated March 13, 1940, and directed to the State Police commissioner, holds the crossbow is a dangerous weapon of the kind that may not be carried in a car without a concealed weapons permit. The second opinion, dated July 10, 1940, and directed to the department of conservation, holds the crossbow may not be substituted for the long bow in "bow and arrow" hunting provided for by law, but is a mechanical device of the sort that may not be used for the purpose of capturing or killing game.

End Of Sellers' Market Is Hinted By Sale Of Goods

Customers In Waiting Mood For Better Makes And Lower Prices

Hints that the 5-year-old sellers' market may be nearing an end are sounding faintly from the retail field.

Evidence of this was turned up in a Wall Street Journal survey of dozens of department stores in 11 key cities. It showed:

Many orders for goods placed on the books in the past year or more are willing away as items become available.

Several widely-used items are available now at prices sharply below wartime levels, as old established producers get going.

Supplies of many pieces of merchandise are becoming slightly more plentiful, despite strikes and other conversion problems.

Such developments, however, are largely obscured by the huge volume of business the retailers are doing. A check recently of a dozen department stores across the country revealed their dollar sales last week were anywhere from 6% to 30% above last year's record level.

It has long been argued by economic forecasters that such a strong retail demand would be bolstered for many months, perhaps years ahead by the backed-up demand for such war-casualty items as autos, refrigerators and radios. But experience seems to indicate that demand isn't as strong as believed.

A Pittsburgh Ford dealer says "Some persons have their names with every auto dealer in Allegheny County. When a delivery is made, all duplicated orders, of course, are cancelled." He guesses that only one of our four people on his list will actually buy a car from him.

Many an order is disappearing because people no longer have the money to pay for goods at today's high prices. Long strikes have cut deeply into wartime savings.

A Portland, Ore., salesman declared, "Recently I called a woman who had put her name on our refrigerator last early in 1945. When I told her we had one for her she said she couldn't afford it now."

Another Portland merchant asserted that of a list of 19 names, taken in 1944, only three want to buy a refrigerator now, the rest don't want them or have bought them elsewhere.

"People are getting more particular," he said. "We had a request for a left-handed door for a refrigerator—something we probably won't have for a year."

One store owner in a small Ohio town recently made a check of the 60 persons on his waiting list for refrigerators. He found that 26 were "definitely sure" they would buy them, 22 were "pretty sure" and 12 canceled their orders. This same dealer estimates that half the customers on his waiting lists for small electrical appliances, such as irons, lamps and fluorescent lighting fixtures, refused cheaper brands when they became available and preferred to wait for "the very best."

A Chicago merchandiser had 90 people waiting to buy typewriters. When he received a shipment of 40 from one company not long ago, nine out of ten customers preferred to hold off until the makes they wanted are available. This trend of watchful-waiting prevails in the radio-phonograph field.

Retailers report that many veterans, after canceling orders for household items because they can't find apartments or homes to put them in.

Auto dealers say demand for cars is swollen by customers who sign up with several dealers and after delivery resell them at sizable black market profits. Philadelphians have complained that some new cars are appearing in used car showrooms shortly after delivery to purchasers.

Increased production and the re-appearance of familiar-brand products on the market are cutting some prices.

"Lately, instead of having men's shirts for $2.50 and $3.50 a pair, we've had some from $1 and up and occasionally some that sell for 39 and 79 cents," said one Washington retailer. "As soon as we get enough to put them on the counter, the public stopped hoarding them."

Back on the San Francisco display counters is a General Electric heater selling at its ceiling price of $9. It is challenging a $14 new-brand heater that popped up during the war.

A Kirby vacuum cleaner has been retailed in the West Coast city for $107.50. It sold at this price before the war but gave its customers a large trade-in allowance. During the war it dropped the trade-in feature but retained the high price. Now Hoover has invaded the field with a comparable model selling for $75.50.

In San Francisco imported $6.68 Swiss alarm clocks now have to vie with $4.50 Big Bens A Milano aluminum sauce pan is coming back at its old price of 85 cents, competing with stainless steel pans that go for $1.89. A polished aluminum Wagner Dutch oven, with stand included, retails for $7.50 compared to an unpolished wartime make without a stand which costs $7.95.

Los Angeles' Milson's Fifth Street store now has new scooters for $3.95. An inferior wartime model brought $10.

In stores across the country Duane undershirts, which have not been available for several years, will soon be back. They will sell for 59 cents; this is 10 cents more than the 1941 price but considerably less than models now retailing for $1 and $2.

Retailers in most cities say the flow from the factories of pots, pans and such aluminum ware, such as coasters, trays and decorative baskets, is swelling. Other metal items reappearing are curtain rods, bathroom fixtures, waste baskets, toys, brass snap fasteners, brass compacts, tweezers and nail files, brass safety pins, aluminum cutlery, nickel-plated scissors, shoe trees and metal containers for tooth paste and lip stick.

Many of these metal items, however, are still available only in very limited quantities. Retailers report that supplies of them usually move in and out of their stores in the same day.

Good leather items are bowing in again on the nation's retail markets. In San Francisco bill-folds and key cases of cowhide or pigskin have reappeared at their pre-war price of $5. Those made during wartime of sheep- and goat skin have dropped from $5 to $3 and $2.50.

F. W. Woolworth lists 40 items in stock again after a wartime absence. Some are Scotch tape, human and silk hair nets, rubber sponges, gloves, toys and dressing combs, silk thread, battery testers, thermometers, polishing cloths, weather stripping and coat hangers.

Display windows are also blossoming with such other strangers as sheets and towels, innerspring mattresses, cotton rugs, linen handkerchiefs, movie cameras, projectors, tennis rackets and golf balls and clubs.

But the demand pressure is keeping prices of scarce merchandise up and forcing higher other items which have been relieved of their ceilings. Pittsburgh shoppers can't find any women's swim suits which cost about $5 before the war but they can buy a goodly supply of cotton bathing suits retailing for $15 and $18.

Merchandisers say the lumber shortage is responsible for the retailer market's dearth of furniture and wooden radio cabinets. They don't believe this situation will ease for at least a year.

Department stores report, however, that supplies of upholstered furniture are slightly better in the higher priced lines because many new companies are turning it out. About 40 have popped up in the Los Angeles area alone since the end of the war.

A Pittsburgh retailer says, "We are getting radios—but not nice ones. Small table models are available, although they're not too plentiful."

Only a trickle of hard goods is coming to the stores. There are waiting lists to buy ranges, washing machines and refrigerators in Los Angeles. A Cleveland store is just starting to get washing machines, vacuum-cleaners and sewing machines. Their first shipment of lawn mowers since the war arrived last week.

One department store manager in San Francisco sums up his situation "Among household articles, fixtures, screens and andirons in both iron and brass are about the trestle items in supply that we have."

Supplies of men's suits are about 10% better than six months ago and men's furnishings are 15% better, retailers estimate. But the quantity is far from adequate.

"This morning we hung out 200 suits," said a Portland haberdasher. "They were gone in no time—faster than Grant took Richmond."

Summer suits, however, in most cities are in "relatively comfortable supply." A Los Angeles store had 1,500 seersuckers in its racks last week. It advertised them but says they are "moving very slowly."

Recently a New York department store advertised a big white shirt sale, it offered 20,000 shirts, at $4.98 each. "Expecting tremendous traffic, the buyer scattered the shirts well through the store. They moved so slowly, however, that he had to move them back to the regular shirt department."

HOLLYWOOD

Thursday, Friday, Saturday, July 25-26-27, the Hollywood will present the biggest show of the week. Two hit features, a thrilling serial and a color cartoon will be shown. The first feature is "Tokyo Rose" with Osa Massen and Keye Luke. The film tells how a band of courageous Yanks dared danger on all sides to track down "Tokyo Rose" at her secret hide-out. Interned by ruthless Nips, they helped to write the final chapter of the war, which ended in the surrender of Japan. "Tokyo Rose" is a humdinger of a thriller—a story stranger than fiction based on one of World War II's most amazing personalities. The second hit on the program is "Wild Bill Elliott in 'Phantom of the Flams'" with Bobby Blake and Alice Fleming. The Red Eyelet series have always been gripping, exciting screen entertainment, but this new hit surpasses all its predecessors. Bill Elliott again proves his skill as a rider and gun-toter in a picture that will have theatre audiences on the edge of their seats from start to finish. Sunday and Monday, July 28-29, the feature attraction will be "Breakfast in Hollywood" with Tom Beneman, Bonita Granville, Spike Jones and his City Slickers and Andy Russell. To the legion of Tom Beneman fans, "Breakfast in Hollywood" will be a sheer delight. In fact it is our prediction that this hit will convert many movie-goers to Beneman admirers. In the film the genial host dominates most of the footage playing the good Samaritan—down or Cupid. In all instances he emerges as a lovable personality who hits the jackpot in his first screen role.

Tuesday and Wednesday, July 30-31, "Three Strangers" will take over the Hollywood screen. The stars in this new hit are Geraldine Fitzgerald, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre. A suspense-laden plot of mystery and intrigue hangs over the nefarious activities of the oddly come together "Three Strangers" who jointly hold a winning sweepstakes ticket that cannot be cashed in when it becomes an important mid-air clue.

Wild Life Notes From "Sportsman"

The following outdoor life notes are taken from the July issue of the "Berrien County Sportsman", published monthly by the Berrien County Sportsmen's Club.

Deer The men who know deer believe that Michigan's deer counts are carrying a dangerously large population. Deer have been favored by a few open winters. One old fashioned Michigan winter would knock the deer herd away down. Probably the annual kill should be stepped up 25 or 50%. Probably the conservation department should be authorized to provide local open seasons for antlerless deer.

Pheasant The increasing numbers of Michigan hunters who have shot pheasant in the Dakotas have learned what conditions are needed to produce a maximum pheasant population—rich soil and dense cover.

In Michigan, the rich soil is intensively cultivated. Also Michigan is blessed by a much heavier rainfall than the Dakotas, which involves the hazard of wet springs and poor nesting. We can't do anything about the weather, but perhaps organized sportsmen will eventually work out closer co-operation with farmers, along the lines of the Williamson plan, and establish improved conditions for pheasants.

Grouse The ups-and-downs of the ruffed grouse cycle are still a mystery. Apparently the cycle may vary from one area to another, within a fifty mile radius. The migrations of ruffed grouse battle the best of hunters, and help the species survive. Because you found poor hunting the year before may also mean that the birds had shifted their feeding range half a mile or so.

The encouragement of food growth on public shooting grounds may build up a grouse population. Probably grouse hunting will continue to be a fascinating, and highly uncertain sport.

Prairie Chicken The prairie chicken and sharp-tail offer very interesting possibilities for future generations of sportsmen. This spring, large-scale controlled burning has been tried, to provide the kind of open country favored by chicken and sharp-tail.

Indiana Releases 12,000 Pheasants. The Indiana Department of Conservation released 12,000 pheasants to survive the winter, so the Conservation Commission determined to hold birds through the winter for early spring release. Raised at the Jasper-Pulaski and Wells county game farms, 10,000 hens and 2,000 cock birds were freed during April in "the largest release of full-grown birds ever made in Indiana."
