Falling Trees Nip Power Wires And Block Roads

Now Here's the Proposition

A Buchanan woman calls on this column for a mixed pickle recipe popular in Buchanan. The women will know which one, she says. HELP! HELP!

Indoor Sports
Whenever a lull comes in our labors, it is our wont to pan the neighbors. So warmer grows the heated breeze. The while we hold our roasting bees. To all their frailties immense, their glaring lack of common sense, the way they never save a penny. The way they raise their kids if any, their blunders and their fiddling ways. We show the reverse of praise. And while it sounds like the old Harry. It really is quite necessary. There is no reason we should rue it. In fact, we're really forced to do it. For all the time, with gusto plus. We know they are dissecting us.

Strange Case of Window-Peeping

An unusual case of window-peeping comes from the North Buchanan district. Lester Roundy, who lives at the junction of the Glendora and Madron roads, was getting ready to leave one evening this past week when he heard a noise on a ladder leaning against the side of the house. Looking up he saw the noise came from two baby raccoons clambering about the ladder at the level of a second story window. Roundy went up and took the two babies by the tails, carrying them down. Around the corner of the house he met Mother Coon and another baby. Later that evening the family heard a splashing outside and investigated. Two of the baby coons were washing their hands and faces in a flower watering pot.

Joe Birdsall and Doc Dahlberg Co-Author Book

Some Buchananiacs may remember Joseph Birdsall, son of the famous South Bend wagon-making family, who years ago as a boy used to accompany his brother, John Birdsall, who made exhaustive studies of the Moccasin village sites and many other Indian sites along the St. Joseph. Later Joe Birdsall went professional and was an anthropologist on the staff of the University of Southern California. During his connection with the two institutions he has made extensive trips in anthropology study over the world.

He is the joint author of a new book, "The Origin of the American Indians" developing the theory of an Asiatic origin. The other author is Dr. Albert Dahlberg of the Department of Anthropology of the University of Chicago. Dr. Dahlberg is a frequent visitor at the home of Lewis Miller, Chicago banking expert, near the Coventry corners on the Glendora road.

Can You Top This?

Here's a good "can-you-top-this" item for the Buchanan district—and if you can top it, let's hear from you. Pat Casey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Casey of Pike Lake, completed his first assignment in the employ of the Patricia Stevens Modeling Agency of Chicago, at the age of 2½ years this past week by modeling as pilot of a toy racing car. His picture was taken at the wheel, to be included in the 1951 Christmas catalogue of a Chicago house. The "must" which was doubtless required for the job included a scenic quality in the model, plus a single-minded enthusiasm for the job. Pat not only had "it"—he had everything! He was so enthusiastic about the piloting that he wanted to drive the pedal-powered racing car right out of the place. But he couldn't draw his pay until Mrs. Casey got him a social security card. There's millions of holders of social security cards in the U. S. but not so many that are younger than Pat.

His older brother, Tommy, aged 5½, is a veteran model, he also got his first assignment at 2½ and pulled a social security card at the same time. He works for Patricia Stevens also.

Subjects to be discussed include the overall Civil Defense medical plan, casualty care stations, industrial plant first aid, public health aspects of sanitation, maternal and child care, communicable diseases, and the role of the volunteer, both professional and non-professional, in medical and health services.

Cramer's Paid Dollar Refund On Boy's Snitching

Former Buchanan Boy Sends Dollar Bill To Pay For Stolen Cookies

In the past week Cramer's Market received a letter which proved that conscience is not entirely dead in everybody, despite occasional evidence to the contrary. The letter bore the following address: "To the proprietor (heir or agent) of the grocery store in Buchanan, Mich."

Then "on the back" of the envelope is a map, which accurately indicates the grocery to be Cramer's Market. Inside the letter was the following message: "Dear Sir: At the age of ten I live in Buchanan and like to many boys of that age, helped myself to your bulk-sale cookie boxes on occasion. Just recently it was brought to my memory, and, although a minor thing as value goes, it is a sin—enough to send me to hell. "So, I am enclosing this $1.00 to cover all incidents, asking your forgiveness. "If this store has changed hands or gone out of business, please do write this money as you feel you should. "Bruce R. Moore"

The letter is written on the letterhead of a religious sect, the Christian Fellowship Union. On the left side is a list of the Texas field headquarters of its activities, including McAllen, which seems to be Moore's headquarters. Below the list is a caption, "Work-beneath it, indicating that he is an active worker in the movement. The map on the back is a diagram of the streets in the vicinity of Cramer's, with one notation, "Co-ops somewhere here," indicating that Moore lived here since 1933, when the present Co-ops received its name. It was previously the St. Joseph Valley Shipping company. The grocery is indicated by a heavily-inked square with the notation, "Grocery store on Oak street 2 or three doors from the corner." The location is accurately placed with reference to the street and the "creek," which in reality is the mill race.

Vacation Reports

Explaining That Scared Look In His Eye
Comes now a note from Knott's Berry Farm and Ghost Town near Beuma Park, Calif., stating that one, George Mills, recently set out for California with his banjo on his knee, also his wife, and called in the course of his prospecting at the above-mentioned place. Here, said the letter-prospectus, cowboys, ladies in long ruffled dresses and bearded prospectors mingle with the throng of visitors. George needed a shave himself, stated the letter. These publicity representatives tell everything.

Summer Park Recreation Program To Close This Week

The Story of Buchanan

ADVANCE GUARD OF SETTLERS TELL OF INDIANS

When the Potawatomis, with other tribes, had signed the treaty of Sept. 26, 1833, in Chicago, ceasing their rights to the reservation which included large parts of the present Buchanan and Bertrand townships, Niles township east of the river, and a small corner of Galien township, they had three years to vacate the lands. But the white settlers began to encroach on the lands, the situation often being that they offered to buy the lands from the Potawatomis and the latter refused so they moved in and settled anyway, knowing that the Indians would soon have to leave and they could then settle with the government. The first settlers made their claim along the St. Joseph river, most of them members of crews of steamboats or keelboats. These men usually picked sites close to the river where water power was available.

Such was the case with Charles Cowles and Russell McCoy, first of the settlers on the present site of Buchanan near the mouth of McCoy's creek. Both were river men. The case of McCoy is typical of the proceedings of "squatters." Their methods were not wholly illegal, except for the fact that the terms of the treaty required that they obtain permission of the Indians before locating.

McCoy during his trips up and down the river had spotted a site at the mouth of McCoy's creek, where the tumbling waters of the creek promised mill power. The descendants of McCoy insisted that the creek was named for him. However Edward Cowles, whose family had lived here before 1833, and who wrote the district's first history in 1872, definitely assigned the derivation of the name to Rev. Isaac McCoy, which seems doubtless reliable.

Russell McCoy acted in accordance with treaty requirements in attempting to get consent of the Indians. He went first to the head chief, Topinabee, who refused him the right. Here the weakness of the enforcement of the Indian treaties became apparent. McCoy simply went to another chief, Pokagon Pokagon was honest, but he did not want to offend the whites, as he hoped to remain. So he evaded the issue by telling McCoy that if he built a house the Indians would tear it down. He built a log house, which the Indians tore down shortly afterward. He then rebuilt it and it was permitted to remain.

Charles Cowles came about the same time, squatting on a claim above McCoy's. These men were not illegal land squatters. The pre-emption laws of 1832 and 1834 permitted settlers to occupy lands in advance of official surveys, provided that they went through the required formalities of land purchase within a time limit after the surveys were made. In such cases they were guaranteed the first right to buy the land. Many of these pre-emption settlers failed to record their filings, and their rights were not honored at the time of regular land sale, as occurred in one famous case within Buchanan's present site.

A famous English woman, Harriet Martineau, traveled across the southern edge of the reservation, via the old Chicago road, on June 14, 1836, only a few months before the rights of the Indians expired. In the famous book she afterwards wrote, "Society in America," she noted the many Indian women she saw in Niles, some with silver ornaments on earrings and bosom brooches, and the two stately Indian braves whom she saw riding the St. Joseph on horseback opposite the town. Only a mile to the west was Topinabee's village, not far south of the abandoned, Carey Mission buildings.

Before dawn on June 14, the stagecoach was hauled across the river by a rope ferry, and landed on the western bank in Indian land. As the coach climbed the hills in the darkness she could see the Indian lodges in the forest glades, the embers of their wood fires gleaming. She also saw the log cabins of the squatters. The stagecoach stopped at a squatter's claim a few miles on, still within the reservation. It was hardly to be expected that Miss Martineau would be familiar with the conditions on which the Indians held their land, and the early date at which all their rights would automatically expire in accordance with treaty provisions. Anyway she wrote "We stopped for some milk at the location of a squatter whose wife was milking as we passed. The gigantic petting-house, her husband, told us how anxious he was to pay for the land which repaid his tillage so well, but that his Indian neighbors would not sell. I hope that by this time he has had to remove and leave them (the Indians) the benefit of his house and fences."

She also heard rumors that a party of Potawatomi had gone a long distance to visit a tribe of warlike Indians related to them, who had promised military and other aid in return, in full war paint and other regalia, and threatened the squatters, so the rumor went. No doubt this rumor was entirely without basis, merely one of the tales that passed by word of mouth and grew by telling, in a land where the only passage of news was on a month-to-month basis. All the Indians of this region were by that time broken by defeat to offer any serious resistance.

More authentic information regarding the behavior of the Potawatomis comes from a family history, "The Michigan Wallins." The book was given to the writer about twelve years ago, by Van A. Wallin, past president and then chairman of the board of the American Hair & Felt company, which leased the present Electro-Voice, Inc. building for a few years for the experimental manufacture of insulation material from tropic fiber under the trademark of "Dry Zero."

His grandfather, Dr. C. C. Wallin, had bought the claim of Charles Cowles in 1835, moving on it with his family in 1836. He was undoubtedly the first physician to practice in the area which was later to become Buchanan. Also when Buchanan township was organized in the spring of 1837 he became that township's first supervisor. In 1833 he published the family history "The Michigan Wallins," with some detail on their early life here which will be drawn on later in the course of this series.

They came to Buchanan in 1836, a few months before the Indian treaties finally terminated. The book contains the following paragraph on their relations with the Indians:

"A half-mile across the creek and through the belt of woods was a Potawatomi village. Uncle Thomas knew the chief, 'Squaqua.' A mile further down the river was another chief, 'Moccasin.' I have heard father tell of the Indians. They would ride up to the cabin on their ponies and beg his mother for bread. If the loaf was forthcoming they would race their ponies, throwing the bread high in the air ahead of them and catching it as it fell. Sometimes they came around drunk, insolent and ugly, demanding, with threatening gestures, 'Godamshug.' There was a loaf of sugar in the home, kept for unusual occasions of entertainment and this was greatly coveted by the redskins. At times they would peer in the windows and door of the log schoolhouse, which was near the Indian village, and frighten the children.

The teacher, Sarah Willet, who later became father's step-mother, and is the Grandmother Wallin whom I remember, was not a person to be intimidated, however, and, armed with a stout whip cut in the woods, would drive away a whole group.

It should be remembered that these same triflers were descendants of the warriors who went by canoe as far as Quebec, fighting on the side of the French against the English, and who left their villages here to make a last stand for their lands under Tecumseh. When hope left them the whiskey dealers took charge. Whatever else may be said of them, they were a brave and proud people in their original estate.

Basil Squires, Jr., of Battle Creek, is a guest of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Eisenhart.

Field Meet At Memorial Field Fri. Afternoon

Midget Softball Tie, Turtle Speed Event, Youth Council And Hawks Race Are Highlights

Organized summer recreation activities in Buchanan are drawing to a close, states Lester Miller, director, the Memorial Field program of ten-weeks duration closing Friday with a field meet beginning at 1:30 p.m. and including relay races and other activities.

A hot spot in the overall summer program is the race between the Church of Christ and Methodist midget softball teams for first place at the end of league play. A play-off will be held at a date announced later.

The Youth Council team is in undisputed first place in the adult softball league, but as only one notch ahead of the second-place Hawks, with a rained-out game still to play off. If the Hawks win they will be tied with the Youth Council for first place in summer play. The actual summer championship will be decided in the tournament to be held at a date to be announced.

A series of contests this week will close the summer recreation program for children at Kathryn park, Miss Maude Stale, recreational supervisor announced. The activities will close Saturday.

Mrs. Glover had lived in and around this community nearly all her life, and remained here continuously for the past 22 years. Before coming to Buchanan the last time, she was employed in the offices of the Warren company, Three Oaks.

THE LAW AND THE PRACTICE

In the statutes of the State of Michigan there are certain provisions for the behaviour of the motoring public during the passage of authorized emergency vehicles, such as fire trucks, ambulances, and police cars. It appears that the laws are "more honored in the breach than in the observance", and particularly in the case of fire trucks.

The law states: "Upon the immediate approach of an authorized emergency vehicle equipped with at least one lighted lamp exhibiting red light visible under normal atmospheric conditions from a distance of 500 feet to the front of such vehicle, and when the driver is giving audible signal by siren, exhaust whistle, or bell."

"The driver of every other vehicle shall yield the right-of-way and shall immediately drive to a position parallel to, and as close as possible to, the right-hand edge or curb of the roadway, clear of any intersection, and shall stop and remain in such position until the authorized emergency vehicle has passed, except when otherwise directed by a police officer."

Other sections forbid the driver of any car to accompany a fire truck enroute to a fire at a closer distance than 500 feet either in front or behind, also to park closer than 500 feet from the scene of a fire.

Recently the fire alarm sounded for a minor blaze near the junction of Portage and Front streets. The fire department truck followed the set route for blazes in that vicinity, north on Oak to Front and east on Front. The time was late afternoon with considerable traffic and solidly parked cars on the Front street stretch from Oak to Portage.

Into this traffic the truck swung, slowing down twice for cars obstructing the way, some which made no serious attempt to comply with the state law. Witnesses reported the occurrence to us.

Chief Cramer said that it had occurred, but that it was nothing out of the ordinary. A considerable per cent of the floating traffic along the routes taken by the fire truck is more interested in maneuvering into position to drive ahead or behind the truck to the scene of the fire, where quite ordinarily such cars park without respect for the 500-foot ban.

Police Chief Jack Krugh stated that this has been the observance of the police. However, a police escort for the fire engine has its hands full clearing the streets and guarding against accidents, and has no time to stop to issue a ticket to a lawbreaker. That part of the public who fail to observe the law also know that it is not possible for the police to arrest them.

So the observance of the law, at least along the avenue to the fire, is pretty much up to the honor of the public. Attendance of the general public at fires tends to be a nuisance in itself. When the public fails to observe the state laws which were enacted for the safety of themselves and to prevent all possible obstruction to the firemen, both enroute and at the scene of the fire, their attendance is not only a nuisance but a genuine hazard.

Certainly it is not in the line of decent citizenship to openly flaunt such laws merely because attendant circumstances make it possible for us to "get away with it."

Strange Ball Of Fire Bolt Reported At Home Of H. A. Harper

A unique "ball of fire" lightning bolt was reported at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Harper on the south side of East Front street near the Buchanan city limits late Tuesday night, at the beginning of the severe night storm.

Mrs. Harold Harper and her daughter, Mrs. Earl Dodge, were seated at the end of the 26-foot-long living room farthest from the door about 11:30 p.m., correcting proofs of a program. Suddenly there was a deafening crash and both saw a core of flame dancing across the rug from the front entry door to the opposite side of the 13½-foot-wide room. Mrs. Harper said that it was about 3 feet in diameter and was something like a core of fire with flames, leaping out of it. It crossed swiftly, but not instantaneously, apparently it grounded in a floor current plug. Although it seemed to touch the rug, no burned spots were left.

Examination afterward showed that the bolt entered the room beside and above the entry door, tearing a hole in the plaster about 6 inches in diameter. It is believed that it followed an aluminum eaves trough to the door. The bolt put the telephone out of commission.

Buchanan shared with the entire county sections of northern Indiana in a severe rain storm accompanied by wind and lightning, beginning immediately before midnight Tuesday and continuing until 2 a.m. Wednesday.

Three homes in the Buchanan district were reported hit by lightning, with minor damage. The old adage that lightning strikes only once in one place was again disproved at the Tom Kenton farm (former Capen place) on the Columbus side of the River, where a bolt hit a tree near the house and also connected with the light wire to the house, tearing a utility box off the outside wall.

A bolt entered the Henry Burget home on Terre Coupe road, tearing several light switches off the walls. A bolt entered the Glenn Swam home on North Chippewa street, via the electric conduit, burning the wiring out of a electric stove.

The Russell and Sprague wreckers were called out at 1 a.m., the former to remove a large maple tree which fell across the South Bend-Portage Road this side of the Hall Apple farm, blocking all traffic. The Sprague wrecker went to clear a huge wild cherry tree which fell across the Baker town cut-off road north of the Michigan Central crossing, hitting and slightly damaging one car and forcing a dump truck in the ditch.

The line department of the Indiana & Michigan reports a half dozen primary power wires down from falling trees in the Three Oaks and Sawyer districts, many roads leading to the northeast end of the county in the Wauwatosa and Columbus districts were reported blocked Wednesday morning.

The brunt of the storm hit South Bend, where in one section 50 trees were down in a space of three blocks, with a number of homes damaged and cars crushed. Heavy damage was also reported from Mishawaka.

The weather recording station at the I. Central power plant reported a total of 1.54 inches of rain during the night and early morning.

Glass It Taught To Bend And To Conduct Electricity

Five thousand-year-old glass, one of man's oldest materials, is just beginning to come of age. Up in the laboratories of Corning Glass Works in Corning, N. Y., where glass fibre was first invented, scientists have learned how to make glass do scores of quite unexpected things that it would never do before. These new tricks, taught an old dog, will eventually have major repercussions in our defense program and in industry.

Glass will break but not bend, but Corning can turn it out in flexible ribbons like thin cellophane. This trick means the United States need no longer fear a shortage of mica for essential electric apparatus, which was a critical item in the last war. Mica and Corning's new glass go into electrical gadgets called capacitors used by the million in the electrical industry.

Glass won't conduct electricity, but Corning worked out a thin hard chemical coating that turns glass into a conductor. This opens the way for electrically-heated windshields for cars and planes that will never freeze up. It means glass panels for radiant heating for rooms and self-heating glass vessels for delicate chemical operations. It also goes into another essential electrical gadget called a resistor.

Many ideas are being developed from another Corning discovery—how to make photo-sensitive glass. This is glass impregnated with a layer of photographic chemicals, similar to those used on film, which make it possible to have an imperishable photograph imbedded in the glass. This trick, while interesting, did not at first appear to be of too much practical use.

Then it occurred to research men to photograph the pattern of marble in sheets of glass. Architects for the new General Assembly building of the United Nations in New York wanted thin sheets of translucent marble that would transmit a soft light. Marble like this, however, is hard to find and costly. Corning's artificial marble is cheaper and quite as good looking, so it is going to be used.

This led to the idea of making glass "marble" for tombstones for the U. S. Military Graves commission. The glass is cheaper, stronger and is said to wear much better.

Another trick that the photochemists in the glass can be made to do is to form crystals giving the effect of opaque or "smoke glass" when the chemicals are exposed to ultra violet light. So the next step was to photograph a grill, similar to the egg crate screens of metal now used beneath fluorescent lights, directly in the glass. This means that lighting louvers, or shades, can be made directly from glass without bothering with the "egg crate" grills now used. The glass "grills" diffuse the light and direct it downward.

Beyond this is the still experimental but technically exciting idea of "chemically machining" glass. Brittle glass obviously cannot be processed with machine tools as can metal. But when the photochemists in glass are exposed to ultra-violet light through a pattern, they change the glass chemically along the design. Then when the glass is treated with acid the patterned part is eaten away, leaving the rest.

Corning shows visitors as an example a delicate lace dolly made by this method. This again probably has no practical use but the same method can be used to make glass strainers for Pyrex glass coffee percolators. Looking ahead, Corning research men hopefully note the method might eventually be used to make intricate electrical apparatus or even molds for casting metal.

Since glass scientists believe they are slowly turning glass into what we call an "engineering material" the possibilities in chemical machining are considered very important. Television led Corning scientists into another development which, they say, "is the most important advance in glass processes in a generation." It is called centrifugal casting. When television came along, Corning, which is a huge maker of electric light bulbs, was confronted with the demand for turning out yearly millions of big glass bulbs, known as blanks for the TV tubes. There have been 12 million TV tubes made by Corning and others since 1946. Making these large glass tubes, especially those of rectangular shape, posed a specially knotty problem. Corning licked this by putting the molten glass into a mold which is rotated at high speed. The spinning makes the molten glass rise in the mold and turns out a stronger, lighter product than can be made by the older method of blowing. The other new wrinkle was the use of electrical welding of glass, which made it possible to join the face of the tube to the base. Centrifugal casting has some fascinating possibilities to glass men. "We can make glass pipe six inches in diameter but we could never blow big cylinders before," they say. "Now if we can sell them, we can turn out 2,000 gallon tanks for the frozen fruit people or the food and drug manufacturers," they add. Glass tanks for home hot water heaters, which would not rust and would cost less than metal, could also be made. There are types of glass that will shut out heat and let through light, used in steel mills for workers to observe the furnaces. There is also glass that stops light and lets through heat. Other kinds stop or let through ultra-violet light. Some will stop X-rays, and others, used in X-ray tubes, let the rays through. A big division of the business is the well-known Pyrex glass for cooking utensils. Corning glass piping is used by the mile in government water plants. Optical glass for eye-glasses is now being made in bars ten feet long, and so clear that a book at one end can be read from the other. One proud achievement, now new, is a glass called Vycor, which is 98% pure silica. This glass will hold molten lead while standing on a cake of dry ice. It has not yet found large uses, but it has such extraordinary insulating properties that it is expected to find a place in some of the newer military devices. —Wall Street Journal

Here's The Proposition

(Continued from Page 1) of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wesner, 704 Main street, an enthusiastic botanist with scientific ambitions, recently sent an order for flowers to a global company and received a "mystery" premium gift in the form of two autratum hly boms. He planted both and of course both grew and flourished. One is now in bloom and is certainly an item in "rara flora", in Buchanan. It has five gorgeous blooms, the largest measuring 11 inches across from petal tip to petal tip. The color is a delicate white ground, dotted by hundreds of very small rusty-red spots, and with a narrow gold stripe down each petal from the center calyx to the tip. The delicate stamens use on long stems, from the center, with delicate rusty-red heads.

Michigan Grain Acreage Goals Are Raised This Year

State 1952 production goals for fall-seeded wheat, barley, and rye were announced today for Michigan by James H. Quick, chairman of the State Agricultural Mobilization Committee. According to Mr. Quick, the state's acreage goals for these fall-seeded crops are as follows: wheat, 1,235,000 acres; barley, 150,000 acres; rye, 65,000 acres. These goals apply only to fall-seeded crops. Goals for spring-seeded crops will be announced later.

In making this announcement, Mr. Quick explained that these acreages are considered to be Michigan's share of the national goals for each of these fall-seeded crops. The national goals for wheat are 76,850,000 acres, for barley, 12,865,000 acres; for rye, the 1951 harvested acreage, are in line with good land use and for all possible expansion of feed crops, including hay and pasture.

The national wheat goal calls for a slightly larger acreage, than was seeded in the fall of 1950 for harvest in 1951. The state goal of 1,235,000 acres compares with 1,232,000 acres seeded in 1950. These goals are designed to fill all known requirements and to maintain a safe reserve for emergency.

Dick Bell Of M.S.C. Recommends Trench Silo For Corn, Hay

A heavy hay crop, bad weather conditions and increased interest in grass silage have combined to put the trench silo in the farmer's eye. These factors have resulted in many ordinary silos full of hay silage and farmers now are looking to trench silos as a place to store their corn silage, says A. J. Bell, Michigan State College extension agricultural engineer.

There are several points to keep in mind for successfully using trench silos. One is that they must be lined to keep out air. Concrete probably is best for that purpose, but treated plank, stone, or other material will do.

The trench silo may be entirely below ground, partly below, or entirely above ground. Walls should be sloped in at the bottom to keep the ensilage from setting away. This would allow air to enter causing spoilage.

Ever-Changing Your eyes see differently at different times in your life, according to the Better Vision Institute. At the age of 12 a normal 'near point' of distinct vision is about 2 1/2 inches from your eyes. This point recedes with age until at 60, it may be more than 36 inches away. This is one of the reasons why older people usually wear glasses for close eye-work.

Meet a few first-class VILLAINS

Yes, 90% of home fires are caused by CARELESSNESS!

Every day fire destroys over two million dollars worth of buildings and materials. Needless fires are killers—killers that also add to inflation, put defense workers on the street, burn up needed housing. Careless habits make our cities a "setup" for raging fires if an enemy drops bombs.

But if you are never guilty of the carelessness pictured above, you'll prevent fires—and help make America stronger. Make a "fire check" of your home today!

Good Government Called Interest Of The Christian

Lt. Gov. Vandenberg Asks For Deeper Church Interest In Nation's Affairs

"A government is just as strong as the character of its citizens and the caliber of their representatives," stated Lt. Gov. William C. Vandenberg, in his talk in the tabernacle at the Riverside Park camp meeting grounds before the assembly of the United Brethren district of the United Brethren, an anglican church at 2 p. m. Sunday. Lt. Gov. Vandenberg made his address on the theme, "The Christian in Politics" before an audience that nearly filled the seating capacity of the tabernacle. The issues of good government are the issues of the churches today," said Vandenberg. There are 55,700,000 people in the United States who are affiliated with some church, as compared with 83,000,000 last year. He raised the question as to whether this growth in organized Christianity is being reflected in the character of the government, and whether it is living up to its responsibilities. There are 85,000,000 qualified voters in the United States, he said. Though the totals for voters and church members are about the same, many of the latter are naturally below the voting age. But how many church members voted who were qualified, he asked, and what part of the total voting capacity of the nation is made up of church members? A church member, above all others, should realize his responsibility to vote, but also to vote intelligently. To select good representatives in government we must know the relative basic fundamentals of character required to make good leaders. We must also learn, he said, how to distinguish these qualifications in the candidates placed before us. "What can be done to restore confidence in government?" he asked. Whatever can be done, stated Lt. Gov. Vandenberg, is a part of the Christian's business. Before the main address, the audience listened to some very excellent singing by the "Ambassadors" quartet, composed of four young men who are students at North Central College, Naperville, Ill.

The meeting was conducted by the program chairman, Dr. A. L. Spafford, who is also superintendent of the Kalamazoo conference. The meeting was conducted by the program chairman, Dr. A. L. Spafford, who is also superintendent of the Kalamazoo conference.

During the contest retailers renewed strong promotion and newspaper advertising total played a large part in the success of the Buchanan firm's performance. Taylor said that Sexton's displayed sound, aggressive merchandising practices typical of those that have made Hotpoint the leading manufacturer of all-electric kitchens and home laundries. The officer said that continuing programs are being planned for Buchanan to extend the gains made in electric living.

Postal Revenues Here 500% Larger Than In Depression

A note in the Record of July 12, 1934, stated that the postal revenue of the second quarter of that year was $3,934.57 as compared with $3,060.19 for the same period in 1933. Total revenue receipts for the second quarter of 1951 were $15,142.12, states Postmaster Charles Wesner. Comparative cancellations of mail pieces for the two first quarters of 1950 and 1951 were:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Revenue. 1st quarter 1950: 276,872; 1st quarter 1951: 274,302. 2nd quarter 1950: 320,020; 2nd quarter 1951: 314,875. Total revenue for 1951 was 32.37% over the corresponding quarter of last year, and of the second quarter up 17.5%. There has been an increase, large or small, of the business of the local postoffice every year since the depression except for one year in the late 1930's, when a slump in postal business due to a long factory strike resulted in a downward classification from first class to second class, which required an entire change in the office bookkeeping system. However the next year the office regained its first class status.

1/2 Million 4-H'ers Helping Reduce Farm Accidents

A recent survey of 2,000 farm accidents shows that 248 involve machinery. In other types, more farm people are injured by falls—476—than in any other kind of accident.

FARM FOLKS, as a general rule, give little thought to safety until a member of their family or a neighbor's is hurt or killed, or fire destroys their home or barn. Then they start doing something about safety.

This year it is particularly important that every farm family should do something about practicing safety, because even though there is a shortage of labor on farms, and new equipment is hard to get, food production must be boosted. That means the present manpower and machinery on

Letters From Service Men

H. Ritter Is Bulldozer Pilot
Harold Ritter arrived Friday morning from Camp McCoy, in transit to Fort Lawton, Wash., to spend a leave of ten days here. After arrival at Fort Lawton he will be sent overseas. He entered the army in December, 1950, and has been trained as a bulldozer driver. His vehicle is the second largest type used in the army, weighing about 17 tons and capable of moving about 3 1/2 yards of dirt or other materials. His company is equipped to excavate stone as well as dirt formations, by blasting rock, crushing the rock loosened with stone crushers, and moving it with the bulldozers.

Edwin Mitchell returned Monday to the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, after a 14-day furlough spent at the home of his mother, Mrs. Dorothy Mitchell.

Cpl. J. S. Myers One Of Builders Of Longest Pontoon Bridge In United States

Fort Riley, Kans. Cpl. Jacob S. Myers, husband of Maud Laura of Baroda, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob S. Myers, Sr., of Buchanan, is a member of the 317th Engineer Pontoon Bridge company that built the longest bridge in the U. S. across the Kansas river at Fort Riley.

The floating structure was erected after the only connecting link between Fort Riley and Marshall Air Field was wiped out by the worst flood in the 90-year history of the Army post. Measuring more than 1,100 feet in length, approximately 930 feet of the structure spans the water of the Kansas river. The longest pontoon bridge in the world was thrown across the Rhine river at Ramagen, Germany, during World War II, and measured approximately 1,300 feet from heel to heel.

The 317th Engineer Pontoon Bridge Company from Camp McCoy, Wis., was one of four engineer units from Camp McCoy, Wis., and Camp Carson, Colo., to be called upon to aid in the huge rehabilitation job at Fort Riley.

Your key to greater hauling profits

A good sign to "go" by!

THIS shining emblem "GMC" is the sparkling sign of the fastest growing line of trucks in the land—with sales growth unmatched this year by any other manufacturer. The reasons for this are sound ones.

For in the chassis of a GMC you find "long-time, stay-with" stamina—truck-building that dares comparison with anything on the roads today.

Under the GMC hood you find real power—the kind of truck-built power it takes to keep goods moving year after year. Whether it's a nimble 1/2- to 2-tonner with horsepower unsurpassed in its class, or the fabulous two-cycle Diesel which is outselling, outperforming every other make—a GMC puts more "go" to the load!

And in the cabs—drivers who work in comfort and safety. They have the look of men who know their truck will get the job done quicker and better.

You'll feel the same way when you try a GMC yourself. Come in—compare the facts, the features, the way they haul. Listen to the savings talk.

Hypnotic Highways
Studies by medical men and psychologists have been proposed to find out whether or not highways can hypnotize. If modern highways do not provide sufficient breaks in driving monotony the driver will go to sleep. In order to divert attention drivers have been urged to turn on windshield wipers and listen to radios. This combats smooth rhythm of cars, lull of motors, and dull scenery which tend to induce sleep. Slated to be testing ground is Pennsylvania Turnpike.

TAKE THE WORK OUT OF SILO FILLING with the Allis-Chalmers FORAGE HARVESTER

Let machinery do the work in filling your silo this fall. With the Allis-Chalmers Forage Harvester and Forage Blower, power handles the crop all the way from field to silo. You get the job done quickly, without a big crew. With your own Forage Harvester, you make better silage because you can cut at the right time.
The A-C Forage Harvester has spiral, cupped knives three feet wide. They handle heavy crops easily. Knives are power-honed without removing them from the machine. The Forage Harvester is a 3-way machine, with attachments for row crops, standing grass, or windrows.
See the Forage Harvester before you make silage this year.

He gets a picture of the weather by Long Distance

Tomorrow's weather is on the wires today for the forces which guard the nation's skies and shores. Today the largest Long Distance network of its kind brings them detailed "isobar" weather charts around the clock. These charts are sent by a system known as "facsimile" from the Weather Analysis Center in Washington, D. C. There, an electric eye scans the weather "picture" as it turns on a special drum. The signal waves produced go out over thousands of miles of wire to military installations throughout the country where the picture is automatically reproduced. This weather network was designed and completed in less than two years. It's another demonstration of the importance of Long Distance lines to the security of the nation - especially right now, when there may be stormy weather ahead. To help speed your Long Distance call, please give the operator the out of town telephone number. Telephone lines are busy with national defense.

FOOD BOUGHT BY ONE HOUR OF LABOR 1939 1951

The average American worker today can buy more food with an hour's labor than at any time in recent years, despite advanced retail prices, according to reports submitted to the House Agriculture Committee by Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan. 'An hour's earnings in a factory may buy less of some things now than it has in the past, but it will buy more food,' he said.

Reports Potato Blight Threatens Crop In Michigan

The late potato blight is reported to be ravaging that crop in northern Michigan, according to Robert Koenigshof, Buchanan Coo-ps manager, who states that while the blight has not been yet seen here, proper precautions are advisable. The blight will destroy an entire field in a few days, and after it appears, there is no way to check it in time. The only solution is to keep potatoes well sprayed in advance, as long as there is any danger.

DYNAFLOW DRIVE TOPS 1,000,000
They Like it a Million!
Last week Buick set a proud record. The millionth Dynaflow Drive* was delivered to a happy owner. That's a new peak in popularity for modern drives which take you from a standing start to any cruising speed desired with a smooth, unfaltering swoop of power. 'The biggest advance since the self-starter' is what the motor-wise press called this Buick development back in 1948 - and now a million owners can tell you how right that proved to be. Here, they found, was a basically different way of delivering power. It was the first drive to get completely away from any gears which function in a series of fixed stages - the first to apply supercharging principles that did new tricks with spinning oil. And how folks loved it! They loved the freedom from strain in traffic. And the new 'sweetness' of ride which every passenger could enjoy. They loved the command it gives them of every traffic situation - and the relaxation it contributes to a long day's drive. They loved its extra safety in slippery going, and the improved control in mud and snow. As they had a chance to pile up experience, they loved the unexpected savings of rear tire wear and reduced strain on all driving parts, from engine to differential. And finally - they loved what it does for the value of a Buick, as reflected in the extra dollars that Dynaflow* adds to the resale price of a car. Have you sampled this driving sensation? There's no time like the present for discovering the thrills that more than a million Buick owners already know.
