Is Qualified to Enter Internat. Meet at Akron

Shatters Course Record on Rocky Gap Hill

The M. F. Coyle trophy for first place in the district soap box derby races at Benton Harbor Thursday came to Buchanan again this year, this time brought by Kurt Holmquist.

The victory entitles young Holmquist to enter the international event at Akron, O., Aug. 11. Consequently he will leave for that place Friday.

Holmquist won a clean-cut victory in the fifth annual running of the Benton Harbor News-Palladium contest, held at Docky Gap Park, to duplicate the feat of his pal, Bill Gettiss, last year. He was required to race the runner-up, John Fetters, 13, Benton Harbor, twice in the finals, changing lanes in the two heats to ensure absolute fairness. In the first race he came from behind to win by a foot. In the second he won by two car lengths. In his preliminary and in the second heat of the finals he broke the course record of 17.1, making it in 17 flat.

The runner-up, John Fetters, had the fate of trailing the winner of the event for the third consecutive time. In the 1938 event he was second to Jack Zordell of Baroda, and last year he was second to Bill Gettiss of Buchanan.

The event at Benton Harbor is over a 660 foot course, down a steep highway from the top of the lake bluff to the beach level. Holmquist's car made an average speed of 40 miles an hour, evidencing that at top speed the little 250 pound car was making speed time. The boys start from an inclined ramp, which gives them their initial momentum. The cars are penned back on this ramp by a board, which is suddenly withdrawn to release them. The driver sits in driving stance in his car at the start and does not give the vehicle any starting push. Success in the event consequently depends first on the construction of the car and second on the driver's control, as he has no means of increasing the speed. His car must be built to minimize all resistances and to take the fullest advantage of the momentum arising from the grade of the course.

For his victory Holmquist received the beautiful M. F. Coyle trophy, awarded by the president of the Chevrolet Motor company also a 17-jeweled wrist watch, a medal and other prizes. He also won $2-for-victory in a preliminary heat.

He will be the guest of the Chevrolet-Motor company at the Akron event, where he will meet entrants from all parts of the United States and from insular possessions of the United States. Win or not, the entrant at Akron gets a royal welcome and royal treatment. Each entrant receives a regular racing helmet and fur-lined aviator's goggles, the combination priced on the retail market at $16.50. He also gets an overseas helmet for off-track use, and a silk sweat shirt with a large American emblem on it.

The Chevrolet Motor Company issues a 32-page book of rules to contestants, illustrating the rigid qualifications and procedure governing the event.

In a forward to parents the booklet has the following to say: "In consenting to let your son enter the all-American Soap Box Derby, you have made it possible for him to gain immeasurably all the qualities and characteristics that typify all that is best in true Americanism. We ask you therefore to take an active interest in his progress to ensure that he shall make the most of his opportunities. Advise him only. You are not permitted by the rules to do any of the work on the racer.

"The Soap Box Derby is much more than just a racing event for boys and their home-made cars. Its great influences will last throughout your boy's lifetime. "He will learn to build and build well. "He will acquire—especially if you inspire him—a high regard for sportsmanship, for fair play, for the rights of others. Then, on the day of the race, win or lose, (Continued on Page 4)

Charles Matthews Receives Eagle Rank at Court of Honor

Charles Matthews of Buchanan was among those who received Eagle Rank at the Camp Madron Court of Honor Friday, Aug. 2. Camp Madron had a very outstanding week with Captain Mills of the National Council visiting the Camp on Saturday. Captain Mills known throughout the country as the foremost authority on camping, and Waterfront activities as well as Health and Safety. He said, "You should be mighty proud of your camp, its wonderful equipment, beautiful buildings, and woods." Everything checked with the A1 rating plan. The sight of the Pioneer groups falling dead trees, trimming others, and doing local camping brought forth the following comment: "It is a real man's camp, you are building wonderful muscles with your well balanced program." Captain Mills also gave the Boys some fine demonstrations with boats and canoes, and took a keen interest in the waterfront set-up. He also stated the meals were exceptional, and the business management drew a perfect score.

State Inspector Madron was also inspected by R. F. Killum of the State Health and Safety Department and gave the camp an A1 rating. He also placed a large plaque at the entrance of the camp indicating that the camp met all the requirements prescribed for a camp and that it also exceeded many of the maximum standards set up. Local Librarians Attend Conference at Hartland, Mich.

Two Buchanan residents, Mrs. Milton Ludwig and Mrs. Charles Vignasky, librarians, had the opportunity last week to study at first hand a noted social experiment, Waldenwoods, near Hartland, Michigan. The project is sponsored by J. Robert Crouse, Sr., who is backing it with almost unlimited funds in the hopes of securing the ideal rural community by means of superior education and philosophical treatment of social problems, instead of waiting for the people to come to this end by the process of evolution of more democratic government in the small community.

The Hartland experiment has title to 1500 acres, 1200 of which are a wild life sanctuary. It gained its name, Waldenwoods, from the founder's great reverence for Henry David Thoreau, who pursued his studies at Walden Pond, near Concord, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Vignasky and Mrs. Ludwig attended the "Institute for In Service Librarians," at which time Eduard Lindeman, noted speaker on social problems spoke twice.

Promotes Safety Braking Device J. C. Rough, former resident and business man in Buchanan, was a visitor here yesterday in the interests of a safety device for hydraulic brakes which is to be demonstrated this week at the Studebaker proving grounds in South Bend. Rough is certain that the device has a future in the automotive world and that they should be manufactured in Buchanan.

Together with game law digests from an edition that numbers more than a million copies this season, the license blanks and tags will be placed in the hands of more than 2,000 dealers throughout Michigan during September. Provision for non-residents includes preparation of 10,000 southern Michigan and 10,000 all-state small game licenses, 7,000 deer hunting licenses, and 100 bow and arrow licenses. Also prepared for the coming season are 50,000 trapping licenses, 3,500 deer camp permits, 1,500 blanks for resident archers and 100 bow and arrow camp permits.
 Last season 742,639 game and trapping licenses of all kinds were issued.

Use of Crossbow Now Permitted by Mich. Archery Law
 Longbowmen have the Michigan deer hunting field to themselves. The "bow and arrow" now allowed by law may not be construed to include the crossbow, in the opinion of the state's attorney general.
 No mention of crossbows is made in the statutes legalizing hunting by archers in 1937. First inquiries concerning use of the medieval device, in 1939, roused no opposition. But users of regulation long bows, historically unfriendly to crossbowmen, recently took up the question. An official opinion was asked.
 The attorney general held the universally accepted definition of "bow" does not include such instruments as the crossbow and arbalest (a crossbow with a bow of steel and a mechanical device for bending it to throw arrows, darts or bullets) which may be bought from manufacturers.
 Last year Michigan licensed 500 archers for their special November 1-14 deer season.

State Ready for 240,000 Hunters in Deer Season

Resident hunters will wear orange back tags in the small game season, red ones in the deer season this fall. Seven hundred thousand have been printed for the shotgun army and 240,000 have been run off to supply the northwoods rifle-men.

These figures represent a 25,000 increase in the number of small game license blanks printed and a 10,000 increase in deer hunting license blanks, as the conservation department prepares for continuation of the increase in the number of hunters that has occurred every year since the depression low point of 1932.

Together with game law digests from an edition that numbers more than a million copies this season, the license blanks and tags will be placed in the hands of more than 2,000 dealers throughout Michigan during September. Provision for non-residents includes preparation of 10,000 southern Michigan and 10,000 all-state small game licenses, 7,000 deer hunting licenses, and 100 bow and arrow licenses. Kurt Holmquist Wins Soap Derby

 he will learn one of the most important lessons of life—how to accept victory as an obligation to do still better things, or how to accept defeat gamely and plan to try again."

The race is open to boys from 11 to 15 years of age (Kurt Holmquist is 13).
 Boys must build and design their own cars, but may have other boys of Derby contest age as helpers. Advice and direction may be received from parents, teachers or sponsors, but the actual construction must be done by the boy.
 The Benton Harbor News-Palladium which sponsored the district event took charge of Holmquist's car, according to rules which permit the sponsoring paper to exhibit the car victorious in its district. Also rules bar the victor from making any alterations of any kind in the design of the car between the time of winning the district meet and entering the Akron meet. This does not preclude a preliminary adjustment and tuning up for the final.
 Kurt Holmquist and his friend and helper, Bill Gettig, put in long working hours daily for two months in building the former's car. They learned to work with amazing exactitude in the little shop in the rear of the Joseph Gettig home at 309 West Front street, approaching exact measurements as close as 1/10,000ths of an inch. With the lathes and other equipment which Joseph Gettig installed in the shop for his son, they learned to secure construction results which the uninitiated would consider impossible for a boy to attain. However young Gettig had learned simplified methods of exact machining from his father and he imparted them to his friend. In this imparting of knowledge and acquired skills their story illustrates the immense advantages accruing to boys from the opportunity afforded to boys by the event sponsored by the Chevrolet Motor company.

HOLLYWOOD

Charles Coburn Stormed Way to Stage and Screen Success Via Tank Towns

During his forty years in the theatrical work, Charles Coburn, eminent character actor, has mastered his trade by involving himself in practically every phase of dramatics. Born in Savannah, Georgia, he first broke into theatricals as general utility man in his home town's theatre. Today he plays his most important screen role in "The Captain Is a Lady," coming to Hollywood Theatre Friday and Saturday, August 9 and 10.

With true Southern determination, Coburn raised himself from back-stage employee to a player of bit parts which led to more important roles. Gaining experience and confidence in his ability, he worked his way up through the tank towns, finally arriving on Broadway.

"Prairie Law" Is Roaring Drama of Old West with George O'Brien in Role of Two-Fisted Pioneer

A blood-tingling action-drama of the Old West at the height of the land-rush era, "Prairie Law," starring George O'Brien, is scheduled for the Hollywood Theatre, Friday and Saturday, August 9 and 10. Virginia Vale, comely blonde leading-lady to the star in his past three vehicles, again provides the romantic interest.

Locale of the exciting story is the western townsite of Olympia, which springs up overnight when Judge Curry, an unscrupulous swindler, starts selling town lots and farm acreage to misguided buyers on the empty promise of unlimited water from wells he will dig.

The cattlemen in the section naturally resent the "nesters" who ruin the open range prairie by ploughing. Hardest hit of the ranchers is O'Brien, whose private springs are monopolized by the farmers, his cattle constantly stolen by them.

Profile of Martha Scott Reveals Varied Pursuits and Care-free Activities

Martha Scott, who is starred in Sol Lesser's production of "Our Town," which will open at the Hollywood Theatre Sunday and Monday, August 11 and 12, eats oranges in bed. She sleeps on her stomach and alternates between pajamas and nightgowns. She loves breakfast and hates liver. She has never seen the Grand Canyon or been to the top of the Statue of Liberty. She has ridden on a merry-go-round once in her life and on a roller coaster twice. She once was stuck in a ferris wheel.

She sets her alarm clock half an hour ahead and is always forgetting to wind her watch. She doesn't care about clothes as long as they are comfortable but she adores perfume and odd costume jewelry. Her dog's name is George after the character George Gibbs in "Our Town." She gets ariek and that nearly lost her the job in the Sol Lesser production of the Thornton Wilder play. She wanted to get off the plane and go back to New York. She hates bridge. She has never bowled or shot dice. She rarely smokes.

Star-Studded Cast in Powerful Drama

Uniting a group of Hollywood's most brilliant screen favorites, "A Bill of Divorcement," a gripping drama of sacrifice, presents a star-studded cast comprised of Maureen O'Hara, Adolphe Menjou, Fay Bainter, Herbert Marshall, Patric Knowles and C. Aubrey Smith at the Hollywood Theatre Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Aug. 13, 14 and 15.

Miss O'Hara is the sensational Irish discovery who recently leaped to fame as the gypsy girl in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," an outstanding portrayal which won for her the top role in the current offering. Recently selected by Jimmie Fidler as the most promising star of 1940, the 19-year-old actress made her film debut opposite Charles Laughton in the English hit, "Jamaica Inn."

"Dark Command" Role Big Gamble for Young Actor

Roy Rogers took the biggest gamble of his career when he sought and won the role of Fletch McCloud in the Republic picture, "Dark Command," which is scheduled to show at the Hollywood Theatre Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 13, 14 and 15.

The young actor, who first won fame as a film cowboy, risked public condemnation when he abandoned his screen morals and took a role which presented him as a 'heavy,' even though a sympathetic one. The role of Fletch is a male counterpart of the type of role which made Bette Davis famous. Roy is seen as an underhanded opportunist, a man totally without principle, the young scion of the McCloud family who joins Cantrell and his infamous raiders and becomes a member of their murderous gang.

Canned Foods Facts—Part II Last week we started on facts about canned foods that home makers should know. Today we will continue.

Foods are canned in metal and glass containers. Tin cans are made of tin plate, which is sheet steel coated with pure tin. Glass containers are moulded in a variety of sizes and shapes.

Can sizes are determined partly by the shape and size of the product, and partly by the requirements of consumers for varying amounts of foods.

Amounts in cups, contained in frequently used cans, are shown in the following table:

Table with 2 columns: Can Name, Contents in cups. Includes items like 8 oz., No. 1 (Picnic), No. 300, No. 1 (Tall), No. 303, No. 2, No. 2 1/2, No. 10.

Enamel linings are used in some cans to keep the attractive appearance of certain products, such as red berries and beets; to prevent the discoloration of the can by such products as corn; and for use with citrus fruits.

Food from any can that leaks should not be used. Rust on the outside of the can does not harm the content unless the rust penetrates the container and makes it leak. Dents do not damage the food. Unless the dent causes the can to leak. Bulged cans should not be used because bulges or swelled ends generally indicate spoilage. Canned foods should be stored in a cool place, away from steam pipes, radiators or stoves. Freezing does not harm the nutritive value of canned foods, but sometimes does change the appearance by causing curdling, which usually can be corrected by heating.

Information on the label includes information that is required and information that is permitted. Required on all labels are the name of the product, the contents of the container in terms of weight or volume, and the name and address of the manufacturer or distributor.

Contents of the container are stated in volume (liquid measure) when the food is liquid, or in weight if the food is solid, semi-solid, or a mixture of solid and liquid.

Labels for meat and meat products shipped in interstate commerce must be approved by the Bureau of Animal Industry and the label must carry the statement "U. S. Inspected and passed by the Department of Agriculture."

Foods for which quality standards have been established, will, if they fall below such standards, be plainly labeled "Below Standard in Quality, Good Food, Not High Grade."

I am hoping that the facts on canned foods will be helpful to you in your shopping.

teacher reported that a delinquent boy contended that he would be making a spectacle of himself if he were to prepare a lesson or answer a question correctly.

This youngster always guessed the wrong answer to every question. His instructors would have been amazed had he ever shown the remotest sign of interest in any school activities.

There is little doubt that the boy possessed more than average ability, because his intelligence quotient was 108. Why his parents permitted him to waste his time in school is beyond comprehension.

Somewhat this youngster had conceived the idea that it was exceedingly witty to assume a dunce-like attitude. Therefore, he proceeded to uphold the reputation he had made by always turning in blank pages whenever an examination was given. Being an exceedingly popular student it was not long before a half dozen other pupils had adopted the same tactics. When called upon by a teacher to explain a proposition, they, too, would stand with grins on their faces and flippantly reply, "Gosh, how should I know?" or "You've got me there, teacher."

Of course, the entire class always chuckled at their witticisms. The hands of the school authorities were tied, because each one of these boys belonged to prominent families who would not tolerate the suspension of their children. The entire group of students was finally brought into court for illegally catching a ride to a football game on a freight train. Even though their parents tried every conceivable method to persuade the judge to release them, he steadfastly refused and held the boys in the detention home for two weeks. On the day scheduled for their hearing he committed each one of the boys to the reformatory for three years and suspended further judgment.

Several days later, the boys sent word to the judge, through the matron of the detention home, that they had not realized how serious their case was and sincerely hoped that he would grant them and their parents an interview. At the end of three days they were permitted to appear in court again, where they promised not to fall below a "C" grading in any subject if the judge would only allow them to serve out their sentences at home. Realizing that he had accomplished his purpose, the judge, with a great show of reluctance, finally consented to their request and placed them on probation under the custody of their school superintendent. Three years later each of the boys graduated with honors.

Grass Is Important in Erosion Control

The prominence given grass in erosion control work in Berrien county is explained by numerous experiments showing that a good grass cover reduces loss of water 20 percent or more, as compared to cultivated land, according to J. E. McKittrick, agronomist for the erosion control project at Benton Harbor.

Pasture vegetation holds the soil, decreases the velocity and the movement of run-off water on slopes, and increases the organic matter content of the soil. Mr. McKittrick said, in enumerating principles of establishing and maintaining good pasture.

"Organic matter makes a more fertile topsoil and adds to the absorptive capacity," he said. "Aside from these qualities of good pasture, it is the cheapest known feed available for livestock."

"Time is the first requirement of a good pasture. The chief permanent plants in Berrien county are Canada and Kentucky bluegrasses and certain clovers and legumes, all of which require considerably more lime than is available in the average pasture land. Phosphorus is probably the second most important fertilizing element in pastures."

Another plant nutrient that pastures require is nitrogen. This element can be provided by seeding legumes in the pasture and by providing a large amount of organic material in the soil. Since clovers and legumes have the power of building up the nitrogen supply in the soil, these plants will—in a season or two—make nitrogen available.

To provide a legume-grass mixture in new pastures, seedings, alfalfa and smooth brome grass as recommended by the Agricultural Experiment Station of Michigan State College, make an excellent combination to supply nitrogen and afford good protection against soil erosion.

General management of pastures is important, according to Mr. McKittrick, if good cover is to be maintained for pasture and protection of the soil. Important factors to consider are moisture, soil fertility, and the pasture plants themselves. Rainfall cannot be controlled, but the available moisture in the pasture soil can be increased by maintaining a dense growth to prevent runoff and by building up organic matter to increase water absorption.
