Legion Auxiliary Reports Success In Sale Of Poppies

The Poppy Day sale, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, last Friday and Saturday, was very successful. Many of the members responded to the call and to sell the poppies.

The Auxiliary greatly appreciates the generosity of the public, as this enables them to carry on their work of giving assistance and bringing cheer to disabled and needy veterans and their families.

The poppies are purchased from disabled vets in hospitals, many of whom are unable to do any other kind of work.

Now Here's the Proposition

This Is Not A Political Statement

Whatever may be the shortages in other lines of production, this is a banner year for skunks in the Buchanan district. Recently a skunk is reported to have taken possession of a small house on the Aite Weaver farm, rented to tenants. In some way the skunk managed to get between the door and the outside screen door. Whether or not he could not get out we don't know, but when the tenants tried to help him by shoving him out with a fish pole, he proved unpushable. Finally as a last resort he was shot with a rifle and then pushed out. It was reported about the same time and in the same vicinity that a tribe of skunks got into the cellar on the former Henry Kungery farm home and last reports were still non-paying tenants.

Week before last a farmer in the Coveny district was driving his cows from the field to the barn, when a skunk, afflicted with the rabies, attacked the dog and then tried to attack the cows. A Niles veterinarian reported that there is considerable rabies among skunks this season, and the only case of development of rabies in dogs was caused by the bite of an infected skunk.

Reap Wall-Eyed Harvest

Mr. and Mrs. William Sullivan, fishermen both, arrived home with the record catch of the season, as far as this column has been reached. They went first to a Buchanan group at Charlevoix but passed up that because of poor fishing and went on to Little Bay De Noc, at the head of Green Bay in Wisconsin, returning with the trunk of the car stomped full of 10 pound Northern and 4 to 5-pound wall-eyed pike.

Jack Ross Will Get West Point Degree June 5

Parents And Sister Will Attend Commencement

John L. Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Ross, 604 E. Smith street, and a graduate of the Buchanan high school in 1947, will be one of the senior class to receive his diploma certifying his graduation from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., next Tuesday, June 5. The senior class numbers 477, but the exact number to graduate is not yet known.

The commencement exercises will begin at 10 a. m., with the Hon. George C. Marshall, secretary of defense, as the speaker of the day. The academy superintendent, Major General Frederick A. Irving, will present the diplomas which confer the degrees of Bachelor of Science on the graduates.

Cadet Ross held the rank of cadet sergeant during his last year. On receiving his degree he will be commissioned second lieutenant in the artillery. No cadet on graduation may choose the branch of the service in which he prefers to serve. All cadets must serve in a combat branch for at least two years after graduation.

The class is the 149th to be graduated since the first commencement held at the academy in 1802. Including the members of the 1951 class a total of 18,494 cadets have been graduated since 1802, of whom over half, or 9,660 are now on active duty in the United States Army and Air Force, serving all over the world.

An appointee of Representative Clare E. Hoffman, Ross attended St. Joseph high school and later was graduated from Buchanan high school, prior to entering West Point. While at the Academy, he was a member of the Dialectic society, Portuguese club, Chess club and the track team.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Ross, and his sister, Mrs. O. W. Rifenberg and husband, will attend the exercises. Cadet Ross will have a furlough from June 5 until July 15, part of which will be spent here.

Mrs. Alma Humfeyer, after spending several days with her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Forburger, has returned to her home in Chicago.

Optimist-Sponsored Carnival at Athletic Field Next Week

The Story of Buchanan

THE LAND BECAME AMERICAN (Installment 2)

When the thirteen colonies emerged independent of England at the end of the Revolution in 1783, they became a free nation but hardly a free people. We are inclined, restless, under the impositions of government today, to look back to that early period as the Golden Age of liberty.

We would hardly think so if we were translated back through time to that period. In 1783 there had been no census, but the white population of the thirteen colonies had been estimated for purposes of assessment at 2,389,300, or scarcely more than a third of the present population of Michigan. This number, plus unknown thousands of negro slaves, had been hemmed for 175 years since the beginning of settlement between the Appalachian mountains on the west and the Atlantic, lying almost entirely on the lower coastal plains.

There were very few cities and very little wealth except in lands. Aside from the shipping trade of the New England states, nearly all of the population lived by a very primitive farming and long before the Revolution the growth of population had exhausted the supply of good lands.

The families tended to be big, and the successive division of the farms had long ago come to an end. The sons were obliged to settle the marginal lands in the lower benches of the mountains, where they lived poverty-stricken lives with no hope of betterment except to burst through mountain chain and settle beyond the mountains. As the population increased the end of opportunity for its people, and had a stagnant society like those of Europe, with deep lines of division between poor and rich, both in property and social status.

Long before the Revolution came, the bolder had risked the dangers of settlement beyond the mountains, but the laws and regulations of both England and France had forbidden it and they could get no legal titles to their lands.

That land was almost the sole basis of wealth was shown by the action of the Continental Congress when at the beginning of the Revolution the confederated states agreed that the cost of the war should be divided among them in proportion to their surveyed lands, on a value basis to be determined later. When the Continental Congress had to raise an army it offered each volunteer non-commissioned officer and private who would serve through the war $20 and to every man from the rank of colonel down to private a land bounty.

When the free states were eventually united into a loose confederation, a dispute immediately flared up as to whether the lands belonged to the nation or the seven states of Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Virginia, North and South Carolina, and Georgia, which had claims to western lands by the Articles of Confederation, agreed to by Congress Nov. 15, 1777, and ratified by the states during the four years following, the government had laid claim to possession of the lands which England won from France in the Seven Years War, from the Appalachians to the Mississippi, claiming that they had actually belonged to France when the English crown had given vague grants extending to the Mississippi, and that the national government had acquired them from England by war. The confederation asserted that the king of England himself had denied the rights of the colonies when he established the western country as "Indian land" by the Proclamation of 1763, and forbade any white settler to enter.

The land-claiming states pointed to the wording of the proclamation providing that this limitation was "for the present" and "until our further pleasure be known." The rights of the states, however, were thrown in doubt by the fact that their claims conflicted. Virginia claimed the entire area north of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi. Massachusetts claimed a strip along the southern side of what is now Michigan, south of a line cutting through present Berrien county near Sodus, Connecticut, New York and Pennsylvania also maintained claims which conflicted the claims of Virginia and each other. The states which had no claims, led by Maryland, formed a national ownership block. Eventually the states claiming western lands, led by New York, signed off to the national government one by one.

The mutual partnership of the thirteen states in this tremendous potential wealth became the bond that finally welded the loose confederacy into a nation. Unified national ownership made it possible to form a land policy by which the lands might be developed on a democratic basis, in the interests of the people rather than in the interests of moneyed speculators, or of merely swelling state treasuries by any means of sale. It also cleared the way for the division of the new lands into independent states with rights in the national government equal to those of the original thirteen.

So it was that to the landless and the hopeless of the old Atlantic settlements there were opened great avenues of hope, of freedom, of opportunity, such as no people of the world had ever known before.

The national government then began the development of a land policy which was progressively changed in the interests of the people until by the land act of 1820 individuals could buy 80 acres of public land at $1.25 per acre. In the opening of the lands to the public three steps were required: (1) extinguishing Indian titles by treaty, (2) surveying the land, and (3) purchase of surveyed lands by public auctions at land offices.

The land sales began in 1796, and reached a peak under the pre-homestead system during the 1830's, when the lands around Buchanan were being settled, and the sawmill settlement on McCoy's creek which became Buchanan was starting. As the settlers grew more numerous and states including Michigan, were formed, they freed their peoples from the bonds of social and property limitations on the right to vote and hold public office, from laws that authorized imprisonment for debt and gave special privileges to dominant churches.

The new liberties of the new states were adopted by the older states.

The greatest liberation, however, was liberation from hopeless poverty and social and economic inferiority. The opportunity which these changes afforded to the ambitious were the beginning of the free enterprise which has made America economically great.

All this liberation did not, however, come at once. Either here or there freedom slowly broadens down from precedent to precedent, and the liberties which our laws now assure us were slowly tested and solidly based because we are free to do it that way.

Imperial Shows Present Week Of "Midway Of Fun"

Presented Summer Carnival In July Here Last Summer

The Imperial Shows, rated as one of the top-notch carnival outfits, will again make a six-day stand at Athletic Field, starting Monday, June 4, and concluding Saturday, June 9, under the sponsorship of the Buchanan Optimist Club.

The Optimists presented the same show here last summer with great success. As a result the Imperial Shows acquired a high rating for good entertainment with the local public. The police also gave the outfit its entire approval. The entire program went off without any of the unpleasant incidents that had prejudiced Buchanan against carnivals in former years.

The placing of the show in Athletic Field also quieted the opposition of business men, many of whom had objected to blocking downtown streets.

The Imperial Show will present a program of 20 rides, a spectacular daily aerial act, and concessions clean of racketeers, according to their rating here and elsewhere.

The highlight of the "Midway of Fun" will be the free act staged daily by Captain Simms, in which he presents a dare-devil acrobatic act at the height of 100 feet.

Local organizations which have religious, educational or other public programs to support may have concessions on the grounds without charge, by seeing O. P. Woodworth.

It was voted to send two delegates to the state convention in Grand Rapids June 2, 3, and 4, one to be the incoming president. It was planned for club members to do the work on the construction of a quarter-mile cinder track at Memorial Field in co-operation with the city park committee.

The annual fish fry will be held at the Frank Foorman cottage at Clear Lake, June 14. Cyrus Buland will be chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Winifred Frame of Arlington, Va., was a guest of Mrs. Mary Frame last week.

IF YOU'RE INTERESTED IN MAGAZINES—

Twice during the past two weeks the streets of Buchanan have been graced by quite personable sales ladies who were merchandising magazines on the basis of their own charms and appeals for personal aid rather than on the basis of the value of the publications.

This was all within their rights under the constitution and the law of the land, as one of them graciously explained to an official of the Buchanan Business Association during their second visit, when they considerably applied for the approval of that organization. Unsuccessful attempts had been made in other towns, as she proved by documentary evidence to interfere with their business.

The merchandisers selected their prospects on a fairly constant basis, seldom if ever, in the observation of this writer, approaching women or even men past the more impressionable age. We lingered once to listen to the lingo, long enough to hear one of the ladies croon to a seemingly not unwilling customer "You'll help me, won't you buddy?"

The most we can say is that there are people in this vicinity who are making their living, or part of it, selling magazines on the merits of their wares, rather than cuddling up to a lad with the plea "You'll help me, won't you buddy?" Maybe they are not taking the right approach. The gals seemed to be, and said they were, doing right well. But from the viewpoint of the customer, it could be better business, if you're really interested in magazines, to buy from people you know who are not depending on sympathy for sales.

John E. Bowman Publishes Novel

Story Of Smoky Mountains 100 Years Ago To Be Out June 15

J. E. Bowman, who has all of his life combined authorship with business in a moderate way, is soon to come out in large way with a novel of his own coinage, printed and bound in "boards".

The book, entitled "Their Fate At Ghost Hollow", is scheduled to be issued by the Mirror Press of South Bend, by June 15 or before. The story, states Bowman, is based on true incidents that happened in the 1850's in the region of the North Carolina mountains, where he was born and lived until he was 17 years old.

In the century-old plot and setting his own ancestors were deeply concerned. The incident about which the tale is woven happened in the days when guns were the law in the mountains of western North Carolina. The mountaineers had their own ideas of justice and when the gun was used to dispense justice, the incident was closed as far as they were concerned in general, although perhaps not in the opinion of the relatives and friends of the deceased.

The scene is laid alternately in the now-famous Smoky Mountain country and in the less-known Cowee country. Bowman's family lived in the Smoky Mountains. The Cowee country was a hang-out for moonshiners and outlaw gangs. The plot involves a Smoky Mountain boy and his sweetheart, and a Cowee bandit leader.

We will not anticipate by telling the story—you can buy a book from Mr. Bowman and read it. There's the good old mountain flavor in the tale, involving two battles to the death on a pattern that actually occurred.

The plot begins at a log church in the Smoky Mountains, when the bandit leader and a confederate from Cowee attend and are ejected for drunkenness, and Glenn Fulton and his girl, Ruth Mann, are threatened. It develops when the outlaws come to a Smoky Mountain dance hall and advertise a "whiskey wagon", and the bandit carries out his threat by provoking a quarrel, during which the outlaw leader is badly stabbed, all in the way of Smoky Mountain justice, carried out in a forest clearing with lanterns hanging on limbs of trees and the "whiskey wagon" in the center. The whiskey wagon was an ox-drawn vehicle carrying a barrel of moonshine. The Smoky Mountain and Cowee boys had come with sacks over their shoulders filled with all the bottles and jugs they could tote home full.

After that fight, the plot thickens into gun battles in which Fulton kills Jay Moulds, the outlaw leader, who had kidnapped Ruth Mann, and Maren, his chief ally, in a man-to-man battle later in Buck Creek Gap.

This is the scenario outline—you'll have to read the book to get the flavor of the tale. It's a true tale, says Bowman, with only the names of the antagonists changed.

Boy, Accidentally Shot In Chest With Rifle, Is Recovering

Jerry D. Claw, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Claw, of route 1, Buchanan, was accidentally shot in the chest Saturday evening when he was returning to the house after shooting a rat near the barn on his parent's farm.

Jerry was walking uphill with the gun broken open but with a 22-cal shell in the chamber when he slipped and fell, trying to throw the gun away from him in some manner not known, the gun closed and was discharged. Powder burns on the heavy mackinaw he was wearing indicate that the gun was against his chest when it went off. The bullet entered the right chest just above the lung and came out back of the shoulder, severing a nerve and large vein, but fortunately not touching a lung or a bone in its diagonal travel.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Claw, had left a short time before to go to Attica, and Oxford, Ind., for Memorial Day. His sister, Mrs. Barbara Craw Stott, returned about five minutes after the accident and phoned Dr. Strayer, the Swem ambulance, and Sgt. Robert Rinker, who rushed him to Pawling hospital. He was suffering from shock and considerable loss of blood, but at present is doing fairly well and will be returned home Thursday if his condition continues to improve.

Mr. and Mrs. Claw, notified of the accident by the Attica police department rushed home and arrived at Niles shortly after midnight.

He came to Buchanan in 1916 and went into the dry goods business, in partnership with his uncle, the late Sigmond Desenberg. Later, he operated a store in Niles, Mich., before going to Corpus Christi. Surviving are the wife, Golda, and a son, Robert, who is a senior in the University of Texas at Austin. Mrs. Sig Desenberg, B. R. Desenberg and Harry Frew attended the services in Kalamazoo Monday.

Scientists Revise Figures On Speed Of Light By 11 Miles

Even light, fastest traveler in universe, is going a bit faster these hectic days. A British scientist claims he had confirmation from both United States and Swedish experts of his discovery that the accepted speed of light was in error by 11 miles in 186,000.

The scientist, Dr. Louis Essen of the government-controlled National Physical Laboratory, said his figure for the speed of light was 186,282 miles a second. The accepted figure since 1935 has been 186,271 miles per second.

Essen said independent experiments by Carl Askalon of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey and Dr. Erik Bergstrand, Swedish government geodist, had confirmed his findings.

Earthquake Energy Of 1950 Equivalent To 4 Million Bombs

The earth suffered greater shaking by earthquakes in 1950 than in any year since 1906, according to Prof. L. Don Leet, director of Harvard University's seismograph station.

The total energy released in the violent movements of the earth in the year 1950 was equal to the explosion of 4,000,000 atomic bombs, he estimated.

Prof. Leet explained that a world-wide network of seismograph stations "located 796 significant earthquakes from the first of January to December 16, including one of the two greatest earthquakes ever recorded." All quakes are reported to the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey in Washington, which keeps the master records.

The largest earthquake of the year occurred August 15—in the Himalaya Mountains at the China-Burma-India border. It had a magnitude of 8.6 under the system used to measure earthquake energy and was equal in strength to the record quake of January 1906, which shook Colombia, S. A.

Prof. Leet called the Himalaya earthquake "the most terrific release of energy you can imagine." He stated that it accounted for 75% of the total earthquake energy of 1950 and packed more power than the combined earthquakes of an average year.

American Housewife Given High Rating In Safe Driving

Contrary to established male opinion, the American housewife has a better-than-average automobile accident record. She is safer at the wheel, in fact, than most truck drivers, lawyers, entertainers and traveling salesmen.

This has come to light in a survey of 1,500,000 passenger car operators by the State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance company, which undertook to determine the relative safety records of 84 occupations.

Among the safest drivers are bankers, farmers, aviators, clerks and school teachers.

The five most dangerous classifications are students, military personnel, traveling salesmen, amusement workers and the unemployed.

Sharp Rise Auto Road Fatalities Noted In January

Traffic accidents took the lives of 139 persons on Michigan streets and highways during the month of January. It was the highest toll for that month since 1942 and an increase of 32% over the 105 persons killed during the same month last year.

The figures were revealed in the State Police monthly statistical report, which also showed sharp increases in injuries and reported accidents. The upward trend has prevailed since May of last year.

There were 3,521 persons injured in January, an increase of 405 or 13% over the 3,116 injured in January of 1950. Accidents totaled 15,645, an increase of 3,489 or 29% over 12,156 a year ago.

The sharp rise in deaths was attributed largely to collisions between motor vehicles, collisions between motor vehicles and trains, and ran-off-roadway accidents.

Estimated travel in January was 1.75 billion miles, a gain of 17% or 250 million miles over the 1.5 billion miles traveled during the same month last year. The death rate of 7.9 per 100 million miles of travel was up 13% over the rate of 6.97 for January of 1950.

Evidence World War II Shows Men 25-29 To Be Best Soldiers

Objective evidence as to whether 18-year-olds are actually mature enough to make good combat soldiers is almost completely lacking.

No one knows whether a boy of 18 is ready for combat. Or whether he is mature enough at 17. Or whether 12 or 25 might be a better minimum age.

Some information is available from World War II about the performance of men of various ages. Considering advancement to higher rank, the golden age is from 25 to 29, neither too young nor too old. Men under 25 were more likely to go AWOL, and the men over 30 were more likely to younger men to become psychological casualties.

In combat performance, too, the men under 21 did not show up as well as their elders. In this group, 31% rated below average in combat performance while only 23% rated above average. For the age 25-29 group, 29% of these men 34% rated above average in combat.

Advice On Safety For Swimming Boys

Take time today to remind your boy that swimming in gravel pits is dangerous, the Michigan Department of Health urges Michigan fathers.

Each year about this time, some Michigan lad, unmindful of danger, loses his life while swimming in a gravel pit.

Gravel pits are deep and treacherous, with quick drop-offs and soft bottoms. Many have submerged rocks, stumps, snags, wire and broken machinery to endanger the unwary diver.

Teach your boy to swim, of course, but teach him to swim SAFELY—at a guarded beach

DANGER

(By Walter Winchell in The Washington Post) (This is written by Philip Wythe, the bookwriter, whose best-sellers include "A Generation of Vipers" and "The Disappearance".) You've probably met Wythe in the Statepost (and other mags) via his fighting essays about deep-sea fishing, etc. He is serving the country again on a special assignment for the Atomic Energy Commission. Don't skip this one, please. Clip and file it away in your pocket or desk—after your neighbors borrow it. Remember Pearl Harbor!

Dear WW—in these Spring days of 1951 I have begun to wonder in the American people have lost their minds. Maybe you can ask them. They know we could get in a war with Russia. MacArthur admits it—even accuses Truman of increasing the danger. The Congressmen smilingly tell you that in the first hours of any war Moscow would vanish. Well, so would Washington, just as sure as the Lord made little apples. So would New York, perhaps; so, surely, would a whole lot of other places. That's what the Soviet A-Bomb means.

I remember writing a poem about waking up America in the days when the Nazis were eating a new country a month and you printed the verse. Now the danger is, say, 1,000 times as great, as savage as terrible. It can be met only by facing the facts and getting braced in all the ways I've mentioned and many more. For if there's a next time, Walter, we're "for it"—and nobody I know is even 1% ready to behave as he should, to face and to do what he must—to win. The Japs, used to air raids, but unprepared for atomic bombs, couldn't stand them. The Germans were knocked flat by fire storms—a mere side-effect of plutonium bombs. They weren't ready, either. And the British darn near lost their part of the war three different times, owing to air assault. We know we are a gritty people. And if we put our backs in it, we can do anything. But the massive atomic bombing of USA without preparation—immense, costly preparation—might be curtains for the Land of Liberty.

The home front, Walter, is the naked flank of American defenses today. Protecting it is not a Pentagon problem but everybody's business. So why don't we all catch on and pitch in? And why doesn't Congress begin to realize that unless it, too, acts sensibly, there may sooner or later come an instant when the Capitol and the Monuments, the Pentagon and the White House just won't be there, any more?

This time, civil defense is no clambake; it's the front line trenches, and we're all in them and we better learn how to fight an atomic war or we may one day be looking up our flagpoles at a hammer and sickle—those of us willing to live like that, I mean. As ever, for freedom, Phil Wy-the communications and transport that lead to national panic. We have. The Soviets, with far fewer bombs, might quite conceivably so shock and horrify an unready USA that our folks would abandon our cities and refuse to go back. Then we'd have to surrender. We can be sure we are on a city-trading basis only if and when the whole 150 million of us are all set and prepared and briefed and rehearsed for the evil show—the show they could start tomorrow!

But what, Walter? A congressional committee puts the nix on the civil defense appropriation bill. In the Senate, a bill to disperse Washington is dropped. Are all those people insane? They know Russia has the bomb. They know we could get in a war with Russia. MacArthur admits it—even accuses Truman of increasing the danger. The Congressmen smilingly tell you that in the first hours of any war

Since the American people now know that the Soviet Union has stockpiled plutonium bombs, why don't they react like people in a dreadful danger—people whose peril will grow less only after they act by the millions in a thousand ways? The people have been told exactly what atomic bombs are like. They've been told that if they get set to be struck in a possible target area, they can "duck it" and cut casualties to 1/5th of what they'd be now. Getting set for that means a lot. It means 20 million volunteer workers. It means spending billions of bucks to stockpile medicines and drugs and to reinforce buildings and to arrange evacuation systems of priority evacuation hospitals with children— it means preparing the whole landscape around every big industrial city to receive, temporarily, city refugees. It means new fire fighting equipment, mass-produced. It means all sorts of electronic equipment and people trained to run it.

Getting set means more. It means "basic training" for every man and woman and child in a possible target area. It means bracing the nerves and minds of people likely to be in an A-bomb hit area for the terrible sights to come—the burned, the wounded, the "fire storms", the naked, the hysterical, and so on.

Getting set means having the stuff and the know-how to save the injured to rescue the trapped, to douse the gigantic fires. It means, also, being ready to bear the terrible (but not dangerous) after-show of atomic bombs. It means having the guts to go about your business, after a hit, though you know there may be another!

Getting set, moreover, may well mean that no enemy will try to use atomic bombs on city populations. Because a city that's set is a poor target; you can't hurt it badly enough to be worth the try. But the people I meet in big cities, Walter, aren't doing these things. They don't seem to realize all civil defense problems differ from city to city and have to be solved locally and in the event of a hit or hits, dealt with by local people—themselves. A time is coming, perhaps, is very near, Walter, when we could knock off all the Russian cities—and yet not knock out Russia. We can't reach the vast majority of Russians with atomic bombs—or the Red Army—or the government, Slave state people haven't the communications and transport that lead to national panic. We have. The Soviets, with far fewer bombs, might quite conceivably so shock and horrify an unready USA that our folks would abandon our cities and refuse to go back. Then we'd have to surrender. We can be sure we are on a city-trading basis only if and when the whole 150 million of us are all set and prepared and briefed and rehearsed for the evil show—the show they could start tomorrow!

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
What's So Funny?
Just finished reading a magazine article that "proves" you and I don't know what's funny.
A bunch of psychologists came to this sad conclusion after telling jokes to college students. Very often they would give out with what they considered a side-splitter—and not get even a chuckle in response. Other times the students would laugh their heads off at stories that weren't considered really funny.
Maybe I'm wrong, but what makes a psychologist such a better judge of humor than the rest of us? If a man gets a kick out of a joke that proves it was funny to him—doesn't it?
From where I sit, when psychologists try to set up a standard for a sense of humor they're getting too serious for me. Stands to reason that different people laugh at different things, just as they have different tastes for most everything. I'm partial to a glass of beer with meals myself—but I promise not to make any "wise-cracks" if you prefer tea.
