WHY
By Ruth Taylor
Why do I talk so much about brotherhood? A good many people have asked me making all sorts of suggestions as to why I take the line I do. Most of them make the mistake of thinking I talk about tolerance. I don't. I loathe the word. To say, "I tolerate" is to say "I put up with you"—which to my mind is almost as bad as active dislike. It is so unpleasantly patronizing.

blood can be I believe in the American way of life. I believe in democratic government and the rule of the people by the people. I believe in Lincoln's great line—no nation can exist half slave and half free.

Since I believe this, I feel that intolerance, prejudice, hatred because of race, creed or color, discrimination or special privilege—either for or against any group—are denials of the things to which I owe allegiance and are terms gnawing at the pillars of our national house.

I may be an idealist but I hold that idealism is part of the American picture. As Walter Lippmann said once—"Let us remember when we talk of realism and of being realistic, that hope may be as realistic as fear, faith as realistic as doubt, and that George Washington who endured the bitter winter at Valley Forge was the same hardheaded man who at Philadelphia presided over the formation of the Union."

color is my affair because it threatens my life and the existence of the democracy which has given me, my parents, my grandparents my great grand parents, my great great grand parents, and my great great great grand parents, etc., so much. That is why I preach brotherhood. That is why I will continue to bear witness for my faith.

Skyrocketing from $10 billion in 1941 to an estimated $250 billion in 1945, the federal debt is growing at an alarming rate. The costs of total war are so high that even sharply increased taxes come nowhere near paying the bill.

Even in 1941, the federal government was spending half as much again as it was collecting. But in 1942 federal expenditures were almost four times the amount collected to pay war and normal costs. During 1944 and 1945, it is expected that these expenditures will remain at a figure double that of receipts from taxes. It is obvious that one of our great postwar problems will be to balance the budget and to keep it balanced.

Pudding Soil
It is more difficult to obtain stands on soils that are cloddy and puddled than on well-prepared seed bed. Plowing a soil too wet will cause it to become rather compact and cloddy. These clods are difficult to pulverize. Usually several years are required for the soil to return to good physical condition. The action of climate over several years of intense cultivation and the turning under of large amounts of organic residues will return the soil to good condition. If the soil is clay, it will puddle worse than will a light or sandy soil.

Good Dairy Feeding
It was found that a good grade of pea vine silage, when fed with alfalfa hay and grain, makes a good ration for producing cows and growing dairy heifers. However, substituting pea vine silage for a portion of the hay does not increase milk production nor the rate of gain in young animals. The average of two feeding trials with dairy heifers shows that pea vine silage has about a third of the feeding value of alfalfa hay.

123 Juvenile Cases Held in Past Month In Juvenile Court
The report of Judge Malcolm Hatfield which covers the month of December reveals that of the 123 children who passed through Probate Court, 49 were delinquent, 10 were neglected and the remainder fell in various categories such as run-aways, probationers, parolees, traffic violators, adoptives, afflicted and cripples. Of the delinquents, 38 were boys and 11 were girls.

That the Probate Division of the Court carried an exceedingly heavy load throughout December is evidenced by the fact that 44 estates were closed and 39 new estates were opened. Judge Hatfield and his staff computed new inheritance taxes in the amount of $18801.77 and ordered old taxes paid which totalled $12,958.32.
The Court also committed 7 insane, 3 feeble-minded and one epileptic person to State institutions, closed 13 guardianship estates, approved two drains, heard 38 contested cases and took 227 petitions under advisement.

Start Project To Conserve Forest Here

State Forester to Supervise Maintenance Woodland on Ray Stover Farm

Last week a 13 acre tract of timber belonging to Mrs. Ray Stover north of the Bend of the River district was marked for cutting. This was recommended as part of the land use management program carried on in cooperation with the St. Joe River Soil Conservation District. Each tree was given careful consideration by the Farm Forester, Louis Miller of Cassopolis, before deciding whether or not it should be harvested.

Some trees were marked because they were butt-rotted and the rate of decay exceeded the growth rate. Other trees are to be cut because their rates of growth are declining and young-er and more vigorous trees around them will be allowed extra space. Other trees having poor form will also be removed. This type of cutting will assure the owner of a stand of timber from which profitable future crops can be cut in a comparatively short time. All logs will find a use in channels which will help the war program. Stover is practicing good management by keeping livestock and fire out of the woods. Heavy grazing of farm woodlots is quite common in southern Michigan and this has resulted in stands of timber of low productivity. For assistance in woodlot problems contact the county agricultural agent of the St. Joe River Soil Conservation District office at 306 Fidelity Building, Benton Harbor.

Heat Can Save In Household Tasks

A little warmth is a magic element that can speed many household tasks and make them easier and the results better, says Mrs. Vivian P. MacFawn, extension foods and nutrition specialist of Michigan State college.
Egg whites whip better if they are at room temperature rather than cold. The various ingredients in cake blend better if all are at the temperature of the kitchen rather than some cold and some warm. Milk, eggs and fat to be used in cake should be taken out of the refrigerator an hour or so before mixing to remove the chill.

Dried fruits and dry beans "soak up" faster in hot water than cold. Hot water is better than cold for rinsing rice, both before and after cooking, for it removes the starchy powder from raw rice more thoroughly, and carries off loose starch and separates the grains of cooked rice better. In making mashed potatoes, hot milk is better than cold, for it helps to soften lumps, adds to the lightness, and keeps the potatoes hot.
In sprinkling clothes for ironing, warm water penetrates and spreads through fabrics faster. Placing the sprinkled and rolled-up clothes on a warm (not hot) radiator for a short time also helps get the ironing ready in a hurry.

Set a bottle of furniture polish in warm water a few minutes before using, because warm polish penetrates the pores of wood faster. Wax goes on floors and other surfaces more easily if it is not too cold.

Synthetic Feed
Urea can replace effectively part of the protein supplements in the ration for ruminants or cud-chewing animals. Work in which urea was used as a substitute for protein concentrates in the ration for cattle has been reported from Hawaii, Kansas, Massachusetts, and Wisconsin. Agricultural Experiment stations, and for sheep from Illinois and New York stations. In all cases, nitrogen supplied as urea was satisfactorily utilized by the animals.

Good Cooks
Women marines are good cooks, according to no less an authority than Lieut. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, commandant of the marine corps. In his first visit at Camp Lejeune, N. C., as top leatherneck, the general declared the taste of the food and the cleanliness of the galley in the women marines' mess halls to be the best he had witnessed in 34 years of marine corps service.

Pulpwood
One cord of pulpwood cut from a farm woodlot will make 18,000 one-pint paper milk bottles.

Her's Proposition
from the beginning than Ensign, thus more dependent on secondary sources.

However, he accepts the genealogical record of the Record, the family tree as it were, as given by Ensign, either on the basis of his own investigation or accepting Ensign as the only extant source of information.

When Mr. Wagner bought the paper and changed its name to the Record, he changed the year and volume number back to start from his date of ownership. Later he changed the date the start of the volume number again, to make it more nearly coincide with the start of each year, as it is now. You will see there has been a shift somewhere by the fact that our issue of this week owns up to only 76 years, whereas Wagner bought the paper at least between 77 and 78 years ago. So Jan. 4 is not really the Record's birthday and is more nearly 86 years old than 76. We might add that the Record is the oldest newspaper in point of continuous publication in Berrien county.

Code for Stork Tidings Gives Commons a Laugh - LONDON. - Sir Ian Fraser suggested in the House of Commons that the government devise a telegraph code to shorten messages from soldiers' wives to their husbands, saying, "I am going to have a baby."

His 'Bit' for Red Cross Is a Check for $2,000 - CHICAGO, Ill. - E. F. McLean, wealthy Toronto contractor who attracted considerable attention by passing out $100 bills to patients in a Canadian hospital for servicemen, hasn't put the rubber bands on his bankroll yet. A girl soliciting funds for the Red Cross accosted him in the Boulevard room of the Stevens hotel and asked if he would contribute his "bit." He gave her a check for $2,000.

$5,106,989 Gifts Made to Help War

Donors to Treasury Since Pearl Harbor, 40,000.

WASHINGTON. - More than 40,000 persons have given to the government since Pearl Harbor $5,106,989 in amounts from 1 cent to $50,000. These donations include a $5 gift to start a reward for the capture of Adolf Hitler.

The largest cash gift from an individual came from a New Jersey business man who sent $50,000 "to be used for furthering the war effort in any manner deemed advantageous to our country's interest." The treasury does not reveal the names of the donors.

A schoolboy in Sacramento, Calif., sent $20 to be used by the coast guard, saying "My grandfather is giving me $20 for my birthday. Here it is."

An army captain in Tennessee sends in his pay check every month. He is one of hundreds who make regular donations, and write apologetic letters when they are obliged to skip one of these self-imposed payments.

The $5 donation to establish a fund to capture Hitler came from a farmer in North Carolina. An elderly woman in Massachusetts was one of many who sent in donations to finance appendicitis operations. These donations followed newspaper stories about a pharmacist mate who performed an appendectomy in a submarine.

A Walnut Hills (Cincinnati) schoolgirl sends in $11 with a long chatty letter to the President, explaining her progress in school and her social goings-on.

Civil War Hero Called Fount of Tito's Strategy - NAPLES, ITALY - The military tactics and strategy employed by Stonewall Jackson in America's Civil War days are providing a model for the Yugoslav partisan forces of Marshal Tito. Lieut. Col. Vladimir J. Dedier, once of Belgrade but now homeless for the duration, who suffered head and leg wounds in Yugoslavia, told of it in a Naples hospital.

"We feel we have one of your best Civil War generals fighting with us," Dedier said. "Many of us have studied his tactics until we know them like a book. Tito understands them best of all."

"Stonewall Jackson was trying to accomplish the same thing we are - to cut up an army much bigger than his own and still keep out of reach."

Shift 300,000 From War Jobs to Farm Movement Intended to Solve Labor Problem. WASHINGTON. - To the swift movement of younger men into military service there has been a new manpower movement - in operation for six months but only recently disclosed - the transfer of more than 300,000 from war industry back to the farm and the strongest deferment status.

Authorities say the shift is far too great to be considered merely a seasonal migration. And as some semblance of order arose from the chaos of deferments, inductions, manpower shortages and the arguments of industry against drafting of key men, this was the picture.

Of the total, 844,000 were given honorable discharges, exclusive of discharges to accept commissions. It included 198,000 men discharged because they were over 33 years of age. The majority of honorable discharges, the army said, were for physical and mental disability.

Praise Given to Litter Bearers in Combat Zones WASHINGTON, D. C. - The litter bearers, the unarmed heroes of the war, are saving many lives and reducing appreciably the extent of casualties in fighting in Italy, the war department said.

Disregarding enemy shells, land mines and booby traps, these litter bearers often have to carry stretchers 12 to 18 hours over winding slippery mountain paths. The department cited as typical of first aid detachments a medical battalion commanded by Lieut. Col. Frank P. Pippa of Brooklyn, N. Y. Its litter bearers "did an outstanding job" in the Cassino sector, the department said.

Ambulances and jeeps could get no closer than seven miles from the wounded. Relay stations were set up and volunteers from armored and anti-aircraft units helped the medics carry the wounded.

New Ray Shows Up Peroxide Blondes

But a Lot of Nice Things May Come of It

ST. LOUIS - Dr. Lamar Kishlar is a neat, bespectacled, mustached scientist. He was having a lot of fun with a new black ray of light that brings out the best in interior decorating and the worst in women.

Dr. Kishlar is the research manager of a livestock feed company which also dabbles in breakfast food. Dr. Kishlar dabbles in many things, including how to make a peroxide blonde's hair turn green and false teeth show up as phonies with a little beam of light that you can't see.

"The black ray is a variation of the ultra-violet ray, Dr. Kishlar thinks that it is going to throw light on a number of things in the future. "One wave-length will produce a nice suntan, without inflaming the more tender areas," Kishlar explained. "Another wave-length will tenderize any cut of beef. Still another will sterilize an ice-box, or if you want to go into it wholesale, an entire hospital."

Kishlar's interest in his invisible ray is chiefly in its effect on food, but it includes its possibilities in interior decoration. People, fabrics, rubies and vitamins glow fluorescently under the ray. Any girl is a glow girl!

"Take, for instance, a cocktail lounge," said Kishlar. "A hidden ray will make carpets, tablecloths, napkins and cocktail glasses shine - but there will be only a discreet suggestion of actual illumination." The female customers will shine no matter how dull. Their teeth, eyes, fingernails, rubies and diamonds will gleam.

The girl with sound teeth who drinks milk and gets plenty of calcium will look like a super-dental ad, but the girl whose teeth came from the dentist's had better inquire about the lighting before entering the bar of tomorrow. False teeth look black under Kishlar's revealing little ray.

Peroxidized hair may turn a ghastly green under the ray. U. S. Discloses Good Old Potato Is Not Fattening WASHINGTON. - The department of agriculture decided that it is now time to let the people in on one of the best kept secrets of the century - potatoes are not fattening.

With a heavy crop coming up and plenty of last year's spuds still around, the department wants it known that the caloric content of a "fair sized" Irish potato is about the same as a large orange, a large apple, four average size prunes, a thick slice of bread or two-thirds of a cup of whole milk.

It's not the spuds, but the butter and gravy that pile on the extra pounds, according to Dr. Henry C. Sherman, chief of the department's bureau of human nutrition and home economics. Sherman said the agriculture department has known for a long time that potatoes would not make you fat, and that inasmuch as potatoes "are so abundant it seemed a good idea to reassure people - especially the ladies - that they can safely eat all the potatoes they want."

TO YOUR Good Health

DR. NATHAN S. DAVIS, III

SYMPTOMS CAUSED BY DANGEROUS COLD 'BUG'

All who live in regions in which the thermometer often falls to zero or below, know some of the more common symptoms caused by cold, for example, that they develop much more quickly on damp days than they do on colder dry days.

The most universal symptoms caused by cold are watering of the eyes and nose and the chapping of the lips from exposure to the cold water secretions. The chapping of the hands is due to a combination of cold, tight gloves and the natural moisture of the skin.

Many have also had experience with "frost-bite" or "freezing" of the ears, nose or cheeks, fingers or toes. They know that the part so affected often remains more sensitive to cold, perhaps because the nerves regulating the blood supply were destroyed, perhaps because they were rendered over-sensitive to cold.

Some people are sensitive or allergic to cold just as others are to pollens or foods. These people may develop asthma so distressing that they must remain in doors in cold weather or else move to a warm climate. Others develop hives on exposure to cold. Some develop a type of eczema with severe itching in cold weather.

Reaction to Cold. The smaller arteries (arterioles) of some individuals develop spasms on exposure to cold water or air. The spasms may completely cut off the circulation in a limited area, and cause blueness and then pallor and very severe pain. If these arteriole spasms last long enough they may cause gangrene, that is death of the tissue nourished by these blood vessels.

There is another group in which there is also an arteriole spasm, but in which the skin first becomes red; then as it gets colder, blue, and when still colder, gets red again. It too causes severe pain. These types of reaction to cold usually develop during early adult life or even during the teens and are more common in women.

There are a few people who have a disease of the blood vessels, both arteries and veins, in which many of the smaller vessels become obstructed by clots. They react badly to cold and develop pain, blueness and pallor of an extremity even before the temperature reaches freezing.

Hardening of Arteries. As people grow older they almost always develop more or less arteriosclerosis (hardening of the arteries) even with normal blood pressures. However, those who have diabetes or high blood pressure usually have more of it than do others of the same age. Cold may cause such diseased arteries of the extremities and of the heart to develop spasms that may completely cut off the circulation for a long enough time to cause gangrene.

The names by which the diseases caused by cold are known, have purposely not been given because they are difficult to pronounce or remember when they are descriptive and would mean little when they are designated by the name of the physician who first described them. Their cause is unknown, and until it is, little can be done to prevent or to effectively treat them. Yet by avoiding exertion or exposure to cold and rapid changes in temperature, and by wearing plenty of warm and properly fitting woolen clothing, those who have even the more severe forms of these diseases can learn to live comfortably in spite of them.

"Our treatment is not an end in itself, it is a means to an end, and that end is the patient's comfort and happiness and peace." - D. W. MacLennan Sr., M. D.
