Farmers Advised To Harvest All Grass, Clover Seed

"Growers should combine or thresh all the grass and clover seed they have available this year," states Wash O'Brien of the Benton Harbor office of the U. S. D. A. soil conservation service. With the increased needs at home for erosion control and feed demands abroad, growers will need to depend more on local production for their seed supply next spring than they have in the past. Fields of alfalfa brome not cut for hay might well be combined for the brome grass seed by using a header attachment. Where there are good stands of orchard grass it can also be harvested in the same manner. It is reported that Reeds Canary grass is being harvested in this manner near Howell, Mich. There is a big demand also for alaska, white, red and mammoth clover.

may be moved and cured and then run through the combine. In order to avoid spoilage, growers should be sure combined seed is thoroughly dry before attempting to store it, O'Brien pointed out. By having their own seed, growers can assure themselves of a seed supply. With the shortage of nitrogen, the growing of well-inoculated legumes on a sweet soil is one of the most practical methods of securing nitrogen, he said.

Food Expenditures The average expenditure per individual for food in 1941 at the income level of $1,500 to $1,750 was $437. At the income level of $5,000 to $10,000 it was $684.

Conservation Dept. Shows Efficiency In Plane Spotting

Within one to three minutes after a conservation department fire tower spots a plane overhead, the headquarters of the Central Air Defense Region at Fort Brady is checking the identity of the plane. This high efficiency rating is the result of close cooperation between the state conservation department's well-oiled forest fire fighting machine and the command of the Central Air Defense region. The department's intricate network of fire towers and district headquarters have been incorporated into the state's military defense system against possible raids by enemy planes. Fire towers and fire wardens' homes north of townline 16 have become aircraft spotting stations, cooperating with the army. When any member of the department's forest fire organization sights or picks up the sound of a plane overhead, he telephones its description immediately to Fort Brady or calls the department's district headquarters, which promptly relays the report directly to Fort Brady, and sets in action the Air Defense command's aircraft defense system.

counties. A resurvey of Montcalm county is scheduled, as well as portions of Clinton, Ionia, Eaton, Ingham and possibly Shiawassee counties where barberries previously have been found, according to M. E. Turner, state leader of barberry eradication in the state

Small grain, including wheat, oats, barley and rye, are attacked by the rust spores, blown into grain fields by wind. An estimated two-million bushel loss in grain occurred annually in a 12-year period of 1916-1927, but the barberry eradication gets part of the credit for reducing this, average loss to less than 700,000 bushels for each of the 12 years in the 1931-1942 period

Farmers are asked to report prevalence of bushes or resprouting of previously salted barberries to county agricultural agents. The latter are sending reports of local rust epidemics, the location of bushes, and twigs for identification. J. H. Muncie, MSC extension specialist in plant pathology, is aiding in barberry identification

Conservation Dept.

Loans Recreation Man to State OGD

The state conservation department has loaned the services of one of its educational representatives, Charles F. Welch, to the Office of Civilian Defense for the duration.

Mr. Welch will head the OGD's new recreation section and will serve as Executive Secretary for the Recreation and Physical Fitness Committee of that office. He will be in charge of organizing a state-wide program of community recreational activities for busy farmers and war-workers.

Mr. Welch has been associated with the educational division of the department for the past six years, and was "borrowed" for this war-time job of providing recreational projects for the home-front army, because of his wide experience in planning recreational and conservation activities among sportsmen's clubs, 4-H clubs, Boy Scouts, and other youth groups.

New State Law Protects Rare Flowers, Plants

Commercialization of many of Michigan's rare plants and wildflowers will be drastically curtailed July 30 when the state's recently enacted "wildflower law" becomes effective.

While the new law does not forbid picking native plants for personal use, it does forbid the sale of certain species without the written consent of the owner of the land from which the plants were taken.

Plants on the restricted list include trailing arbutus, bird's foot violet, climbing biteweed, club mosses, flowering dogwood, all Michigan holly, North American lotus, pipsissewa, and all native orchids, trilliums and gentians.

Persons offering such plants for sale after July 30 will be required to have the written consent of the property owners showing also the legal description of the land from which the plants were taken. The statement must be in possession of all persons cutting, removing, or transporting the plants.

The necessary forms will be provided by field offices of the state departments of agriculture, public safety, and conservation, and officers of these agencies are authorized to inspect any of the plants while in transit.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ender of Gales, Mich., writes that their son, Carl Ender, is somewhere in the north Pacific with a coast artillery unit. Censorship regulations prevent publishing his address as it contains numbers of a military unit stationed in a foreign or combat area. His parents recently received a letter in which he wrote that on June 25 he had received 29 letters and three Berrien County Records.

The following verse was handed to the Record by the local mother of a navy man, who said that it had been a great consolation to her, and that she wished to pass it on for the benefit of other men in the service.

TO MY SAILOR LAD
By Virginia M. Fox
To you, my son, wherever you are
Out on the storm-tossed sea,
Comes this message of love to the sailor lad
That you always wanted to be.

As you man the guns on the ships
You love
Sailing under the stars and the battery
stripes,
There's a star that's riding the waves with you—
Your star of guidance and light
No matter how rough the going may be,
Or how thick the battle you're in,
And whatever the victories you've won
in the fight,
'Tis she who has helped you to win

Keep faith with Her, son
She would have you know—
'Tis Her desire for all sailors to be Under the protection and light and love
Of Our Lady, Star of the Sea

Letter From Australian Soldier
Mrs. Fred Hall received a letter last week from an Australian soldier, as the result of an agreement between her son, Fred Hall, U. S. Navy, and the soldier mentioned. The agreement was that they would write to each other's mothers, as a sort of boost to the home morale. The letter Mrs. Hall received follows:

Gmf H Berwick
14th Battery
104 Aust Tank Attack Regt
A. I. F.
Australia
31/5/43

Dear Mrs. Hall,
You will no doubt be surprised to receive this letter from a perfect stranger—that is if Fred has not already informed you as to my intention of writing you. As you see by the address I am a soldier in the Australian army. Fred and I have become friends and decided on writing to each other's parents, and I am delighted to be writing this now.

When I saw Fred last he was in the best of health and looking fine, that incidentally, was yesterday.

Would like ever so much for Fred to visit my home—but as I am also a considerable distance from my home, seems to be well high impossible for me to do so. My home is in Sydney, New South Wales, while I am stationed in another state. A year has almost passed since I last saw my family—but hope to do so in the near future.

Have been hearing quite a lot about Buchanan. Believe me that son of yours is a one man publicity agency for your city.

You are very fortunate in having a son of Fred's calibre. He is a very fine man and a credit to you, his charming manner endears him to all with whom he comes into contact, and I for one, could not hope to meet a better person. He is a fine man, that just a fighting man from one country to another—but an ambassador from your great country to mine. I can honestly say that your boys have done more to foster goodwill between our nations than a boat load of diplomats could do with years of tinkering. That in itself is some compensation.

My family and I should say from our point of view, big compensation for all these years of war.

It is my intention to visit America after the war and will most assuredly visit Buchanan to renew my friendship with Fred.

We are just feeling the first touches of winter here—it was very cold this morning—a quite a change as the weather has been very nice of late, but we do believe it would never come—but it is here with a vengeance. The climate here in Western Australia is totally different than that in Sydney. It is here in its extreme—hot in summer and cold in winter. What is your Michigan weather like? I believe it is very cold in the winter months.

My favorite sports are football and swimming. I should say my favorite spots before the war were football and swimming. Fred tells me there are some very good spots for swimming in the lakes in your state.

Will send a photo of myself the first opportunity I get, that is if I succeed in obtaining home leave.

Would be very pleased if you could send me a snap of Fred and the family. I would like to see you all together.

Hope this finds you enjoying the best of health.
Yours sincerely,
H (Bert) Berwick.

Upon successfully completing this course, he will be eligible for advancement to a petty officer's rating and will then be sent either to the fleet or to an advanced service school for additional instruction.

Butter will cost the housewife two more points per pound beginning Aug. 1, but shortening, lard, salad and cooking oils will cost one point less and no major changes will be made in meat values, the office of price administration announced Tuesday.

The new red point values will remain in effect through Sept. 4. The 2-point increase for butter brings the cost to ten points—a pound. Margarine remains unchanged at four points.

Supply and Demand
In jumping the point cost of butter, OPA said it was attempting to bring consumer demands into line with the available supply. For several months, it was explained, civilian consumption of butter had exceeded allocations.

OPA predicted that the higher point cost of butter would stimulate the demand for other fats and oils.

The new point value for lard is three points, a pound, while shortening and salad and cooking oils are set at four points.

Release Two Meat Items
OPA removed two meat items from the rationed list. Fresh pork backbones and feet (bone in), which have cost one point per pound, become ration-free.

VACANT LOT GARDENERS HAVE NOTHING ON US... WE "DUG UP" 903,200 POUNDS OF SCRAP

THE call to the Nation for scrap was taken seriously by your Electric Company... every nook and cranny was explored to uncover every last ounce of the scarce metals that are needed to supply munitions to our men at the Front. We "dug up" all sorts of scrap—iron, copper, aluminum and rubber—ranging all the way from large pieces of electrical equipment that had served their usefulness down to office keys. For the year ending February, 1943, we had turned in over 903,200 pounds. In addition, we have made every effort to conserve scarce materials while still maintaining the best service to our customers... this was done by using substitutes and by various make-shifts; by conserving tires, gasoline and equipment. Many of these wartime expediences would not have been possible but for the helpful cooperation of our customers who have taken every situation with typical American spirit.

THIS WAR TIME PRODUCTION LINE IS mighty important

Garden to range to fruit jar. There's a production line that's just as important as any in the nation. For without an abundance of healthful foods, our war workers can not continue to build up those amazing production records.

Don't overlook the importance of canning all the fresh fruits and vegetables you can get your hands on. Use them to save food points — to supplement the other canned and packaged foods which require a ration book.

When performing home canning, count on gas, the fuel that is fast, clean, dependable and modern.
