HIC REQUISIT When that last hour comes that no-man may brook And the last of my copy is on the hook. And the operator, big and fat, Has proved my last galley-and grabbed his hat, And my chums at the office their grief declare By a free-for-all fight for my empty chair, And my sorrowing friends all hem and say I'm not dead, thank goodness, but just away While the preacher is hurling the F B I To find me a fragrant alibi, And when the requies-all are past And they drive out slowly and come back fast Oh! think of me not in that silent hush As the guy who lies in the yellow shroud, But rather as one who was long on bluff And is expertly doing the same old stuff For it takes an editor's skill sub-lime To be and be still at the selfsame time

Frost Damage To Strawberries Over-Estimated

Local Farmers From 2 To 3 Weeks Ahead In Planting With a precipitation of 1.09 inches of that form of liquid-gold known as rainfall on Saturday, moisture met moisture in the Buchanan district and the drouth was definitely over.

The total rainfall recorded for May at the Indiana & Michigan hydroelectric plant was 2.82 inches Tuesday, May 21, as compared with a May normal of 3.65 inches. The rain had an immediate effect on fall wheat, pasture and hay crops, which had been halted and colored by lack of moisture. Wheat is now dark and thriving. It is now believed that the damage to strawberries from frost on the mornings of May 12 and 13 was overestimated. Most growers are now reporting that they will have a crop of strawberries in from two to three weeks, only partially or very little damaged by frost. The same is true of the grape crop, although in the case of both fruits there was some damage, especially in low places. Buchanan farmers are from two to three weeks ahead in their spring work, according to Robert Koepfshor, manager of Buchanan Co-ops, Inc. County agent Leslie Zullman has announced that this week is the accepted time for planting in accordance with a bulletin to farmers issued by Michigan State College. Farmers were in the field with planters when halted by rain Monday afternoon and are generally resuming.

Stranger Leaves As $250 Check Is Probed By Merchant

A stranger entered a local store during the past week, made some purchases and then asked the merchant to cash a check on a Baoda bank. The merchant stated that he was not accustomed to cash checks of that size, but he would call a local financial institution to check whether they would cash it. While he was making the call the stranger left. This incident emphasizes the need for caution on the part of business men and the general public. There are many strangers here who because of employment conditions or other reasons wish to leave while most of them are responsible; the possibility of attempts at fraud, inspired either by dishonesty or desperation, are multiplied.

Buck Nine Loses To State High 3-To-1
The Bucks dropped a well-played game to State High Friday afternoon by a score of 3 to 1, on the local diamond, with the State High pitcher Miller, effectively tying up the Bucks offense in a brilliant exhibition after the first inning.
In that first frame the Bucks made their one market when Stark started the procession with a double, Wissler singled, advancing Stark, who went home on a fielder's choice by Wesner.
The Bucks threatened only once later, when they got two men on bases in the seventh.
Batteries were Miller, pitching and Maher catching for State High; Heezon and Gray pitching and Doleay catching for Buchanan.
In the 4th, 5th and 6th innings Miller retired the Buchanan batters with nine successive strikeouts.
The score by innings was as follows:

Main Objective Kindergarten Is Correct Habits

120 Pupils Attend Buchanan Kindergartens in Half Day Shifts

Though there are many lovely gardens around Buchanan you will find none more pleasant than those in the basement of the Church of Christ, and in the first-floor southwest room of the Dewey Avenue school.

For there, with Mrs. Velma Proulx and Mrs. Blanche Heim as gardeners, you will find the "child gardens", which is the meaning of the pleasant name given the institution by its German founder, Frederic Froebel, over a hundred years ago. To the casual observer of the Buchanan kindergartens, it must have seemed the orphan of the school system, shunted as they were from one basement to another ever since the school quarters became overcrowded.

It is typical of the strange contradictions of the German mind that the kindly institution of kindergarten was developed by the philosophic German to be the ultimate of freedom in education, and was then banned from the country of its nativity by Prussian state officials because of that very freedom. But if you think that the Teutonic mind is incapable of thinking in terms of freedom then just pay a visit to either of the two local kindergarten rooms and get a whiff of what it is about.

Just to go a bit further with the history of the institution, when this educational idea that was conceived to free the child's mind was banished from Germany it was imported to America by German revolutionaries not long after the defeat of the free spirits of Germany in the revolution of 1848. The wife of Carl Schurz, who escaped from a German prison to come to America, first planted the "child garden" in this country. Here she found a patron in Elizabeth Peabody, of the famous Peabody family of Boston. Miss Peabody was a friend and associate of Emerson, Thoreau and other famous New England pillars of freedom and was a sister-in-law of Nathaniel Hawthorne. So the movement had a distinguished lineage in its beginning here.

There is nothing of formal education about the kindergarten. Of course there must be something of a routine of activities to enable the teacher to handle thirty children at a time but within the channel of that routine the aims to encourage the child to be his best self to the utmost possible limit. The emphasis is laid on activity that develops freedom, self-expression, interest and, as a result, happiness.

Frederic based his institution on the belief that children are good if they are just directed rightly and then encouraged to grow that way. As Froebel conceived the kindergarten, it was to precede formal education, taking the child at the tender age of from four to six, and giving free impetus to the natural direction of his personality. In Buchanan that is what they attempt. The child learns very little bookish knowledge, the idea is to help him get hold of himself before bookish education begins.

But to accomplish that, end takes a refinement of technique and knowledge of human values that you are not likely to find further on. For there you find the opposite of the emphasis on subject matter and the starting of technique of teaching that marks the senior high schools and college style of teaching.

The aims of the kindergarten in the Buchanan schools was outlined at the beginning of the present year by the teachers, Mrs. Heim and Mrs. Proulx, as follows:

- 1 To help the child to adapt himself to the social group so that he is a contributing member of that group
- 2 To free the child's creative impulses through dramatization and construction.
- 3 To help the child to grow in the ability to work and play in cooperation with others.
- 4 To help the child learn to persevere in a task until it is finished.
- 5 To give the child an appreciation of those who help supply his needs as doctor, dentist, milk man, etc.
- 6 To aid the child in increasing his ability to express himself easily and clearly.
- 7 To aid the child in establishing definite health practices.
- 8 To give the child an opportunity to share pleasure, of the highest type through stories, music appreciation, etc.
- 9 To provide the opportunity to take turns, to divide, to give, to accept.
- 10 To provide the experience of taking different parts in the group, as leader, listener, actor, observer, contributor, etc.
- 11 To help the child develop an ability to set a standard for his own achievement and to evaluate critically his own work as well as that of others.
- 12 To help the child to adjust to regularity of settled patterns and relationships.

The two kindergarten teachers here have had approximately 120 kindergarten pupils all this year, divided evenly into sixty each, which are again divided into half-day shifts of thirty. According to the Michigan state law children must have passed their fourth birthday before they enter the kindergarten. Here they range from four to six years each.

In the Buchanan schools it is absolutely required that pupils take the kindergarten year before they enter the first grade, unless they come here from outside schools which have no kindergarten. Then, if they are six, they may enter directly into the first grade.

The schedule of the morning is as follows: Free activity period. During this time each child does just what he pleases with the material at hand. He may play with building blocks, string beads, piece together wooden cut-out puzzles, draw and color pictures, practice poster painting on the easels, ride the rocking horse, or it may be a "play" with the dolls in the doll corner. In the latter event a sense of completeness is always achieved by having a boy or two attending in the secondary role of papa.

Conversation period. At this time the children are encouraged to take over as spokesmen, relating things that have interested them.

Supervised activity. In this period the teacher explains some special subject, such as making cards to take home for Mother's Day. The teacher gives specific directions, and then gives out materials and the children try to follow directions.

Milk period. During the fall and winter the children get a half pint of milk each. Often several boys pass out the milk. As each child gets his bottle, he waits until all are served. When all are seated, a grace is said before drinking.

Toilet period. Recess period—a half hour on fine days.

Rest period of ten minutes. Music period, 10 to 15 minutes of songs, games and rhythms.

Story hour, with teacher telling a story of reading one. Illustrative of the aim of instilling pre-school skills are books with stories told in pictures, in which the child has to follow the action in lines of pictures from left to right across the pages. This trains the left-to-right eye movement used in reading.

In other books they are trained to associate words with pictures, and to later recognize such words from their association with pictures.

And finally, describing aims better than we could, is the following report card with the items on which the pupil is graded:

- Health
Uses handkerchief, keeps fingers and materials clean, keeps clean, is active in play, covers cough, height, weight.
- Attitudes, Abilities and Habits

latest exploit in the adventures of Sherlock Holmes entitled "Terror By Night", with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Chapter 3 of "The Royal Mounted Rides Again" and a funny color cartoon will round out the program.

Sunday and Monday the film treat will be Metro's wonderful tuneful musical of the wild and woolly west, "The Harvey Girls" with Judy Garland and John Hodiak. This hit is filmed in magic technicolor and features the song hit "On The Atchison, Topeka and The Santa Fe". What a thrill when honey-voiced Judy Garland leads a bevy of beauties in bringing love to the lawless frontiers. What a battle when the Harvey Girls fight the wicked, can-can girls for law, order and happy matrimony! What a technicolor romance under the stars as Judy tames tough, handsome John Hodiak! It is the biggest, most exciting musical of the season.

Tuesday and Wednesday, May 28-29, the feature will be "It All Came True", with Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart. This feature is being brought back by request for a repeat showing. It relates the story of a group of quaint characters in a New York boarding house, whose complacent lives are thrown into an upsurge when a gangster decides to use their house as a hideout.

Civilian Supplies Sugar To Be Larger

The Commerce Department estimated today the annual household sugar ration of 15 pounds a person can be maintained this year and that there will be a larger allowance for home canning.

It is reported civilian sugar supplies this year will be 341,000 tons larger than the 1945 total. But it said this year's 5,433,000-ton allocation for civilian consumption would have to cover "the greatly increased industrial sugar ration and the addition of 8,000,000 veterans to the number of civilian users."

The Department said a 20% increase in acreage devoted to the United States sugar beet crop would furnish the chief addition to the 1946 sugar supply. Imports from Cuba, it said, will be down about 1,000,000 tons below the 3,140,000 tons imported in 1945.

Cosily Disease

Infantile paralysis is one of the most expensive diseases known to medicine. Not only must many victims of past epidemics receive continuing care, but each year's outbreaks add new names to the steadily growing list. Hospitalization for a single patient costs more than $2,500 a year. Some cases cost less, some much more; and few families are able to meet the cost of extended polio treatment.

Former Red Cross Worker In England Describes Food Shortage Abroad

(The writer of the following article, Miss Francis Van Der Meid, was a club director in Red Cross service two years in England. She gives her idea of food saving here as an aid to the less fortunate peoples.)

Returning from two years in England, where austerity and monotony best describe the strictly rationed diet, I am amazed at the abundance and variety of food in America. The Americans worked hard to help win the global war, and they are entitled to the best of food and plenty of it, but it is shocking to see the waste.

I should like to see a campaign in America to eliminate wasted food in restaurants as well as homes. Let us eat as many of the perishable foods as we require, but let us select our menus so as to avoid using foods which could be shipped overseas and which will not add to the scarcity of food items which other nations need for survival.

The richness of American food is appalling. Two desserts—both ice cream and cake, or fruit and cake—are common. Oversweet ices and toppings on desserts draw on sugar which is a universally scarce commodity. In all the time I was in England, I saw ices on cakes only on the rarest occasions. Now that I have home again I cannot such as Christmas or weddings, forget those friends abroad who have so much less, but could have more if all of us made it our business to share what we have. When I eat in a restaurant, I do not feel that my bill is paid unless I reserve part of my money for a food item which will go into an overseas parcel. I re-lish my meal the more it represents a little self-denial in behalf of those whose need is great and whose diet is drab.

The American Red Cross in London estimates that 1,500,000 British homes extended hospitality to American servicemen and women. Those who were fortunate enough to be allotted (sometimes) one egg a month often saved that egg for the pleasure of giving it to an American. They shared by willingly depriving themselves of food that their guests might be well fed. Can we not share now more generously from our abundance by sending food parcels to those who entertained our own men and women at such sacrifice?

If any do not know of people to whom to address food parcels, I can supply names of individuals, as well as of organizations, who would gratefully receive and distribute food parcels where they are badly needed.

Some of our American friends once brought to me in England a bunch of bananas from Gibraltar. When the bananas ripened I gave them away, one by one. (A friend said she hadn't seen a banana for six years.) One was given to her charwoman, who called her neighbors in to share the treat. They all passed it around to feel it and to smell it, and finally it was peeled. Then the hostess carefully split it lengthwise and gave half to her small son, who had never seen such a thing before. The other half was shared among the guests, each one spreading a little on a cracker. Next day the little boy took the peeling to school to show the other children.

Let us not imagine that the emergency has passed, that the race with starvation is won, or that we can long remain the greatest nation in history if we disregard the needs of those who shared our dangers and whose lands became the battlefields for our common cause.

Americans have the reputation overseas of being the most generous and kind people on earth and I believe this is true when they understand the need in England, there is scarcely a phase of civilian life which has not deteriorated since Victory—the people are tired and war-weary, and their inspiration is lacking. By extending friendship and help we can do much to re-create in them fresh vitality and inspiration. We must do our part as individuals and not leave it all to our State Department.

"Remove far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me, lest I be full, and deny Thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor, and steal and take the name of my God in vain." (Proverbs 30: 8, 9)

Bucks Crowd Niles In Triangular Meet

The Buchanan high school track team crowded Niles hard, making its best showing of the season at the triangular meet held at Niles Tuesday afternoon with Dowagiac as the third party trailing well behind.

The score by points was Niles 55 1/2, Buchanan 48 1/2, Dowagiac 26 1/2.

Outstanding was Louie Gray, who won the hundred in 10.8 seconds, the high jump with 5 feet 7 1/2 inches, and the broad jump with 18 feet 11 1/2 inches, for a total of 15 points.

Vergon placed in the 440-yard dash with a time of 58.9 seconds, and took second in the shot and high jump.

Other places won were: Rifenburg second in 100-yard dash and second in broad jump, Ott fourth in the high and third in the low hurdles; Trapp fourth in the low hurdles; Kingery second in the 880, in which Martin took third and Speckman fourth. Blake won fourth in the shot and third in the broad jump.

The Buchanan team trailed Dowagiac in the relay, with Niles third.

Can we not share now more generously from our abundance by sending food parcels to those who entertained our own men and women at such sacrifice?

If any do not know of people to whom to address food parcels, I can supply names of individuals, as well as of organizations, who would gratefully receive and distribute food parcels where they are badly needed.

Some of our American friends once brought to me in England a bunch of bananas from Gibraltar. When the bananas ripened I gave them away, one by one. (A friend said she hadn't seen a banana for six years.) One was given to her charwoman, who called her neighbors in to share the treat. They all passed it around to feel it and to smell it, and finally it was peeled. Then the hostess carefully split it lengthwise and gave half to her small son, who had never seen such a thing before. The other half was shared among the guests, each one spreading a little on a cracker. Next day the little boy took the peeling to school to show the other children.

Let us not imagine that the emergency has passed, that the race with starvation is won, or that we can long remain the greatest nation in history if we disregard the needs of those who shared our dangers and whose lands became the battlefields for our common cause.

Americans have the reputation overseas of being the most generous and kind people on earth and I believe this is true when they understand the need in England, there is scarcely a phase of civilian life which has not deteriorated since Victory—the people are tired and war-weary, and their inspiration is lacking. By extending friendship and help we can do much to re-create in them fresh vitality and inspiration. We must do our part as individuals and not leave it all to our State Department.

"Remove far from me vanity and lies; give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with food convenient for me, lest I be full, and deny Thee, and say, Who is the Lord? or lest I be poor, and steal and take the name of my God in vain." (Proverbs 30: 8, 9)

Debates over construction of the so-called St. Lawrence waterway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic sometimes overlook a fact which was impressed on anyone who gazed toward the lake from the Michigan Avenue bridge near the mouth of the Chicago River—Tied neatly up at the dock of the North Pier Terminal Company, was a trim craft with the words "Ornefjell" on either side of its bow. A close look identifies it as a seagoing vessel.

A seagoing vessel in Chicago, a thousand miles from the sea? Yes, Chicago is an ocean port and has been for many years. The Ornefjell of the Norwegian Fjell Line was the first of a fleet of Norwegian, Dutch and Swedish freighters to make its way to Chicago since the war. Before Hitler invaded Poland these ships carried goods back and forth between Chicago and European ports on a regular schedule, the first coming across in 1934. Now they are back in service, and it was a ship-riding sight that rocky little nesting down there at its dock.

These ships are built especially for this service, built so they not only can sail the ocean, but can get through the locks on the Welland Canal, which by-passes Niagara Falls, and survive the peculiar weather on the Great Lakes. They average only about 2,600 tons deadweight fully-loaded, and draw only 17.6 feet of water with this load. The St. Lawrence route allows only 14 feet, though, and loads must be lightened to around 1,600 tons to come on through to Chicago. Part of the trade, therefore, is between the terminals and midway ports on the outer St. Lawrence.

The trip from Chicago to Europe requires about 21 days, practically half of this on the open Atlantic, the rest along the St. Lawrence and around through Lakes Erie, Ontario, Huron, and Michigan.

rubber, and feed, and imports of cheese, tea, ores, chemicals, fish, oil, and textile products, totaled from 45,000 to 50,000 tons annually on the Fjell Line, and about as much on the Dutch Orange Line, and two Swedish lines. The Ornefjell on this trip brought canned fish, herring, and cod liver oil.

While these ships have some passenger accommodations and took a few passengers back and forth before the war, Donald Phelps, the agent, says there will be no room available for passengers for a while.

Girl Back From Overseas Advises On Saving Food

(The writer of the following article, Miss Francis Van Der Meid, was a club director in Red Cross service two years in England. She gives her idea of food saving here as an aid to the less fortunate peoples.)

Returning from two years in England, where austerity and monotony best describe the strictly rationed diet, I am amazed at the abundance and variety of food in America. The Americans worked hard to help win the global war, and they are entitled to the best of food and plenty of it, but it is shocking to see the waste.

I should like to see a campaign in America to eliminate wasted food in restaurants as well as homes. Let us eat as many of the perishable foods as we require, but let us select our menus so as to avoid using foods which could be shipped overseas and which will not add to the scarcity of food items which other nations need for survival.

The richness of American food is appalling. Two desserts—both ice cream and cake, or fruit and cake—are common. Oversweet ices and toppings on desserts draw on sugar which is a universally scarce commodity. In all the time I was in England, I saw ices on cakes only on the rarest occasions. Now that I have home again I cannot such as Christmas or weddings, forget those friends abroad who have so much less, but could have more if all of us made it our business to share what we have. When I eat in a restaurant, I do not feel that my bill is paid unless I reserve part of my money for a food item which will go into an overseas parcel. I re-lish my meal the more it represents a little self-denial in behalf of those whose need is great and whose diet is drab.

The American Red Cross in London estimates that 1,500,000 British homes extended hospitality to American servicemen and women. Those who were fortunate enough to be allotted (sometimes) one egg a month often saved that egg for the pleasure of giving it to an American. They shared by willingly depriving themselves of food that their guests might be well fed. Can we not share now more generously from our abundance by sending food parcels to those who entertained our own men and women at such sacrifice?

If any do not know of people to whom to address food parcels, I can supply names of individuals, as well as of organizations, who would gratefully receive and distribute food parcels where they are badly needed.

An Attempt to Reproduce a Cross Section of The American Scene, As Witnessed Here Through the Past Century

Relative To Edibility of Eels, Other Dayton Lake Data

(Second Installment)
By Fred Richter

Eels were good eating but rather hard to skin. My way of doing this was to cut through the skin around the neck, loosen enough of the skin to get hold of it with a wooden cloth, then drive a nail through the head into a post. The skin could then be pulled off by main strength, with care that no meat came off with it.

The average-sized eel caught those days weighed a pound and a half to two pounds. I have not seen an eel taken out of Dayton Lake since those days when you could use set-lines or one kind or another.

Eel fishing out of the way, let's look back at another way of fishing for pickerel or any other large lake fish willing to bite. This was called "still fishing" and was done with two poles, ones and hooks, with minnows for bait. My deceased brother, Leo Richter, was very much interested in this style of fishing, and at the same time very lucky. I have a picture of him taken in 1890 on the opening day of the fishing season. He got up that morning at daylight and after spending three hours on the lake he had a total of ten pickerel, ranging from two to eight pounds each, all hanging in a line when the picture was taken. Lucky, you'll say.

Fishing with a pole and line for the smaller variety of fish was also very popular those days, with fishworms for bait. I have seen the time when, fishing this way, I would accidentally hook a nest of black sunfish, and would pull them in as fast as I could take them off the hook and throw the line in again. Nothing like that nowadays. Fishing such as that encouraged you to go another day.

When summer was nearly over in those days another fishing campaign was begun and carried on through the fall, but usually with not so much luck as in the spring. Later on when winter covered the lake with ice, you took some minnows and fished for pickerel with another style of tip-ups. A hole was cut in the ice about eight to ten inches square. The lip-up was a round stick passed through a thin board about 18 inches long, tapered at each end and a hole in one end to pass the stick through. The line was fastened to the upper end—nearest the stick—which was laid across the hole. When a fish got hooked, the stick would naturally be raised up, which was usually the signal of a catch, though not always.

I almost forgot to describe the fishing of the days which went rather back than I did, and which I heard described, including methods of spearing at night from a boat. A large ball would be made by wrapping rags around a small ball until a diameter of about ten inches was achieved. Mother may have missed some of her carpet rags about that time. When the ball of rags was large enough, some thin wire was wrapped around it to hold the rags firmly together, and make the ball solid. The ball was then soaked for several days in a bucket of kerosene. This ball was then hung on a post in the boat, if I remember right.

When the fishermen took to the water, the ball was lighted with a match and afforded them plenty of light to see all the fish swimming around. At the same time the light apparently blinded the fish. The noise of rowing the boat did not seem to frighten the fish, and the boatmen got many a pickerel that way. But that method was used in days before my remembrance, so I don't exactly know whether the boys got a lot of fish or just had a lot of fun. I believe this spearing was done mostly in the early spring before the weeds got too thick in the shallow water where the spearing usually took place.

Now for spearing fish inside a shanty. For the past two or three winters there has been from a dozen to fifteen or more shanties on the lake. Some say that forty and fifty years ago there were many more shanties. I hardly agree with that, though I could be mistaken. There was one particular shanty I remember very well. This was in the days when I was still attending the Dayton school. This fish-house stood in the grove below the schoolhouse during the summer—in drydock, you might say. There was plenty of fuel on the ground—dry leaves and so forth. I and a schoolmate, Perry Ansley, now living near Athens, Mich., were, one day, two souls with but one single thought—said thought being to build a fire in the stove in the fish house with dry leaves. It was lots of fun seeing the smoke come out of the chimney stove pipe. All went well until we had to leave about noon for dinner. We filled the stove well up with leaves and went away. While we were gone the fish-house somehow couldn't take all the heat, and burned to the ground.

Well, I suppose it is fitting to add here that Perry and I got what was coming to us from the teachers. That was only the beginning for me, as it would have been a miracle if Dad hadn't finished where the teacher left off, and no miracle happened. I think Perry got off a little better than I did. But then I suppose our dads had to pay for the fish-house!

Well, friends this is the end of my tale of old-time fishing. I can truthfully say that I have not done any fishing on the old lake for twenty years or more. If the old days could come back I might try my luck again.

Do you know the answers?

A QUIZ BASED ON THE ANNUAL REPORT JUST ISSUED BY THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY (INDIANA)

Most of you may know little about us except that nearly everywhere you ordinarily drive your car you can roll up to a Standard Oil pump and say "Fill 'er up!" But, because what we do affects your life in so many other ways, we'd like to take you behind the scenes to see some of the things we've been doing of late. We think it might prove more interesting to do it in the form of a quiz—which won't be any great brain-twister, as the answers are directly below the questions.

- 1. In how much of the United States does Standard Oil (Indiana) operate?
Like most of the rest of you, Mr. & Mrs. Mid-America, we were "born and raised" in these north-central states. From them we have spread out either directly or through subsidiary companies until now we market in 40 of the 48 states. We market in 15 of these states under the Standard Oil name.

- 2. How does Standard of Indiana compare in size with other oil companies?
There are larger oil companies and smaller ones, but it's generally known, of course, that ours is one of the largest. To bring you high grade petroleum products, wherever and whenever you want them, takes almost limitless facilities and equipment, and the skill and experience of many people. America needs big business as well as small, so long as competition is fair. We think ours has been fair. It must have been, for there are many more small competing companies in our territory, doing very nicely, than there were earlier in our history.
- 3. Just how large is Standard of Indiana's business?
In terms of crude oil and refined products sold in 1945, it totaled 215,000,000 barrels. Transportation of this made a lot of business for pipe line men, railway men and truckers. And it provided the stock in trade for 27,765 small businessmen, the independent operators of service stations handling our products. Similarly, our payments, in connection with crude oil produced and purchased, were a source of income to thousands of land owners and independent oil producers.
- 4. Is Standard of Indiana active in the discovery of new oil fields?
Our search is never-ending. We have drilled wells in 19 different states. Last year, our drilling was carried on in such varied places as West Texas, the Gulf Coast, and Northwest Colorado. To those dis-
- 5. What was the income of Standard Oil (Indiana), and what was done with it?
In 1945, we received for crude oil, products, etc., $627,626,612. Out of each dollar, the owners of the business—the stockholders—received only 37 cents. It took 57 cents of each Standard Oil (Indiana) dollar to pay for materials, transportation, and operating costs, 19 2 cents were paid to employees (including employee benefits); 15 5 cents went for taxes, depreciation and other costs, and 4 4 cents were retained for development of the business.
- 6. Why was more money retained in the business than was paid out in dividends?
Because we must spend about $150,000,000, this year if possible, to make improvements we couldn't make during the war and to build new equipment needed to keep pace with technological progress. Such expenditures give the public better products and service, support the jobs of employees, and make investments in our business more secure.
- 7. How many people own Standard Oil (Indiana)?
97,166 stockholders own our $819,659,938 of net assets. No individual among them owns as much as 1 per cent of the stock. The largest stockholder is not a person, but an institution for the public welfare, and it owns between 4 and 5 per cent. Among the stockholders are 684 charities, churches, educational institutions, etc.; 10,296 other corporations, insurance companies, protective organizations, etc.; and 39,631 women.
- 8. How many people are in the employ of Standard Oil (Indiana) and how do they get along together?
There are 96,932 men and women employed in the various departments and subsidiaries of the company. Long-established plans for vacations with pay, sickness and disability compensation, and old-age retirement have helped stabilize our relations with employees. We have striven for and believe we have achieved good relations and mutual understanding with our employees, both non-union and union. We have entered into contracts with 108 separate union organizations.
- 9. What is Standard of Indiana doing in research?
Our research expenditures last year were $3,700,000. New research laboratories, now under construction near the refinery at Whiting, Indiana, will enable us to double our present research staff there to number some 420 scientists and 800 assistants and technicians. The primary aim of this research is to give you constantly more and better products; however, our researchers will follow up their more promising discoveries wherever they may lead.
- 10. And what makes "the wheels go 'round'?"
We continue in business to make money. The stockholders, who invest their savings in our tools and equipment, are entitled to a reasonable return. So are the employees, who do the work. We make money for many of you when we supply you energy-packed products for profitable use at little cost. The hope of profit has resulted in the production in America of more of the good things of life for more people than any other nation has produced at any time in history. Our hope of benefit, for all concerned, causes us to seek new ways to serve you, to build new research laboratories, to improve our properties in your communities, and to keep in mind always that we must treat you—our customers—the way you want to be treated.
