Silverplated flatware — the choice of today's bride

The bride of today is the harbinger of a new state of mind. In selecting her tabletop furnishings and accessories, she is contributing to the style and standard of living for families of this decade.

She makes her choices with a flair for combining elegance with practicality, and is discovering the ultimate combination of these two qualities in fine silverplated flatware.

Silverplated flatware, long a standard of elegance in Europe, is gaining recognition in this country as a beautiful and classic alternative to the more costly sterling silver.

It is manufactured by permanently bonding a layer of pure silver to a base metal through the process of electrolysis. The heavier the layer of pure silver, the more durable and beautiful the product.

One company, Reed & Barton Silversmiths, uses the heaviest layer of pure silver of any American manufacturer, and can therefore guarantee their silverplated flatware for 100 years. This type of warranty eliminates the worry that a silverplated piece may lose its lavish silver finish.

In addition to the superior durability of high quality silverplate, its outward appearance is virtually indistinguishable from that of sterling.

Therefore, today's bride is finding that the best way to combine durability, value and elegance is to select silverplated flatware. Only she will know that her table isn't set with real sterling.
