

CAN'T GET GARBAGE DISPOSAL: MAYOR

Buchanan Steel Products Corporation Starts to Landscape Grounds

Ask For Title To Land Along Creek

Would Landscape Banks Of Creek And Reclaim Swamp In S.E. Corner Park

Work is now under way on an extensive and practically complete landscaping of the grounds of the Buchanan Steel Products Corporation south of Smith street and east of Athletic park, with Alex Huntzger, Niles landscape architect, in charge.

In the interests of this improvement Mr. E. W. Cress, vice-president and treasurer of the corporation, appeared before the city commission Monday evening and asked that the city sell the corporation about 1 1/2 acres of entirely waste land at a nominal price.

About three years ago the Buchanan Park Board carried on a campaign for the improvement of this area but was not able to secure results. The city was buried in a street improvement campaign and had no force or funds to carry it out.

The land has been entirely waste, an eyesore or rather a cluster of eyesores, since the city acquired it over twenty years ago. Nothing can be done with the land except to reclaim it.

In addition the corporation will improve the steep bank to the east of the front parking lot and the building, planting trees there which will screen out to the east, including the switch track and the metal salvage lot.

New walks are being laid between the parking lot and the north front of the building, including a winding walk along the creek.

John Jerue, Jr. Gets Pilots Wings

Father And Son Make Trip Home From Texas By Airplane

John Jerue, Sr., and son, Lt. John Jerue, Jr., arrived home the first of the week from Texas, where the former had gone to witness the latter's receipt of his pilots wings at Aloe Field, Victoria, Texas.

Lt. John Jerue, Jr., received his wings and the assignment of the job of fighter pilot. He is now home on furlough until he receives orders to report at another field in Texas for ten weeks of intensive combat training. After that he will be placed in the "pilot pool", from which aviators are drawn for combat and assignment all over the world.

John Jerue, Sr., made the trip from Niles to Victoria, 126 miles south of Houston, Texas, via the Illinois Central and the Missouri Pacific routes, in two days and one night. On their return they had secured plane reservations from Victoria to Chicago, making the trip in six hours and forty-five minutes of actual flying time. This course did not include the fourteen hours of delay at Dallas, where they were "bumped" by priority passengers and obliged to wait for another plane, during which time the Braniff plane company paid all expenses. Because of the fourteen-hour delay they made the trip in daylight.

John Jerue, Sr., said that the cost for first class train accommodations from Niles to Victoria were $126.68, and the time taken was two nights and a day. The cost per ticket from Victoria, Texas, to Chicago was $60.02 and the time en route a half day. Figure the cost of the meals and the due of time the plane transportation was much the cheapest.

Chaplain Writes Circumstances Of A. Herman's Death

The following letter received last winter by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Herman from Captain G. L. Belgium, of the 35th Artillery, of the 1st Third Army, contains information relative to the death of their son, Arnold Herman, which may be news to many who knew him. Captain Belgium was Arnold's unit chaplain.

Germany February 17, 1945 Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Herman, 215 Sylvan Ave., Buchanan, Mich. Dear Friends:

Your letter finally came to me three days ago and I sincerely regret that an answer to it has been delayed for such a long time. I regret also that the War Department policy at the time of your son's death did not permit my writing to you. It must have been very difficult for you to receive only the announcement of his death and then hear nothing more. Naturally the questions in your hearts are many, and I shall answer them as well as I can.

As Captain Mark Fahle, commander of "B" Battery, has written to you, Arnold was killed when a muzzle burst occurred on his gun during the taking of Orleans, France. This accident is quite rare, but is known to happen occasionally when everything has been thoroughly checked as far as is humanly possible. There is no question of anyone's negligence, everyone had done his best in preparing gun and ammunition, and it was one of those accidents we must call unavoidable. Arnold was struck in the abdomen, and was given first aid immediately by Cpl. Clifford Baabe, a very fine medical section man who was on the spot when the accident occurred.

You saw the first telegram rushed to a nearby hospital, and every possible medical attention was given him by doctors whom I know personally to be the very best. Nothing was left undone in the effort to save him. Plasma was given to him in quantity, and drugs to ease his pain. Despite all efforts, however, he died very soon after he arrived at our Clearing Station, a few hours after he was injured. I am at a loss to explain why the first telegram should describe him as "slightly injured," but those were days when there were large casualty lists, and occasionally an error would be transmitted to a man's home.

By this time you may have received his personal articles. The sending of these articles to the nearest of kin is done through channels, and is often delayed. I have checked every possible place, but have not been able to discover which of our American military cemeteries in central France Arnold was buried in. I suggest that you contact the Quartermaster-General's office, Department of Burials, War Department, Washington, D. C., as soon as hostilities cease in this theater, and they will give you that information.

Several of Arnold's friends have told me that they wish to write to you when they can, and each of them will tell you what a fine soldier he was, and how much he was loved and respected by all his comrades. His loss was a great one to us, and I realize that it caused great grief and shock to you, his beloved parents. Yet we sorrow not as those who have no hope, for we know that God's promise of eternal life in His Son Jesus is true, and there will be a day of glorious reunion for all who put their trust and love in Him.

Again I say I am sorry that the answer to your inquiry was so long delayed. It was very hard for you, I know. May God comfort you and all who grieve, and cause you to believe that his great sacrifice was not in vain, but was made willingly in a great cause—the cause of freedom and righteousness.

Yours very sincerely, Gerhard L. Belgium, Chaplain, U. S. Army

Don Pears, Clarence Dunbar Add Memories Knight's Race vs. Death

More Reminiscences Of Jack's Race With Death When His Father Died

If we, to paraphrase old Omar the Tentmaker, could conspire to weave together in a thing entire all of the scattered recollections of those who can remember the one-famous flight of Jack Knight by mail plane from Cheyenne to Buchanan on the occasion of a pilot came from Chicago to take it to the hangars there. Dunbar guarded it several days. He says the plane was landed about 100 yards north of the little home A. E. McClure built on an acreage bought from the Alfred Hall farm. That is just south of the Hall orchard, and where Mr. and Mrs. Chester Marsh now live.

Dunbar and his fellow guard secured a length of hay rope in Buchanan and roped off a space about the plane to keep the many people who thronged out to see The laws of trespass were probably pretty much a dead letter, as far as the Hall farm was concerned, during the time the plane was there. Dunbar was there when the relief pilot came from Chicago to take the plane in. It had been raining all of the time the plane was there and the field and the machine itself were pretty well waterlogged. The pilot was a bit dubious about clearing the trees ahead of the plane, and Dunbar remembers that he stepped off the distance before making up his mind that he could clear them. He negotiated the clearance, but with very little to spare.

Another former Buchananite who also remembers the coming of the plane very well is County Clerk Donald Pears, who was then living at his parents' home here and acting as correspondent for Chicago, Detroit and South Bend papers. A press association official wired to Pears from Chicago early the morning that the plane arrived, asking Pears to take a photographer to the scene of the landing and to send in a picture and a story pronto. Pears rounded up M. L. Irie, the then Buchanan photographer, and went to the scene. Knight was gun-faded and tired as he craved out of the cockpit, for flying those crates was tough business.

Let us add here and now that if there are others that have recollections of Jack either in his flying days or before, we'd welcome them. If we could take two weeks off just to gather and organize these materials, including in the fortnight a trip to the United Air Lines headquarters in Chicago, where Jack worked many years, and is doubtless a member of many, and perhaps a letter to Eddie Rickenbacker, whom Jack once piloted across the country something more worth while might be made of this series. But we can't do it that way.

But at that, this series is being read and is being appreciated at more than its real worth as an attempt at least to do justice to the memory of a brave and workmanlike flyer, whose imagination and integrity in the pursuit of his profession of aviator did much for aviation and reflected not a little glory on his home town.

Some time in the not too distant future we hope to get out to United Air Line headquarters and browse a little. Meanwhile, in behalf of Knight himself and more so, in respect for those who knew him best, please write or bring in your recollections.

Property Owners Sign Petitions To Abolish Dump

Fumes And Smoke From Dump Fire Called Nuisance

Answering complaints which recently took the form of a petition relative to smoke and stench from the Michigan Central tracks from the Dry-Zero plant, Mayor Bradley stated yesterday morning that the citizens at present had only one alternative—to do away with the dump and bury their garbage on their own premises.

Mayor Bradley stated the city had had under consideration for some time the installation of a garbage grinder in front of the sewage disposal plant. However, in war times it has been not only impossible to get the equipment but even to get an estimate on the cost. At best such improvement cannot be made for a long time.

Meanwhile, said Mayor Bradley, anyone who thinks that the Buchanan dump is a nuisance, might visit any other city garbage dump in Berrien county or other adjacent parts. They will not find any of them better kept. None of them are too pleasant and it is distinctly in the public interest, when possible, to replace them with a modern garbage disposal plant. Until that time they have their choice—to continue the present dump or to bury the garbage on their own premises.

Returns From a German Prison Grave to Health

Youth Delinquency Down During July

The monthly report of Judge Malcolm Hatfield reveals that even though there was a slight decline in youthful delinquency throughout July, more children were neglected by their parents than in any similar period during the past three years. Complaints were signed against the parents of twenty-three youngsters on charges ranging from open abandonment to complete indifference of the child's whereabouts.

Among the youthful offenders were two run-aways, six traffic violators and twenty-five delinquents arrested for stealing. Of this number, 7 were girls and 26 boys.

During July, Judge Hatfield's juvenile staff cared for 9 crippled and 4 afflicted children, took 6 declarations of adoptions, confirmed 7 adoptions, investigated 19 boarding homes and the activities of 11 youngsters placed on parole and investigated 44 children placed on probation.

The probate division of the Court closed 32 deceased estates, and 11 guardianship estates throughout July. During the same period it admitted 27 new decrees and 9 new guardianship estates to probate. It also committed 3 insane, 3 feeble-minded and 1 epileptic person to state institutions, collected $5,066.74 and computed an additional $2,434.35 in inheritance taxes.

Following his dismissal from the hospital on July 23, Judge Hatfield heard nine contested hearings at his residence and acted on 267 petitions that had been filed since his operation.

Women Voters

When the Woman's Suffrage amendment to the constitution became effective, it was estimated that between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 women were given the ballot. This was in addition to the 17,500,000 who already had the right to vote as a result of action by the various states.

Railways Double Traffic Now With Less Equipment

Anyone who travels by train today—and that definitely includes men and women of the armed services—will tell you it's no fun. Most of them will clothe their comment in much stronger terms than that.

This writer—and traveler—suggests that the official campaign to discourage unnecessary civilian train travel is built on solid ground. It isn't just a bureaucratic whim or a publicity stunt.

In short, don't travel unless you absolutely must—and then be sure to take your patience and your good humor along with you.

But who's to blame? First the railroads were accused, then the Office of Defense Transportation, and now the Army bears the brunt of the complaints. Actually, of course, as is probably clear only to those who can remove themselves mentally from the whirling of political and economic controversy, and from the details of the immediate picture, Hitler and Hirohito are to blame.

It may sound trite to say that, and to note that we still have a big war on our hands. But let's look at some of the facts.

In 1929 the nation's railroads had 52,259 passenger cars in service. In 1944—and this figure is still true for this year—they had 37,490 cars.

In 1929 the railroads carried on an average, each day, 880,690 persons. In 1944 the average daily load was 1,631,260, and that figure today is quite a lot higher. In addition, it should be noted that in 1929 those passengers traveled on an average of 75.2 miles each while currently they are doing an average distance of 151.5.

Then there's freight. You may say people don't ride in freight cars. But freight traffic takes engines and workers, and coal and other materials and repair facilities, and what is more important, trackage. In 1929 the railroads moved 447,000,000,000 tons of freight. In 1944 they carried 738,000,000,000 tons of freight.

Then here's another important point. In 1929 the roads had 1,660,850 workers. In 1944 they had 1,413,672.

What does this all add up to? It simply means that the railroads, during the war, have been doing more business with fewer workers and less equipment, than before the war.

And now suddenly there are dumped in their steel-ribbed lap millions of redeploying troops. The wounded are coming back in large numbers. Business at home, seeing full peace ahead, has taken on new zeal. Business is out looking for markets. Workers and executives feel not only the need, but greater justification for vacations.

Do you wonder that trains are crowded? Do you wonder that they have to withdraw sleepers from trips of less than 450 miles, and require you to make reservations only five days in advance?

That's all well and good, you may say. You'll admit that the railroads have more business and less equipment. But, you ask, why didn't they foresee all this and begin to build new cars years ago?

There are two schools of thought on this. One says that the roads could have built up their rolling stock in the years before the war, but didn't want to use any of the profits that had just begun to put the railroads into good financial positions before going into the making of much new equipment.

The roads, on the other hand, claim in the first place, that they had no more reason to foresee the war in 1930 or even 1940 than anyone else. Anyway, they say, pointing to the years of depression when their business slumped along with all others, for years they had neither the money to build cars nor the prospective business to justify it.

When things did begin to get better in 1936 and 1937, they remind us, they did start ordering new equipment. It was in this period that the spectacular streamlined trains blossomed out. Hundreds of stainless steel cars were built and equipment generally added to and improved.

However, in the meantime much of the equipment that had been on hand in 1929 was worn out or obsolete. New building hardly cared for that which had to be junked or written off.

The railroads, therefore, came into the war period in no better, in fact somewhat worse position than they were before the depression. And what happened then? The government stopped the building of passenger equipment? It didn't. The Pullman Company, and the Edward G. Budd Company, and the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and the Electro-Motive Corporation to making war goods. Pullman made tanks and ships, for instance.

Time after time the roads pleaded for permission to order new cars. The government refused their appearance for the first time since the depression began. They agreed among themselves, according to the charge, which was given official voice, for example, in the antitrust suit against the Pullman Company, to consolidate their cars. The government refused, except for the lifting of the ban just enough to permit the making of a small number of troop carriers.

There seems to be no question in the minds of neutral observers here in the nation's railroad center that the railroads themselves cannot be blamed for the fact that they have not added to their rolling stock during the war. Whether or not the government should be blamed for this is perhaps an academic question now, but involved there is the question of whether the exact course of the war could be predetermined, and whether the actual prosecution of the war at the front was not the first and in fact the only consideration until victory was won.

The government says that had it let the roads build new cars it would have meant fewer tanks and guns and airplanes for war. Choosing between the risk of losing the war and of railroad congestion afterward, one would hardly hesitate.

However, whether the roads should have built more cars before the war is to a large extent a question complicated by calculation of earnings and capitalization and such things, and we won't attempt to do that here.

Maybe the Army is now at fault, observers here say, in bringing troops home from Europe in such a way to cause terrific railroad congestion. That is a question quite apart, though, from this business of total railroad equipment.

Troop congestion or no troop congestion, the railroads have admittedly done a big job with what they've had. And the engineers and firemen and conductors and brakemen and ticket sellers and workers are certainly included when we speak of "the railroads." Right now they, and their bosses, join this writer—and traveler—in exclaiming that "Don't travel unless you have to!"

Mayors' Committee On Race Relations Growing In Numbers

Out of lessons learned in a race riot has sprung up a constructive new agency of local government in many American cities. It's usually called "the mayors' committee on race relations." And there are also county and statewide committees.

You won't find these committees mentioned in civics textbooks, they are too new. But in the two years since Detroit's stormy experience with inter-racial conflict, some 30 or more leading cities, besides a dozen state governments, have established official committees on interracial relationships and more are in the making. There are many more unofficial or citizens committees in these and other cities, so that total of local agencies is something over 200.

Cities of more than 500,000 having official committees, as reported by the Council, are the following: Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Baltimore, New York, Buffalo, Cleveland, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and San Francisco. Those are 10 of the 14 cities in this population class. Among other cities with official committees are Hartford, Conn.; Waterbury, Conn.; St. Paul, Minn.; Kansas City, Mo.; Cincinnati, Ohio; Dayton and Toledo, Ohio; Seattle, Wash.; Louisville, Ky.; New Rochelle, N. Y.; Springfield, Ill.; and Fort Wayne, Ind. Illinois has seven other Mayors' Committees set up by the Governor's Interracial Commission in a city-state cooperative arrangement.

Some of these committees are quite new. Cleveland's City Council set up its Committee by ordinance last March, and just this month offices were opened. The Agency has an appropriation of $25,000 for the remaining five months of the year. Frank W. Baldeau, Cleveland's newly appointed executive director, recently made a visit to the American Council offices to learn all he could about experiences of other cities. A former personnel director in a large industry with long experience in employing Negro labor, Mr. Baldeau enters upon his new tasks with first-hand knowledge of his field. Other cities just getting their offices established are Cincinnati and Indianapolis.

All this organization work indicates increased desire on the part of city administrations and citizens to do something to better race relations, it is generally agreed. How much the committees and commissions will accomplish depends on the steps they take from now on.

"These organizations, car, as many have, become empty gestures unless they are ready to face situations and try to do something about them," comments Robert C. Weaver, community service director of the American Council who has written a "Community Relations Manual" as a guide to local committees.

Some Mayors' Committees are already engaged in such practical work as Mr. Weaver outlined in Chicago, progress has been made in working with police to insure fair and understanding treatment of all races. New York's Citywide Citizens' Committee on Harlem has done a good deal toward extending employment opportunities for Negroes.

In Los Angeles, a County Committee for Inter-racial Progress (another type of local organization) held an Institute on Community Relations for county officials and employees which was really a college course on the subject for public employees, focused on the everyday problems encountered in administering governmental services in the county. One session was devoted also to opportunities for employment of minority groups in industry.

While nearly all of the Mayors' Committees are in the North (notable exception—Louisville, Ky.), there are a number of citizens' inter-racial committees in the South. On the state level, there is a rather wide distribution among the sections with the following listed: Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, California, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania. Not all of these, however, are active.

Agencies which are getting things done, according to observers, are those which have been provided with funds for a paid staff. Cities which have made appropriations for race relations work include New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Detroit.—Christian Science Monitor.

Colorslinger... Some colors linger in the human eye longer than do other colors, according to the Better Vision Institute. Experiments carried out by a railroad revealed that certain red signals, which must be seen as blinking, would be perceived as a continuous red light if they were flashed more than 75 times per minute. Blue signals, on the other hand, were found to run into each other if the rate of flashing was more than 20 times per minute.

Detroit Boosts US-112

(Continued from Page 1) At the same time the new road would have a capacity to take care of the normal increase in highway transportation that will inevitably develop in the post-war years.

Some important elements of the new highway are already in existence, such as the Willow Run Expressway which extends southwest for 17 miles from Detroit, while other portions have already been approved and will be started as soon as the highway programs of the states can get under way. The final location of the route will be determined and detailed plans developed by the appropriate State Highway Commissions with the approval of the Public Roads Administration.

Samuel C. Hadden, of Indianapolis, Indiana, former chairman of the State Highway Commission of Indiana and immediate Past President of the American Association of State Highway Officials, has been engaged by the sponsoring organizations to devote his full time to expediting the development and early construction of this highway.

Mr. Hadden explained the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944 that sets up a national system of interstate highways. "The project is the biggest single road building undertaking ever projected by the Federal government and we should be the very first link in this new system," he said.

Miss Margaret Leona Schantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Schantz, two miles west of Buchanan, and Robert M. Schultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schultz, of South Bend, were married at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Broadway Evangelical church in South Bend. The Rev. E. Prior to the ceremony the church pianist played "Ave Maria" and the wedding march as the bride entered the church with her father. The bride wore a street-length dress of aqua crepe with white accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The bridegroom's sister, Miss Lois Schultz, was bridesmaid and wore pink crepe with white accessories and a corsage of red roses. Edward Walter, of South Bend, acted as groomsmen.

Here's A Good Way To Preserve Eggs

As eggs are comparatively cheap in the spring of the year, housewives are beginning to wonder if there isn't some way they can stock up on this perishable meat substitute. There are many ways to do it, but the most suitable is the oil method, according to Dr. W. L. Mallmann, research professor of bacteriology at Michigan State College, who has conducted experimental research on the preservation of eggs.

In any method of preserving eggs, however, only strictly fresh eggs should be used, that is, eggs not more than eight hours old. This presents some difficulty for the city homemaker in that eggs purchased on the market are not suitable for storage. Even when graded and labeled "strictly fresh," market eggs cannot be relied upon to keep in storage. But to homemakers who have access to a supply of farm eggs, Dr. Mallmann offers the following clean and simple method for storing them. But, first, there's one precaution—the method must be followed implicitly for perfect results, for under varied conditions eggs may deteriorate rapidly. First, collect only clean eggs from dry nests to prevent any bacteria contamination. Dip the eggs in a white, odorless mineral oil at room temperature for a few seconds. Allow the eggs to drain for a few minutes then store in cartons, crates or crocks, preferably in a refrigerator at a temperature of 31 degrees F., away from moist atmospheres and strong or musty odors.

Unless a cool place (under 65 degrees F.) is available, attempts to store even treated eggs would be futile. Dr. Mallmann warns with good refrigeration, however, the housewife will have eggs acceptable for table use after five months' storage although they never should be kept more than six months. If the eggs are stored in a moderately cool place, they are best used for cooking purposes.

Yellow Spots Baboons, the only sub-human primates that have abandoned the trees for life in the open country, are also the only members of that group of living creatures (aside from their human cousins) with wide prevalence of nearsightedness. The apes, monkeys, lemurs and other primates that still swing from tree to tree in the shade are generally farsighted. Human beings and the higher primates are the only creatures that have a central area for sharp vision, known as the "yellow spot," in the retina of the eye. Human beings depend upon these retinal "yellow spots" for reading and other close-focusing work.

Lighting Research is "MOVING the SUN" This picture is not as impossible as it seems. It illustrates something that science is planning for your home of tomorrow. Only, instead of moving your bath fixtures outdoors, you'll do your sunbathing in the privacy of your own bathroom. Lighting research is virtually moving the sun indoors—bringing you all of the priceless benefits of sunshine at the snap of a light switch. For example: Softer, more abundant light for easy seeing. Ultraviolet that produces essential Vitamin D. Short-wave ultraviolet that kills germs. Soothing, penetrating heat. After the war, you'll enjoy these things, properly controlled, summer or winter, night or day, at the snap of a switch. Why not start planning now for your sunlit home of tomorrow. Any home, old or new, can have indoor sunshine. We will be glad to advise you without charge or obligation. In the Meantime, Don't Waste Electricity—Use its Benefits Wisely! PURPOSES and PRINCIPLES Buchanan Property Owners Association

- It is not an "ANTI" organization.
- It is not for the purpose of fighting anyone except those who desire to tear down the town.
- It is for the purpose of protecting, not only property values, but also those rights which citizens and property owners must have in order to live happily in our city.
- The purpose is also to take a closer interest in the activities of our City Commission and to keep property owners informed of any ordinances proposed which might adversely affect said property owners.
- To investigate tax matters and ascertain the reasons for recent increases in valuation in view of the inability to keep homes up as in normal times.
- To find out why the Buchanan tax ratio is higher than for other towns its size, taking into consideration, however, the 5% School Building Fund.
- To take steps to see that no plant or corporation in our city, as a plant or corporation, gains control over our city hall, schools or other institutions which belong to the city and to see that no such plant or corporation be allowed to deteriorate any residence section.
- To publicize any attempt on the part of any one who is endeavoring to reduce the living standards of Buchanan to assist themselves in a larger profit.

Membership to be limited to individual residence property owners and anyone paying taxes on residence property within the City Limits or property which is located within 1/4 mile from the City Limits which would be affected similarly as property within the limits.
