With the release of the eagerly awaited 30th Century-Fox film version of Betty Smith's "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn", the best-selling book in years, will—judging by the unprecedented Hollywood preview acclaim—become the best-loved picture of a lifetime.

The first copy of Betty Smith's merry, tender and heart-warming story of the "Nolans" of Brooklyn had not yet rolled off the presses when 20th Century-Fox acquired the screen rights at the urging of Producer Louis D. Not since "Gone With the Wind" has the casting of any picture provoked such nationwide interest and speculation as has this book. When the picture opens Sunday, Monday, Sept. 9, 10, at the Hollywood theatre, local movie-goers are bound to be unanimous in their approval of what is being widely acknowledged, by authorities as the most perfect casting job ever achieved in Hollywood.

State Library Assoc. Promotes County Library

Small Libraries To Lose Aid Unless They Join County System

Gradual elimination of the small city and town library or amalgamation of such units with other libraries in the interests of increased economy and efficiency of operation is the apparent purpose of a state-wide movement being organized by the Michigan Library Association.

The pressure being used to force such mergers is to be the withdrawal of state-aid from libraries of small income. The purpose of the movement already has a legal basis, and meetings are being held both with librarians and trustees in all parts of the state. Librarians of Berrien county met at Berrien Springs Tuesday afternoon, and a meeting of the trustees of the county is to be held in the near future.

The law passed by the last legislature authorizing the movement is as follows:

The authorization of the new movement is a law recently enacted providing that after July 1, 1948, any public library whose total income from all sources is less than $6,000 may participate in state library aid only by uniting with another library or by becoming a part of a county library.

Since the local library has been under the $2,500 mark in income, that ruling would affect it.

The only compulsion the state has over the smaller city, village or other unit to force the purpose of this law is the threat of withdrawal of state aid funds. If the small unit decides to maintain its individuality it may do so by depending entirely on its own resources. The income received by the Buchanan Public Library from state aid during the past year was $287.40 or about 14% of the total income from all sources.

Opinions of librarians at the meeting at Indian Fields, Berrien Springs, last week was undecided. The proposition being new to nearly all those attending. The librarian of one well-established village library, Berrien Springs, stated that her library board was decidedly against it.

The argument of the state library association, which believes it will lead to more efficient and more economic library practice, runs in part as follows:

1. Small libraries cannot afford to buy many reference or other works with a limited use.
2. If a central county library were established to serve as a clearing house for such books, they would thus become available to the small library. Supposing only two or three patrons of a certain small library would use a certain book, the state would justify its purchase. But if it were bought by a central county library with a dozen or more branches including several dozen readers who might use it, the purchase would be justifiable. Thus it would make available to all of the small libraries a far better selection of special limited-use books.

3. The individuality of the small library would not necessarily be destroyed, as it could still function as usual, buying books of extensive reader interest with the funds from its own taxing unit.

Added to the central library is an additional proposal that a county book truck system be established whereby book stations might be set up at rural school houses in small settlements remote from libraries, thus greatly increasing the availability of books.

The counter argument is that this county system means the expenditure of the maximum funds available for library purposes in central buildings, employees of such buildings, and in book trucks.

The ultimate meaning of economical use of the maximum funds available is getting more and better books to the largest number of customers. Any additional funds available from state or other sources could be more economically used by distribution (runs the argument) to the individual community libraries already existing, rather than investment in additional housing and distribution equipment and the employees necessary to operate it.

Those opposed also assert that there are no really "remote" or isolated communities in counties like Berrien, which is closely settled throughout and which has nearly 1,000 miles of paved road covering the entire territory.

There are reported to be twenty counties in Michigan already having county library systems. In some counties these central libraries and the book truck system are reported to be giving good satisfaction, while in others the success is not so evident. It may be of course that varying efficiency of management accounts for this variation in results.

The big-library argument includes the thesis that such institutions will command the services of more highly trained and more able librarians better qualified to make special book selections. This is, of course, possible and should not be ruled out by the counter argument.

Jack Knight Takes Part In Early Tests Aerial-Ground Radio Talks

Experiments Lead To The Equipment Of Planes With Radio To Aid Landings

An interesting story came to Buchanan recently by letter from Guam.

It seems that Cpl. Herbert Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Russell, is in radar work on the island of Guam in the far Pacific. Some time since but during the present year he met Major Howard McClellan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam McClellan who has been piloting a B-29 between Guam and Japan. Russell asked McClellan if he had ever had his plane brought in by radar. McClellan answered in the negative, if we have the tale correctly. So Russell learned the call number of his plane. Soon after while at his instruments the call number of McClellan's plane, coming, came into the earphones. Russell took over and flashed detailed instructions on landing.

The only lame point in the tale is that in that flight another pilot had taken over for McClellan and was piloting his plane in the substitute pilot reported that it was as smoothly successful as any landing he had ever made.

Which brings out the point we have in mind. Another Buchanan man, Jack Knight, conducted 22 years ago some of the first (and at that time the most successful) plane-ground, two-way conversations. The experiments were being carried on under the auspices of the United States Postal department and had been made possible by the $1,250,000 appropriation made by Congress as the result of interest aroused by Knight's record night flight of Feb. 21-22, 1921.

The two-way radio conversations between Knight's plane and ground stations were made in a flight between Omaha and North Platte, flying a plane equipped with a radio and a transmitting set that would seem rudimentary these days. Knight hopped off from the Omaha airfield on Feb. 23, 1923, just a year, ten months and a day after the completion of the famous night flight on Feb. 21, 1921.

Here's a report as of that date from an Omaha paper:

Story Of Test

Tune into 230 meters.

Here, when you hear in the melodious voice of pilot Jack Knight, air mail ace, now winging his way westward.

"Plane 245 testing. I am broadcasting from an airplane using the air mail service and now flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet over Gothenberg, Neb. This is our first plane to be equipped with a high-powered radio telephone set which permits pilots to transmit and receive. The postoffice department is interesting in knowing the distance signals may be heard. All hearing will please communicate with D. B. Collier, air mail superintendent, Omaha."

Knight, all wired up in a radio flying suit equipped with a plug to connect him with his radio wired ship was ready to hop off for North Platte on the first long distance flight test in this territory at noon today, when Washington wined in the speech which he was to say. With brows deeply wrinkled he leaned it by heart before leaping to the cockpit.

As he passes over each town on route he'll say the little speech given above, and in between whiles he'll sing for you radio fans—Knight loves to yodel—and will give you such interesting facts as "The motor is turning over 1,100 revolutions per minute. I am now using the hushaphone. Do you notice any difference in the sound? The checks you heard were when I was disconnecting the hushaphone."

Knight and Joe Mullen, the radio expert at the air mail station here, staged a very successful test Tuesday afternoon when Knight flew ten miles beyond Lincoln, keeping up a running fire of vocal patter. He even reported a football scrimmage he saw enroute, and his excerpts from grand opera rivaled the late Caruso.

Description Of Instruments

The following description was given under a newspaper picture of the interior of his plane equipped with radio.

"The thing that puzzles laymen is how an aviator can transmit and receive high air without the aid of a ground being several thousand feet in the air he surely cannot effect any ground connection, but the apparatus in the picture partially explains the puzzle.

"This is the antennae reel around which is wound 200 feet of copper wire with a five-pound weight on the end. When he reaches the proper altitude the aviator reels this out and the antennae hangs beneath the plane as it flies along, the ground connection being made by attaching a wire to the metal framework of the plane."

It was reported that his conversations were heard as far as Pennsylvania and New England. We hope that Sgt. Donald Longworth, now an old hand at bringing in planes by radio, will read this in his control tower somewhere in

Start Campaign In Niles Tonight Versus Inflation

Jess Lindsley Champions The Necessity Of Ceiling Price

Watch the extra pennies—they are booby traps

This is the theme of the Grocer-Consumer Anti-Inflation Campaign which will be conducted during September in Niles by the local War Price and Rationing Board, it was announced today by Chairman Jess Lindsley

Arriving at mobilizing public support for price control during the reconversion period as a means of fighting inflation, the Grocer-Consumer Anti-Inflation Campaign will be launched by a mass meeting of local food retailers. The meeting will be held Sept-6, 8 00 p m, Niles Elks' Temple

According to Mr Lindsley an organized effort will be made throughout the community to acquaint local citizens with the facts about the dangers of a post-war inflation and a subsequent period of economic distress similar to the boom and depression after World War I. The purpose of the campaign will be to obtain the cooperation of every local citizen in holding down prices

Retail food stores will display colorful banners and posters, store owners will be asked to sign a ceiling price pledge, food price lists will be distributed to consumers, local organizations will be encouraged to discuss the campaign objectives during their September meetings

"Never pay a penny more than ceiling price," Mr. Lindsley declared in outlining the objectives of the Grocer-Consumer Anti-Inflation Campaign "One extra penny leads to another penny, then another. Consumers pay $1,000,000,000 annually in over-ceiling prices. Extra pennies can bring on a post-war inflation and depression like what happened after World War I. When prices sagged slightly after the Armistice. Then in the mad scramble for civilian goods, prices skyrocketed while the country enjoyed a brief period of prosperity. Prices soon outstripped purchasing power and the boom turned into a depression. In the crash that followed in 1920-21, 100,000 firms went bankrupt, inventory losses totaled $16 billion, 453,000 farmers lost their farms by foreclosures, and 5,500,000 workers became unemployed. THIS MUST NOT HAPPEN AGAIN"

Report Fewer Cases Neglected Children During Month August

For the first time in over three years, the monthly report of Judge Malcolm Hatfield reveals a decline among children who were neglected by their parents. Throughout August, only nine parents were complained against because they sat in liquor places and permitted their children to roam the streets or remain at home unsupervised

Judge Hatfield also revealed that during August he heard 37 delinquent, five traffic and three runaway cases. Of the delinquents there were nine girls and 28 boys. Judge Hatfield also committed two wayward minors over eighteen years of age to Cassidy Lake for training.

Thirty-one crippled children were sent to orthopedic hospitals throughout the month. Four new crippled and nine new afflicted cases were opened and orders entered so that they could receive medical and surgical treatment

Throughout August the juvenile division of the Court accepted three declarations of adoption. Investigated two new adoptive homes and confirmed eight adoptions after children had been in the home for a period of one year. The activities of eleven paroles from state institutions, and 37 probationers from the court and 44 boarding homes were checked

In the probate division of the Court 34 deceased and 16 guardianship estates were opened while 35 deceased and 11 guardianship estates were closed. Inheritance taxes in the amount of $7,936.92 were computed and paid. Eight insane and four feebleminded persons were sent to state asylums throughout August. During the same period Judge Hatfield presided over 26 probate and juvenile trials and acted on 347 petitions that had been filed with the Court

Kroger Installs Buying Office In B. H. Fruit Market The Kroger Grocery and Baking company through its affiliated buying organization, the Wesco Food company, will maintain a buying office in the Benton Harbor market during the current peach season according to R. E. Hanley, in charge of Wesco operations. Neil Prater will be in charge of the Benton Harbor office, assisted by F. A. Brencley, C. L. Brawshaw and C. E. Timmer

These buyers will be procuring peaches for the Kroger stores in Michigan and also for branches maintained by the company in the nearby states.

Exhibits Beautiful Sample Of Peaches Much attention has been attracted by a beautiful sample bushel of J. H. Hale peaches exhibited by Artie Weaver in the window of the Allen hardware. The fruit were very large and perfect in form and beautifully colored

The J. H. Hale and Elberta varieties are reported to be now at harvesting peak, with prices on the Benton Harbor market for Elbertas running $3 to $5.50, while the J. H. Hale varieties are bumping the ceiling of $3.64. The remaining Hale Havens are reported to be getting overripe.

Clean Garden The first important step in control of garden insects and diseases is thorough cleanup of the garden site as early as possible in the year. Both insects and diseases overwinter in plant refuse. Burning this material before time to work the garden will kill many of the pests which might later attack the plants.

section of the country where many Civil War battles were fought. Her most vivid recollection of those times was the blowing up of the Columbia bridge near her home between Wrightsville and York, Pa., by the Union army to stop the advance of the Confederate army

Signs Indicate Michigan Cleaning Its Political House

When lobbyists talk business with legislators in the Capitol halls in Lansing these days one can't help noticing that they are more discreet, less militant and demanding. At the same time when one watches the legislative proceedings one finds members of both houses tending more and more to bear down on sound progressive laws. Out in the administrative offices, State departments and commissions are heaving to the line, cutting corners, heading non-political opinion.

Though somewhat intangible this situation is a sign of governmental cleansing, following on the heels of a series of investigations, trials, and revelations. Official Michigan is in a chastened mood. This is what is found when looking beyond the immediate facts surrounding such things as the Hooper murder trial and the Jackson prison scandal. These incidents, as well as the grand jury graft trials which have already sent 44 legislators, lobbyists, and state officials to jail, are but signs of a widespread upheaval in public affairs.

Things began to stir back in 1939 when it was not until 1943, however, that the legal processes crystallized on the petition of former Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton, Chief Justice Leland W. Cushing, Michigan law as a one-man grand jury and set out on an investigation of alleged legislative and governmental corruption.

Since that time he has indicted 94 persons, including large numbers of legislators and other elected officials, a former member of the University of Michigan Board of Regents, a former Lieutenant Governor, several prominent bankers, a former Detroit City Council member, and a former Republican National Committeeman. Of these 42 have been convicted and sentenced to prison, four have been acquitted, and six await trial. The cases against three were dismissed and trial juries disagreed on verdicts in the cases of three others. More than 1400 witnesses have been paraded before the grand jury and the trial juries.

In the latest phase of the investigation Judge Cui, with the help of special prosecutor, Kim Sigler, returned late major indictments, eight charging corruption in the legislature through bribery or conspiracy with its members. The latest indictment charges corruption of the state Liquor Control Commission, and a thoroughgoing investigation of other state departments and com-

Right now Mr. John Citizen, and his servants here in Lansing are, as was pointed out, thinking and acting very soberly about it all. Some reform legislation, in relation to activities of lobbyists for one thing, is pretty likely to come out of it. Improved government, though, one does observe here, suggests, will come chiefly as a result simply of a rudely awakened public consciousness of what has been going on.

Clarence Holcomb Writes From Manila—Hello Mr. Hawes. I haven't written you for several months but I have a little time this hot afternoon so I'll send you a letter.

I have sure come a long ways from North Africa, Italy, southern France and Germany. I now have 89 points but when they were totaled on May 12 I only had 84. The award of another battle star later raised them to 89.

On my way here I saw the Panama Canal, New Guinea, the rocky fastness of Corregidor, and Batavia, where they had a hard fight when the war started. This Manila is quite a place and they have quite some price too—75 cents for one egg and 50 percent (25 cents) for very small ice cream cone.

I receive the Record yet, and I had five to read on the boat. I sure enjoy reading it, especially the column on the boys in service. I believe that there are quite a few boys from Buchanan here in Manila, and I would like to meet some of them. So far I've met only one from Buchanan, and I met John Gowland of Galien, on the boat I knew him when I was home, and I had a very nice talk with him. His father works at Clark's.

So far in my travels I've seen only two places that were anything like the good old U. S. A.—one of them was Germany and the other was Panama City. They were not much like my home country at that.

I'm pretty sure I will be home before long. That's what we're fighting for and the war should be over in a year (Ed Note It ended two days later).

So I hope I'll soon be able to walk into the Record office again. From your friend, S/Sgt Clarence Holcomb.

We hope that Holcomb's wish comes true soon, inasmuch as the war's end, which he fought for, came two days after he wrote the letter. If he is still in Manila when this paper reaches him we'll add that offhand we know the following: Buchananites now at Manila are Donley, WAC Sgt. Elymer C. Cochran, and Keith Dalrymple, the latter at Clark Field, near Manila.

Things are more leisurely now on Saipan, the war being over, according to Sgt. Robert Neal, who writes, "Most of the fellows are still sacking (sleeping) so it's pretty quiet this morning. A guy around here can sleep anyway. It's a true army art. The guy next to you may be saving on a chair, playing a mouth organ or two of them may be arguing the political situation, the peace of the negro situation, but a true sack artist sleeps on and never even knows what's going on.

He told about fishing and said it looked like a good year for pheasants, in spite of the heavy rains. He asked me to look up his son's grave on Kwajalein. Well, I killed her on Saipan, but his body was taken there for burial. I wrote him that I would certainly look it up for him."

With The First Airborne Army Occupying Berlin—Company C, 208th Engineer Combat Battalion, of which Carl O. Weaver, Route 2, Buchanan, is a member, has joined the airborne forces in the new assignment as Headquarters, Berlin district. The combat engineers joined with the combined force of paratroopers and gliderists and marched into the American sector of the city taken some months ago by the Russian army.

Assigned the task of rebuilding sufficient units to house the Berlin headquarters, the engineers, long veterans of combat tasks, have accomplished innumerable tasks in wiring, re-fitting, and generally rebuilding the sector of Germany that now houses the present American forces.

Assisting in the direction of rebuilding of the most bombed city in the world, the engineer and construction experts will generally supervise the German labor and methods employed in once more making Berlin a self-sufficient operative city.

turned over even once. His ship had dropped anchor off the shore of Okinawa to unload a cargo of food, clothing, ammunition and equipment. That was two weeks before the island had been "secured" by the American forces. There were no docks, no harbors at all equipped with unloading facilities, so the Laura Drake Gill had to anchor out offshore and unload into smaller boats.

When the typhoon hit the island, the ship raised anchor and moved out into the open sea to avoid beaching. It was pretty rough for a few days, so rough the waves were washing regularly over the deck and down in the galley (kitchen) they could only cook things like ham and eggs that were fried in a skillet you could hold on the stove. Pots and kettles placed on the stoves skittered and came oom around the galley at the imminent risk of cooling the cook instead of the edibles.

Mittan shipped Feb. 7, 1945, on the Laura Drake Gill from San Francisco. His ship went first to Honolulu, then to the South Seas, including Guadalcanal, Guam and other points. When the ship crossed the equator he received the honorary degree of "shellback" after going through the usual roughing and was then given a certificate of graduation. He might return to the Merchant Marine he stated, although the wartime business has terminated, leaving the pay much lower.

Frederick Banke Flown Home In C-54—Frederick Banke arrived Thursday afternoon at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Banke, after two years overseas in England, Italy and North Africa in army air corps ranks.

Previous to his discharge earlier in the week at Washington, D. C., he had been Cpl. Frederick Banke. He came back to the United States on the "Green Project" airborne service, riding a C-54 litter ship from Casablanca, N. A., via the Azores and Newfoundland to Washington, D. C. His plane landed in Washington at 1 a. m. Wednesday after actual flying time of 23 hours. Nineteen men came on the plane, of whom only three were discharged on landing.

He had served as a radio repair man on planes at the U. S. Army Air Base at Bedford, England, for two years. While there he married an English girl. She will follow him here as soon as she can secure a priority for ship transportation. After leaving England he spent a month in Italy and two months at Oran, Algeria. Before entering the army he worked in the Drill Tool Room of the local plant of the Clark Equipment company.

The C-54 litter ship which brought him back was carrying a cargo of returning soldiers while being deployed from Europe to the Pacific to carry wounded home from the latter area.

Sgt. Homer Knapp On 7th Tank Across Remagen Bridgehead—It was exactly a round trip ticket affair, but Sgt. Homer Knapp experienced the rather unusual incidence of going overseas to the ETO and returning from the same theatre on the same boat, the famous liner, Queen Mary. He had another relatively unique experience, for the Sheiman tank, of which he was commander in the Ninth Armored Division, was the seventh tank to cross the Ludendorff bridge at Remagen, where the first bridgehead was established into Germany across the Rhine river.

When they get around to writing the history of World War II there'll be a lot of stuff about mass tet plans, and a lot more about men who brought the Allies victory, plan or no plan. Some of these men will be sergeants, others will be lieutenants, others won't even be Pfc's. Here's one who is a general and has won the hands-down right to join the great of this war. He's the general who didn't wait for orders but seized and crossed the Ludendorff bridge and gave the Allies their first bridgehead east of the Rhine. He is William H. Hodge, commander of the Ninth Armored Division's famed Combat Command B. He answered opportunity's knock and sent his outfit over the Rhine while he had the chance, orders or no orders. He had been ordered to reach the Rhine, take Remagen and establish a bridgehead across the Rhine. His orders made, no reference to taking the Ludendorff bridge.

BY THEIR RIBBONS YOU SHALL KNOW THEM
You've seen many of them already. You're going to see more and more of them as time goes on—ribbons, stars, decorations that speak a language of service and combat in every corner of the globe.
None of us here at home can fully appreciate the sacrifices and heroism for which these strips of colored ribbon have been awarded. But we can learn what they mean so we can recognize them on sight.
Here at Michigan Bell, we'll need the help of our returning veterans in the enormous post-war job of expansion and improvement which we intend to push as rapidly as conditions permit.
In order that we may all welcome them with some knowledge of their wartime records, every Michigan Bell employee is being furnished with a pocket card illustrating and explaining various service ribbons.
These ribbons are badges of honor. The least we can do is to know what they mean.

FREE TO YOU AT MICHIGAN BELL OFFICES
The same pocket card which illustrates and identifies service ribbons for Michigan Bell employees is yours for the asking. Telephone or stop at any Michigan Bell office for your free copy.

State Library Assn. Promotes Co. Library

(Continued from Page 1) mere prejudice-arousing arguments against central organization. There are some small libraries, including Buchanan, in this district doing a good job for their readers without benefit of central libraries with special expert services. It should be stated that this is merely given as an individual opinion without any assumption of judicial finality. One of the strong points of the argument for a county or regional library over a cluster of small libraries is that special books which small libraries would not feel justified in buying might thus be made available to all special-interest readers in the district served. However, even this argument is offset by the fact that the librarian of the Buchanan library can borrow such special books from the state library, and does so right along as the state institution's resources are open to all of Michigan and are much more complete than those of any county institution could possibly be.

Lighting Research is "MOVING the SUN"
A LITTLE girl watched the photographer take this picture. "What are you doing?" she asked. "We're trying to show people how light and pleasant a schoolroom ought to be. Would you like to go to school here?"
"I'd love it!" she said. Well, Lighting Research is working on this, working to "move the sun" indoors, so that people who work and play within four walls can have all the benefits of healthful sunshine. For example:
★ Softer, more abundant light for easy seeing.
★ Ultraviolet that produces essential Vitamin D.
★ Short-wave ultraviolet that kills germs.
★ Soothing, penetrating heat.
If you are connected with a school board—if you are a teacher, or if you have a child in school—why not begin to plan now for the future. Learn how easy it will be to bring sunshine indoors. And that goes for your home, or your business as well. We will be glad to advise you.
