Strange Sea Animal
There is a number of animals that live in the sea, but about the strangest of all is the manatee. One of the strangest things about them is the fact that Christopher Columbus mistook them for mermaids. The modern conception of a "mermaid" is about as close to the appearance of a manatee as a mountain is to a molehill.

Anna Herman Writes From Marine Corps

The following letter was received by Kay Babcock, military features editor of "At Clark's" from Cpl. Anna Herman, former Clark Equipment employee now in the U. S. Marine Corps Women's Reserve.

Dear Kay,
I just received the last issue of "At Clark's" last week and decided I'd like to write you a letter.
We are just about finished with the work here at the Tank and LVT repair base—but, I'm sure I will be one of the first "veterans" to leave. I was among the first WR's to be stationed at work here—because of the fact that this base is only about two years old! We have a jolly old time—here and there are only three of us here at present. We consider ourselves "Old Salts of the Creek" now!
The discharge of the WR's is going quite slowly and the last Ordinance Order has "frozen" us on our posts for four months. I don't see how we can get out until we have a general idea as to when we can get out!

We flew to El Toro Marine Base to play softball a few weeks ago. Gee, we had a wonderful trip! There were "Gyenes" from San Diego, El Centro, Mojave, Camp Pendleton and Santa Barbara. We lost our game to Camp Pendleton—but didn't feel too badly about it because they beat all the other teams also! But softball season is over so we have started our bowling league. We, the "Alley Cats", are really giving the opposing teams a "bad time" and think we are in either first or second place now.

We're having a big dinner party for the team next Wednesday night at the famous Hotel Claremont in Berkeley. The hotel is lavishly furnished and upon entering it gives you the impression of a huge mansion. They have only the best well-known bands there, we will be entertained by the music of Carmen Cavallaro and his orchestra.

I think I've talked enough about myself—so I'd like to know what the latest "scoop" is back there. What's been going on? I think I read something about you having a vacation. I hope you had a very enjoyable time! Oh, Kay, do you ever see Bernice Hemphill? Would you mind telling her that I'd like to hear from her. I know I owe her a letter but I don't know her address. Thank you I bet you are kept quite busy doing these little personal whims of the service people.

While I was home on furlough during July, '45, I got to see Ann Yukoviv, we had a jolly good time and found it quite relaxing to be able to speak to each other in the language we are accustomed to using. When we are civilians again, we'll probably hold a "chat" over the radio, must be nice to have our kids off to school in a cadence of "on—up—yea" left, on—reep—left, right flank, Haich, platoon halt, parade rest, and end up with something like, "you stupid knuckle-heads, get in step!" (The factories won't be the only place where "reconversion" will have to be made). Yep, we surely had had a swell and also "lugged" time in the Corps, and the experience is wonderful. How well I remember the 18th day of April, 1944. I took the Marine Corps oath and no more than finished the last words, when some "fisher sergeant" came in and said "Report to Bay J, on the lower deck, and on the double!" Boy, was I in a whirl—ha, ha, but let them try that now! By the way, speaking of rank, I'm at long last, a Corporal as of 1 June 45. Now I can wear a 2-inch red stripe on my TRUSERS. On the Marine Corps dress blues you have probably noticed that any rank of corporal and above, have that familiar red stripe on their trousers. A private or pfc is not allowed to wear the stripe. The red stripe was added to the dress uniforms as a symbol of the blood shed at the Alamo, in Old Mexico, now Texas.

Well, kiddo, I think I've taken up enough of your time now, so I'll call this "30" and hope to hear from you real soon.
Sincerely,
Anne

Business Failures

Higher During 1945
The rate of business mortality in the United States reached the staggering total of approximately one failure out of every three starting in business during the first quarter of this year, Alfred Schindler, Undersecretary of Commerce, said.

In an address prepared for the centenary luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Schindler asserted that "approximately 550 small businesses have been casualties by the way-side each day of this year."
While 50,000 businesses closed during the first three months of the year, Mr. Schindler said only 150,000 new business ventures were opened.

Points Out Danger Of Cancellation Of Control Of Prices

Every American family has a tremendously important role in the fight against inflation, Mrs. Martha G. Sawyer declares in an article appearing in the current issue of the University of Michigan Alumni Quarterly Review.
Mrs. Sawyer, is at present on leave from the University's School of Business Administration to serve as assistant consumer relations advisor to the Office of Price Administration.

"Price control cannot work without the enthusiastic and active cooperation of the people as a whole," Mrs. Sawyer says. "If price control does not work, the dam will burst and the flood tide of inflation will sweep over all alike."
Here is the advice Mrs. Sawyer has for American families, even though she says it may be distasteful. Keep on paying taxes gladly and invest in victory bonds up to your ability, buy only what you actually have to buy and make no purchase at a price above a legal ceiling.

Mrs. Sawyer cites what happened to prices after the last World War, when controls were dropped shortly after the Armistice in November of 1918. Living costs, which already had advanced 62% from July, 1914, to Armistice Day, were swept upward by a post-war inflationary rise to 108% by June of 1920. But then came a collapse that cut factory payrolls 44% in 22 months, brought foreclosure proceedings against 430,000 farmers in the next four years, and also turned corporation profits into a net loss of $55,000,000 in 1921.

She regards this experience as the perfect lesson on how not to handle our pricing problems during the next few months.

For solder-fired fuses and boilers, use recommended coil sizes. Small sizes make less noise. Keep hopper at least half full. Remove only large sized chirkers. At end of heating season remove coil, ash and clinkers from system, clean stoker and coat inside with oil to prevent rust. Have annual inspection.

Marines Adopt Queer Mascots

Odd Pets 'On Duty' With Masters at Outposts On the Pacific.

WASHINGTON — Swash, the swashbuckling, legendary duck of Bloody Farou, probably is the most famous. But throughout the vast reaches of the Pacific war zones, in all the far flung areas of the global conflict where United States marines are serving and fighting, the lesser-known marine mascots are "on duty" with their masters, reports Sgt. Bill Ross, a marine corps combat correspondent.
Paradoically, Uncle Sam's marines—famed as the world's finest and fiercest fighters—have more than their share of the "motherly" instinct when it comes to pets.
A communications unit of the battle-tested Second marine division felt lost one of its most important members when "Major Joe," a black cocker-spaniel, was lost in action at Saipan.

When last seen, Joe was heading for the front—looking for action just as he did at Taiawa. The belligerent pup was owned by Cpl. Laddie R. Stansbury of Lake Charles, La., but he "belonged" to the entire unit. In the savage invasion of Taiawa, Joe won a signal victory—an open paw-to-paw combat—over a Jap dog on the beach.

Mascots Away Back
Later he broke into a "stockade" containing a few of the handful of Jap prisoners taken on the island. He had a merry time chasing the frightened, beaten enemy around in circles, barking at their heels.
"He was just a pooch—but we kinda loved him," said he were back," said a tough sergeant of Corporal Stansbury's outfit.

The case of Major Joe is but one of many.
Marines undoubtedly have had pets and mascots since that November 10, 1875, when at Tun Tavern in Philadelphia the corps was born. But today, "more than ever before, you'll find mascots wherever you find marines."

A Leatherneck garrison at a South American lend-lease base had an eagle, claimed to be the most "ferocious mascot of any military unit in the world"—one outfit recently arrived in the South Pacific has a lion cub purchased from a zoo in Los Angeles. Queenie, the swine empress of Guadalcanal, is world-famed as the pet pig of a marine unit there.

"Mascots are treated as full-fledged members of the units which adopt them. The pets are given rank, have service record books and uniforms, are promoted or "busted" as their duty record warrants. Mascots in war zones—as in the case of Major Joe—frequently are wounded or killed, receive shell shock, are casualties just as their human comrades in arms.

Have Service Records
The hard-fighting Sixth marine division, composed of units of the famed Iwo Jima battalion, has one of the most unusual of all Leatherneck mascots. One platoon of the Sixth has a leopard kitten. The pet came from Burma and joined the corps when it was sent by an army colonel to his son, Lt. C. B. Bryan of Falls Church, Va.

Black Zombie, a tiny terrier originally from Kingston, N. C., met death in an accident thousands of miles from his native home. He was killed chasing "traffic"—crushed under the wheels of a big gun moving up to blast the Japs. The unit to which he was attached had had Zombie since early training at Camp Lejeune, N. C., long before they sailed overseas.

A marine aviation unit recently came up with a mascot almost as big as a plane. It was Thor, a Great Dane, belonging to Capt. H. C. Wallace of Tulsa, Okla.
Thor's size precludes his flying in combat—or any time—with marine corps fighter planes, but he is always on hand when the Leathernecks take off and return to their Pacific base.

'Duramy City' Is Set Up To Fool Bonn Raiders

BONN, GERMANY. — A dummy city complete with a tricky light pattern had been set up in the woods outside Bonn in an attempt to deceive RAF night raiders, six captured Germans disclosed here. It had been in operation for three years.
The lights went on each time there was a raid. One of the Germans pulled a switch. The five others took stations with buckets of water to put out any fires the bombs might cause.
But every time the bombs fell on Bonn — "even after we used sparklers and colored lights," a spokesman for the prisoners lamented.

Coast-to-Coast in Eight Hours Made by Big Plane

LOS ANGELES — A Pan American Airways crew has flown a Constellation transport plane from Los Angeles to Miami in 8 hours and 5 minutes, a new record for the 2,500-mile hop.
The flight knocked 38 minutes off the mark set February 20. Capt. Victor Wright piloted the Constellation on the "routine" flight for the army air transport command's African-Oceania Division.

SS Guards and Gestapo Taken From Front Lines

WITH CANADIANS ON THE RHINE — The Germans are withdrawing Elite SS troops and Gestapo men, the Nazi party's military backbone, from the Western front to organize a last-ditch stand in the interior of Germany, probably in Bavaria, Allied officers said. The withdrawal first was noted two months ago.
Enemy troops being captured are devoid of SS men and Gestapo units, which formerly forced the German soldier to keep up the battle under the threat of a bullet in his back.
"It is quite possible that there still are a few SS and Gestapo men at or near the front," said one Allied officer, "but their numbers are insignificant compared to two months ago. Then they were dispersed in considerable numbers among all German troops to bolster morale and spy for the party."

Souvenir De Luxe Claimed By Chief Carpenter's Mate

BARRINGTON, R. I. — Other Blue-jackets can have their Jap flags, guns, and shells as souvenirs, but Seabee Frederick F. Fauna, chief carpenter's mate of this city, thinks he's got the best of all.
Fauna landed on Iwo Jima on D-Day, and "the beach was plenty hot," he relates. "Some of my men were hit immediately. I had been hugging the sand for five minutes when a shell landed about 100 feet away."
"A piece of shrapnel cut through my entrenching shovel and buried itself in my pack, not an inch from my back."
"That shovel saved my life. I've dragged it over the beach ever since and I aim to take it back home, varnish it, and hang it over the mantel."

Test Method Of Oil Development Tried In Michigan

A tested method of oil field development that has the approval of the U. S. Department of Interior and is being used successfully in western states will have its first trial in Michigan.
The Ohio Oil Company as unit operator will shortly begin to drill a deep test well six miles north of Rose City in Oscoda county, the first development of a 34,560-acre tract in which oil and gas rights are owned by state, federal, and private interests.
Ninety-seven per cent of the lease holders in the field, which extends into Ogemaw county, have agreed to allow the Ohio company to proceed with its development. Under the agreement, land owners and lease holders pool their interests, sharing returns on the basis of their acreage interests.

According to competent geologists and petroleum engineers, such over-all planning of drilling operations should ultimately recover the greatest possible amounts of oil and gas through application of scientific practices. Such practices cannot be applied as effectively, it is claimed, when numerous operators in an area proceed independently in developing their holdings.

Pheasant Rearing Work Is Centered In Jackson Prison

Stepped-up production of pheasant eggs and birds at the state game farm near Mason next season will be one conservation department answer to the problem of affording better shooting.
Hunters complained during the recent season that birds were scarce.
Most of the department's pheasant rearing activity during the last two years has been transferred to the Southern Michigan prison due to the wartime labor shortage. Approximately 4,500 pheasants, raised at the prison, have been released on state-game areas by department game men this year.
The department is keeping 1,200 birds for breeding purposes, about 1,000 hens and 200 cocks. This is 200 more birds than were kept over last year.
Average pheasant egg production at the game farm in recent pre-war years was in excess of 20,000 eggs and three or four thousand birds were raised annually for release. There had been a shift in emphasis over the years. In the early 1930's, more birds were reared for release and fewer eggs were distributed.

The conservation commission is advocating greater emphasis on farmers and sportsmen in pheasant rearing activities next season. Extensive rearing activities have been carried on in recent years by 4-H clubs.

Aerosol Bombs Are Useful For Killing Flying Bugs Indoors

Aerosol bombs, which are now on the market for civilian purchase, are particularly useful for killing flying insects indoors, according to Herman King, extension specialist in entomology at Michigan State College.
Tests indicate, however, that the bombs have limited usefulness for killing crawling insects, such as roaches, bedbugs and clothes moths. Also, the aerosols are not recommended for applying insecticidal residues to wall surfaces. This should be done with a spray.

Place Your Orders For Fertilizer Now

Michigan farmers who expect to get their share of fertilizer for the 1946 crop season should place their orders at once with their dealers, advises C. E. Millar, head of the soil science department at Michigan State College.
Supplies of fertilizers for 1946 will not be sufficient to meet the demand, according to present indications, he says. Several factors are contributing to this situation. Labor problems are causing manufacturers more concern than a year ago. Lack of shipping facilities is restricting production by limiting the shipments of potash from the mines in New Mexico and California to the fertilizer factories. Although termination of the war has reduced the requirements for sulfuric acid to make explosives, thus permitting the manufacture of more super-phosphate, the limitations in shipping are restricting production.

Toll of Wounds In Abdomen Cut

Hospital Physician Says 50 Per Cent Are Saved by Skilled Surgery? CHICAGO — Fifty per cent reduction in deaths from abdominal wounds in World War II as compared with World War I, has been accomplished by skilled surgery, Maj George B. Sanders, assistant chief of the medical service at the Vaughan General hospital, told a clinic at the hospital. Blood plasma and the new "miracle" drugs, penicillin and sulfa, were given secondary rating as "useful adjuncts" by Major Sanders. Mortality in wounds of the colon, once 60 per cent, has been reduced to 30 per cent, it was brought out. Members of the Chicago Surgical society, who hold meetings in 10 different hospitals yearly, participated in the clinic. Colostomy — the surgical procedure associated with the repair of wounds of the bowel — has proved to be one of the most effective methods of treating abdominal wounds, he continued. While colostomy was known before World War II, it was not utilized much, Major Sanders said, but since the war great strides have been made in its use. Improvement Factors. The colostomy treatment, he explained, consists of making a temporary opening in the abdominal wall through which contents of the colon are detoured temporarily to the injured part at rest and to prevent peritonitis. Highly improved surgical skill in the army medical corps, Major Sanders said, is the result of two factors. 1—Adaptation of the residential (hospital) system among civilian doctors for the last 20 years, which has produced highly trained surgeons. 2 — Lessons learned in World War I as the result of careful observation, new technological advances in evacuating the wounded, well equipped and well staffed hospitals near the front, and intelligent use of such aids as penicillin, plasma, whole blood and sulfa drugs. To illustrate some of the principles which were discussed several soldier patients were presented at the clinic. One of these was a major of the medical corps, a Chicago resident, who was thrown from a jeep on the western front. The head and neck of his right hip joint were shattered and fragments were destroyed beyond repair. 4,000 Have Been Treated. This subject was discussed by Lt. Col. Thomas Horwitz, chief of the orthopedic section, who described the operation in which the fragments were removed and the ball socket action restored with a vitalium (metal cup). The doctor, who suffered the injury five months ago, walked before the doctors with the aid of a cane and without pain. Of the 1,900 battle casualties now enrolled in Vaughan hospital, 1,350 are on surgical treatment and 75 per cent of them are orthopedic problems, Colonel Horwitz said. Over 4,000 patients have been treated in the hospital since it was opened last August. Dr. Lester R. Dragstedt, president of the society and professor of expert surgery at Chicago university, said the hospital has a fine staff and is performing marvelous service. He, too, credited the special surgical training of young men in hospitals as resident doctors for the advancement in surgical skills.

Army Medic Is Made Monarch

King Gives Job to Officer For His Good Work on Behalf of Natives. GUAM — The first American "king" of this war is Lt (jg) Marshall P. Wees of Saginaw, Mich. The middle-aged doctor was delegated king by the reigning monarch of the Ulithi atolls after improving the health and economic conditions of the native people. The ceremony was simple. "Hill sagala" — "You understand everything," said King Ueg, former ruler, in Kanaka, the native language. "Nang butch" — "I don't know," he continued. "Yor Tumui" — "You are king" — No crown was transferred in the ritual. The abdicating ruler concluded the informal rites by placing his two forefingers in the form of a "V," indicating that he was building a new house and what was his would be shared with the doctor. Doctor Gets Busy. Chief medical officer of a landing beach unit that made the joint invasion of Peleju and Anguar, Lieutenant (jg) Wees shared living in fox holes and dodging sniper's bullets with the marine and army troops after the islands had been secured his unit was disbanded. He then was ordered to his present post. Arriving on a small island a mile long and a stone's throw wide, with his only companion Chief Pharmacist's Mate Francis Wilson of San Francisco, Calif., the doctor found only the very young and the very old. The Japs had carried off all serviceable men and women. The remaining natives, living in filth, were suffering from an epidemic of yaws which covered their bodies with painful sores. Many were matted in their huts beneath the palms and the papayas, unable to move their arms and legs. The doctor explained to the king the immediate necessity of taking sanitary measures. With the ruler's cooperation, working parties collected and buried palm fronds and coconuts. Rain barrels, the only native source of drinking water, were covered. Every possible breeding place of flies, spreaders of the disease, was sprayed. The infected were segregated. Better Living Conditions. Successful in checking the epidemic, the naval officer took steps to establish a native economy that would utilize the basket weaving abilities of the Kanakas, and the sailor market on the neighboring atolls. Production was instituted and a native instructed in the rudiments of arithmetic and bookkeeping. With his "crowning," the Michigan physician took further steps to restore health. New brooms were made of coconut fibers and the areas and paths about the huts were swept daily. New sleeping mats were woven. Screened boxes were constructed to store the food supply. The navy man even gave laundry lessons to the native women. They used to wash their clothes by dipping them in the sea. He taught scrubbing and the use of salt water soap donated by the navy supply department. Nor did he forget the former king. For the use of Ueg, an infantile cripple, a Japanese ammunition truck was outfitted as a carrier.

Michigan Invaded By Arctic Snowy Owls

Invasion of Michigan by snowy owls from the Arctic is producing some unusual stories. The great birds—some of them have wingspreads of more than five feet—have been seen in Detroit suburbs and one was captured near Benton Harbor, and has attacked semi-tame pheasants on Belle Isle. Lacking fear of man, probably because of their unfamiliarity with man's powers of destruction, the birds have been reported frequently in duck marshes where they settled on duck hunters. One owl salvaged on a duck hunter's blind on Houghton lake and was shot by the occupant after it had been dislodged. Another seized a wooden decoy set out by a duck hunter at Pointe Mouillee. First reports of the birds' arrival in Michigan were received by conservation department ornithologists in late October. Similar flights from Canadian barren lands have occurred previously, usually about four years apart. Last previous flight was in the winter of 1941-42. Incomplete reports show that more than a hundred of the snowy owls have been shot in recent weeks. A Vassar taxidermist accepted 60 specimens between Oct 27 and Nov 14. *The birds have been reported from as far north as Luce county in the upper peninsula and as far south as Monroe county in the southeastern tip of the state. Largest concentrations appear to be along the Lake Huron shore and in the Thumb region, although many birds have flown inland. Lack of food in their arctic habitat is believed responsible for the flights.

Best Safety Record Made By Nation's Coal Mines

WASHINGTON — The nation's coal mines last year chalked up their best safety record in history despite equipment shortages, loss of skilled workers and other wartime handicaps, Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes said recently. In a report to congress on the federal mine inspection program, he said that 1,306 mine workers lost their lives in 1944. This is a fatality rate of only 1.91 life for each 1,000,000 tons of bituminous coal and anthracite produced. The rate was 2.26 deaths per 1,000,000 tons in 1943.

Fight Battle of Odor With Convoy of Skunks

ALBANY, — Motorists rubbed their eyes in disbelief, then broke all records in closing automobile windows as a convoy of skunks, reported to have numbered at least 800, crossed the four-lane Albany-Schenectady road. It was believed that brush fires had driven the skunks from their old lairs.

Doctors Find Way To Prevent Palsy

Operation on Brain Stops Shaking of Hands. ST LOUIS, MO.—A new brain operation for shaking palsy has been reported in modern medicine. This operation has cured 78 per cent of 200 cases on which it was attempted. It consists in removing a fold of gray matter about the size of a long slim potato from the top frontal portion of the brain. This section is known as the premotor area. The new operation was devised by Roland M. Klemme, M. D. of this city. It follows work by a group of eminent scientists on the nature of shaking palsy, medically known as Parkinson's disease, or paralysis agitans. This palsy, which causes a continuous shaking of the hands, and frequently a fixed lifting of the eyebrows and staring expression, was found due to destruction of some nerve pathways in the basal ganglia, which are lemon sized organs, midway between the temples and the back of the head. Several surgical operations have been tried but none had a high percentage of success. Dr Klemme's operation came from a shrewd guess about what goes on among some tens of thousands of brain nerve fibers. Palsy victims can make any voluntary movements they wish. But they cannot stop shaking when they want to relax. Their voluntary movements are directed from an area of the brain near the top of the head known as the motor cortex. This voluntary center lies between the premotor area and the lemon shaped ganglia. Dr Klemme reasoned that normally the premotor and the ganglia maintain a nerve energy balance, which the voluntary motor area interrupts when, for instance, a person wants to move his hand. With some of the ganglia known to be destroyed, Dr Klemme reasoned further that the balance was upset, leaving the premotor area to cause the uncontrollable shaking. He took out the area and in most cases the shaking stopped. Removing the premotor part of a human brain does not appear to cause mental or physical damage.

V-Bomb Kills Parents As Girl Goes to School

LONDON — The official language still calls them V-bombs "incendiaries" in southern England. Thirteen-year-old Daphne Newton figured in one. She had just said good-bye to her father and mother and run out of the house to call for a friend on the way to school. As she rounded the corner and pushed open her friend's gate, the V-weapon fell. When choking clouds of dust cleared, Daphne looked back. Her home was a rubble, her parents dead beneath it. Her neighborhood since 1940 has been scarred by a mine, an ordinary bomb and two flying bombs, all before last fall. The local church has been damaged for the fourth time. Another V-weapon injured many children who were on their way to school. The head teacher says most of them would have been killed if the bomb had struck later when all were in school.

Aircraft Worker Speeds Up as His Family Grows

LOS ANGELES—Ceil Langston, aircraft worker, telephoned his wife's physician that the stork was near. "Better hurry her to the hospital," the doctor advised. En route Langston called again, frantically reporting: "What'll I do, doctor? There's a baby in the back seat!" Again he was advised to hasten along. Presently he called again. "Doctor when I got back to the car there were two babies!" All was well with Mrs Langston and her twin daughters later at the hospital.

Use Silk Remnant For Star's Fashion

A three quarter yard silk remnant, carefully stored since before Pearl Harbor by the costume department at Universal Studio, has been fashioned into a garment.

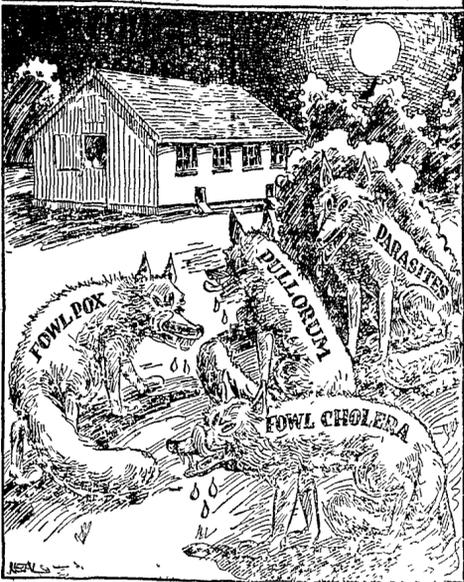

The material features a South Sea floral pattern, and the original bolt was used to make sarongs in 11 earlier Universal film.

The remnant in question was just big enough to make the sarong Peggy Ryan wears in the swimming pool sequence of "On Stage Everybody," new musical in which she will introduce a brand new hiting number.

For the first time in several seasons Deanna Durbin sports an elaborate modern wardrobe in her Universal picture, "Lady On A Train" coming Sunday and Monday, Dec 16-17, to the Hollywood theatre

Producer Felix Jackson engaged Howard Green to make 18 ultra smart street and evening gowns for the star to parade before the camera in the comedy-mystery based on an original story by Leslie Charles, Ralph Bellamy and David Bruce head the supporting cast

Although Deanna had a very elaborate wardrobe in "Can't Help Singing," all of the costumes were of the period variety suitable to the picture's 1849 setting. And her two previous productions called for very simple wardrobes

In collecting books, documents, records and objects relating to the lakes, the society is not superseding, but supplementing societies and museums already in operation, according to Clarence S. Metcalf, Cleveland Public Library, who is executive vice-president of the Society

He explains that the Great Lakes Historical Society with its quarterly publication, "Inland Seas," is the first attempt to collect the common interest and qualities of all the communities bordering on the "fidelous sea."

The latest issue of the quarterly includes a description by Marion M. King, librarian at Lorain, Ohio, of the boyhood of Admiral Elbert J. King in that city

In his account of bravery Justus O. Wells, M. Metcalf tells of the like master's youth, his leaving his Wisconsin, Wis., home to become a cabin boy on clipper ships, and his later debut on fresh water, when Wells and shipmates from the schooner Rocky Mountain "distinguished themselves" in a rescue of the crew of the Canadian bark, Giampus and the Cleveland schooner, Henry Ainsworth a ground in a heavy sea at Oswego

The "gospel chaps," relates Walter Havighurst, professor of English at Miami, O. University, were commanded by big, broad, bearded Captain Henry Dundy, who sailed his succession of "Glad Tidings" boats on the lakes in the '70s and '80s, carrying his family aboard, flying his banner "God Is Love" from the mammoth, and putting ashore with a portable organ and gospel tent, conducting evangelistic services from Duluth to Chicago

The society has arranged for the Cleveland Power Squadron, a chapter of the nation-wide group devoted to the study of navigation and marine life, to develop a room of Cleveland's Carnegie West Branch Library as a museum of Great Lakes mementoes. Other pupils, documents and records are being received by M. Metcalf at Public Library, and information on the Great Lakes' history is being exchanged with libraries, individuals and organizations throughout the nation.

Uncle Sam's Flyers Are Modern Knights in Armor

WASHINGTON - Modern knights in armor are manning Uncle Sam's planes flying over Axis territory. The war department reported that the eighth air force in England has "clad" some of its member crews in "thin steel plates, covering breast and back, to protect them from flak from anti-aircraft guns"

Such missiles, which cause a majority of wounds, can be stopped by the plates, which weigh about 20 pounds and are shipped into pockets of a new sleeveless jacket to form a cushion from neck to hips. The garment, suspended from the shoulders, can be removed instantly by pulling a release cord. It has been found particularly effective for waist and turret gunners, who expose the upper part of their bodies. The war department said one gunner wearing the armor was struck by a piece of flak the size of a marble which knocked him across the plane. The armor stopped the missile, although the steel plating was bent

War 'Not Favorable,' Big Jap Paper Admits

NEW YORK - The Mainichi Shinbun of Osaka, one of Japan's largest newspapers, said that "Frankly, the war situation in Pacific waters is not favorable to us" but it declared that "with out the slightest doubt, our combined fleet is now mapping the strategy to defeat the enemy with one swoop"

Loosen Cardigans

Tight cardigans can be let out by binding the neck and front with satin blanket binding. Make buttonholes in the binding on one side, sew buttons on the other. The added width will relieve the strain on the sweater. If you can't find binding in a shade to match the sweater, use a contrasting hue

To Brig. Gen. Harold N. Gilbert, USA, has been entrusted the direction of the greatest recruiting campaign in the history of the army.

GIs in Leghorn Find Beer and Then Lose It

LIVORNO, ITALY - In the capture of Livorno (Leghorn), the Allies took possession of a brewery which had been turning out choice beer for Nazi troops in Italy

Some of the very first American troops to enter the city discovered the brewery. They tasted some of the cool "suds" they found in underground vaults - and pronounced it delightful. Word of their find spread rapidly through the ranks, but soon two military policemen got one of the most thankless assignments ever known in war

They had to say no to hundreds of soldiers who stood before the brewery in the scorching sun.

WE KNOW JUST HOW YOU FEEL
Lots of people have their hands full at this time of year. For us, December 24 and 25 are always busy days at Long Distance switchboards - and they will be busier than ever this Christmas. Please make only the most necessary calls over the holidays. The call you don't make may free the line for a returning service man who won't be able to be home at Christmas.
