Berrien General announces new program

A special pre-natal program, jointly sponsored by Berrien General Hospital and the Berrien County Health Department, seeks to provide comprehensive maternal and infant care for Berrien County residents.

The pre-natal program provides not only medical care but also other services for mothers and infants Social workers, nutrition education, pre-natal care, post-natal care and family planning counseling are all available

"With the help of the Health Department, we provide many valuable services to women and their children that they might not otherwise be able to afford," said Mrs Sandra Bruce, Berrien General Hospital administrator In addition, the pre-natal program employs a pediatric nurse-practioner who visits the mothers and their newborn babies at the hospital.

The pre-natal program is funded by the Michigan Department of Public Health It is designed to serve indigent women whose pregnancies involve one or more medically high risk factors such as anemia, diabetes, previous miscarriages, or other factors

"Often, once women become involved in the pre-natal program they become aware of other programs available to them through the health department," said Jerome Erickson, Berrien County Health Department director. One such program is Women Infant Care (WIC) which supplies food coupons to pregnant women and women with small children to ensure that they receive adequate protein in their diets.

"The WIC program is particularly important," says Erickson, "because research has shown that children receiving too little protein in their beginning years often fail to achieve optimum development"

To receive more information about this and other services available at Berrien General, Berrien County residents are advised to call Donna Borst at Berrien General Hospital.

CETA Program initiates 70001 Ltd.

The Berrien County CETA Program is the first in the state of Michigan to initiate 70001 Ltd , a unique training and employment program for unemployed and underemployed high school drop-outs

The program is expected to make its debut to the County soon. The projected dates of operation are July 1, 1977 to June 30, 1978 70001 will provide rapid, full-time employment, supervised on the job training, related occupational and academic instruction and a program of supervised, civic and social activities for the participants

The immediate goal of the program in Berrien County is to utilize specially designed, individualized vocational instruction to serve 75 youths during the first year with a goal of placing 50 individuals in full time, non-stipend, private sector employment in accordance with CETA's guidelines A second goal will be to upgrade 17 participants to secure their high school diploma equivalency. 70001 will provide pre-job orientation and instruction leading to job placement in the field of retail sales and distribution.

It is the 70001 philosophy that member associates work for what they are paid as an employee. This is a benefit to both employers and employees who build their commitment and mobility on performance on the job, not in a program

The potential 70001 candidates are carefully screened to determine their quality and interest for participation in the program A commitment is made in writing by the enrollee and the local coordinator to each other after the nature and requirements of the program are understood Berrien County's program operator will be the Berrien County Youth Services Bureau and funding will be provided by Berrien County CETA

Even though the program is only in its second year of funding by the U.S. Department of Labor, it has become an immediate success 70001 has received endorsements from the Democratic and Republican National Chairmen, former President Gerald R. Ford, the U S Commission of Education and 4th District Congressman Dave Stockman (R).

70001 is headquartered in Newark, Delaware and has 27 programs operating in 14 states, 23 are CETA funded.

Bill would return Memorial Day to May 30

State Representative Charlie J Harrison, Jr. (D-Pontiac) announced that the House Committee on Military and Veterans' Affairs will conduct a series of public hearings throughout the State on House Bill 4243, a bill to return Memorial Day to May 30.

"For the past several years, the veteran's organizations have sought to have Memorial Day returned to its original date. This issue is a top priority to them because they feel that on this day reverence must be paid to those who gave their lives for our country," Harrison said

"However, the tourist organizations argue that if Memorial Day is returned to May 30, the three day weekend would be eliminated, thus the revenue generated for the State as the result of the long weekend, would also be eliminated."

Harrison stated that since this is a controversial issue which has implications for every citizen in Michigan, the committee felt that hearings should be held on HB 4243 in order to give citizens an opportunity to voice their opinions on this matter.

HB 4243 hearings adjacent to the local area are scheduled as follows:

Friday, July 15, 1977: Grand Rapids, 10:00 a.m., Pantlind Hotel, Continental Room, 187 Monroe, N.W., Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Tuesday, July 26, 1977: 7:00 p.m., Lansing, Mutual Building, Conference Room 1st Floor, 208 N. Capitol, Lansing, Michigan.

"Anyone wishing to testify at the aforementioned hearings, should feel free to attend anyone or all of the hearings," Harrison said, "If someone is unable to attend a hearing and would like to testify, written testimody may be submitted to me in care of the State Capitol, Lansing, Michigan 48909."

Gov. Milliken asks for disaster declarations

Gov William G Milliken Friday asked the U S Agriculture Department to issue disaster declarations for Berrien and Cass Counties as a result of damage to fruit crops caused by extreme cold temperatures and drought.

The letter to Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland estimated crop losses totaling more than $15 million in the two counties, with losses of nearly $10 4 million in Berrien County and $4 7 million in Cass County

"The availability of emergency loans is critical to the farmers for the continuation of these affected farming operations," the Governor said.

The Governor cited extreme cold temperatures which occurred in late 1976 and early 1977, freezing temperatures in April, May and June and drought during the month of May as causing the conditions which led to the request

Milliken also asked the Small Business Administration to redesignate eight Upper Peninsula counties as disaster areas because of a continuing drought.

The Governor, in a letter to SBA Administrator Mitchell P. Kobelinski, said the drought which began in the U P. in the spring of 1976 is continuing.

The eight counties were declared disaster areas in March and became eligible for federal benefits, but the declaration expired on May 26

"Many citizens anticipated that the 1977 spring thaw and rains would alleviate the water shortage and wells would become productive again," the Governor said. "This did not occur and predictions indicate a long-term recovery period from the effects of the drought "

The eight counties involved in the request are Baraga, Delta, Dickinson, Houghton, Iron, Marquette, Menominee and Ontonagon

Approval of Legislation to continue state income tax at 4.6% constitutes breach of faith

The approval of legislation to continue the state income tax rate at 4.6 per cent constitutes a breach of faith with the people of Michigan and substantiates the need for new leadership in the Governor's office, State Senator Patrick H McCollough (D-Dearborn) said

McCollough, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, managed to keep the bill bottled up there for several hours before political maneuvering on the Senate floor resulted in passage of a discharge petition that took the measure out of committee.

It was then passed, given immediate effect and signed into law by the Governor to prevent the scheduled rollback of the income tax from 4 6 to 4 4 per cent at midnight Thursday

McCollough, leading the fight to block the legislation and permit the tax to roll back to 4 4 per cent, consistently voted no on all the motions relating to its passage.

"I deeply regret that this legislation was approved and that the promise that was made to the people in 1975 was broken," McCollough said

"What is especially regrettable is that is was completely unnecessary to break this promise since even without that two-tenths of a per cent we will have enough revenues coming in to the state next year," he added

McCollough was referring to the fact that when lawmakers raised the income tax rate in 1975 from 3 9 to 4 6 per cent, they promised Michigan taxpayers that it would drop to 4 4 per cent on July 1, 1977

And, prior to the voting on the bill, McCollough had provided the legislators and other state officials with reliable data from the Research Seminar for Quantitative Economics at the University of Michigan that showed that the state did not really need the estimated $80 million it would lose in the next fiscal year if the tax were allowed to drop

In fact, the data revealed that the state would have about $300 million in unanticipated new monies available

"The intense political pressuring and lobbying done by the Milliken administration played a significant and decisive role in the approval of this legislation and the continuation of the tax rate at 4 6 per cent," McCollough said.

"I think this proves that we need new leadership in the executive office — leadership that can be held responsible for obtaining accurate and reliable revenue projections and that can operate state government efficiently and economically

"Contrary to the belief of the present administration, the answer to every governmental program is not found in a tax increase," McCollough said

In addition to his exhaustive efforts to bring tax relief to Michigan residents via the rollback, McCollough's leadership on another tax reform measure was in the spotlight during the past week

McCollough-sponsored reforms in the state's controversial Single Business Tax (SBT) won bipartisan approval in the Senate Finance Committee

The SBT revisions proposed by the Senator will alleviate the financial hardships experienced by small businessmen by cutting the tax from 2 35 to 1.2 per cent. And it gives small businesses a less costly method for calculating their taxes

In addition, the proposed revisions reinstate a corporate profits tax.

"The effect of my reforms in the Single Business Tax will be to redistribute the tax load more equitably so that small businesses will no longer have to pay more than their share and wealthy corporations will be contributing proportionately," McCollough said

Subcommittee in energy and power approves ammendment offered by Congressman Stockman

An amendment to the President's energy program offered by Congressman Dave Stockman (4th-MI) was approved overwhelmingly by the Subcommittee in Energy and Power as the Subcommittee ended almost two months of consideration on the Carter plan. The Stockman amendment deleted a far-reaching new program empowering the Federal government to establish energy efficiency standards for nearly all products and equipment used in the industrial sector including motors, pumps, compressors, furnaces, welding equipment and engines

"Isn't one OSHA enough?" Stockman asked his Subcommittee colleagues He added that "although this massive new bureaucracy will have a costly impact on both industry and the consumer", it was tacked onto the President's energy package "without as much as one minute of hearings " According to the freshman Republican, because industrial equipment is produced in such a vast array of sizes, designs and for so many varying conditions, it would require thousands of standards to make the program worthwhile "There are more than 18,000 different types of industrial motors alone," he said. "The first year budget for this program is $7 million History has taught us that for every dollar the Federal government spends in developing regulations and standards, private industry will spend hundreds of dollars more in compliance "

Stockman said that his amendment to kill the Dingell industrial standards program was designed to prevent the Federal government from getting into yet another area of overregulation "This amendment (Dingell) is a classic example of giving government bureaucrats who are far removed from the realities of industrial operations, unlimited power to set detailed standards by which those industries have to live "

Armed with his own calculations and research, Stockman urged his colleagues to reject the Dingell amendment because other provisions of the Carter energy plan (already approved by the Subcommittee) would bring about the same conservation effects without government regulation "The final energy plan will have more than sufficient market pressures so that industry will move towards more efficient machinery of its own volition Economic pressures alone will encourage them to adapt The Dingell amendment is redundant," Stockman concluded

When the Stockman amendment came up for a vote, it passed overwhelmingly with even the author of the original amendment, Chairman Dingell, voting in favor of the Stockman amendment

The President's energy package with the changes recommended by the Subcommittee now goes to the full Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee for consideration

Senator Riegle calls on Congress to deal with South Korean bribe allegations

Calling on Congress to deal "firmly and aggressively" with allegations that members of Congress have been bribed by agents of the South Korean government, Senator Donald W Riegle, Jr. (D-MI) won Senate approval of an amendment that requires an immediate Justice Department investigation, and almost ensures the appointment of an independent special prosecutor.

Riegle's amendment to S. 555, the Public Officials Integrity Act of 1977, forces the Attorney General to immediately begin a formal investigation to determine whether there has been "any improper or illegal conduct on the part of any Representative or Senator, with respect to the receipt or acceptance of" gifts from representatives of foreign governments since 1970

Unless, within 90 days, the Attorney General finds that the matter is "so unsubstantiated that no further investigation or prosecution is warranted," the Riegle amendment mandates the appointment of a special prosecutor to continue the investigation, and if necessary, begin prosecution

"If members of Congress have taken bribes, then they should be prosecuted under due process of law. There should be no double standard applied -- no political favoritism -- and we, the Congress, must take the intiative ourselves

"This provision is a message from the Congress to the American people: We want the truth spelled out -- without any further hesitation -- no matter who has been involved," Riegle said

Shortly before his amendment passed by voice vote, Senator Riegle told his colleagues that the American people were deeply concerned about the bribe charges. He also criticized the Congress for "moving too slowly on cleaning up its own house, particularly in the face of a shaken sense of confidence in government by the American people."

"I was in my homestate last weekend," Riegle said, "and I would say that I ran into more comments about this situation than any other People came up to me and asked about this issue; asking about the extent of the problem and the degree to which representatives of foreign governments had attempted to buy influence with members of Congress I want to see those questions answered."

The amendment was cosponsored by Senators John Heinz (R-PA), Robert Dole (R-KS), Dennis DeConcini (D-AZ), Edward Zorinsky (D-NE), Jesse Helms (R-NC), James Allen (D-AL) and Quentin Burdick (D-ND).

Board of Education discusses teacher contract

The Buchanan Board of Education met in a special session Wednesday, June 30, to discuss negotiations with teachers and bus drivers They reaffirmed a decision not to negotiate a new master teachers' contract until a proposed change in bargaining agents for teachers is settled.

According to Dr Earl Hogan, superintendent of schools, the school board will not begin contract talks with teachers until the issue of a proposed change in bargaining agents is settled The proposed change is from the Buchanan Education Association (BEA) to a regional 5-C association (south Berrien County)

Meanwhile the school board voted to empower Dr. Hogan to establish guidelines for operation of the school district without a new contract

Dr Hogan said the contract with BEA which expired will not be extended Provisions in the expiring contract including fringe benefits, leaves of absence and pay for teachers will continue at the 1976-77 level

An agreement, reached at a hearing on the change of bargaining agents before the Michigan Employment Relations Commission (MERC), calls for redistribution of cards asking teachers if they wish to vote on the proposed agent change and an agreement by the school board not to block a vote if the cards call for it

Opinions

Ag'in Action

Why all the fuss?

There's an old story about the farmer who put off fixing his leaky roof until it rained.....because when it wasn't raining, he didn't need to fix it.

All people have this inborn quirk of putting things off until there's a crisis. That's what allowed Hitler to get such a head start on his plan for world domination in the 1930's, and it brought on the energy shortage that meant long lines at service stations in the 1970's

We are heading for another inevitable crisis and it concerns all of us whether we farm, sell insurance, drive a truck or whatever. We are heading for a world food shortage.

The facts are there for all to see

(1) The world population continues to grow Don't let statistics and numbers cloud this fact Each year there are more people in the world to feed, and there is no reversal in sight.

(2) Because there are more people, they require more space to live, more land for housing, schools, government buildings, roads, parks. As a result, less land is available for farming

(3) The world is seeing its supplies of fuel diminished and new sources of energy are not readily available

Those are the facts -- we are going to have to produce more food for more people on less land and with less energy than ever before and that's what the agonizing appeals for more money for agricultural research are about There is a time lag, from a year to year and, in some cases, 30 years, from the time an agricultural research discovery is made to the time that discovery is used to increase farm yields. We've just about "used up" all the research techniques in improving yields, and money for agricultural research is not even keeping pace with inflation One prominent research official compared it to having cans of food on a shelf He said we have reached up and taken down those cans over the years and now the shelf is almost bare

If we don't have enough food to feed a growing world population in a few short years, hungry countries are going to try to get their food by force or by such tactics as the oil embargo If we don't spend more for agricultural research, we simply will not have enough food

Congressman Stockman announces short and long term solutions to farmer harassment

Congressman Dave Stockman (4th-MI) has announced what he called "both short-term and long-term solutions to the problem of harassment of farmers by the Department of Labor" over migrant labor registration requirements The freshman Republican said that he had been able to negotiate a moratorium with the Assistant Secretary of Labor on enforcement action against farmers who engage in casual exchange of migrant laborers with their neighbors during slack work periods "This back off by the Labor Department is welcome news but it is only a short-term solution," Stockman said "Perhaps better news in the long run is the letter I received from Chairman Andrews of the Economic Opportunity Subcommittee agreeing to hold hearings later this summer on a bill that I introduced (H.R 7892) to rectify the problem of migrant labor contractor registration" Early last month Stockman introduced his "Amendments to the Farm Labor Contractor Registration Act" which would, according to Stockman, "restore the original intent of the 1963 Act "

The Michigan Republican said that the genesis of the problem goes back to a "gross misinterpretation" of the 1963 Registration Act by the U S Department of Labor The result of that misinterpretation was that thousands of farmers across the country (more than 100 in the 4th District alone) were threatened with up to $1,000 in fines "The Congress passed the Registration Act to protect migrant laborers from unscrupulous middlemen who made their living contracting and transporting migrant farm labor," Stockman explained "The Labor Department then began applying those registration rules aimed at transporters to the local farmer who engages in the common practice of sharing labor with his neighbors It was a convoluted misinterpretation of the original law.. all at the expense of several thousands of farmers across the country," he concluded "But I am confident that with both the committment from the Labor Department that the harassment will stop and the committment from the labor Subcommittee that it will hold hearings on my bill, we are well on our way to restoring the original intent of the legislation "

Architectural survey of counties undertaken

An architectural survey of five counties in Southwestern Michigan will be undertaken this summer by the History Division of the Michigan Department of State in cooperation with the art department of Michigan State University

The project, directed by MSU Professor Sadayoshi Omoto and Kathryn Eckert of the history division, will take place in Berrien Cass Van Buren, St. Joseph and Kalamazoo counties

It is part of the History Department's statewide survey of historic structures and districts. Noted will be significant houses, churches, commercial blocks and public buildings as well as architecture on the Chicago road, early trails and railroads

Findings aid in developing historic preservation programs in Michigan Sites will be recommended for listing in the National Register of Historic Places and the State Register of Historic Sites and for grants in acquiring and developing sites

Two MSU students, Karen Kienholz and Mary Beth Langdon will work on the project, conducted by the History Division, supported equally by the MSU Foundation of Michigan State University and funded through the National Park Service. A similar cooperative survey of south central Michigan is planned for 1978.

There have been songs about the moon over Miami, etc., but the full moon over Michigan last week was quite spectacular

The wren family has left the house and all is quiet now Now comes the annual argument on whether or not it's necessary to clean out the house

A nostalgic visit to Ravinia last weekend was indeed pleasant It's still one of the choice spots in the midwest We remember before the war a memorable concert there by George Gershwin. It had to be stopped because of a bad thunderstorm. When the storm was over, the orchestra left because of union rules and Gershwin sat down at the piano and played for over an hour.

The movie "Hawaii" on television was an ordeal with its many commercials It covered merely one segment of that great book and did a rather poor job of that.

Western Amateur Golf Tournament has over 500 entrants

With an annual entry list that has grown to over 500 contestants, it is not surprising that the Western Amateur golf tournament has started to take on an international flavor

In recent years the prestigious tournament has attracted such entrants as Jaime Gonzalez of Rio de Janiero, Brazil; Jim Nelford of Burnaby, British Columbia, Jim Stewart of Singapore, Malasia; and Rafael Alarcon of Guadalajara, Mexico to mention just a few.

To that list this summer will be added that name of an experienced internationalist, Veit Pagel of Hanover, Germany, who has submitted his entry for the Diamond Anniversary Western Amateur August 3-7 at Point O'Woods Golf & Country Club

Unlike most of the other foreign entrants, who have been young players with affiliations to U S college teams, Pagel is a veteran who at 31 years of age has won 10 European amateur titles and has been a member of Germany's last three World Cup teams.

He won the German Amateur championship in 1974, the Greek Amateur championship in 1971 and has been runner-up in the French, Italian and Scandanavian Amateur tournaments

A 1-handicap member of the Hamburg-Falkenstein Golf Club, Pagel has participated in more than 50 international team events and was selected on the contintental European team that played against a combined Great Britain-Ireland squad in the 1972 and 1976 St. Andrews Trophy matches

A former German Junior champion (1964), he has won the Hamburg state championship seven times -- including a string of six straight from 1970-75 -- and just recently finished fourth among both professionals and amateurs in the 1977 German Open

Because of his record, Pagel has been granted an exemption from pre-qualifying and will join some 80 other exempt players who are assured of places in starting field that will tee off for the first round of the rugged 72-hole qualifying test August 3.

In addition, officials of the sponsoring Western Golf Association expect 400 or more non-exempt extrants to compete in pre-qualifying at five sites for the remaining spots in the final field of 168 starters

SMC offers three new two-year degree programs

Three new two-year associate degree programs have been added to the offerings at Southwestern Michigan College as a result of surveys of area, regional, state, and national employment statistics.

The three programs, legal assistant, library assistant, and material management, will be offered for the first time during the upcoming Fall Semester at SMC. Preregistration for the Fall Semester, which includes counseling and advisement on course choices, is being conducted each weekday in the SMC Admissions Office through September 2

The legal assistant program includes courses in orientation to legal assistant, law in the United States, legal research, drafting legal instruments, and investigative techniques. Several business and accounting courses, as well as general education courses such as business math, English, and physical education are also included in the two-year program

Students in the material management curriculum will study an introduction to material management, production control concepts, fundamentals of physical distribution, inventory control, purchasing, and forecasting material requirements, in addition to accounting, English, physical education, and economics courses

Library assistant students will pursue courses in the use of the library, book acquisition, library reference, cataloging and classification, preparation of instructional materials, circulation, and library practice work. General education courses such as western civilization, English, data processing, and psychology are also included

Legal assistants most frequently perform five tasks under the supervision and direction of an attorney The tasks include searching and checking public records, preparing probate inventories, assisting with inheritance, Federal and estate tax returns, contacting clients for information, and indexing documents and preparing digests.

According to the American Bar Association, a properly directed legal assistant "can do almost anything the lawyer can do, except give legal advice or appear in court." Beginning salaries for persons entering the field depend upon experience, education, and geographical location, but range from $7,500 to $11,500 per year.

Typical entry level positions for persons completing the materials management program would be as a first-line floor supervisor or as a technician in a department responsible for procurement of materials. In these positions the employee gains the experience and knowledge of organizational procedures needed to move into middle management positions.

Salaries for graduates of a two-year materials management program will vary dependent upon the work experience of the individual and the position secured Entry level positions as assistant purchasing agents or stockroom supervisors range from $9,000 to $10,500.

Library assistants provide supporting services to professional librarians and assist in providing information to the public using the library. They often have direct contact with library users, in explaining and discussing library services They may have duties in either technical services or user services under the supervision of a librarian.

The number of job openings for library assistants is expected to grow at a pace slightly above the average for all occupations through the mid-1980's Salary levels average about the same as all nonsupervisory workers in private industry, excluding agriculture, and working conditions are excellent Salaries of library assistants in the Federal government, for example, range from $7,400 to $11,500 per year.

For additional information about any of the three new SMC curricula, or any other Fall Semester information, contact the SMC Admissions Office in the O'Leary Building on the SMC campus, or call 782-5113, extension 43

J. 'ab screens compounds in anticancer aim

University of Utah College of Pharmacy researcher Dr. Linda Roti Roti prepares mouse leukemia cell cultures in new lab as part of extensive anticancer program

(Courtesy -- Salt Lake Tribune)

(Editor's Note: Dr. Linda (Mrs. Joseph) Roti Roti is the daughter-in-law of Mr and Mrs. Donald Roti Roti of Buchanan)

Designing a molecule that will attack tumor cells -- but not harm other body tissues or functions is the goal of a unique drug screening laboratory at the University of Utah College of Pharmacy

The 2-year-old testing facility is the newest component in an extensive program to design and synthesize potential new anti-cancer drugs The effort is supported by grants and contracts from the National Cancer Institute.

"Our primary job in the screening lab is to take the compounds synthesized by the medicinal chemists and evaluate their ability to kill tumor cells in a test tube," said Dr Linda Roti Roti, project director

"When compounds show potential antitumor activity, we evaluate the biochemical changes they cause in an effort to determine how they kill cells," she said

Rational Synthetic Design

"The whole purpose is rational synthetic design of new drugs. We want to learn exactly how a molecule must be built so that it will have the desired effectiveness and avoid undesirable reactions in the animal," the researcher said

More than 100 compounds have been tested by the lab so far -- all of them in the nucleoside class Nucleosides are the building blocks of the nucleic acids DNA and RNA

The compounds are put in tissue with a type of mouse leukemia cells called "L-1210" Nucleoside . compounds are "anti-metabolites," which means they usually act in the body by interfering in the normal biochemical processes of the cells

"The compounds may inhibit certain natural chemical reactions, or they may participate in a reaction that would normally only occur between an enzyme and another natural body chemical," Dr Roti Roti said.

Want to Learn Process Used

"Once we find that a compound reacts with tumor cells, we want to learn what biochemical process it uses to interfere with and kill the cells Other researchers have studied cancer drugs that are already in use and known to be effective and have identified several biochemical reactions the drugs cause, but we don't know which ones actually kill tumor cells," she said.

Dr. Roti Roti said the National Cancer Institute awarded the Utah facility a three-year grant in January to expand that area of testing to evaluate the biochemical mode of action of compounds

Big Brothers-Big Sisters

By Mark Nawrocki

In our unique and complex American Society there are so many varied organizations Thus, at first, one is tempted to classify and categorize an organization one is not previously acquainted with as "just another one" The Big Brother-Big Sister Agency is not "just another one" It is unique in its scope with a dedicated purpose to serve a very needed and important sector of our community

The Big Brother-Big Sister ... is a non-profit community youth agency designed to ...nd rescue all our father-...ys and girls or youth in ...rent homes With the help ...guidance that this agency ...ides, so many one parent ...en get hooked on drugs, ... into crimes, violence, child abuse, juvenile delinquency, emotional and mental maladjustments We want to preserve a safe community for ourselves and our children.

The basic philosophy of this agency is a preventive one It reaches the child at a young age where the negative influences of his her home and immediate environment are counteracted by the positive example of a Big Brother or Big Sister The results to our community by so doing are obvious. Within this agency our aim is to provide the friendship and influence of a mature responsible male to boys without fathers, a mature responsible woman to girls without a mother or father or one with a particular need, in order that these boys and girls can reach their highest physical, mental, emotional and spiritual developments

At present we have 63 boys and 13 girls on the waiting list to be matched with Big Brothers and Big Sisters We need volunteers who can share four hours a week with a boy or girl between the ages of 6-16 Sharing is caring -- why not volunteer today and call us at 684-1100 Even if you are just curious about our services, so you can introduce a friend to us, feel free to call us any time. You are welcome to drop in and talk with us at the office of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Niles-Buchanan at 227 E Main St , Suite 201, Niles

It is not what these boys and girls are now that matters but rather what they can be through us As J.L Heureux puts it "A friend is someone who leaves you with all your freedom intact but who, by what he thinks of you, obliges you to be fully what you are "

Big Brothers-Big Sisters is a United Way Agency

Cool your home but/save energy

Air conditioning is the most expensive way to cool your home. To some extent, however, you can control the cost by your selection and operation of the equipment.

John Boyd, Extension housing specialist at Michigan State University, advises buying the air conditioner of the proper capacity that gives the most cooling in BTUs per hour per horsepower. This unit is the most energy efficient -- that is, it gives you the most cooling power for the least energy input.

Whether you choose a room air conditioner or central air conditioning depends on how much you can afford to pay and whether you want to cool one or two rooms or the whole house Installing either type will probably mean adding some wiring to your home, Boyd points out Adding central air conditioning may also entail the installation of new duct work.

"You can increase the efficiency of a window unit by placing it where it will be shaded during the heat of the day," Boyd says "This is especially important if it's on the west or south side of the house."

Keep doors, windows, drapes and blinds, and fireplace dampers closed during the day. If no one will be home for a while, turn the air conditioner off A timer can be used to turn the unit on shortly before anyone comes home

Use the warmest setting possible, Boyd advises. For every degree you lower the thermostat , you use 5 per cent more energy

"It really doesn't take much cooling to provide relief on a hot day, especially if the humidity is high," he notes. "Sometimes just the drying effect of air conditioning is enough to make you more comfortable "

Save energy at night by turning the air conditioning off and opening windows for a little natural cooling, Boyd suggests. Then leave the unit off the next day until the indoor temperature has risen higher than the outdoor temperature

To reduce your air conditioner's work load, avoid using appliances during the hottest part of the day that give off a lot of heat, Boyd advises Install an attic fan, he suggests. Your attic is often at least 25 degrees hotter than the outside air This blanket of hot air will warm your house and make your air conditioner work harder

"Ceiling insulation will help keep your house cooler in the summer as well as warmer in the winter," he points out. "A big improvement in insulation will pay for itself in a few years in energy saved in heating and cooling."

July lawn and garden guide

July is no time to sit back and take it easy. Instead, take these tips on timely chores from Michigan State University Extension specialists and bring your lawn and garden through July in good shape

-Water and fertilize sycamores, oaks and other trees that have lost their leaves due to anthracnose This will stimulate them to produce a new crop of leaves quickly

-If you haven't fertilized your trees yet, do so by July 15 Later fertilization might dispose them to winter injury

-Spruce and hemlock may be suffering from spider mite attack Shake branches over white paper to detect the tiny pests Spray with kelthane to control them

-Prune and shape narrow-leaved evergreens by July 15

-Aphids and leafhoppers may be damaging honey locust and maple Control aphids with malathion and leafhoppers with Sevin

-Inchworms on ornamental trees can be controlled with Bacillus thuringiensis, a bacterial disease that affects only caterpillars

-Control lacebugs on andromeda and azalea with malathion or Sevin sprayed on the undersides of the leaves

-Keep a close eye on houseplants set outdoors for the summer Control insect pests as soon as you detect them Water once or twice a day, as necessary, to keep container-grown plants from drying out

-Pick faded flowers and seed-pods from pansies, zinnias, snapdragons, cosmos and the larger marigolds to keep the plants blooming all summer Dianthus, moss rose (portulaca), petunia, verbena and annual phlox will continue to bloom without your help, but cutting back long, ungainly stems will keep them compact and full

-If you haven't already done it, apply a summer mulch around rose bushes.

-Dahlias suffering from stem rot should be replanted in a well-drained spot and treated with captan Pinch back and tie the shoots as needed.

-Continue a disease and insect control program for roses

-Remove faded rose flowers just before the petals begin to fall. Cut the stems back to just above a node bearing a leaf with five leaflets

-Pinch chrysanthemums until July 15 to encourage bushy growth

-Cut back poinsettia plants to make them grow bushier. Root the cuttings for blooming plants by Christmas

-Prune climbing roses after they've finished blooming.

-Cut back the strong shoots of wisteria to encourage flowering next year

-Check chrysanthemums, nasturtiums, roses and other flowering plants for aphids Spray with malathion if necessary

-Mulch shrubs and flower borders

-If it hasn't been done for five or six years, dig, divide and replant iris after they have finished blooming

-If meldew is a problem on mums, dahlias, phlox, zinnias, privet, lilac, ivy or honeysuckle; spray with sulphur; Karathane, Pipron, benomyl or Actidione PM at two- to four-week intervals now through September

-Divide Oriental poppies and bleeding heart after the foliage dies down

-During July and August, raise the mowing height of lawns about an inch Raising the mowing height encourages root formation and strengthens the grass plants

-Keep your lawn mower blades sharp. Dull blades tear the grass, causing reduced vigor and poor turf quality

-Frequent, light applications of nitrogen -- ½ pound actual nitrogen every 3-4 weeks -- and frequent, light watering will help reduce the scars of Fusarium blight in lawns

-Hot weather may activate dollar spot, brown patch, Pythium blight or powdery mildew in your lawn. Treat any of these with a turf fungicide, following label directions.

-Do not, use broadleaf weed killers containing Silvex when the temperature is higher than 75-80 degrees F They will damage the turf.

-Control perennial weeds -- such as bentgrass, quackgrass and tall fescue -- now if you plan to seed a new lawn or renovate an old one in the fall Use lawn herbicides carefully! Dicamba can injure trees and shrubs; 2,4-D is especially harmful to tomatoes and grapes, but it will damage many ornamental and garden crops

-To get rid of Zoysia grass in your lawn, you must kill and remove the sod Zoysia will regenerate from its underground rhizomes unless they are killed with a systemic herbicide before the sod is lifted.

-Continue to spray apple trees every 7 to 10 days to protect them against insects and diseases Spray peaches, pears, cherries and plums every two weeks

-Space strawberry runners eight inches apart in the row and keep rows 15 inches wide. Control weeds

-Check tomatoes for aphids, hornworms, slugs and cutworms Spray with malathion to control aphids Pick hornworms off by hand and destroy them. Remove mulch and garden debris that provides hiding places for slugs. Or trap them in saucers of beer set out in the garden at night Sevin or malathion at the bases of the plants will give some cutworm control

-Water tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and summer squash thoroughly and frequently enough to protect them against drastic fluctuations in soil moisture. This is your best defense against blossom end rot.

-Transplant cabbage, cauliflower and broccoli; and seed lettuce, onions, beets, beans, radishes and spinach in the garden for a fall crop.

-Spray tomato plants with Maneb, Zineb, captan or an all-purpose garden fungicide to control early and late blight and anthracnose

-Keep beans and cucumbers producing all through the summer by harvesting the fruits as soon as they ripen.

-Sidedress vegetables with nitrogen at 1 pound per 1,000 square feet -- except for tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and summer squash Do not fertilize these until they have set a few fruit. Too much nitrogen before fruit set will give you lush foliage but few flowers and fruits.

-During dry periods, water trees and shrubs thoroughly, especially newly planted ones Lawns, flowers and vegetables should be watered once a week so that the soil is wet to a depth of about six inches

Student helps with MSU TV show

(Elizabeth Moon, one of the students interviewed in this story, is a 1974 graduate of Buchanan High School, and the daughter of Mr and Mrs. W F. Moon, 310 West Front Street, Buchanan.)

A zany weekly television show put together by Michigan State University students and featuring programs like a live interview with a barrel cactus and a slow motion skit of one person eating a salad and another person coveting it, is making TV history

With four and a half years of continuous broadcasting behind it, "The Electric Way," an experimental video show on the East Lansing National Cable Company public access channel, has become the longest-running, live public access program in the state.

According to the collective of MSU students who produce the show, the idea of the 30-minute program, broadcast live at 8:30 p m every Tuesday, is to offer the audience a stimulating and creative alternative to traditional TV fare

Ideas for shows come from the collective's biweekly brainstorming workshops and have included serious and-or satiric subjects such as an interview with jazz artist Sun Ra, a panel discussion of the evils of television with repeated requests to "don't watch this show", a tribute to sculptor Alexander Calder's work, and an election simulation with jaded political candidates lip-syncing their promises to a pre-recorded soundtrack

"There are as many ways to use electronic media as there are ways to play music," explains Elizabeth Moon, an MSU telecommunication student

"Commercial television programs and advertisements tell people what to think, feel, do and buy," Moon says " 'The Electric Way' is an attempt to just entertain the audience and broadcast shows people want to watch by using TV as an art form, like a stage, a novel or a painting."

"The Electric Way" collective is a fluid group that ranges from 10 to 20 members and includes both media and communications majors and students with no background in broadcasting

Each collective member learns to do all the technical and creative work involved in producing the show, from writing scripts to performing, operating cameras, editing, directing and manning the audio control board.

"We all take turns doing everything," explains Bonnie Stein, an MSU theatre student, "and the only permanent aspects of the show are its name and its bookkeeper "

The studio, equipment and air time for the show are made available to the students at no charge under the Federal Communications Commission's public access ruling which requires cable companies to provide free access to any community group that wants to produce a show None of the students receives pay for the work but, according to Stein, there are rewards involved

"The collective members are developing technical and improvisational skills and learning to be a productive working unit," Stein says "Even when a show doesn't work well, it is a terrific experience because the process of working together is the most important product."

Reviews of the experimental show, according to Stein, are mixed.

"Some people say they hate it, and others say they love it and can't wait for the next broadcast," Stein says, "but we have an audience of regulars who tune in and phone in their reactions every week "

Moon attributes "The Electric Way's" longevity and success to its experimental style.

"The main thing we have going for us," she says, "is that there is nowhere else to see this kind of 'media theatre.' "

LMC awarded training grant

Lake Michigan College's radiologic (X-ray) technology department has been awarded a $10,960 training grant for 1977-1978 by the U S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, according to college officials

The grant will be used primarily for purchasing instructional materials and new equipment for LMC's X-ray laboratory, said Dr. Dorothy Leader, associate dean for health sciences

This year's grant is the second installment of a five-year grant totaling $53,775 awarded to the college last year for its radiologic technology program. Last year's grant amounted to $22,295. That anticipated for 1978-1979 is $10,160, for 1979-1980, $9,860, and for 1980-1981, $500

"This year's grant will be particularly helpful," said Dr Leader, "because it will enable our X-ray program to continue to grow and improve despite the general cost containment period we now are going through at LMC "

Last year's grant of $22,295 was spent on X-ray laboratory and darkroom equipment, reference books, and audio-visual training materials Part of last year's grant also paid for moving X-ray equipment given to the college by Memorial Hospital, St Joseph, from the hospital to the LMC X-ray lab and the installation of that equipment, Dr Leader indicated

Heading LMC's X-ray technology program is John Thommen, full-time instructor and coordinator of radiologic technology training at the college

Memorial Hospital seeks approval

Memorial Hospital, 2611 Morton Avenue, in St Joseph is seeking state approval to expand its X-ray department.

Because of state and federal regulations, the hospital administration has filed an application for a Certificate of Need with the Division of Health Facility Planning and Construction of the State Health Department

The hospital proposes to renovate a waiting room area which is larger than necessary, converting a portion of the space into an X-ray room and film processing unit. This would place the new X-ray facilities adjacent to the emergency-outpatient department and the radiology department

The equipment that must be purchased would cost $97,352 and there would be a cost for remodeling of about $20,000, for a total project cost os $117,352.

It is planned by the hospital to have the project completed next fall, if the proposal is approved

Nawrocki and Armstrong attend Florida convention

Mark Nawrocki, executive director and Susan Armstrong, caseworker of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of Niles-Buchanan, Inc., returned from the Florida convention of Big Brothers of America and Big Sisters International full of excitement about the potential of the Big Brothers and Big Sisters Movement "The major result of the convention," they said, "was the merger of the two organizations into one Big Brothers-Big Sisters of America Now we can speak with one voice at the level of the media, government, professional organizations and with other social welfare organizations for all children -- boys and girls -- from single-parent homes. If we are to help those among the 7 million school age boys and girls who may benefit from our service across the nation, we need more volunteers and greater awareness among mothers of the value of our one-to-one concept" These relationships -- Big Brothers with Little Brothers and Big Sisters with Little Sisters -- have proved successful in lessening loneliness, improving school work, reducing delinquency, raising aspirations, and helping ease intra-family tensions in tens of thousands of cases."

Bronson Hospital offers Pulmonary Rehabilitation Program

Bronson Methodist Hospital is now offering a Pulmonary Rehabilitation Program designed for adults in Southwestern Michigan suffering from chronic lung disease The program is designed around a team approach to rehabilitate the patient through therapy and education

Dr. John W Dircks, Director of Pulmonary Services and advisor to the Rehabilitation Program, terms the team concept a significant element of the program. Families will be encouraged to attend the program with the patient and will be seen by a team consisting of a respiratory therapist, respiratory physical therapist, registered nurse specializing in Pulmonary Disease, dietitian, social worker, clinical pharmacist and Dr. Dircks, a specialist in Pulmonary Medicine The typical patient will visit the program once a week for two to three months. At the end of this initial, intensive stage each patient will be followed indefinitely and will re-visit the hospital a minimum of once every six months

The design at the program follows suggestions put forth "Focus on the 80's" by the Michigan Lung Association and the Michigan Thoracic Society. The plan also utilizes the definition of Pulmonary Rehabilitation adopted by the committee on Pulmonary Rehabilitation of the American College of Chest Physicians in 1974.

Goals of the program include a relief of symptoms as much as possible, the preservation of present pulmonary function, the improvement of the patient's respiratory pattern and an increase in exercise tolerance. The patient and family will be educated in such matters as the disease process itself, various symptoms and complications, altering of environmental conditions, medications and bronchial hygiene. Nutritional aspects, oxygen therapy and the use of oxygen will also be discussed.

The program will also provide counseling to the patient and family to assist them in a better adaptation to their illness and will provide information for better utilization of community resources and financial assistance

Program Coordinator, Mary Smith, R.N, notes that the program, while quite new, is already showing signs of success with a large number of participants and enthusiastic response from patients and families. Patients must be referred by their own physician, who will direct the overall care of each case.

Drinking water clean-up red letter day was June 24

June 24 Was Key Date For Drinking Water Clean-Up, By Douglas M Costle, Administrator, U.S Environmental Protection Agency

This June 24 was a red-letter day for all Americans who are concerned about the safety of their drinking water From that day on, all of the Nation's 40,000 community drinking water systems from Maine to California will have to take special steps to insure that their water is safe to drink.

Specifically, June 24 was the date the Environmental Protection Agency's first set of drinking water health regulations under the Safe Drinking Water Act went into effect accross the Nation. After that date, all community water systems will have to sample their water routinely to make sure it's clean enough to meet EPA's new standards. And, just as important to consumers, people using a public water system must be told by the water supplier if their water is found to be unacceptable for health reasons.

EPA's new standards cover contamination by bacteria, which can cause waterborne diseases such as typhoid, cholera, dysentary and hepatitis. They also cover nitrate, which is of concern in that it can cause an anemic condition in very young children Also included are limits for such inorganic chemicals as arsenic, cadmium, lead, mercury, chromium, fluoride, barium, silver and selenium, as well as for the pesticides endrin, lindane, methoxychlor, toxaphene, 2,4-D, and 2,4,5-TP Silvex.

There is also a maximum level for turbidity (murkiness), which can interfere with the disinfection of water, and for radioactivity.

The "public notification" process is a new idea, spelled out by Congress when it passed the Safe Drinking Water Act in late 1974 Congress believed that consumers should be guaranteed the right to know when and if a problem exists that affects the quality of their drinking water. The idea was that consumers can participate fully in making decisions affecting their health only if they know all the facts.

Notification about such problems may be made by means of a notice accompanying water bills, in the newspaper, or on TV and radio. The notice will explain what the problem is and what is being done about it It will also suggest precautions the consumer can take himself, if such measures are seen to be necessary.

EPA and state officials believe that most water supplies already meet the standards Those that don't, however, will now have to take whatever action is needed to remedy the problem This could include installing at the treatment plant more equipment to either treat or remove the harmful substances In severe cases, it may necessitate the water system finding a new source of water, or tying into another better water system nearby.

For the above reasons, June 24 marked an important milestone in the National effort for safe drinking water. The standards and testing requirements which go into effect will do a lot to insure that the public is protected from a number of potentially serious drinking water problems.

Congress recognized that the States, due to their existing expertise, should play the key role in protecting the healthfulness of their citizens' drinking water So far, three States -- Connecticut, Louisiana and Oklahoma -- have been granted authority from EPA to assume responsiblity for enforcing the new standards and testing requirements. Many others are in the process of refining their drinking water programs to meet EPA's minimum requirements. To obtain enforcement responsiblity from EPA, States need to have drinking water health standards that are at least as tough as EPA's, as well as adequate testing and enforcement programs.

Up to 30 States are expected to receive enforcement responsibility by the end of 1977. We hope that all of the States will follow suit and take whatever action is needed to establish and maintain adequate State drinking water supervisory programs to work with community water supply systems on a daily basis. The law says that EPA must assume this responsiblity if a State is either unable or unwilling to do the job by itself.

Although June 24 marked a significant achievement, it is only the first step. There are still other drinking water safety problems which need to be addressed and resolved. EPA's new standards, for example, do not cover contamination by most organic chemicals. Since some of these chemicals are suspected of causing cancer when taken into the body in large concentrations, controlling this type of contamination is now the subject of an intensive research effort here at EPA The Agency plans to revise its health standards to include organic chemicals, as soon as we have the scientific data we need. In fact, a set of regulations to control chloroform and some other organics is due to be proposed by EPA soon.

After June 24, the public can be confident that the Nation's public water systems are doing the special testing needed to make sure EPA's standards are being met. This first step is an important one, since it lays the groundwork for further improvement in the future

SMC First aid class

Anyone who has been a highway accident or been faced with a personal health crisis knows how important it is to know what to do when a crisis occurs.

Training in immediate temporary care for victims of accidents or sudden illness, until the services of a physician can be obtained, is the focus of a 1-credit first aid course being offered by Southwestern Michigan College later this summer

Both the general public and college students in health education curricula can benefit from the course, which will begin July 14 and continue through August 18, meeting each Thursday from 7 p.m. until 10 p m in room 603 of the Health Education Building on the SMC campus.

Students planning to enroll in SMC's emergency medical technician's (EMT) program in the upcoming Fall Semester should enroll in the first aid course for essential background before enrolling in the EMT program. In addition, the first aid course is required in SMC's practical nursing program, and in many physical education curricula.

Anyone interested in learning first aid skills may sign up for the six-week course any weekday between 9 a.m. and 12 noon or 1 p.m. until 4 p.m., in the SMC Admissions Office in the O'Leary Building. If space is available, students may also sign up for the class at the first class meeting. Advance enrollment is recommended, however.

Detroit Mounted Police to return to State Fair

The Detroit Mounted Police Drill Team, which last year had to miss the Michigan State Fair for the first time in 61 years, will be back at the Fair this year, patrolling the Fairgrounds and giving their popular drill exhibitions

Their return marks the continuation of a State Fair tradition

According to Lt Patrick H Muscat, acting commanding officer of the mounted unit, the drills have been part of the Michigan State Fair since 1915

Muscat, who is the mounted division's official historian, said 1976 appears to be the only year during that time that the drill team hadn't performed at the Fair.

Last year, Detroit's budget crises had forced cutting back the division from 42 police officers to six. Those six were limited to keeping the horses exercised. The program of patroling and drilling went dormant

This year the mounted division is back at full strength

The contingent set for the State Fair includes 20 horses and police officers, plus the civilian personnel who care for the horses around the clock.

The troup will perform their drill exhibitions nightly in the State Fair Coliseum and patrol the grounds the other times.

"We are delighted to have the Detroit Mounted Police back at the Fair," said State Fair General Manager Lester Lund "They are as much an institution here as the Fair itself "

Last year, mounted troopers from the Oakland County Sheriff's Posse volunteered their time to help patrol the Fairgrounds during the Fair.

MDA public hearings resume

Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA) is resuming public hearings on proposed pentachlorophenol regulations July 12. This is a continuation of the first public hearing conducted May 26.

This continuance is scheduled at 9 a m , Hearing Room, 5th Floor, Lewis Cass Building, Lansing and concerns a proposed regulation which would establish a maximum level of dioxin content in pentachlorophenol products sold in Michigan

The second hearing, July 18, concerns appeals of specific companies from the suspension order issued March 11 by MDA This hearing will begin at 9 a m., in the Law Building Auditorium, 525 West Ottawa, Lansing, and will continue from day to day as may be required, to hear all companies

The purpose of this hearing is to receive arguments and information from companies affected by the suspension. It is anticipated these companies will try to persuade the MDA that their product is safe and that the suspension order should be lifted

Both hearings are open to the public and anyone interested may attend.

Summertime means lawn mowing and lawn safety

The good ole' summertime means lawn care and lawn mowing to many Michigan families According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, more than 50,000 adults and children are treated each year in hospital emergency rooms for injuries associated with power lawn mowers

Accidents usually occur from contact with the rotating blade; objects such as rocks, wire and twigs being thrown from the machine; overturning of the machine; and mower running over the victim (occurring usually with riding mowers, backing over someone, or pulling a mower back over the operator's foot).

Michigan State University specialist Richard Pfister, Extension safety engineer offers the following advice

--Rake away wires, cans, rocks, and twigs before you start mowing

--Never mow a wet lawn because you could slip and come in contact with the rotating blade. The wet grass could clog the blades and tempt you to try to clear the machine without first turning it off

--Always turn off the mower and wait for the moving parts to stop before you leave it.

--Always turn off the machine and disconnect the spark plug wire or the electric plug when you need to unclog or adjust the machine -- a slight rotation of the blade could start the engine.

--Mow across the slope when using a walking mower. With a riding mower, however, drive up and down the slope for stability

--When using an electric mower, be very careful not to run over the cord or entangle it in the blades Start mowing the grass nearest to the electrical outlet and gradually move out

--Wait for at least one-half minute after shutting off the engine to be certain the blades have stopped

--Push, don't pull, a hand mower

--Never remove the safety shield or any other safety devices on a lawn mower.

--Never refuel a mower while it is running or while the engine is hot.

--Never refuel a mower indoors, because unseen vapors may be ignited by a spark

--Start the mower outdoors, not in a garage or basement where carbon monoxide gas can collect

--Don't smoke around the mower or gasoline storage can, because the gasoline fumes can easily ignite.

--Keep children away from the machine and the gasoline.

Before purchasing a power mower, Pfister recommends that you look for these safety devices:

--There should be a rear guard to prevent hands and feet coming in contact with the blade.

--The discharge opening should be aimed downward

--The handles should have "upstops" which prevent them from rising up when the machine hits an obstacle

"When you bring your new mower home," says Pfister, "read the operator's manual and pay attention to its recommendations. Never allow young children to operate power lawn mowers, and keep children out of the way while you are mowing. Before you go out to mow, wear sturdy, rough-soled work shoes and close-fitting slacks and shirts Never operate the mower in bare feet, sandals or sneakers."

The heat pump.
An energy-saving idea a lot of people are comfortable with.
Even Uncle Sam.

The heat pump is a device that heats and cools your home.

When it cools, it works like any air conditioner.

But when it heats, it works more efficiently than any other electric heating around.

It captures the heat that exists in air, even on cold days.

As a result, you can heat your home for a third less electricity than other electric heating systems.

This more-for-your-money, energy-saving feature has made the heat pump very popular with a lot of people.

Including the federal government, whose energy agencies recommend it over other types of electric heat.

Actually, we don't sell heat pumps. But, the way we figure it, every bit of electric energy that can be saved these days helps all of us.
