THE KINGDOM OF HOME. Some months since, the proprietors of the Hearth and Home offered a prize of $100 for a "Hearth and Home" song. On the 25th ult., the committee, consisting of Alice Cary, Bay-ard Taylor and C. A. Dana, decided that the ollowing song was entitled to the prize. It wes written by Rev. Wm. Rankin Duryce. Mr. Duryce is a young man, and a minister of a Reformed Church in Jersey City. The publishers now offer a prize of $100 for the best orignal music to this song.

Dark is the night, and fitful and drearily
Rushes the wind like the waves of the sea; Little care I, as here I sing cheerity, Wife at my side and my baby on knee;
King, King, crown me King:
Hone is the Kingdom and Love is the King.

Flashes the fire light upon the dear faces, Dearer and dearer as onward we go, Forces the shadow behind us, and places Brightness around us with warmth in the glow King, King, crown me King: Home is the Kingdom and Love is the King

Flashes the lovelight, increasing the glory, Beamleg from bright eyes with warmth of the soul, Telling of trust and content the sweet story, Lifting the shadows that over us roll. King, King, crown me King: Home is the Kingdom and Love is the King!

Richer than miser with perishing treasure, Served with a service no conquest could bring: Tappy with fortune that words cannot measure, Light-hearted I on the hearthstone earn-sing. King, King, every me King: Home is the Kingdom and Love is the King.

THE SPECTRE OF WESTMORELY. BY JOHN B. WILLIAMS, M. D.

A year or two ago four gentlemen were seated round a table in one of the fashionable cases of Paris. Three of these gentlemen were scions of the French nobility, the fourth was an English lord. 'Are you superstitious, my lord?' asked the Marquis de M--- of the Englishman. 'Why do you ask me that question? returned Lord Blackston.

Do you believe that the dead ever return to earth?' said the French Marquis. 'I do,' returned the English nobleman. What! do you believe that a man dead and buried can leave his tomb, and return to the places where he lived? That has often occurred, replied the Englishman, in an accent of conviction that startled the marquis. The three Frenchmen gazed curiously at Lord Blackston. the latter. I do not say their bodies re turn, but their spirits come back to settle affairs which sudden death has left in sus-

The Frenchman smiled. 'You laugh at this statement,' said Lord Blackston. 'Well, you must confess it is a strange one for a gentleman of your standing to make.' I will give you an example of the truth of my statement, said the Englishman. Tryself have witnessed such an occurrence.

'You have seen a spirit walk the earth. my lord? 'Yes. It occurred in the little village of Westmorely, in the county of Sussex." 'And you were there?'

It is in Westmorely that my country seat is situated, and it was there that the apparition appeared.' 'And you saw it?' I did-but I will tell you the story, and you can judge for yourselves, as to its

So saying, they all drew their chairs closer to the little table, and Lord Blackston related the following incident in his The Manor House of Westmorely is an old historic dwelling. It was often besieged in the Middle Ages; James II. lept there, and it is even said that the Pretender found a refuge within its walls. . The last proprietor of the Manor House was an uncle of mine, Lord Galway, who, although married, had no children. He lived a very quiet, retired life, and he and Lady Galway looked more like, simple country people than members of the Eng-

Lord Galway's nearest heir at law, was another nephew, a very dissipated young fellow, who lived in France, having been compelled by his creditors to leave Engand. His conduct in the French metropolis was scandalous, so much so, that his numerous escapades were often mentioned in the public journals.

One day Lady Galway read aloud to her husband some episode more scandalous than usual; from a French newspaper. The old gentleman, although afflicted with the gout at the time, jumped up from the arm chair in which he had been seated, and exclaimed with great vehemence: That scoundrel of a nephew, Ralph, shall never have a farthing of my fortune.

I shall choose for my heir my other nephew, Lord Blackston.' One morning Lord Galway was found dead in his bed. One physician mentioned that he had died of apoplexy, another ascribed his death to aneurism of the aorta, and a third to something else. Whatever the cause of death might be, it was certain that he was dead, and he was buried with due honors. After the funeral the lawyer who had witnessed Lotd Galway's will scarched everywhere for it, but without success. Still it was certain that a will had, been

All search, however, proved in vain. No will could be found, and my cousin Ralph arrived from France to take possession of his inheritance as heir in law: "" . I had gone to Westmorely, and was

He greeted me very coldly, and said:

The spectre approached the fire place, in which was a quantity of ashes. He took a handful of these ashes, and spread then on the table. Then occurred something more strange and supernatural than anything I had yet The ashes, dark gray at first, became whiter and whiter, and united together into a kind of paste, which by degrees assumed a solid form under my eyes, and ultimately became a sheet of paper covered with large writing.

The spectre made a sign, I leaned over the table and read as follows: As I may die at any moment, I write my last will and testament. My wife hav-

I then understood that it had been burned Sir Ralph remained on his knees, tremb ling in every nerve under the spectre's mournful gaze, like a condemned criminal awaiting the moment of his execution. The writing on the paper, resuscitated for a minute, turned pale, and by degrees became entirely extinct, and soon only a little beap of ashes remained on the table. The spectre then made a sign to Sir Ralph, and under the influence of his sovereign will, he rose to his feet, and approached a bureau, opened it. He seemed to be acted on against his but he took pens and pape

I then burned his will in which he had made my cousin, Lord Blackston, his heir. This crime weighs so heavily on my conscience that I cannot live. By my death, my cousin will

And we'll bless the day, When just before the Battle, Mother, Horrible Tragedy. On Monday evening, Messrs. George R Eldridge and Spencer C. Martin took the steamer for Cleveland on theis way home. having arrived here after a three weeks trip through the counties of Roscommon and adjoining, the one to look after pine land interest, the other to endeavor to se-cure an interest in the cranberry marshes in that section. These gentlemen left the Detroit & Milwaukee Railroad at St. Johns, and from thence walked most of the wav to Isabella City. At that place they borrowed a tent cloth and a couple of rifles, and tramped over the woods, shooting their food and sleeping under their tent. They tell of a horrible discovery which they made near the edge of a large marsh in the south-west part of Roscommon. They had encamped for the night near the edge of the marsh and directly on the old trail which they had followed for several hours. During the evening the wind bore to them such a sickening smell that they were obliged to strike their tout and remove to a greater distance. All night long they heard growls and snarls on the trail ahead, generally at one particular point, and a cracking, grating sound, something like the lonesome moaning of a sign-board swinging on its rusty hinges. In the morning, while one of the gentlemen was preparing breakfast, the other sailed out to investigate the disturbance of the previous evening. As he advanced along the trail beyond where they had first encamped, the smell grew more sickening, until at last it seemed to fill the woods. Coming out into a spot on the trail about 20 feet square where there were no trees or brush, the hunter almost ran over a large wolf-looking animal which bounded off into the thicket with a savage snarl. An object dangling from a hickory sapling, partially bent down, next caught the eye and, it needed but a second glance to send back a scream of horror to the hunter at the camp. With the right ankle firmly clenched in the cruel teeth of a bear trap from which depended a chain about three feet long, was the putrid, rotting skeleton of a man! the body hung down to within about three feet of the ground, and shreds of clothing and bloody locks of hair on the leaves, showed that the missing head, neck, shoulders and amen, had been eaten off by wild beasts I Nothing was left of the body but the legs and a portion of the trunk, and from this the flesh had mostly rotted off, leaving exposed to view the bones and joints. A pair of cowhide boots encased the feet, and a lew shreds of woclen cloth yet hung to parts of the mass. Portions of the corpse were strewn about the ground, in one place lay the grinning skull, the flesh entirely eaten off and the bone bitten through in several places. It was easy to see that the man, who was undoubtedly a hunter and trapper, had stepped into the trap, which had been set on the trail by some other hunter, or the Indians, to entrap bear or deer, and the hickory sapling springing back had elevated him from the earth, head downward and in that condition he had met a lingering death. An attempt was made by the gentlemen to get down and bury the remaining portion of the body, but decomposition had so far advanced that they were detered from so doing. A few hours later the men met a party of Indians, who, after hearing of the discovery, stated that they had known of the fact for several weeks; that they found the man there when the wildcats had only eaten half his head off! They did not care; they didn't know who he was—only that he was hunting and trapping around Houghton Lake and the marshes last winter, and suddenly disappeared. There was some Indians' encamped about half a mile from the spot where the corpse was hanging, at the time the man was missed. and they had told these Indians that they had heard a great deal of screaming and shouting for a whole night, but supposed it to be some drunken white man. Messrs. Eldridge and Martin stated that the Indians acted very coolly about the matter, so much so that circumstances would go to point them out as preparing the trap and the borrible death which befel the unknown man. They offered the Indians five dollars to go back and bury the skeleton, but they declined, saying that it had hung there so long that there wasn't enough

On the vast paths of the deep, along which are seen neither trees, nor villages, nor cities, nor towns, nor spires, nor tombs; on this causeway without columns, without milestones; which has no boundaries but the waves, no relays but the winds, no lights but the stars—the most delightful adventure, when one is not in quest of lands and seas unknown, is the meeting of two vessels. The mutual discovery takes place along the horizon by the help of a telescope; then they make all sail towards each other. The crews and passengers hurry upon the deck. The two ships approach, hoist their flags, brail half up their sail, and lay themselves along side of each other. All is silence; the two captains from the poop hail each other with speaking trumpets—the name of the vessel—from what port—the name of the captain where he comes from where he is bound for, how many days his passage lasted, and what are his observations on the longitude and latitude! These are the jourstions "Good voyage." NUMBER 23. Diseases of the Liver. By Dr. V. CLARENCE PRICE. The number of people laboring under affections of the Liver, Kidneys and Lungs, are incredible; and by far the greatest majority of them scarcely have a suspicior that such a dificulty exists in the slightest degree. Although they seldom feel well, they are loth to believe anything serious may arise from it. Diseases of the liver produce a great variety of symptoms, and those symptoms are all considered as separate and distinct diseases and treated as such by doctors, because ignorant Nosolo gists have done so before them. This treating symptoms of a disease is productive of great evil, as the pain or distress is by these means transferred from one place to another for some length of time, thus deceiving the patient and inducing him to believe that he is better, whilst the really diseased organ which is the cause of all these local difficulties, remains undisturbed until it becomes a mass of irrecoverable obstruction. The situation and office of the Liver render it more exposed to the action of disease, and more liable to become so than any other organ of the human body. The symptoms characterizing diseased liver are numerous. A sensa tion of fullness across the chest, in consequence of viscid blood accumulating in the liver, causing it to enlarge or swell, which would press upon the diaphragh, thus lessening the capacity of the chest, that the lungs would not have room to expand, and difficulty of breathing, or shortness of breath would follow, giving rise to phthisic or asthma, and after the upper surface of the liver becomes diseased, extends its influence to the lungs, producing consumption, which is doubtless one of the most frequent causes in this climate for produong this disease. When the blood is retained too long in the liver it becomes acrid and creates inflammation, and ulceration of the liver in time would take place. The viscid state of the bile, giving rise to the formation of billiary calculi, gall stones, gravel, etc., producing great distress, as they pass through the bile duct. This acrid bile will produce fever, inflammation, dysentery, and when conveyed into the small intestines will inflame and irritate

them, and the patient will feel a fainting, or an indiscribable weakness just below the pit of the stomach, attended with flatulence, acidity, and often a burning sensation, vomiting, spitting up of food, or spasm, which by medical men is usually termed Dyspepsia: food would distress them so much as to cause them to live on a very spare diet, the digestive organs would become so much deranged that both digestion and assimulation would be imperfectly performed, and much emaciation say "that they would eat anything, nothing hurts them:" and although they eat much, it is not attended with an increase of flesh; they still remain poor, showing that the digestive and assimulating organs have become so impaired as to render them incapable of performing their office. The bile when thin and acrid, is capable of being absorbed into the blood, renders it likewise acrid, and diseases it; and hence eruptions, humors and oven alors make their appearance. Piles are produced from an acrid condition of the bile. In consequence of the absorption of bile into the blood, the viscidity of the blood is increased—the blood which was thick before is thus rendered thicker still. The office of the heart is to propel the blood through the system; when therefore the blood becomes thick the labor of the heart becomes increased-which weakens its powerrendering it incapable of throwing the blood into the extremeties—hence deficient circulation, cold hands, feet, chilliness, and palpitation and pains over the region of the heart, and which in many instances. if allowed to continue, disease of the heart itself will be the result. Rheumatism, palsy or paralysis, numbness of the limbs, aches and pains of one description or another, are frequently complained of. From whence do they arise but from this viscid state of the blood and debility of the heart? Nervousness, debility, etc., are all produced by the deficient support which the nerves receive from the blood. Even derangements of the human intellect are produced in this way. Pain, dizziness of the head, ringing of the ears, fullness of the head, great heat in the top of the head, sometimes coldness and other distresses of the head are often experienced. Why is it so? The blood being thick and viscid, its motion through the veins is slow, the heat throws the blood through the arteries to the head faster than it returns by the veins back again to the heart, hence accumulation of blood take place in the head, press upon the brain and produce all the difficulties above named, even falling fits and apoplexy are produced in this way. When the upper surface of the liver becomes diseased, it frequently extends its influence to the kidneys, and pains are experienced across the small of the back, producing much distress by diseasing neighboring organs. It is under such circumstances that dropsies, diabetes, diseases of the urinary organs, bladder, etc., difficulty, pain, and often a smarting sensation in the passage of urine which is milky or high colored, with a cloudy or bricklike sedi-ment. The patient will frequently feel a disposition to pass urine. but the quantity will be small, sometimes merely pass by drops, at other times it will pass in large quantities at ouce.

Often an affection of the Liver extends its influence to the spleen, causing an enlargement of that organ-impaired condition of the bowels, either obstinate costiveness, or lasting and exhausting diarrhoea, as witnessed in the soldiers or persons sudject to a southern climate-pain in the shoulder, between the shoulders, under the shoulder blade, in the breast, etc. The patient often irritable, fretful, drowsy or sleepy, eyes becomes inflamed, sight impaired. Illustrations of diseases of the liver might be far more extended. It is doubtful whether any disease of a chronic character exists in which the liver does not perform a prominent part, or is not more or less concerned; and I venture to affirm that health can in no instance be maintained where transactions of the liver are in any way imperfect. How often is it that a patient tries one advertised medicine, then another until his patience and money are exhausted; and he abandons every thing of the kind as a piece of deception and imposition. For the suffering patient this is truly a deplorable fact—all he can derive is not a cure, a removal of many and Holland especially, it is coming the cause of all his affections, but merely to be a common thing to send telegrams to a transitory benefit, which sooner or later is followed with an increase of their severity and to be the cost. Relief may be had, but how deadly the cost. Let the afflicted reflect, not abandon hope because they have been tampered with By the system of treatment we adopt in the cure of chronic diseases—by the remedial agents

The Trials of Editors.

We make the following extract from an address, as recently delivered before the "Iowa Press Association" on this In speaking of the revenue of the press, I cannot refrain from expressing my views on the subject of free advertisements. There is always to be found in every considerable community a set of creatures who imagine by some dispensation they ought not like other mortals, to pay for what they receive. Editors have extraordinary facilities for making their acquaintance, and are very kindly permitted to contribute gifts to their support. In what other branch of business would this be tolerated? that one has put the press under some obligations, does he not generally expect to get back more than the worth of his services? If a man does an editor a favor of remarkable value, let him have his remuneration in cash. On the other hand, require him to pay for what the paper has done for has It is as reasonable to expect the carpenter to shingle your house and the tailor to make your clothes without charge, as to prepare and publish matter for anothers benefit without compensation. Lengthy obituaries, marriages ornamented by extracts from all the poets, and lengthy puffs about some one's corner lots or improvements, come under this class of advertisements. This custom of gratuitous notices and advertisements from any quarter, ought to cease, for the reason that it would be a benefit to the printer's pockets, and would in some degree abate an almost intolerable nuisance. The printer's path has more thorns than roses; and there is no law, human or divine, that should oblige him to shoulder the burdens of those who are too lazy or stingy to take care of themselves. People will come to terms where they find their interests involved in a rea-

Bleeding From the Nose. Some two years ago, while going down Broadway, in New York, blood commenced running from my nose quite freely. I stepped aside and applied my handkerchief intending to repair to the nearest hotel when a gentleman accosted me saying: Just put a piece of paper in your mouth, chew it rapidly, and it will stop your nose bleeding.' Thanking him rather doubtfully, I did as he suggested, and the flow of blood ceased almost immediately. I have seen the remedy tried since quite frequently, and always with success. Doubtless any substance would answer the same purpose as paper, the stoppage of the blood being caused no doubt, by the rapid motion of the jaws, and the counteraction of the muscles and arteries connecting the iaws and nose. Physicians say that placing a small roll of paper or muslin above the front teeth, under the upper lip, and pressing hard up-on the same, will arrest bleeding from the nose—checking the passage of the blood through the arteries leading to the nose. H. C. K. in the Country Gent, .

A Good Word for the Mosquito. As so many readers will find themselves in close contact with said insect, presently, we quote what the Entomologist says concerning him, for their edification:

'The eggs of the mosquito are laid in a bowl-shaped mass upon the surface of stagnant water by the mother fly. After hatch ing out they finally become the 'wiggle-tails,' or wriggling worms that may be seen in the summer in any barrel of water that is exposed to the atmosphere for any length of time. Finally, the 'wiggle-tails' come to the surface, and the full-fledged mosquito bursts out of them, at first, with very short, limp-wings, which in a short time grow both in length and stiffness. The sexes then couple, and the above process is repeated again and again, probably several times in the course of one season. It is a curious fact that the male mosquito, which may be known by its feathered antenæ, is physically incapable of sucking

The mosquito is not an unmitigated est. Although in the winged state the fomale sucks our blood and disturbs our rest, in the larva state the insect is decidedly beneficial, by purifying stagnant water that would otherwise breed malarial diseases. Linnaus long ago showed that if you place two barrels of stagnant water side by side, neither of them containing any 'wiggle-tails' or other living animals, and cover one of them over with gauze, leaving the other one uncovered so that it will soon become full of 'wiggle-tails,' hatched out from the eggs deposited by the female mosquito, then the covered barrel will in a few weeks become very offensive, and the uncovered barrel will emit no impure and unsavory vapors."

The English Language.

There is no other spoken language so chean and expressive by telegraph as the English. So the electric wires are becoming teachers of our mother tongue in foreign countries. The same amount of information can be transmitted in fewer English words than French, German, Italian, or any other European language. In Gersave expense and to insure precision. Thus the red, white and blue, the Celtic Teutonic, and Latin elements of English language will yet make the tour of the globe, and be the silent speech fitted to the silent lips of lightning, as well as the tongue which half of the earth's millions will speak within two centuries of the

MASSACHUSETTS AND PROHIBITION. The eyes of the press and of the public are now directed towards Massachusetts, watching every move in the enforcement of the new prohibitory law. The law is spoken of both as a success and a failure by parties looking at it from different stand-points and with different sentiments of approval or disapproval. It is, therefore, very difficult to arrive at a definite conclusion as to the true state of the case. Enough, however, comes to us to determine that the law, in its onerations, is neither satisfactory to the friends of temperance, nor to the friends of the whisky traffic. For the one class it works too closely, and for the other it is evaded to such an extent that it fails, in a great measure, to accomplish the desired object. A correspondent of the New York Tribune, who is a prohibitionist, evidently thinks the law as it now stands will defeat itself. The same two classes of temperance men exist in Massachusetts that are found everywhere else. The one in favor of prohibiting the sale of beer and cider, and the other not. The former class succeeded in having the law framed to suit themselves, and the result is, a dissatisfaction by the other class. This produces a want of harmony in the enforcement of the law, which cannot do othwise than work injuriously to the temperance movement. The Tribune writer referred to on this point, says: "If beer had been exempted with cider, the temperance men who do the work and draw their wallets in the cause when required, would have been much better satisfied, as they believe in being temperate in all things, and in approaching the pinnacle of their hopes with moderation. But the so-called temperance men, who make the cause their stock in trade as liquor dealers do gin, brandy or whisky, clamored for the whole hog or nothing, and they will probably have the satisfaction of being floored completely in a few months as they were in the fall of 1867." We have often thought that many defeated by extremists. We think that this is often the case in the temperanco movement. One thing secured at a time, with unanimity on the part of all its friends, will accomplish more than to attempt to do too much at once, thus introducing discord in the ranks of friends. This seems to be the precise situation with the Massachusetts' law. While the principle of prohibition is right, it will not be sustained if it is carried too far at

If beer and eider had been left out system, it, nevertheless, is the true bodies, and at the same time secure a free for the present, the law would have element. This would have rendered it strong. It would have received the system, and adheres strictly to it, must respect of all. And when the moderate temperance element had discovered that the beer exemption was used, to any great extent, to evade with the more radical element in the demand for the very law, which, now, they oppose. Our motto is, "to make haste slowone thing at a time, and that thing well done. Drive deep the stakes you wish to tie to, in public opinion, and then make further advances. This course pursued, and victory over the whisky traffic will, ultimately, be secured. But so long as unwise counsels prevail, and every man is denounced as opposed to the great temperance reform, who can not see eve to eye with the most extreme men, afterwards aided the rebellion, stood 84,410 for the clause, and 124,360 against it, being a majority against the clause of 39,950. On the other clause of the Constitution submitted separately, by President Grant, which required officers before entering upon their duties, to take the iron clad oath, that they nev-

Moderate Republican, and both being northern men.

· The course pursued by Secretary Boutwell is beginning to have its effect, in enhancing the credit of the nation. The most striking proof of the way his administration is looked upon by foreign capitalists, appears in a recent telegram from Washington, that a proposition has been received from a German house in Frankfort to loan our government three hundred millions of dollars at 5 per cent., which the Secretary has, of course, been obliged to decline. His view is that we may, within a year, borrow all the money we want at 4 per cent., or certainly at 43 per cent., and present indications seem to be, though it is not intended to speak in his name, that he will, next winter, advise such a loan for the purpose of paying off the 5-20s due now, or whenever the government chooses to so consider them. A private letter to the Secretary, from a well-advised source in England, expresses the opinion that a bond at 41 per cent. can easily be negotiated in Europe within six or eight months.

EX-GOVERNOR CRAPO. In another column, we publish an account of the late Henry Crapo, ex-Governor of Michigan. He died at his residence, in Flint, on Friday last. No man who has filled the gubernatorial office of Michigan won greater respect from friends and opposers, than did Henry Crapo. His acts were ever characterized by uprightness, a sense of justice and the interests of the

THE CASH SYSTEM. Let all those doing business on the credit system, and contemplating a change to the more certain and healthy system of ready pay, give due notice, that on and after a specified time, all books will be closed, and business only transacted on the ready pay system. The middle of September, would be a very good time to designate. This would give the Agricultural portion of community time to make their arrangements accordingly. This system would be far preferable, for all honest men, who intend to pay their debts, as well as much better for our merchants and tradesmen. All losses by bad debts would be avoided, and those who do pay, would not have to help make up such losses.

While, in some cases, a credit of few days would be necessary, let each business man provide himself with a blank note book, instead of an account book, and wh n credit was given for thirty days, let the amount be put in a note. This would stimulate the purchaser to meet his paper when due, and would save much trouble and expense in book keeping. Let these notes be given without interest, if paid when due, otherwise, ten per cont. from date. While this course might be objectionable to some persons, yet, we imagine, the mass of honest people would co-operate with the business public, to inaugurate a system of ready pay, or its equivalent, in the plan referred to. While the purchaser might have a little interest to pay, occasionally, by letting his note run past due, he would, in the aggregate, be much the gainer, even by the note system. Let no note be taken, where the merchant would not lend his money for the amount purchased. This being the plan of business, but little would be lost to the trader or mechanic, and hence the interest occasionally paid by consumers, would be but a tithe of what would otherwise be required of them to meet the losses by bad debts, under the credit system. . . . Some farmers may conclude this is all one sided, as far as my class of persons is concerned to want ready pay, or interest on purchases, in form of note. Not at all one sided. When you bring a load of wheat to town, or pound of butter, or a bushel times the most desirable object was of onions, you expect ready pay for them. You get, before you go home, have brought to market. Is it, therefore, anything more than just, that the merchant, that sells his goods, should have his cash, or equivalent merchandize? To every candid farmer, or others, this must be apparent. While, then, at a first glance, the cash system (after having been accustomed to a system of credit so long), may appear to be a somewhat harsh and economical plan upon which to do been sustained by all the temperance | business. And that city, village, or community that adopts the ready pay prosper and grow rich. There is nothing to prevent this being the case. The merchant will prosper, the blacksmith will prosper, the farmer will grow stell, his capendimires always being within his means. This, too, will be true of all classes, whether producer or consumer. Let our farmers, merchants and tradesmen, think on these things.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL. The New York Tribune notices, the feeling in the West, and the earnestness of the desire for the removal of the National Capital to the Mississippi Valley, with evident apprehension. It gives some sharp shots, and tries to be witty about the greatness of Chithe success of the great cause will be cago, and the unanimity of the cities and towns of the West in the selection of St. Louis, as the place for the National Capital. In this unanimity, we opine, that the N. Y. Tribune sees the future accomplishment of the proposed object. The Tribune finally concludes, if the Capital is removed, New York city is the place for it, as that city is the great "commercial and intellectual center of the United States." And the Tribune might have added as a further reason in favor of New York, that it is the best governed city in the Union, i. e., if it left the facts out of view! That this question, of the removal of the Capital, will soon become an important one, and one demanded by the necessities of the growing greatness of the country, there can be no doubt. It is one in which the Western, South-western and Pacific States should work unitedly to accomplish.

From the Detroit Post.

The death of ex-Governor Henry H. Crapo-which occurred on Friday morning at half-past five o'clock, at his residence in Flint - will not surprise the public. The ex-Governor has been ill for a long period, subject to not infrequent paroxysms of disease, which have several times threatened a suddenly painful termination. Therefore his death was not wholly unlooked for throughout the State; but it will be none the less deplored as a general calamity. For, whatever may have been men's differences concerning ex-Governor Crapo's political career, few men have so universally achieved the respect of all parties and all factions, and so general a reputation for irreproachable integrity and uprightness in every relation, pub lic or private. Ex-Governor Crapo was born at Dartmouth, Massachusetts, in May, 1804, consequently he was a little over sixty-five years old at the time of his death. His father was a farmer in moderate circumstances. When a young man Mr. Crapo taught schoool at Dartmouth, as many a New England youth has done, although he was in a large measure a self-educated and "self made" man. He married Miss Mary Ann Slocum, at Dartmouth, and removed to New Bedford, where he became civil engineer, and joined the State militia; rising to the rank of Colonel. He also held various offices in New Bedford, while that place was a town, being clerk, colector or treasurer for fifteen years. Afterward he was police justice for seventeen years, and was, at the same time an alderman for many years; and was also secre-tary of the Bedford Commercial Insurance Company for some years. During"the latter part of this time he became interested in Ohio and Michigan land purchases.

In 1856, he removed to Michigan, and settled upon lands he had purchased on

Flint River. Here he embarked in the lumber manufacturing business, and scon

became a noted and successful business

a model of industry, shrewdness, clear-uess and enterprise. It was largely through our influence that the Plint & Holly Railroad was constructed, and he was sometime President of that company. In every way he sought to improve and develop the region about him. The consequence was that he was soon drawn into public life, being first made Mayor of Flint; then, in 1862, sent to the State Senate; then, in 1864, elected Governor of the State, and re-elected in 1866. In his official positions he displayed the business habits and energetic common sense for which he was distinguished in his private affairs. He worked hard and faithfully; he made himself conversant with all the material interests of the State, and labored to promote them. He was never really a politician; but he was always a clearheaded, far-seeing, public-spirited citizen. Perhaps no Governor of the State ever devoted more labor to the care of the State interests than he. His executive messages were almost unique for their exactness and minuteness of statement, discussing all the varied State interests in a close business style. Since his retirement from the gubernaorial office, his life has been an uneventful and quiet one. For some years he has been afflicted with an exceedingly painful disease, which has frequently threatened to terminate his career. Stil he always closely attended to all his public and large private business in person. A few weeks ago he endured the difficult and dangerous operation of lithotomy, under the care of Dr. Willard Parker, the noted surgeon of New York. His health began immediately to mend; but he again applied himself too closely to certain unfinished public business, and was seized with a fatal relapse. thus, probably, perishing from indulging in that energetic industry which has marked his entire career. His family consists of a widow, eight daughters and one son. He also was the father of one daughter now dead. His ly, son is now a leading lawyer in New Bedford. Two of his married daughters reside in Boston, Massachusetts, and four in this State; the other two are with their mother, at Flint. Governor Crapo was a member of a church generally called Disciples. His loss will be universally deplored by all the people of the State, irrespective of party or other differences. . THE SOLAR ECLIPSE.

Another Letter from the Party. COLLINSVILLE, Ill., July 20. Editor St. Louis Republican:
Though the enclosed letter from Major Powell was written with no thought of publication, the interest felt at this time in this expedition induces me to send it to you for that purpose.

It may be well to explain that the "cabins" which he speaks of in his boats are simply water-tight compartments, made by decking over five feet of the bow and stern. He had three boats twenty-four feet long, and one sixteen feet long, the last to be used by himself as an advance explorer. It was one of the larger ones that was lost. The candles were for use in reading the barometers at night. In estimating the Major's remarks about the scenery it is to

The agency is twenty-five or thirty miles from camp. Well, the bonts seem to be a success. The closed cabins at each end work well as buoys, for although the boats have several times been filled with water while loaded with men and rations, they still would float. Altogether we have run about 100 miles of canon, the water often plunging down twelve or filteen feet in a hundred, among rocks that made the water The canon walls have been from 2,000 to 2.800 feet high; rarely perpendicular on both sides at once, and always footing to make portages, of which we have made a great many—one nearly a mile in length.

We have had one disaster. Howland failed to see or understand the signal to land, and so floated over a series of dan gerous rapids, and the boat was at last wrecked. The three men in the beat managed to get to a little island, and were prought off in safety. By this we lost about one third the rations and the duplicate instruments. All the barometers were on the boat, but were removed from the wreck. A few candles and the case of records, barometer tubes and Howland's whiskey were all that was saved. The men lost clothing, guns, everything but what they had on, and that was but little, shirts, drawers and socks.

The scenery was on a grand scale, and never did I live in such eestacy for an entire month. Had good success in obtaining geological set (of specimens) through the canons. BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD:-It continues to rain full half of the time in this section of the County: Corn, oats, and potatoes are looking unusually bad. The fish have left the Galien river and gone to the woods; partly occasioned by the high water, and partly on account of the great noise and confusion made at the mouth of the river (New Buffalo), on the construction of the U. and M. L. Shore crossing. Last week two of the stock holders of the C. & M. L. S. R. R. made their appearance in Chikaming again, for the purpose of obtaining the bonds of said Township for $1,500, in aid of said road, by donation. They were somewhat disappointed, when told by our Township Clerk that he could not sign them. That if the courts directed him so to do then he was ready. We apprehend that it will be some time before the Clerk will have such an order. We hope St. Joseph will not let the matter stop here, as Chikaming wishes to be the first to let light shine through the Law authorizing Townships, cities, or villages to aid Railroads by donation. Such a law has never had the sanction of a Court cf Record in the world. More anon. WOLVERINE.

Ed. Record:—During the past week farmers have been very busy, and the result has been but little doing in town. As there has been but one rainy day during the week, every available man has been taken into the harvest-field to secure wheat crop such as has hardly ever been excelled in this part of the county; and it is about all cut and ready to go into the barn. Hay is nearly all taken care of, although some has been damaged by rain. On Saturday, the 24th inst., a special election was held in this Township, to elect a Justice of the Peace, in the place of Norman E. Sandon, who was elected, but failed to qualify. There was but a small vote polled, and it was close, considering that Oronoko is to the Democratic party of Berrien County what Kentucky is to the national party. James Watson was the Democratic candidate, and George H. Murdock, the Republican. There was but Democrats began to think of danger. Extract from a Private Letter from Hawaii, Sand wich Island. * * Although the eruption is not so violent now, the volcano is a fearful sight to behold. The rivers of lava still flow, and the smoke from the crater ascends in awful majesty. During this volcanic upheaval it has been very sickly here. A peculiar sort of low mala-rious fever, which has grown out of the foul, condensed vapors of the volcano, has prevailed to an alarming extent, and at one time it was feared it would depopulate the whole island. But fortunately, a sea-captain (calling here for supplies) distributed PLANTATION BITTERS to the suffering, and quick and thorough cures have been the result. The news spreads like wildstock exhausted. A steamer was dispatched to San Francisco by order of the Hospital Department, and a new and enormous supply obtained as soon as possible. From that moment the scourge was staved. Not another fatal case occurred, and the epidemic has now entirely disappeared. * * * Is this wonderful remedy known in your city? I hope so, for it is a sure care for all fevers, miasmatic sickness. You may tell your friends so for me.

Scatter blessings in the pathway!

Better are than gold and silver,
With their grief dispelling wiles.
As the pleasant sunshine falleth
Ever on the grateful earth,
So let sympathy and kindness So let sympathy and kindness Gladden well the darkened hearth.

Active be, then, while you may.

er betrette som er Det som er s The World's Friendship Deceitful. The friendship of this world is vain, deceitful. Just where you need it most will it fail you. It order to our happiness we must have friends. God knows we are but human; hence he gives us help. And as the friendship of the ungodly world is fleeting, he gives us the "fellowship of saints," commanding us to "love one another."
And if the church would love "as Christ hath loved us," we might de-rive great benefit from such fellowship.

But, ah! how uncertain, how selfish, how false is much that is called "Christian love." To-day you are 'dear,' kind,' 'precious,' 'true saint; to-morrow, with no change on your part, you are cast off as a heathen, and instead of warm greetings, holy kisses, you receive cold words, colder looks, and any amount of slander among the neighbors. Such will love you as long as you sit under their in-fluence, listen to what they say, give all they ask for, have "all things comall they ask for, have "all things common," so far as your baggage is concerned; but when you cease to fill up their greedy, selfish mouths, you that was once called 'generous,' become 'covetous,' 'stingy,' and 'un-christian.' And where they have called you a 'saint' once, they will now call you a sinner twice. Such friendship as this I do not desire. as this I do not desire.

Fear God. If we live in the fear of God, we may live in peace and security without being afraid of anything else in the world. Jesus taught us the fear of the Lord when he said "I will forwarn you whom ye shall fear. Fear him who, after he has killed, has power to cast into hell, yea I say unto you, Fear him." And he also taught us to be afraid of nothing else when he said, "I say unto you, my friends, be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? But even the very hairs of your head are numbered, Fear not, therefore; ye are of more value than many sparrows." Our confidence is thus made to depend upon the love, power and watch-ful care of God our father, who sees everything and keeps such count for every hair of our head, that one can-not be injured unknown to him, and it is written, "who is he that will harm you if ye be followers of that which is good?" There is no such teaching found outside the Bible; and we never can prize its sacred instruction too

A Snare of Satan.

If we examine with care the feeling of self-doubt which ties the lips and hands of so many, and which we are accustomed to call modesty, we shall find that it is not modesty all through. The outer coating of the Atlantic cable is made of gutta-percha, but the core is composed of tripple strands of twisted wire. So, this harmless-looking rope, which winds its folds round dumb Christians, soft and silken as it seems without, has iron insidethree wicked wires, forged in the furnace of the pit—Envy, Emulation, Price—envy that some surpass you; emulation, that wishes to surpass all; pride, which tells you to be nothing if you cannot be best. O, it is the devil's rope! Break it asunder, and cast its bonds from you. Dig up your buried talents, he they one or ten. Work with all your might. If others can work with superior might, thank God that his cause has such companions, and workmen.—Dr. Ide.

Fate of the Apostles.

Mathew is supposed to have suffered martyrdom; he was slain in Ethiopia. Mark was dragged through the streets of Alexandria, Egypt, till he expired. Luke was hanged to an olive tree in Greece. John was put into a boiling cauldron at Rome, but escaped death in Ephesus, Asia. James the Great was beheaded in Jerusa lem. James the Less was thrown from a pinnacle and beaten to Jeath. Andrew was crucified, and pounded while dying. Philip was beheaded. Bartholemew was skinned alive. Thomas was run through with a lance. Jude was shot through with arrows. Simon was crucified. Matthias was stoned to death. Paul was beheaded by the tyrant Nero, at Rome.

The Oldest History. The Bible covers more than four thousand years of the world's age, and is, therefore, the oldest and most satisfactory history in existence. The age of all other books combined will not equal it, running from the commencement of the oldest, to the present. It covers time, of which they can give no information, except that which they borrow from its pages.

Find the Savior.

If mortal man, in that brief interval which lies between his first smile and his last, avails himself of the opportunity to think for what purpose he is come into the world, and for what purpose he is to leave it; and if, between the first lighting up of life, and its extinction by death, he finds his Savior, he has attained the great
