Poetry. TO FARMER'S BOYS.

"I'm sick of hocing in the corn, And following the plow; Of working hard from dewy morn

Till eve with heated brow. No longer will I stay to mow Or pitch the scented hay; To the great city will I go, Where wealth is gained by play."

Tut, tut, my man, hush up that song; Let wisdom be your guide; That dream or wealth may lead you wrong And wreck you on the tide.
Sit down with me upon this stone—
Your team will take no harm;
If we aren't kings upon the throne
We're kings upon the farm.

God's healthy breezes round you blow, His birds your music make; And sweeter rest is yours, you know, When night doth overtake. The harvest will your toil repay; Those fields of waving corn Are growing through the sunny day, And in the summer rain.

Men work as hard as you, in shade, O'er books and papers bent; The work of life is easy made Only by sweet content.
It may be news, my friends to you,
But'ti he truth I tell;

All work is very hard to do, To those who do it well. In speculation you must stand The rough commercial shocks; You may in safety reach the land, You may land on the rocks. Your pay is certain on the farm, Though grain may not be sold; In panies you feel no alarm— Wheat is as good as gold.

Pick up your whip, and bid your team Drag on the noble plow, And do not let an idle dream Becloud your youthful brow. In years to come, when the children roam. You'll take them by the arm, And say "You'd better stay at home, Upon the good old farm."

Story.

LOVE AND MURDER.

At the age of twenty-nine Monsieur Paul Charte was left a widower, with a daughter of but six summers. M. Charte was a man of great intellect, and might as an author have ranked among the highest, but when just at the age when work becomes tedious, and ambition not born, met Mlle. Lucie Fellet, one of the rishest heireses in Parisian society, and married her.

Lucie was a quiet, thoughtful girl, whose every action was prompted, by whose every action was prompted by her heart, and as the wife of Paul she was most happy, when (his genius over-coming his idleness) he would write for days together, and bring Lucie his manuscript to read, she would say: "Ah, Paul, to me your writing is beautiful, but it is just as beautiful in a letter to mo as in all these useless pages, therefore spend your time with me, and leave labor to the many who stand in need of its reward." Paul, who loved Lucie with all his vanity (not heart), consented to do as she wished, and thus it was that an intellect was thrown away, and M. Paul Charte became the slave of his wife, and to the money of his wife. To Paul, Lucie's slightest wish was law, and if at times some envious friend of Lucie's would (repeating the words of their husbands), suggest that sionally ask of him some trifling doto himself Paul was most liberal; but among his friends, who would occanation for some charitable purpose, his constant reply was: "I am but a poor author, and have nothing."

Lucie would excuse him, saying: "Pauvre Paul, he is so sensitive, and it is wounding to his noble pride to reflect that to me he owes his wealth, and therefore he deprives himself frequently of doing the good his too tender heart dictates."

Thus, for eight years Paul and Lucie lived happily; but three days before the anniversary of their eighth year of marriage Lucie caught cold in her effort to ride ten miles on horseback in the rain, to complete the surprise she had for Paul on their anniversary, which was the entire refurnishing of a little cottage just on the outskirts of Paris, that he had admired when passing one day, and had

This, which her physician deemed a mad freak, was the cause of a severe cold, which settled on her lungs, and in two months Lucie died in the arms of Paul, her last words being: "Paul, listen to me. I know how dearly you have loved me, and hard as it is to part, I know that in time you must become reconciled to my death, and all your love will center on our darling little Cora. I feel sure, Paul, that you can never forget me sufficiently to marry again; but you are aware, husband, that there are women in this world unprincipled enough to use every art and deception for the sake of wealth. A woman of this description you might come in contact with, and so in thinking you were giving Cora a mother, you might render her wretched by consigning her to the care of one whose only thought was vanity and pleasure, and who would hate, listen Paul, hate my darling; therefore, to avoid this, I have left all I possess to you, but in case of your marrying again, the fortune goes to Cora, who will be removed to the care of my third cousin, Mlle. thought, and determined to procure a trustworthy governess for Cora, and to pass the next two years in travel-

After a few weeks' search and inquiry, M. Carson, an intimate acquaintance of M. Chart, recommended Mlle. Katrina Garnaux, as being most competent to take entire charge of Cora, consequently it was with impatience that after, by letter, engaging Mlle. Garnaux, M. Charte hourly expected

Cora was all excitement at the prospect of, as she would insist, "a new mamma.

M. Charte was scated in the drawing-room with Cora on his knee, telling her her duties to her governess, and preparing her for the separation from him. As he sat by the window, the twilight giving him a serious look, the natural want of which prevented him from being handsome, one would have thought he was a broken-hearted widower, whose only consolation was his little daughter. His eyes were fine, but all their beauty was at *the surface; it was an eye to be looked at, not into. His finest feature was his mouth, whose expression was one of suppliance for pardon for any offense it might thoughtlessly have commit-

Cora was a "grave little olive," as her mother used to term her, she was generous to a fault in her impulse, and never resented a slight if accompanied by a kind word.

Both Cora and her father were too deeply interested in their conversation to hear the door open, and when the servant, coming close to M. Charte, announced Mile. Garnaux, he gave a start so sudden as to throw Cora off of his knee.

"Let me help you, pet," was said in such a sweetly mysterious voice, that for a moment M. Charte was confused, but perceiving Cora standing by the side of a lady, he immediately recollected himself, and welcomed Mlle. Garnaux most cordially, and turning to Cora, said:

"Cora, your governess." "Oh, no, papa, my new mammawon't you be my new mamma?"

Young, with a tall and slender figure, quiet and graceful in every movement, and her attire was a perfect combination of simplicity and elegance. Her hands were very white and small to a fault. The small, perfectly shaped head was covered with profuse jet black hair, bound by a narrow ribbon of scarlet-in admirable harmony with a complexion singularly fair and transparent to accompany hair and eyes so dark—for the eyes were also black and piercing. There was a great deal of character in the nicely chiseled nose; her cheeks were rather thin, but with sufficient color, combined with lips not perhaps sufficiently full to denote sincerity, but perfectly arched and very red, a forehead white and firm as marble, completed a face whose general expression was wonderfully winning and lovely yet, at the same time, perfectly self-possessed. "You must pardon my daughter, and try and tame this wayward spirit, which will be more apt to lose her the love she is so anxious to win." "I leave to-morrow for the Continent, and feel perfectly reconciled to leaving Cora in your hands: and now, darling, show Mile. her room, and talk to her freely and as you think."

"We shall meet in the morning, Mlle.," said Charte, and kissing Cora he left the room. "I hope to do all you wish, Monsieur, and I trust you will have no occasion to regret the trust and confidence you place in me." Could he have turned and seen the expression of Katrina's face, he, careless as he was, would have hesitated ere he trusted his only little one to the care of her. "Child. I am tired and wish to rest -come, hasten," and taking Cora by the hand rather roughly, they retired for the night. The next day M. Charte found it not quite convenient to leave, and postponed his departure for a week. His evenings were always spent at home, and in the society of his daughter and her governess, in whom he felt a singular interest, which interest, by the end of the week, had ripened into admiration; again was his departure put off, and so it continued from week to week.

Katrina in the meanwhile was distant, but never missed an opportunity of being in Paul's society, and was always faultlessly attired. At last Paul found he was hopelessly in love, and he for the first time was cross to Cora, which so wounded her gentle spirit that she rushed up to Katrina and exclaimed: "Oh, take me and be my mamma, papa is cross.'' ^c Cora, leave me, I wish to talk to your father; kiss me, and don't weep." Cora, doing as she was bid, Katrina and Paul were left alone. "Monsieur Carte, I have wished to speak with you for some time past about myself as well as Cora. "Katrina, I can no longer conceal my feelings. I must tell you I love you, and my love for you has made me a better man, for I now see how my vanity led me into a marriage with one I never loved, and had she lived I should have discovered my mistake; but oh! Katrina, what must my feelings be when you learn that even after this declaration it is impossible for me to ask your love, or offer you my hand." For an instant Paul thought Katrina would fall to the ground, so white was her face, and unsteady her position. "Paul," said she, after a long and terrible pause, "since you tell me you cannot offer me your hand, I am justified in telling you, you have mine. I feel I am justified in telling you this, as no interested motive can be attributed to me by you, wha—what is this terrible reason, is my right to know?" said Katrina, in a tone so hollow, and ry picture she made of it, though. Her yet cold.

"Here, here, Katrina, let me for once fold you to my heart, and with your head resting here, I will tell you what is known but to two persons, my lawyer and myself." And with Katrina's hand in his, he told her of his wife's will and last request. "And oh, darling, can I refrain from being cross to Cora when I think of what her existence deprives me of. Were it not for her we might pass our lives of her face and didn't speak to the jury at in perfect happiness, and even now I am tempted to give her up with the fortune, to disregard her mother's wish, and to live but for you; for with the bitter disappointment of the closs of you, telling on my health and spirits, as it will, I shall be but a poor guardian for Cora."

"Must I. dearest, leave; is there nothing, Katrina?" "Nothing that you can do," was her reply; "nothing, Paul," and for a moment the thin lips were tightly compressed, and the bright color left Paul, the next day, left; but his love had come at a time in life when nothing but death could erase it. He received frequent letters from home, but always from Cora. One day while in a fit of desperation, he was giving orders for his immediate return, he was handed a letter from Katrina. He opened it eagerly, and read:

"PAUL-Cora is ill. Come im-KATRINA." nediately. Paul for the time forgot Katrina and all," but that his child was ill, and he not near it. In twenty-four hours he was home, but home no longer, for the one tie that made it home was severed. Cora was dead; she died an hour after Katrina had written, and

Paul felt indeed that he was alone. "Oh! come back to your father. Come, darling, I am alone." "No, Paul, I am here." And Katrina, placing both her hands on the head of Paul, stooped forward and kissed him on the forehead. "Katrina, is it you? I remember now—oh, no, I am not alone, for you are mine now, all mine." "Yes, Paul, I am, but hush; not at such a time—wait. Cora Charte was buried beside her mother, and one year from the day after the funeral, Paul was married to Katrina.

How Cora died was a mystery to some, and even Paul murmured that in ten days, and without any definite cause, she should have died. Katrina, whenever Paul spoke of her, was silent, but could her husband for a moment see her heart, the mystery of Cora's death would be explained.

Training Colts.

Farmers are apt to go to one or two extremes with their colts-either to halter them and drag them about through the heat of summer on roads of all kinds. alongside the dams at work, or else to turn them out to run wild during the first six months of their existence, out of sight and hearing of human beings. Now, we take exceptions to both these methods of proceeding—to the first, because the limbs and feet of the young animal are tender and apt to be strained and bruised by being compelled to keep up with the dam (even when walking) for several consecutive miles. The young colt requires frequent rest, and should be at liberty to lie lown whenever inclination prompts. When the colt becomes tired it drags on its halter, straining the cords of the neck, back and lags. It is also disadvantageous to allow the young animal to run too long without subjection, for when the attempt is made he will resist with great force and often with injury. At the risk, then, of some extra work, we advise that the colt be accustomed to be handled often, until he has no fear to approach persons, and when they always receive caresses they are ready to do so. At two months old put on the halter, but allow the colt to go very much as he likes, occasionally drawing him towards you and caressing him. In two hours you will have imperceptibly broken him to lead. Then when you tie him, do so with a halter he cannot break -a short struggle will satisfy him he is conquered. Never suffer any one to strike or yell at a colt; one such barbarous act will cause a day's work to overcome its bad effect. When first cleaning him avoid the head—then approach that part tender-ly, and if he resists, go to some other point. In a few moments return, and so continue until he submits with pleasure. rather, to be handled anywhere and on any part. Your colt is then half broken. THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

The New York Mercantile Journal, in a late number, calls the attention of the press to the financial question, and advocates a currency reform. This is right; but whether the extent of reform advocated by the Journal will result in a better currency we have grave doubts. There has also been an Association formed in New York for the purpose of pressing upon the attention of the people and Congress the necessity for a "self-adjusting currency." This is also the kind of a currency we need, and was long since advocated by us in the columns of the RECORD.

The Journal, in its currency reform, goes so far as to entirely do away with a gold basis for the currency of the country. It says:
"We say that gold is not now, never was, and never can be a true standard of value. Ten dollars in gold, notwithstanding its present premium, will not buy as much corn, wheat, rye, pork, beef, tobacco, butter, cheese, cotton, etc., to-day, as did one-half the same weight of the same metal 30 years ago. Gold is a commodity and its value is governed by the law cl supply and demand, the same as every other commodity, and hence, the use of it as a basis for our currency is a relic of barbarism unworthy of our times."

There cannot be such a thing as a true standard of value, in the sense in which the Journal speaks of gold. If the national wealth were the basis of our currency, it would take a greater representative part of that wealth to "buy as much corn, wheat, rye. pork, beef, tobacco, butter, cheese, cotton, etc., to-day" than it did thirty years ago. So the Journal's objection, against gold, falls with equal weight against anything that may be selected as the basis of currency. Gold is, however, recognized as money by all nations; and we opine that it will be long before any commercial nation recognizes any other basis for its cur-

The following extract presents the Mercantile Journal's plan of adjusting the financial system:

"We hold that next in importance to the joint and harmonious action of capital and labor, is the supply of a currency based upon sound financial principles. The first requisite for business is a token universally recognized throughout the land as the true representative of a dollar. The Government is fully competent to issue such a token, especially when deeply indebted, as at present; and no other standard or measure of a dollar should be tolerated. This necessarily excludes the paper dollar issued by corporations, purporting to be redeemable in coin, upon demand; and advisedly so, because these private issues have always proven extremely treacherous and delusive. Either gold and silver should constitute the only permissible circulating medium, or they should be demonetized, so that the periodical panics which harass the business world might be

"We hold that the true method of adjusting the national finances to insure justice to all and injury to none, is most simple and easy. The Government should pay off the 5.20 bonds as soon as the fiveyear operation shall have matured by issuing legal tender notes so far as necessary, provided such payment could be made hon-estly, the terms under which the bonds were issued being fully considered. If such payment can be shown to be unjust, and contrary to the law authorizing the issue of the 5.20 bonds, then the Secretary of the Treasury should be instructed to issue legal tender notes to the amount of at least $200,000,000, and be directed to purchase and cancel such other Government obligations therewith as could be bought on the open market at the lowest figures. To absorb any surplus of legal tender notes that might at any time exist, over and above the legitimate demands of trade, and to inaugurate a "SELF-ADJUST-ING CURRENCY REGULATOR," the Secretary of the Treasury should be furthermore DI-RECTED to issue, when required by ANY person presenting legal tender notes (amounting to, say $1,050 or its multiple), bonds bearing interest at the rate of three and sixty-five one hundredths per cent., (ten cents per day on each $1,000), both principle and interest payable on demand, in legal tender notes, at any time after sixty days from date of issue. Interest to be paid semi-annually until the principal is demanded, and then in full to date."

With all that we have thought, and with all that we have seen and heard upon the financial question, we can conceive of no better plan than the following one, originally presented by us in the issue of the RECORD of Nov. 21, 1867, in an article urging upon Congress the importance of Congressional action on the financial and othr questions. How well a part of the lan works, is now evinced by Secre-ry Boutwell in the purchase of Gov-erement bonds and their consequent ppreciation. We call the especial attention of ne New York Mercantile Journal, and the Currency Reform Association. to the following, from the columns of our issue of Nov. 21, 1867, as the rue plan of adjusting the currency f the country:

It needs no keen eye to perceive that this would be a very profitable business for the Banks, notwithstanding those now in operation would have to increase their securities.

DETROIT FREE PRESS AND THE PUBLIC DEBT STATEMENT.

It is strange with what persistence the Democrațic organs will continue to misrepresent the Administration. The Detroit Free Press, of Friday, shows either its meanness or ignorance in its article on the "Public Debt Statement" for July.

We quote from the Free Press almost its entire article, on the subject in question, that our readers may have a fair glance at the meanness, reliability, intelligence and honesty of the leading Democratic organ of the State of Michigan! This article has been handed around the State, and will continue to be, by the small fry of Democratic papers, as gospel. And will they, when they see its error, correct it? We shall see. But to the article in question:

The treasury statement of the Public Finaces on the 1st of August, as received by telegraph and published in yesterday morning's Free Press, is a mess of bosh that would disgrace a school-boy who pretended to be an accountant and which wholly misrepresents the balance. After showing the total debt, principal and interest of every kind, except deposits of coin to amount to $2,635,122,738-57 the Secretary pretends to show the credits, and among these we find the item "coin for which certificates for deposit are outstanding, 836,725,840, and this sum is deducted from the total debt, while the total debt has not been charged with it. By this manipulation, emitting from the charges against the treasury the deposits for which the treasury obligations are outstanding, and then crediting the treasury as if it owned the coin deposits, the Secretary shows a decrease of the public debt during the past month of $7,435,744.29, and a decrease since March 1, 1869, of $43,896, 523.72. But a correct statement would be as follows: Debt bearing interest in coin. $2,107,931,800.00 Debt bearing interest in lawful money.....

Debt bearing no interest.... 423,872,859.12

Debt on which interest has ceased since maturity.... Total debt, principal outstanding.....$2,601,404,215.76 Accrued interest to date and purchased bonds in treasury. $2,518,292,576.29 But omitting this $36,725,840.00 of liabilities, the Secretary makes the public debt in excess of resources in the treasury $2,481,566,736.29 whereas, as shown above, it is $2,518,292,576,29, being a decrease since March 1, 1869, of but $7,-170.683.72 instead of $43,896,523.72. And if this statement of the debt on July I was correct (which we presume was not), there has been an increase of the public debt of $29,290,095.71. But as a financial statement this is not the most ridiculous blunder. In it we are gravely informed that "the reduction would have been larger had not the government advanced to the Pacific Railroad, during the month, interest on their bonds to the amount of $1,636,861.60, and paid on the last day of the month an unusually large number of drafts to the amount of more than $2,500,000,00." As we presume that these drafts were not paid noless they were for liabilities incurred, we cannot see how they would affect the balance at all. Perhaps, however, the Secretary finding that his conceelment of the liability for the certificates of deposits worked well, thinks that if he had kept his cash and said nothing about the claim upon it, which he had to settle when he paid the drafts he could have shown a better balance. It he desired result. Gue tranch of the Now, the Free Press knew, or ought to have known, that the above item of as a preliminary step. indebtedness, charged to the Government. as "Debt bearing no interest," amounting to $123,872,859.12, was made of sundry items, such as, "De-mand Notes;" "U. S. Legal-Tender Notes; "Postal Currency;" "Fractional Currency;" and "Certificates of Gold deposit." All these items grant an exequator to appointed U.S. Gouss the ground that he was the Fenian movement. constitute the debt on which the Government pay no interest. This $36,-725,840, of coin, credited to Government, as in the Treasury, has also been charged, in the itemized statement, but put all together in the telegraphic summary, as belonging to that part of the government debt on which no interest is paid. This, every reliable journalist knows, or ought to know, whether they have received the itemized statement for July or not, as it is so in Boutwell's former statements. The Free Press, we, therefore, conclude, is either dishonest or culpably ignorant. Will they be honest enough to rectify the error? If they do we shall conclude the mistake was made ignorantly, but if they do not, that it was made wilfully; and that it is the programme of the leading Democratic organ (and of course the small-er ones that follow in its wake) to willfully and knowingly misrepresent, even to untruth, the Administration. The Free Press, by adding the "outstanding certificates for coin deposits in the Treasury" to the above, has included that item twice, as it is already included in the item of indebtedness, "Debt bearing no interest." So much for the Free Press' intelligence, or honesty, which, the future will enable us to determine. The statement of Secretary Boutwell will be found correct, and the reduction of the public debt during July, $7,435,744.29, as telegraphed from Washington; and the entire reduction since March 1st, $43,896,523.72, the Free Press to the contrary notwith of suffrage. standing.

TENNESSEE ELECTION.

County

Berrien

The Tennessee election on the 5th, esulted in favor of Senter, as governor, over Stokes, of some 30,000. Both candidates were Republicans, Senter of the moderate, national-universal-suffrage kind, and Stokes of the extreme, disfranchising-all-rebel, kind. Of course the great body of the national Republican party are pleased with the result. The Legislature, however, has gained some Demo-erats, so that they hope to be able to elect a U. S. Senator. Andy Johnson is talked of, and it is said he aspires to the position.

The State Treasury.

The cash balance in the State Treasury on the 2d of August, was $893,450.37. On the 1st of July the balance was $1, 150,306,71, a decrease during the month of July of $256,856.34. The receipts of the month were $158,964.12; the payments $418,820.46. Among the payments were the following items:

Interest on State debt, coupons... 85,700
Deaf, Dumb and Blind Asylum.... 20,767.49
University Aid (mandamus)..... 7,699.15 Agricultural Conege.

Of $185,000 War Bonds drawn for re lemption January 7, 1869, $12,000 are vet unpaid, and of $300,000 War Bonds drawn for redemption July 1, 1869, $68, 000 remain unpaid, while $5,162.50 are due on semi-annual interest of State Debt, making $85,162,50 indebtedness not presented for payment in these two items.

Since the last annual report of Nov. 30, 1868, there has been paid $482,500 of the bonded State Debt, leaving the present to tal bonded debt of the State $3,131,578. 49. Of that amount interest has ceased upon $119,078.49. There is little doubt that before the meeting of the next Legislature, in January 1871, the balance o the War Bonds, now reduced to $590,500, will all be paid.—Lansing Republican.

SHOPLIFTING .- A promising youth from Chicago visited St. Joseph on Sunday last. The door of Platt's Hardware Store was partly open while Mr. Platt was writing at the desk; he heard the show case click and saw the young man passing out of the door and immediately made chase and caught him in the possession of a pistol. On his way to the Calaboose he remarked that it wasn't much to get out of a Chicago lock-up, and he rather thought that the St. Joseph Calaboose would not hold him a great while.—St. Jo. Herald.

Physicians say that this practice hurts the eye-sight of children, and affects the brain; and cases have been known where it has produced insanity and death. If you value the health and comfort of your little ones, get them a carriage in which they can ride naturally and enjoy it.

CLAIRVOYANTISM .- We give our caders the benefit of the following from the New York Tribune of Saturday. It is but a specimen of all clairvoyant humbuggists, as every one will find to their sorrow who patronize these humbugs, who go about from village to village deceiving the people, by all manner of pretentions, under all manner of names. These are but pretenses to cover up their humbuggery by which they hope to get the people's

An unfortunate lady lost a pearl of great price. 'Clairvoyant' No. 1 said it was in the ash barrel. 'Clairvoyant' No. 2 said it was in the yard. The ashes are sifted, and no pearl found! Finally, the missing gem is sought for, without the aid of clairvoyance, under the kitchen floor, and is found. Now, if either No. 1 or 2 had made a good guess—there being one chance in several million of such happy conjecture—there would have been ninety and nine converts immediately, who would all have believed and trembled, who would have talked nonsense about the sweet, florescent, sempiternal spheres, and have expected the noisiest evening visits from the Buchanan Cornet Band. The occasion was entertaining and interest-ing. The Cornet Band rendered their parts admirably; the Buchanan Orchestra did credit to themselves, and the Musical Association performed their part with equal honor. Considand the people were better entertained than they would have been by ninetenths of the professional, traveling EXHIBITION.—The Llewellyn Troupe composed of small boys, orphans of deceased soldiers, gave two entertainments to crowded houses, in Collins & Weaver's Hall, on Saturday and Monday evenings. The object of these entertainments is to raise means to educate those boys and other orphan children of our fallen heroes.

Poisoned.—On Sunday evening case of poisoning occurred, which came near resulting fatally. It seems that Mr. Wm. T. Harding, feeling unwell, concluded to take a spoonful of brandy, but instead of getting the vial that contained brandy, he took one containing medicine, a spoonful of which was sufficient to kill any person. In a short time he began to grow worse, and as good fortune would have it, threw up the poison, which is very unusual with the medicine taken. Dr. McLin was called, and the proper restoratives administered.

A word, in this connection, to physicians and the public generally We have no doubt but there are many lives lost annually, or constitutions permanently impaired, through the improper taking of powerful and poisonous medicines, which might be avoided, if the bottles containing the medicines were properly labelled. Let every physician, then, be required to label every bottle of medicine he puts up with the amount that constitutes a dose. Let every person getting medicine of a physician require him to so label the medicine. Thus will many distressing mistakes be avoided. Human life is too precious to be risked by the administration of strong medicines in the hands of unskilled persons, on mere verbal directions. They are liable to forget, and such forgetfulness may prove fatal. We trust all our physicians will hereafter do themselves the honor, and their patients the justice, to label every parcel of medicine they may put up.

What the Press say of the Record and its enlargement. The following notices of the RECORD, and its change of form, we clip from our exchanges:

N. H. MERRILL, P. M.

The BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD, our local neighbor, came to us last week much changed in appearance-a folio instead of a quarto as formerly—and somewhat enlarged. The RECORD is improving .-Voice of the West.

We are glad to notice that our neighbor of the RECORD has enlarged, changed in form, and otherwise greatly improved his paper. The RECORD is now the largest and best appearing paper in this portion of Michigan.—Buchanan Advance.

The Buchanan RECORD has been changed to folio form, enlarged, and much improved in appearance. Who comes next.

—Benton Harbor Palladium. The Buchanan RECORD has improved its appearance very much by changing its form back to the folio and slightly enlarging.—Niles Democrat.

The Buchanan RECORD has been chan ged to folio form and slightly enlarged, greatly improving its appearance.—Niles. Republican. The Buchanan RECORD has been change ed from the quarto or eight page, to the folio, or four page style. This is a great improvement. The quarto form of newspapers is inconvenient to readers, and a fraud upon advertisers, and the best newspapers are abandoning it .- Van Buren Co.

The Berrien County Record comes to us changed from the eight page to a four page form, and is also enlarged. Its improvement is decided, and as a Republican organ it merits the generous support it receives.—Lansing Republican. The Berrien County Record comes to us this week enlarged and re-modeled, and greatly improved in appearance. The RECORD before the change was a fine looking paper, but being made up in the eight page form, was not as convenient to the general reader, as the four page form of its present issue. We wish the RECORD, and its gentlemanly proprietor, the success which they have merited.— Qvid Register. IMPROVED. The BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD come to us this week much improved in appearance. The lower portion of the State sends out no better paper than this. We are glad to observe that the county gives it a good support. Lake

The last number of the Buchanan RECopp comes to us very much improved in appearance, having been transmogrified from an eight to a four-paged sheet. This is a maye on the part of, the Editor, Mr. D. A. Waguer, that will be fully appreciated by his many readers, and will appreciated by his many readers, and will and doubtedly add another thousand to his list.

First-class papers are all adopting the four page form.—South Haven Sentinel.

The Berrier County Record.—This paper comes to us this week enlarged, and dedidedly improved in appearance—having

THE BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD .- Jusip s we were going to press in this new an enlarged form, we were surprised by re-ceiving a copy of that staunch and reliable republican paper the Berrien County RE-CORD, also enlarged and changed from a quarto to a folio. Rather a singular coincidence that brother Wagner should find it necessary to enlarge, and convenient to change from a quarto to a folio form at the same time with the Manistee Times. The RECORD is one of our most valuable exchanges, and we trust it will ever meet with the success it so richly merits .- Manistee Times.

It is now a very good-looking paper, and it is well conduct ed, though it credits some of our local items to the St. Clair Republican, which may not

The Berrien County Record comes to us this week enlarged and very much improved in appearance. The RECORD is the best paper in the State not published at a county site. - Lowell Weekly Journal. IMPROVED .- The BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD, published by D. A. Wagner, at Buchanan, Mich., has been changed from a quarto to the solio form. It makes one of the best appearing papers in the State, and its politics are sound .- Eaton Rapids

The Berrien County Recond has abandoned the quarto form, and now appears as a large folio. - Detroit Post.

The BERRIEN COUNTY RECOBD, D. A. Wagner, editor and proprietor, has been changed from an eight-paged to a four-paged paper, making it a much more convenient paper to read, and greatly improving its appearance. In our opinion the Rec-ORD is as fine an appearing paper as we receive, and is edited ably and judiciously. A long and prosperous career to the REC-ORD .- Plainwell Express.

ENLARGED. -The BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD, under the management of D. A.

IMPROVED .- The BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD, published by D. A. Wagner, at Buchanan, Mich., has been changed from a quarto to the folio form. It makes one of the best appearing papers in the State, and its politics are sound.—Ingham Co.

Berrien County Record.-We are pleased to greet this valuable journal among our exchanges. It has enlarged and changed from eight pages to a folio 28x42 inches. Success to you, Bro. Wagner .-Clarksville Patriot, Tenn.

BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD.—This pa per comes to us this week, in a different and we think much improved form. Heretofore it has been an eight-page sheet. But the last number comes to us in regular newspaper form, the size of the sheet being the same as formerly, but with only four pages. We never did like the eight page form form for a newspaper, as it is not half as convenient for reading as a four page sheet. We hope they will stick to the present sensible and convenient form of their paper, with the assurance that at least one of their readers likes it ever so

The BERRIEN COUNTY RECORD, Bupearance. It is the handsomest paper in that County .- National Democrat.

TY RECORD comes to us in the folio form, instead of the quarto as heretofore published. The editor says that he prefers the olio form only so far as convenience is concerned, and goes on to say that taste must give way to utility. Our brother entirely overlooks the fact that there is a vast difference between the large city dailies-papers that are only taken for the telegraphic and latest news that they contain-and the country weekly newspaper, which are the embodiment of all the essential news of the day, spiced with literature and a local history of the times in which it lives, and a true record of the moving events of the vicinity in which it is published. There is hardly one man in million that thinks of keeping a file of a daily newspaper, while there are hundreds of thousands that keep files of their local papers neatly bound, and placed away with other valuable works in their libraries. The quarto form only takes one-half the space of the folio, and to that extent is certainly easier of access, and is more readily preserved, and a much handsomer volume when it comes from the hands of the binder. We believe that "taste" and "utility" always go together .- Coldwater

Sunday Reading THE ROMAN SENTINEL.

Death or dishonor, which is best to taste?
A Roman sentinel in Pompeii,
When God's hot anger laid that city waste,
Answered the question, and resolved to die.
His duty was, upon his post to hide
Till the relief came, let what might betide. He stood forgotten by the fleeing guard, Choosing that part which is the bitterest still,
His face with its fixed purpose, cold and hard,
Cut in the resolute grante of his will.
"Better," he said, "to die, than live in shame;

Death wreaths fresh flowers round a brave man's

Life is the wave's deep whisper on the shore
Of a great sea beyond. The sentry saw That day the light in broad sails hoisted o'er The drifting boat of dawn; nor dreamed the flaw, The puff called death, would blow him with Out to the boundless see beyond the sky.

—Appleton's Journal.

Pleasing God. John Wesley used to try to impress on his soul this solemn thought,—'At every moment of my life I am either pleasing or displeasing God.' There is a truth in this, though it need not interfere with the consolatory conviction that the safety or standing of a Christain 'in Christ' is not affected by those defects and failures in filial obedience for which, as a child, he is taught to ask for daily forgiveness. With men in their sins. God, as a righteous moral Ruler, is 'justly displeased'—displeased in such a sense that their relation to him needs to be changed, through penitential trust in Him in whom, and in whose redemptive work, He is 'crell pleased.' Men, as believing men, accepted and beloved for Christ's sake,' may, as sons, while retaining their privileged relation as 'heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ,' yet be pleasing or displeasing to their heavenly Father from the completeness or defects of their Christian character. There is some thing very stimulating and encouraging in the thought that we can do that which shall actually 'please God.' A sort of secret, unuterable blessedness seems to spring up out of the conviction. It not only gives importance to all duty, but it throws a light and a glory upon all. In the same way it is terrible painful to think that it may be said of us, as it was said of David,

—the thing that he did displeased the Lord. Parental displeasure does not mean rejection, casting off, disinheritance; but it is painful to think of it, nevertheless. To have grieved a father is a thing full of anguish to a loving child, when he realizes the fact and the result of his disobedience, though it may not affect his actual position or his ultimate prospects. One of the attributes of the Divine life in man consist, it is to be admitted, in thisthat it leads to the uniform and constant doing of those things which 'please God, from a sort of secret instinct, without the active consciousnes of thought about it; but such thought must have been present and influential, at one time or other, as the basis and source of the unconscious tendency. Hence we think that it may be found of great and inestimable advantage to fall in with the suggestion of acquiring the habit, not only of doing what ought to be done, but of doing it with a concious intention of pleasing God. This purpose may be carried into everything. Being thus carried, it may make everything a means of grace, for everything is that which calls into exercise or is done under the influence of spiritual principles. In this way, the course recommended may turn the ordinary engagements, and even the weariness, the vapidness, and vexations of common life, which might otherwise fatigue or fret the soul, into instruments and activities of positive good, into what may promote in development. The Sure Word.

the inner man growth and vigor and healthy

Our lot is fallen in times when, on the one hand, the very foundations of the faith are shaken by those who ought to be its chief defenders: and, on the other, a su-perstructure of wood, hay and stubble is raised upon that foundation, almost equally perilous to the safety of those who trust themselves upon it. And men are asking where is there any resting place amidst this deluge of unbelief and false doctrine with which the whole earth is overspread? But why such a question? Is not the ark of God's Word floating high above it all, offering a secure, a permanent resting place to every weary and heavy-laden soul that seeks a refuge in it? Is not the ark of God's testimony spread open before you? Keep close to God's own Word. Let no man, call himself what he will, move you from the foundation. And amidst all the varied interpretations of the Word, keep to that which a prayerful, earnest and dil-igent perusal of it carries home to your conscience. When you stand before the bar of God hereafter, no dependance upon human teaching will be your vindication for not having acted upon God's Word as He gave it to you. He who allows any man to come between him and God's message to him, must take the consequence of preferring man's word to God's.

When our martyred Reformers stood, a mere handful against an opposing host, this was the rock on which they fixed their tooting—God's Word and God's Spirit as its only infallible interpreter. And God's grace supported them in their fiery trial, and honored them, even here, with a victory pregnant in blessings to their country—that country so fervantly prayed for by one of them, and whose words, notwithstanding all that is happening around us, let us hope, may have flowed from prophet ic lips—'Be of good cheer, Master, Ridley, and play the man; we shall this day light such a candle in England, by God's grace, as shall never be put out.'—Dear Goode.

Small Virtues.

Do not be troubled because you have no great virtues. God made a million spears of grass where he had made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but with grasses. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities, and you need not mourn because you are neither a hero nor a saint.

- All delays, half-hearted resolutions, and half-way reforms, are so many triumphs to our enemies; forwhile they encourage us to hope for victory, they only deceive us and make us think we are doing something when we are doing nothing.

A man will be what his most cherished feelings are. If he encourages a noble generosity, every feeling will be enriched by it; if he nurse bitter and envenomed thoughts, his own spirit will absorb the poison; and he will crawl among men as a burnished adder, whose life is mischief

When the unknown hand throws the last fatal dart at the head of manthen boweth he his head, and the dart only lifts the crown of thorns from his wounds .- Richter.

Let us always go beyond the duties marked out, and keep within the pleasures permitted.

A passionate and revengeful temper renders a man unfit for advice, deprives him of his reason, and robs him of all that is great and noble in his nature,

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of solf-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous isso of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple; eterlain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply privately, and radically.

A Hopeless Case.

The other evening two Irishmen, new to the country, and belonging to the better class of emigrants, arrived in Toledo, late in the evening, and stopped at the Island House. They were shown to a room far up in the building, the gas lighted, and they were left alone. The weather was warm, the windows open, and the two gentlemen sat down to enjoy a chat. Soon, attracted by the light, and the prospect of a square meal, a troup of the hungriest of the hungry Toledo mosquitoes bore down on the ill-fated Hibernians. They fought and bled, but the enemy constantly received reenforcements, and the travelers were in dispair. The clerk was summoned, and asked agonizingly: "Is there no defense against these blood-thirsty cra-turs?" He told the travelers that if they put out their gas and closed the windows they would experience relief. They acted on the suggestion and placed themselves between the sheets. Just as they began to doze, a light-ning bug, which had strayed into the room, caught the eye of one of the travelers. He roused his companion with a punch—"Jamie, Jamie, it's no use. Here's one of the craturs sarch-

Harry, who boards at C. B.'s, took his friend Jack to dinner with him. Being seated, Jack's eyes sparkled as the waiter placed a dish containing "first course" before him. "Capital," thought he. He hurriedly "entered" the first mouthful, which no sooner being done, than with a face that Hogarth would have delighted to paint, he exclaimed, "Good gracious, Harry, what do you call this?" "Chicken soup." "Here, waiter," said Jack, "take this to the landlady, with my compliments, and say, if she has no objections, you'll drive the chickens through it again."

in' for us wid a lantern."

An offended woman, not having a special invitation to the funeral of a near neighbor, sent the following note to the mourners: "I think I have been slighted in being omitted from your list of invitations. We shall probably have a funeral at our house one of these days, and we won't invite you."

On a recent trip of one of the illinois river packets—a light drail one, as there was only two feet of water in the channel—the passengers were startled by the cry of "man over-board!" The steamer was stopped, and preparations made to save hin, when he was heard exclaiming: "Go ahead with your darned old steamboat! I'll walk!"

During the war an old woman went into the village shop to buy a half pound of candles. Being told the price, she found it was more than she had been used to, and asked the reason. The shopman said it was because of the war, on which the old woman exclaimed, "Deary me, sir, have they taken to fight by candle a few days since, that may be considered sensational. A beautiful young lady called at one of the stores in that place, and asked the polite clerk if he had any "feline intestines for lyrical purposes?" She wanted cat gut guitar strings.

For once in his life the young man was "weakened," and was carried out on a canceled postage stamp.

A man seeing an oyster vender pass by, called out: "Give me a pound of oysters." We sell oysters by measure and not by weight," was the oysterman's reply. "Very well," said the other, "then I'll take a yard of them."

"Was it a near or distant relative?" 'Well, purty distant, 'bout twentyfour miles," was the reply. "Dar are," said a sable orator, "two roads through this world. De one am a broad and a narrow road dat teads to perdition, and de ndder an a
