Poetry. SCANDAL.

BY D. B. JONES. Ay scoff at others, call them silly fools, Pile up their errors—mark the trait that rules: Avoid their merits, seek alone to find Their faults and failing—leave all else behind.

Of character, leave not a single trace, Heap on the scandal, bring them to disgrace, Show them no mercy, one will deem you just If neath your heel you grind them to dust.

Strew rankling thorns along their future course Blight all their prospects, never fear remorse Yourself perfection, in your faultless mind, One spark of evil none could hope to find. Erect an altar, offer sacrifice

The god of Evil, give him something nice; Still ply the lash, conserve the good and great. Denounce all virtues, nourish vice and hate. Thus through your life aim only to destroy

The pence of others; deem it sweetest joy To wreck their happiness, their life, their all, And fill their cup of misery with gall. And when death comes to claim you for his own Review the crimes, the evil you have done.
Throw off your armor, sheath your reeking sword
And of the devil claim your just reward.

LINNET MOORE.

BY CLIO STANLEY.

Weare Duncan stood in the halflight made by the shadow of the lace curtain, and watched the two women who just now exerted such a peculiar influence on his life.

As he stood there, awaiting some token of recognition, the soft rustle of silk and a sense of delicate fragrance, like the perfume that floats through magnolia groves, stole nearer, and as he turned his head, Berentje Gordon was close by his side; her sweet, dainty face, framed in by the waves of golden hair, lifted to his own with such a shy, tender grace, that for a single moment, the temptation to stoop and press a passionate kiss upon the yelvet cheek was very strong. "How can a man be true knight, and not wear armor, Mr. Duncan?" His look of admiration changed to one of surprise as he listened to her question; perhaps she noticed the difference, for she said hastily:

"I asked you the question because you remind me of one of the heroes; only you should have chosen a bright- | could not learn to love him, and asker spot for your meditations." "It grows bright fast under the spell of your presence." "That is not fair; idle compliment for an honest question, Mr. Duncan. is not allowable."

"Perhaps no idea of mine would be fair return for your question; yet you might be able to draw something good even from a dull thought." "You say that because they call me Bee. but it is not an appropriate name, I assure you." "Bright and busy and laded with sweets! I think the name does suit you, Bec."

It was the first time he had ever called her by her pet name, and she looked up with her cheeks all in a

But Bee knew she had set herself a very difficult task, for she was aware that this hero of her's, loved truth better than anything else, and the fairest face, if it covered a falsehood, would be less than nothing to him.

"As for your question, I think, Miss Gordon, that armor does not make the knight, yet every one of us who does a noble deed wears it." His eyes grew thoughtful and wandered away from her, while a very tender smile lit the dark face. . "It was Miss Moore who made the assertion that every true knight wore armor, and I was anxious to know if every one else thought so too." "Miss Moore's theories are generally true, I believe," said Weare slowly, "and I judge she draws many of her ideas from self-experience." Bee laughed very merrily, and her companion already regretted the few words he had allowed himself to say about Miss Moore.

Just then Miss Gordon was solicited for a song, and Weare offered her his arm to go to the piano. When half way down the room he passed a group off her companion with a withering of fair women with Linnet Moore in look. the midst, and the single glance he had from her dark eye made him take a step nearer.; but she turned away in time to recall him to a realization

He stood by the piano and turned over the leaves of Miss Gordon's music; but as soon as possible after she left the piano, he disengaged himself and crossed the room to where Linnet Moore still stood.

and Weare could get no nearer than the outer edge of the charming circle. He stood there patiently and waited for a change of movement. Finally, when his patience was nearly exhausted, the group broke up, and he went the deed, and almost directed his at once to Linnet's side.

"I have been waiting for you all the evening," he said in a deprecatory tone; "I wanted you to walk with tone; me. Did you ever see such beautiful heavens?" he continued, throwing back the curtain and letting it drop again behind them.

"Whon did we over see a night that "I wish I could believe it," he said, under his breath. "You can feel it if you will, Weare Duncan, for the truth is easier of comprehension to you than to most of you did not love me."

He had thrown a light, fleecy shawl over her shoulders and would have drawn her arm through his own, but she drew back and said, with a little thrill of regret in her voice, "Not tonight, Mr. Duncan; it is late, and I must go up stairs;" and she was gone before he could offer any remonstrance, flitting up the wide staircase with a grace of motion that Berentje Gordon sccretly envied. Berentje Gordon was an only child and heiress, with no wish denied her selfish soul, vet she acknowleded to Miss Moore that night that she was envious and unhappy. Linnet did not question her, for she knew that Mrs. Gordon's governess would be repulsed if she did more than listen to Bee's complaints.

Linnet sighed as she reached her own room; for she saw yet the stea. dy, luminous eyes bent on her own, and heard the even, kindly voice that had such power to stir her pulse to a quicker beat. "God give me the strength to do right," she exclaimed, "yet how un-certain and helpless I feel to-night!" She stood by the window, locked in thought for a long hour, her memory telling her two stories—one sad, one sweet, and the choice which she would hear, no longer her's to make. First, there was the record of a life of sorrow and trouble at home: of the darkest time of all, when her own brother had lifted his hand against his friend and the day's dawn had seen him an exile from his father's door; then the death of her father a month later, from dispair at his boy's wrong doing; then the unhappy day when her brother returned to visit his father's grave, and was found by the one man who had seen him give the murderous blow. Then it was, and not until it was made the pledge of his secrecy and her brother's safety, that she promised to marry George Parshall. In the light of this latter memory how she hated the man! "God forgive me," she murmured over and over again, "but my lot is harder than I can bear."

She had written to him that she ed him to free her from the engagement, and still respect his promise; and he had written in return that his love was a love "for life or death." and he should come to claim his wife a week from that time.

"How she shuddered at the thought! Only two days more and the you must be kept! The next day and the day after, Linnet Moore avoided Weare Duncan, refusing even to let her eye meet his own, fearful lest it should reveal to him a love which it would soon be a sin to acknowledge even to her own soul.

At twilight he saw her go down the path that led through the woods to the little town beyond them; and resolving to take the opportunity she would not grant him, he left the house to follow her footsteps. He lost sight of her, though, and was hurrying blindrentje Gordon's greatest temptation; ly along the path, when an eager

Was the woman and most of her friends would have he had loved unworthy, after all? for do, for Weare Duncan was unusually Gordon had never been to him more than a beautiful picture, and that his whole life was centered in Linnet

Moore. "Darling Linnet! You have come at last! The moments shall be very few before you are my wife, bound so fast to me that no one can take you from me." "Oh, George, let me go. I cannot marry you!"

"What do you say, Linnet Moore?" "Be merciful, as you hope for mercy yourself some day. I do not love you, and marriage vows will be lies to kill my soul."

"I do not care! You have given me your promise." . "But I tell you I do not love you. God only can keep me from hating

"Pretty gratitude that is! · Why, at a word of mine, your petted brother, good Guy Lindley would be apprehended and swing for the crime he committed!"

"What assurance have I that the man died? You have not even told me the name of the man you say my brother murdered."

With one bound Weare Duncan was beside her, holding her in his arms, close to his breast, while he warned

"You know me," he said in a low voice full of suppressed passion, "and do not let me find you here after tonight." Then he turned to Linnet, who had freed herself from his embrace and stood there white but resolute. "Call him back, Mr. Duncan; I am to be his wife." "He has lied to you, dear Linnet, and I never knew Guy Lindley was your brother." "He is my step-brother." "Well, come home, and write him to come back. I am the man he shot: see here is the mark," lifting the dark, curling locks from his brow, "but that villain encouraged him in arm." Linnet sank on her knees to the ground: "God forgive me! I will never distrust Him again!" Weare Duncan raised her gently and said: "May I kiss you, Linnet? Are these lips mine?" She hid-her face a moment, and was not beautiful," said Linnet, soft- | then raised to his, glowing with a new;

drew her shawl close about her, and said, "Come home. Linnet." "Oh, Weare, how good you are to me. I think my heart would break if

"And who should I love, and to whom should I be good, if not to you, my own dear love? "And will you always love methen i Is my life to be happy now?"

"It shall be a happy one hence-forth, dear Linnet, if I can make it Then they walked slowly home through the fast falling twilight, though to both of them the path seemed fairer than the path of the daylight, warmer than the way of the sunshine. Linnet wrote the letter to her brother that night, and Weare Duncan sat by the same table, now and then leaning over to suggest some little word of friendship and good feeling until the letter grew to be a very lengthy one.

Bee came in with a book, meantime. and paused a moment by Linnet's side, to see what she was doing. She saw that and something else that drove other thoughts quite out of her mind. The heavy ring of frosted gold upon Linnet's fore finger caught her eye, and she turned quickly away, with a careless, defiant look on her face, but something suspiciously like a tear glistening on her golden brown lashes. Guy Lindley came home, and is to this day a welcome guest at Weare Duncan's fireside; and Linnet is Linnet still to her brother and her fond and devoted husband.

One of the greatest misfortunes of the world has been, and is now, either to despise all labor, attempting to live without t, or to make false dividuous distinctions in regard to its varied forms. We desire to put these two classes—the labor despising and those who make false distinctions in regard to labor-upon the same level: yet it cannot be denied that the latter class, by their false standard of dignity, work great mischief, both to themselves and the community. The labor-despisers are wholly a worthless class. They are worse than simple drones. They are the class that hang around the street corners and low whisky dives, or congregate in brilliant saloons, gorgeous and attractive to fashionable dissipations. But whether in broadcloth, or rags, in linsey or wolsey, or satins, in cellars or parlors, they are pests of society, candidates for the poorrouse, prisons and gallows.

Chicago Customs. The Experience of a Chicago Lawyer— The Banger of Interfering Between Man and Wife.

Watching ever lest tares with it grow.

rrespondence of the Mobile Register. NEW YORK, July 20, 1869. I think I remarked in my last letter that once met a Chicago lawyer who warmly advocated marriage, and who explained to me his reason for so doing. For such a man to advocate such a thing was, to say the least, surprising; and I listened with breathless interest while he gave me a brief history of his experience during the first 10 years of his residence in that celebrated city.

Said he: "I first came to Chicago 15 years ago. Then I was young and innocent, which it is hardly necessary for me to say that I am not at present. I had a friend living here, whom I had known while he resided in New York, and conducted himself like a civilized man in a civilized community. As he had written to me to visit immself and his wife, when I came to Chicago. I remembered the invitation when I did visit that city, and immediately on my arrival proceeded to his house. He was not at home at the moment, and so I asked to see his wife, whom I had known only a year before in New York. In answer to my inquiry for Mrs. De Vorse, a pretty, black-eyed girl came into the drawing-room, and received me quite warmly.

Well, we chatted very pleasantly together until my friend came in, and I really felt myself beginning to experience a very affectionate impulse toward her; supposing, of course, that she was his niece, or cousin, or uncle, or something of that sort. But in the course of the evening I surplus of the revenue is used to diminish asked him if his wife was at home, and if the principal of the debt, and the burden so, when he proposed to let me see her? of interest is lessened in consequence. The To my astonishment, he replied, 'This | fall trade sets in anon and should be brisk lady is Mrs. De Vorse! I thought you remunerative, and consoling.—Detroit Post.

were already aware of the fact.'
Of course I blushed and felt horribly uncomfortable, and said that I was not aware that he had lost poor Emily.
"O," said he, "Emily is very well, and has married a parner of mine. We were divorced, you know, about six months ago, and I married my present wife last Well, I didn't feel quite so affectionate toward her after that, for I had been warmly attached to Emily; but we said no more about the matter, and I went away vowing never to get myself into such scrape again by asking after anybody's wife. I did not see my friend's new wife for about a month alterwards, until one day I met her in the house of a mutual acquaintance, and, in the course of conversation, said to her: "By the way, might I ask you to say to your husband that I want him to come to my office some day next week." "I don't think you know my husband," she replied, smilingly.

"What do you mean?" said I, getting rather nervous. "Why, my new husband is named Smith," she answered. I was separated from Mr. De Vorse yesterday morning, and married Mr. Smith last night." I left that house pretty rapidly, and registered a second vow to the effect that I would never to my dying day, ask a Chicago lady about her husband again. The two mistakes I had already made, as to Chicago wives and husbands, made me decidedly shy of them. But the very next day I went into De Vorse's store (corn pork and provisions), and found him engaged in conversation with a terribly angular female, who looked like a compound of a New England old maid, a western woman's rights lecturer, and an Arkansas squatter's wife. Of course I pitied my friend, and, when the terrible female had departed, remarked: "I congratulate you on your escape; that horrible female would have exhausted any man's patience in ten minutes' conversation." What was my horror when he replied: "I must beg you to speak more respectfully of that lady; she is at present my wife—a fact of which you are, of course, unaware, as we were married very privately last night."

I never said a word, but fled abruptly from his presence. Once more I swore and I went before a Notary, who had the biggest kind of a Bible, so as to make the oath more binding—that never, never would I speak disparagingly of any Chicago woman to any Chicago man. After that I felt better, and for two weeks, avoided making any more mistakes. At the end of that time, however, I met the new and angular Mrs. De Vorse, to whom I had, in the meantime, been introduced, having the liveliest kind of a quarrel with a big, prize-fighting looking fellow, who was apparently on the point of knocking her down. Of course I flew to her rescue, and demanded to know of the fellow what he meant; also if he was aware who that lady was, and who her husband was? To which he briefly, sententiously, but, as I paid no further attention to him, but turning to Mrs. De Voise, said: 'Madam! permit me to protect you from that ruffian's insolence."

Instead of thanking me, she actually slapped my face, and said. 'I'll teach you to interfere between man and wife. That's my husband, and we've been married three days. It's, a pretty hard thing if a wife can't stop in the street to speak to her

The Crops of the Year.

The warm and luscious sunshine of Sep-and ripens the last of the great cropsthat of corn—has fairly commenced its outpouring. If no sudden chill or unexpected winter shall "come down with the rush of a storm," and harvest the crop in a single night with the sharp blade of Jack Frost, it will probably prove to be, contrary to general expectations, an average crop. The wheat and other kindred grains are now gathered into barns, and peaches and pears and grapes crown the cornucopia of the affluent year with a beautiful and healthful garniture. To the granesy, and, in consequence, to the treasury of the nation, nature this year has generously contributed its revenue of nourishment for the thirty-five millions of people dependent upon its bounty. The Southern fields, white with the mimic snow of the cotton, have been lar more loyal than their owners, and have yielded their share to sustain the nation and replenish the common purse. Three Million bales of cotton, worth Three Hundred Millions of dollars, or one eighth of the national debt; Three Hundred Million bushels of corn, worth Two Hundred Million dollars; One Hundred and Fifty Million dollars worth of tobacco, of sugar, and of wheat, amounting in all to Six flundred and Fifty Millions of dollars, or one-fourth the national debt, are the lavish product of a soil as yet but half tilled, and with its magnificent resources sadly neglected. The total value of all the principal crops in the country-Eight Hundred Million bushels of corn, Three Hundred Million bushels of wheat, Two Hundred and Seventy-five Million bushels of oats, and Three hundred Million bales of cotton,-will be Fifteen Hundred Million of dollars, or three-fifths of the national debt. Cheap food, cheap clothing, with increased transportation and travel, -ought to make the prospects of the next twelve months anything but discouraging. The

To Holders of U.S. Bonds.

We did all we could, through the long and trying years of Civil War, to induce every patriot to lend the Government every dollar he could spare. We believe those who did so deserved well of their country-that their aid in putting down the Rebellion was as essential, though not so glorious, as that of the volunteers-and we are inflexibly hostile to any and every scheme which contemplates defrauding them out of their honest dues.

We now ask the bond-holders to favor the Government by presenting their bonds for redemption or purchase under the propositions of the Secretary of the Treasury, who wants to buy Twelve Millions the present month, whatever he may do There is danger that the great mass of bond holders may prefer to keep . their

There are not many bonds left n the hands of our great brokers, and they are inclined to exact high prices or not sell. The main supply must come from the smaller holders; and we exort them not to withhold it. The Five-Twenties now command about 120. We doubt that they can be much higher in Greenbacks, though they

Some years ago he engaged in a difficulty with a man named Hunt, whom he killed. They had been friends from their childhood, and up to the day of the fatal affray had never felt for each other aught but friendship and kindness. It is said of them, too, that they had shared many perils, and bonds of sympathy linked them by stronger ties than usually cements ordinary friends. But a trifling dispute occurred, and in a moment of intemperate passion the fatal thrust was given, and his old friend lay dead at his feet. For months he hovered on the verge of the grave, and when he at last recovered it was: with the impression that the ghost of his friend, clad in grave clothes, was ever at his side. D. A. WAGNER, Editor. THURSDAY MORNING, SEPT. 16, 1869. And the second s GOVERNMENT EXPENSES.

It will be gratifying to all to know that our government is greatly reducing its expenditures. The following statement makes a good showing for the present Administration: "The warrant books of the Treasury Department show that the expenditures of the government for the fiscal year just ended were less $585 .-000,000, as against $1,070,000,000 for the year before, and nearly as low as 1862. The actual expenses of the military branch of the War Department during the fiscal year previous to the one ending June 30 last, were $120,000,000, while for that year they were not quite $80,500,000. The Navy Department expenses for the year ending June. 1868, were over $30,-000,000, while for the last fiscal year they have reached only about 23,500,-000. The expenses of the Treasury Department increased $9,000,000 while those of the Interior Depart-

United States." It will be remembered that for a large share of the last fiscal year, the Administration was under Johnson and his horde of government bloodsuckers. If this had not been the case, still greater reduction would have been made. The showing, however, is decidedly satisfactory, under the circumstances, and with confidence the people may look to still greater reductions in the public expenditures.

COME TO TIME. Some inquiry has been aroused by the omission of the State of New York, from the list of States, officially announced, recently, by the State Department at Washington, as having ratified the Fifteenth Amendment. It appears that investigation has led to the discovery that it was a trick of the New York Democracy to prevent any official notification of the ratification to reach Washington, in hopes that perchance a Democratic majority, next winter, might repeal the ratification of the Legislature last winter. The inquiry, however, has had the desired effect of compelling Gov. Hoffman, even at this late day, to send to Washington the proper official notice of the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment, by the Legislature of

New York. When party a is driven to such extreme measures of fraud to defeat any measure, it must tell with crushing weight against such party. Instead of the Democracy of New York gain- The negro not obeying, Davidson pulled away the scaffolding and let him fall to the floor. ing in the esteem of the people, this act of trickery will cost the party the loss of many friends.

CIRCUIT JUDGESHIP.

In consequence of the death of Hon. N. Bacon there occurs a vacancy in the Judgeship of this (Second) Judicial Circuit. In such case it devolves upon the Governor to fill the vacancy by appointment. The office is an important one; and one that should not be acted upon hastily. It is an appointment that has much to do with the welfare of the people. It is to be hoped therefore, that Governor Baldwin will duly consider any recommendation that may be brought to his notice for the position. Let the good of the people be kept in view, and let a man of integrity be selected for the

The Governor, however, may order a special election, to fill the vacancy, instead of making an appointment. In such case the choice would devolve upon the voters of the District. Whether the vacancy shall be filled by appointment or election, let the best interest of the citizens of the District be the great desideratum in making the selection.

DEATH OF SENATOR FESSENDEN. Senator Fessenden, of Maine, died on the morning of the 8th. His death takes from the United States Senate one of its most prominent and active members, as well as one of its oldest. From a two column article in the Chicago Tribune, on the late Senator, we clip the following:

"Senator Fessenden has been so long and prominently connected with public affairs, and his name has been associated with so many great events, that his death seems almost to great events, that his death seems almost to close a chapter in the nation's history. Fifteen years ago he entered the Senate of the United States, and almost immediately became one of the marked men in a body which counted Everett, Seward, Clayton, Collamer, Chase, and Douglas, and a remarkably brilliant galaxy of slaveholders, among its members. Mr. Sumner and Mr. Hamlin are now the only members who were also members when Mr. Fessenden first took his seat. During his term of service many revolutions have taken place. The whig party ceased to exist as a national organization, the Missouri Compromise was repealed; the Kansas and Nebraska struggle took piace; the Southern States seeded; the rebellion was overthrown, slavery abolished, and reconstruction effected. In all these great events Mr. Fersenden has been a conspicuous figure, and in some of them the most conspicuous. During late years he has borne so distinguished and useful a part that to many people the Senate of the United States will seem to be an essentially changed body when it meets without him."

THE POWELL EXPEDITION. The Salt Lake City News of Sept. 7th has the following, relative to the Powell expedition: By the courtesy of William B. Dongall, Esq., of the Desert Telegraph Line, we learn that the Powell expedition, concerning the supposed loss of which there was so much excitement a few weeks since, arrived safely at the mouth of the Rio Virgin, on the Colorado River on the 30th ult. Major J. W. Powell himself had arrived at St George in good health, and expects to reach this city en roude to his home East in a few days. It is interesting to know that all that is necessary to the success of the expedition was saved at the time the boat was lost, of which accident mention has been made in river up to about the point where Major Powell has landed, and the Major has doubtless given it a thorough examination from the place where he launched upon its waters.

Gen. Canby has issued a proclamation announcing the result of the election in Virginia. Three Congressmen of the Wells party, and six of the Walker party, are declared elected. Walker will be installed as Governor on the 21st inst.

THE AVONDALE COAL MINE DISAS-

TER.

The loss of life in the Avondale mine, is happily much less than at first supposed. The mine has been fully explored, and all the dead have been taken therefrom. The total number was 110, instead of over two hundred, as at first reported. The widows are reported at 59 and the orphans, in this country, at 109. The disaster. though not so great, as at first reported, is truly appalling; and calls loudly for some steps to be taken whereby such accidents may be avoided in Indianapolis Correspondence.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 6, 1869. Editor Record:—Having just returned from a visit in the north part of our State, and looking with no little interest on crops along the line, I hasten to tell your readers a few of my observations: Along the line of the Cincinnati and Lafayette R. R. the corn crop is in a few localities-where the land was rolling or elevated-pretty good, but, of course, does not come up quite to the average. Between Lafayette and Michigan City, the corn is almost a total failure. The heavy and continued rains in the spring, kept the ground too wet to cultivate, and but a very little will be worth harvesting. On Terre Coupee, in St. Joseph county, it is much the same, although I noticed some fields that would yield pretty well, and some that had not been touched since it was planted. I learned, however, while in St. Joseph Co., of a gentleman who had traveled over the counties of Elkhart, and St.

Joseph, east of South Bend, that the corn fields in that region would very nearly reach the average.

The wheat has been nearly all thrashed in this section, and run into market in such quantities as to fill up all warehouses, and cause almost a blockade on all the railroad lines leading into this city; making the m clination to buy considerable less, as dealers do not like to hold any longer than they can help, with no prospect of an advance in the market. The railroads have not sufficient rolling stock to carry off the freight on hand. Wheat, red, is selling here for $1.10. Murders seem for a few days back to be too frequent for a civilized community, to say nothing of a city with 70,000 inhabitants. But a few days ago, a man by the name of Fanning, stabbed another man named Dorney, killing him in a few min-

This morning, about nine o'clock, a diff ficulty occurred between a white and a black man, in which the colored man was shot dead on the spot. The Daily Evening

Mirror gives the following particulars;

"This morning a little after nine o'clock, a cold-blooded murder was committed in this city by a man named George Davidson, his viccity by a man named George Davidson, his victim being an inoffensive negro man named John Fleet. Davidson is a carpenter in the employ of Peter Routier, and has been employed on the building in Maryland street which is being erected by Mart Hare, and which was to escene of the murder. The negro was employed in the same building for the purpose of whitewashing the interior walls, and was at work this morning in the room adjoining Holland, Ostermyer & Co.'s, using a scaffold which belonged to itsutier. Davidson came in with a mixtol and ordered him down from the scaffold. pistol and ordered him down from the scaffold. The negro rose and advanced towards him, but had not made more than a step or two, when he was shot through the head and fell dead!

The coroner's jury rendered the following verdict:
"We, the jury, find that the deceased, John Fleet, came to his death by a pistol shot which took effect in the upper portion of the right brain, and that the shot was fired by one Geo. Davidson, and that the act was premeditated and malicious."

"Davidson was arrested and lodged in jail. The feeling against him is very strong, as it is believed he had no provocation, or cause to fear any personal harm from the deceased.
"We learn that he is from the South, and is imbued with those chivalrous principles which make the killing of a negro of no consequence in his eyes, Without any desire to prejudice his case, we may be allowed to express our desire that he will find out before long that no man's life may be taken with impunity in this country. These indiscriminate murders must have an end in this city, even if hanging has to be resorted to."

The trial of Wm. J. Abrams, charged with aiding Mrs. Clem, in the murder of Mr. and Mrs. Young, about a year ago, near Cold Springs, closed the sixth day, this evening. Mrs. Clem. your readers will remember, was convicted and sent to the Penitentiary by this court last winter, after two trials. It is thought Abram's trial will be concluded this week.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Manistee Banker. From the Manistee Tribune, Sept. 9 Last Monday the citizens of this city were shocked by the sudden disappearance of Mr. Herbert Field, of the firm of Vanderpool & Fold, bankers, in this place. The last seen of him was on Monday about noon, and his friends know nothing of his whereabouts. On Saturduy evening, previous to his departure, the firm had dissolved partnership, and the firm ac-counts were satisfactorily arranged, and Mr. Vanderpool was to continue the business. He took his funds and other valuables, and put them into the burglar-proof drawer, inside of the large safe, allowing Mr. Field to use the other department of the safe, which was lock-ed so that aither could open it. About 11 o'-clock Sunday morning they were both in the bank together, and drew up a receipt in full, which was witnessed by W. D. Ramsdell and A. W. Smith, in Mr. Smith's store, adjoining the bank. Some arrangements were then made between them to meet there the following morning, and Mr. Vanderpool then went to his

Monday morning came, and Mr. Vanderpool went to the bank and commenced cleaning up, and expected Mr. Field to come and help him, as previously arranged. He continued his work until finished, when upon opening the safe, he found Mr. Field's money and papers missing, and the balance of the safe undisturbed, After taking out his effects, it seems Mr. Field closed the safe again, locking it with the same combination as had been done the day previous by both of them. Mr. Vanderpool at once made the slarm and made all the inquiries he could concerning Mr. Field's whereabouts, but was unable to discover any tidings of him. An aunt of Mr. Field lives in the south part of the city, with whom Mr. Field was boarding, and who is very anxious about him. On Mon-and who is very anxious about him. On Monday it was discovered that $2,200 was deposited in Messra, Willard, Hall & Co.'s safe, and this his aunt took charge of.

On Wednesday morning the excitement had become so intense that the citizens organized and searched the river to find the body if possible. The building in which the bank is situated, was thoroughly searched for any trace of him, and in the search a discovery has been made which fastens suspicion upon his paragrap. Mr Vandernool. We hope, and trust partner, Mr Vanderpool: We hope, and trust is will not prove true, although everybody seems to be of one opinion. The circumstances are these: They were both last seen at the bank. Mr. Field is not known to have left the bank after Mr. Vanderpool says they were to-gether. Parties who visited the bank on Wednesday say they saw something like stains of blood upon the floor. Mr. Yanderpool as previously stated, went to the bank very early in the morning, about half past five o'clock—a pretty early hour for a banker to commence erubbing and cleaning out the bank. It is previous communications from him, and that his trip has been a successful one. The Colorado River has now received a thorough expet took as if considerable scrabbing and cleaning out the bank. It is said that there are holes in the carpet, and a small portion of it is not to be found. The stains on the floor through the holes in the carpet look as if considerable scrabbing had been ploration. Licutement Ives explored the done to remove them. Some of the spots look as if ink had been put on them to gover the stain. On the steps, outside of the building, blood was found on Monday, which had not yet become dry.

These circumstances, we are corry to say, look very dark indeed. Mr. Vanderpool has given himself up to the authorities, and asks that justice may be done, though he denies any A reward of $300 has been offered, and the authorities have taken possession of the bank, and are expecting to do justice to all.

The Eric Railway earned $17,348,355 during the 11 months ending September 1st, 1869.

Representation in 1879. The census of 1870 will cause some important changes. In 1840 the west was represented in Congress by thirty members; after 1870 it will have eighty-two. In the eastern States a very different result will be produced. These States in 1840 tation will be but twenty two after 1870. In 1846, the Atlantic eastern States, as had thirty eight members; their represendivided from the southern, had one hundred and ninteen Congressmen; after 1870 it will have but eighty-six. More than one-third of the next House of Representatives elected after the census of 1870 will be from the west, and, united to the southwest, will constitute a clear majority of the members of that body as well as the Presidential electors. When the census shall be taken and apportionment made for the first time in accordance with it, the South will have a full representation upon the negroes instead of three fifths of them as now and heretolore. By this the south will gain at least thirteen members.

The County Fair.

Our readers, and the citizens of Berrien County generally, will re-member that the County Fair comes potatoes, cattle, sheep, hogs, poultry, and a thousand other things which we have not the space to mention. Suffice it to say that we can confidently assure all who attend the Fair that they will be amply repaid for so

The announcement of the death of Hon. Nathaniel Bacon, Judge of this (2d) Judicial Circuit, was wholly unlooked for. He died of Apoplexy, at his residence in Niles, on Thursday night last. The day before, (Wednesday), he had just closed a term of Court at Berrien, and on the day of his death he was apparently as well as usual. He died at about 10 P. M., being taken with an apoplectic attack about an hour before. Judge Bacon had gained a large circle of friends since his residence in Niles, which was since 1833. He came to Berrien County from Rochester, N. Y., and for the first twenty-six years of his and save money by patronizing the residence here he was a practicing the lawver. For the residence here he was a practicing lawyer. For ten years past he has filled the office of Circuit Judge, being thrice elected to that position. His death will be keenly felt among a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The funeral services took place in Niles, on last Lord's day, Having leased the new and commodique Hotel (the Reading House) for a term of years, I shall be pleased to see any of my old friends, and as many new ones as may see fit to call on me in my new quarters. Where they will be dealt with on the same terms as while in the Bond House.

There are new and commodicus harns and sheds attached with a good Ostler in attendance. The Telegraph, Express and Stage Offices have also been removed to this house, and there will be no pains spared to make guests feel at home. Special attention will be paid to pleasure parties. 29m3. Some Years since a poor but talented gentleman of the medical profession conceived the idea, that if he could produce a medicine of universal application and extraordinary merit, and make it known, he could not only enrich himself and escape the drudgery of a Physicians life, but also benefit the sick in a great measure than by his private practice. He, therefore, consulted with the best physicians he could find and the result was the produc-

After dinner, order was resto ed again, and the Rev. Mr. Castle addressed the children, in one of his happiest moods. While he was speaking of the children's character, and the different ways in which people are known, I am sure that more than one little boy and girl, must liave recognized themselves in the "cont that was too long or too short, or the dress that was too old, or out of tashion." Many apt ilinstrations he drew, which carried their essons to the children.

Thursday.

When the speaker had finished, an hour or more was pleasantly passed, in listening to the music of the Band, and the singing of the Schools, which had prepared them selves for the occasion. Those who listened to the singing of "In the Sweet By and By," of the Long Lake S. S., will not soon forget their feelings, as their thoughts were carried by the sentiments of that beautiful song, to the time "When we shall meet at the river."

Other Schools sang their favorite pieces, and as the sweet harmony of their voices floated out among the forest trees, borne by the breezes, "Heaven's sweet whisper," as Speaker Ford poetically expressed it. we could not help feeling how good it is to live in a Bible land, and in the enjoyment of Christian privileges.

To the Maple Grove S. S. under the direction of its able Sup't, belongs much of praise, being the first in the movement, and taking upon themselves the preparation of the Grounds for the Pic nic. The ntmost harmony and good feeling, to be remembered for the holding of the Union S. S. Pic-nic. Trip Through Northern Berrien County. Mr. Editor:-Having taken a short trip through the northern part of our county, and thinking it might be of interest to a portion of your readers, I send you a short account of it. Leaving Three Oaks in the afternoon, much amused at a sign, a curious sign; it consisted of a complete buggy and driver, and was placed prominent upon the roof of a building.

A few miles more through a pleasant country, brought us to Hill's Corners, consisting of a hill and corners. We saw some fine fields of corn, in spite of the wet weather with which they had been deluged. Arriving at Berrien, we were pleased at the pleasant views with which the village abounds. Nature has supplied it with many advantages, and not in vain; for its inhabitants have, and are improving it much. The dwellings are in good repair, well painted, and have a neat appear-

Through the kindness of Mr. Lord, we were shown through the old Jail Building, and were convinced that the new one was a much needed improvement. Passing into the building occupied by the county officers, we found our fellow townsman, Mr. Hess, on duty, in the room used as Treasurer's office. It was well furnish ed, and seemed very convenient. We also called into the Recorder's office, and were kindly entertained by Mr. Dix. A pleasant ride of about two miles from Berrien, brought us to the County Poor farm, consisting of 160 acres of land, mostly cleared, and under a good state of cul-The County House is fast progressing, under the superintendence of Mr. Ireland, who is attending to it in a very satisfactory manner. The building is sixty feet square, three stories high, with cupola above. It is built of brick, with stone foundation. The rooms are to be warmed by steam. When finished, it will be very substantial, of neat appearance, and well calculated, for the purpose and place which We were quite interested, and some-

Driving into St. Joseph next evening, we found the Hotels full, and even told that the city was filled with strangers. Many from abroad were stopping there, both on business and pleasure. It being in the midst of the fruit season, many steamers are running daily across the lake to Chicago and Milwaukee.

In looking about the country the following day, in the vicinity of both St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, we were surprised at the beautiful appearance of the orchards, filled with various kinds of fruit. We had heard much about the fruit region, but our expectations were more than realized. But although surrounded with peaches, we saw while there not a single person eating

Leaving St. Joseph, by the road that leads south, along the lake shore, the street lined on either side, with neat dwellings, s::rrounded with fruit, we came to the ground where the workmen were busy building the foundation of the Chicago and Lake Shore R. R. They were grading a cut from near the lake shore to the table land above. The work is apparently being well done, and is rapidly progressing.

For several miles the land is nearly all devoted to fruit. Among the finest farms was the Model Fruit Farm, and that of Dr. Pettitts, which were well laid out and arranged with all kinds of fruit, among which was a splendid variety of pears and Arriving at home in due season, we felt more than repaid for our trip, in the amount of pleasure we had enjoyed, and the knowledge we had gained.

The School House Question. TO THE EDITOR OF THE RECORD :- The very rapid progress of the educational interests of Michigan, during the last fifteen years, has been manifest in no other way so apparent as in the general excellence and beauty of the external arrangements made for our common schools. To the intelligent traveler through our State, it is the most attractive feature of the towns and cities through which he is hurried. It has passed into an accepted truth; "The glory of Michigan is her school-houses." I have been especially gratified to no-tice that in a recent publication of the National Department of Education, on School Architecture, three illustrations of model school-buildings are furnished by Michigan, while no other State (except Mass. Church, for all purposes, the past year and Tenn.), furnishes more than two, and many of the States, none. And so long ago as 1848, when Dr. Barnard published his large work on School Architecture,

Michigan was the only State west of the Alleghanies, that supplied an illustration for its pages. Now, without any special concern in Buchanan's affairs, except as 'a citizen of Berrien county, and particularly interested in the development of popular education, I venture to think that your enterprising and attractive village should contribute its share to the "glory of Michigan." I am often on the trains that pass your place, and observe with pleasure the unwonted interest with which travelers view it-the fertile valley, and the rich fields spread away before them. No other scene on the Michigan Central, is so fair to the eye. There are churches, in unusual number, splendidly advertising the town; there are factories and mills; stately rows of business houses and pretty dwellings, peeping from their sylvan shades, in abundance but where is the fine school-house, which

We were here school house, and maintain first-class schools. They add value to every bit of real estate in and about the town; they bring to the population numbers of intelligent emigrants and people of the wealthier class from the country, who wish to re-tire from the farm, and educate their children. The public schools of Niles have added scores of valuable citizens, and many thousands of wealth to its census-roll and resources.

The main argument, however, is found in the building now occupied. One or two of its rooms are little better than pesthouses, summer or winter. All are shabby, and quite unfit for use, as I know, from frequent visitation. The unhealthful and inconvenient overcrowding, is too notorious to need mention. Not even an excel lent Principal, seconded by some of the best subordinates in the State, can redeem these things. There are other considerations, I would press, were I a citizen of Buchanan. But.

Permit me however to hope that the "lamp of sacrifice," which has so long been burning for your churches, will shortly be lighted for your schools. The Union S. S. Pic-nic at Ean Claire. EAU CLAIRE, MICH., Sept. 6, 1869. EDITOR RECORD :- On receipt of this week's Record, I looked over the correspondents' column, expecting to see an article headed as above, "The Union S. S.

Pic-nic." But modesty, or the press of more important business, must have hindered others from giving you an account of this pleasant affair, which, in the extent of its appointments, its numbers, and the pleasures and interests which have been awakened by it, has not been equaled in this part of the county. On the 10th of July, a convention was held in this Township, and attended by those who telt a warm interest in the Sunday School cause. The result of the meeiing was, to appoint the 25th of August as the day, and the grove, near Thomas Marrs' mill as the place, in which to hold

Schools in this vicinity; able speakers were invited, and preparations made to make the Pic-nic one long to be remembered by those connected with the The 25th of August was ushered in—a lovely day—although quite warm, it was still quite pleasant; and, if there be anything in the feeling, that Providence sometimes smiles on our efforts, we truly felt this morning, that Heaven's blessings would attend us in the good work. It was not long before the various S. Schools, each bearing banners, bearing beautiful mottos, expressive of the sentiment of the school, were on their way to the Grove. On arriving near the Pic-nic Grounds, the several schools were halted by the Marshals, until the Downgiac Cornet Band, in their beautiful Turnout,' accompanied by a company of mounted ladies and gentlemen, could come out and escori us to the Grounds. · On arriving there, the Schools were each assigned a table prepared for them, which was soon spread with the bounties provided for the occasion. But before par taking of the enjoyments of the table, we were called to listen to the address of the While the pleasures of eating and drinking, are necessary to our existence, and occupy a large portion of our time, yet they perish with the using, and often do not satisfy the body, much less the mind desirous of being fed on such things as will awaken, to a deeper consciousness of the duties of this life and of the life to come. Those who were desirous of being benefitted in this way, could not help being interested in the remarks of our County Sup't of Education, Mr. H. A. Ford, although he regretted the press of business, the heated weather, and the close office, which were altogether unfavorable for the study necessary to enter deeply into a work of this kind; yet he gave us much that was interesting and useful. Showing, among other things, the necessity of the Sabbath School; how that it was an outgrowth of the desire for intellectual improvement, especially of our moral nature. He spoke of its ancient origin, of its early and modern history, and the great work it was accomplishing, in the preparation of the mind for the scenes of Time and Eternity. As we looked around on the assembled thousands, representing, perhaps, nearly all the popular sects of the day, we could not help feeling how true the speaker's remarks were, when he spoke of the barriswept away, permitting Christians, though of different denominations, to meet together, on common ground, for the common good, Mr. Ford retired, leaving the impression, that he is a man of warm feeling, and that his soul is earnestly engaged in the work of elevating and improving the mind of his fellow man.

After the speech, the various Schools were formed in procession, and marched with music to their respective tables, and

The Inspiration of the Bible. Seeing a man reject the inspiration of the Scripture, while he said he maintained his belief in Jesus Christ and his redemphad a costly pertume in a glass vessel, thinking that he can at the same time pre-serve the perfume, but he loses it all. Set too great to be in the least prejudiced by tion, I had compared him to some one who aside the inspiration of the Scriptures, and all the Christain doctrine will disappear. This is not a theory—I have seen it to be a fact; therefore the question is to be one of the greatest importance. I am not ignorant of the objections, of the difficulties that are raised, but the plemtude of the Divinity to be found in the Scriptures is them. I say from the depth of my heart, "Thy Word is Truth." Not to believe that the Bible is God's message, is voluntarily to deprive oneself of all true, wholesome, well-founded knowledge about God and our future state. It is returning to darkness-it is to ruin our own prospects, and perhaps also the welfare of many others with us .- Merle D'Aubigne.

No Guile in Jesus.

Beautiful words those-no guile-nothing ever susceptible of mistake, or desire to conceal. How clearly he declares, when speaking of the rest of Heaven, "If it were not so I would have told you" implying that truth would have obliged him even to correct their anticipations, if false, as well as to unfold the revelation of eternal life. Think of him in the busy scenes of the market and the temple, sitting at the Pharisce's banquet, and eating at the Pharican's table, yet ever and always revealing hidden hypocrisy and interpreting the sign of forgivness and peace. -True in what he said: true in what he threatened: true in what he promised; true in what he corrected; true in what he revealed.

Prejudice.

How many of our opinions are influenced by early bias; how few of us can claim that we are free from the taint of prejudice? It is the enemy of truth, the chief obstacle to science and philosophy, the foe of reason. It is a veil which clouds perception, a moral narcotic which stapeties conscience. It blinds judges and dafeets the administration or justice. It is the parent of intolerance and bigotry. It enables unprincipled men to rise to dangerous eminence, and is the most essential and potent bulwark of oppression in every land. Its eradication cannot be too early or earnests. It is the enemy of truth, the chief obstacle eradication cannot be too early or earnestly sought for by those who would inculcate The highest price paid for all kinds of COUNsound economic principles among the TRY PRODUCE.

Times Teaching.

Time has a wonderful power in taking the conceit out of persons. When a young man first emerges from school and enters upon the career of life, it is painfully amusing to witness his self-sufficiency. He would have all the world to know that he has "learned out"—that he is master of all knowledge and can unravel all mysteries. knowledge and can unravel all mysteries. But as he grows older, he grows wiser, he learns that he knows a great deal less than he supposed he did; and by the time he reaches three score years he is prepared to adopt as his own the sentiments of John Wesley: "When I was young, I was sure of everything, in a few years, having heap mirtaless theread times." having been mistaken a thousand times, I was not half as sure of most things as I was before. At present I am hardly sure of anything but what God has revealed to

Be Steadfast.

Never let your honest convictions be laughed down. You can no more exercise your reason if you live in constant dread of ridicule, than you can enjoy your life if you live in constant terror of death. If you think right to differ from the times, and to make a point of morals, do it—not for insolence, but seriously and gravely, as it a man wore a big soul in his own bosom, and did not wait until it was breathed into him by the breath of fashion. Be true to your manhood's conviction, and in the end you will not only be respected by the world, but have the approval of your con

"Thy Will be Done."

This short sentence compassed by a breath, comes from the lips of a child and man as if it were the easiest of all utterances, as well as the easiest of all commands.
But he who sails in this sentence must have a deep channel. Its keel reaches far below the surface. He who can, in contemplative hours, say 'Thy will be done,' is happy: but happier far he who can still repeat it in the struggling experience of practical life. It is implied in this sentence that one has such a view of the divine character as to command the soul's confidence and homage. It is impossible for one cheerfully and willingly, having begun, with the opening sentence, "Our Father, which art in heaven," to go on and say, "Thy will be done," except upon the supposition that God's will is, to the one that utters it, the best, the noblest consumation.—Bredier.

Ref Soft, gentle accents enhance, cheer, and brighten the energies of the sinking heart, and sweeten the cup whence the pleasures of life are quaffed. But he who speaks with an evil and malicious longue, dashes a gall-like bitter into the cup of life, and destroys human pleasure.

Begin at Home.

Reform, like charity, must begin at home. Once well at home, how will it radiate outwards, irrepressible, into all that we touch and handle, speak and work: kindling ever new light by incalculable contagion; spreading in geometrical ratio, far and wide; doing good only wherever it spreads, and not evil.

the all-absorbing question. Who will solve it?—
DR. RAPHAEL can solve it. All who are in of youth, and enable them to enter married life with confidence of health and happiness. He will
