Story.

PRIDE AND TEMPER.

Caroline and Spencer had been engaged in marriage to each other from childhood, and the period at which their friends had determined that their union should take place having arrived, they were united under many favorable auspices. They were equally accomplished, in comfortable circumstances, and possessed of similarity of dispositions and tastes which was particularly remarkable for each other. One single defect, however, on each side, marred all, and rendered them supremely miserable. The period generally known as the honey-moon had passed over without any occurrence approaching to a direct misunderstanding, and the young couple sat one evening in the enjoyment of the most pleasing reminiscen-

"Do you recollect," said Caroline, "the happy days we used to spend together sauntering on the banks of our beautiful river, and inhaling the fresh air which lightly rippled its surface?" "I do, my dear," replied her hus-

"And do you recollect when you said that if marriage were half as pleasant as that time, you would, when we were united, think yourslf the happiest of mortals?"

"And do you remember the favorite songs we used to sing?"

"And how jealous you would be whenever I spoke to that fop Morris?" "No, I do not."

"What! not recollect that?" "But I deny it, my dear." "Now, you know you were; come confess it." "Do-you, wish me to confess that which I know was not so? But let us quit the subject.— Have you tried either of those airs I brought you yesterday ?"

"Ah! you shan't escape me in this manner. I insist on it—you were horribly jealous of young Morris, and every one saw it."
"I tell you once more, Mrs. Spencer, I was not. Have you tried the airs?"

"Never mind the airs, my dear; I wish to convince you that you were jealous. Do you not recollect the to you? Just say you were jealous, and I shall be satisfied."

He made no reply, but immediately left the room, when his young wife perceived that she had gone a little too far.

"He is so irritable," she said; but instead of following her husband to endeavor to soothe his irritations, she sat down to the piano to try, the airs adjoining apartment, somewhat con-vinced himself that he had acted precipitately. However, he thought his wife would no doubt follow him anxious to adjust the little difference. He, therefore, threw himself on a couch, expecting every moment to see her enter the apartment. What, then, was his surprise to hear the sound of music from the room he had tleft; and the voice of his wife accompanying apparently in the most unconcerned inabner the instrument she was play-rout Street, opposite Day's Avenue.

In a manner the instrument she was playing.

Considering himself treated with indifference, if not contempt, he put in indifference, if not only in into the indifference in indifference, if not contempt, he put in indifference in indifference, if not contempt, he put in indifference in indiffe had retired to bed, and, not willing to disturb her, he crept noiselessly in. His rage had evaporated, and, had he found her awake, the difference between them might have been satisfactorily adjusted. She had, however, after crying bitterly at what had oc-curred, fallen asleep. Pride kept her the next morning, from confessing that she had been at all annoyed or grieved at her husband's absence, and when he "hoped that she had not been very unhappy," she replied, "not at This at once put an end to all explanation, and in the evening he thought that as Mrs. Spencer felt so happy in his absence there could be no objection to his spending the even-ing once more from home." The club was again resorted to, and being induced to engage in play, he arose a great loser. He returned home chafen and annoyed, and no mood to make concessions of any description, far less to endure taunts in quiet.

"I liope you have enjoyed yourself at the club?" said his wife to him as he entered the room. "Woman, leave me alone:" he replied, angrily.

"You already seem to think marriage by no means so pleasant as court-

"Leave me alone, I say, or I shall make you." "What! you will strike me too? Do so, and crown your amiable and considerate conduct."

The young man raised his hand, as if to comply with the taunt, but sud-denly checking himself, he again took his hat and rushed hastily from the house. He hurried on through the dark and nearly deserted streets, without an object, and not knowing or thinking what he intended to do with himself. Suddenly he stopped before a large well lit building. He surveyed it anxiously, and then seemed about to pass on; but, apparently drawn by an irresistible impulse, he at length went in. It was the club once more -the place which he had recently left under circumstances so unfortunate. He had still a few pounds in cash with him, and had determined to make one effort more to redeem previous losses.

at once, but friends were there to urge him on, and to advance him money on the security of his watch, notes of hand, etc. Maddened by repeated losses, he at length played deeplyrecklessly. When he left the house for the second time that night, he was a beggared man! And what was Caroline's impression of the whole matter? Up to the moquitted herself of any act which tended to prolong that difference. She had taunted, when she should have soothed him; any shape instrumental in causing him to quit his home. In the morning, when he doggedly rela-ted what had occurree, "It was," she said, "just what she had expected, and abandoned the idea; for, although un-happy together, they had, strange to say, no earnest desire to part. At ty, and the consequent neglect of friends. The result was, Caroline and Edward Spencer were both humbled: and when their humility became an active quality, which did so soon as the novelty of their situation wore off-they then led a happier life. Industry and frugality at length crowned their efforts, and they were enabled once more to move in a respectable sphere of society. It was in the same room, and about the same spot, that some short time after this favorable reverse of their fortunes, they were again found indulging in, reminiscences of the past.

The Boy Question. A Boy's Soliloquy.

Yes, there's another of 'em up stairs, now! I know it, 'ca: se pa told me I must be quiet, and sit down in the corner with my book, and mustn't play ball, nor ask Willie Smart to come and help me put my puzzle together. Then there's a cross murse that is always scolding me for getting in the way, no matter where I get. Besides, Miss Gadall was here to day, and she took me on the knee and patted me on the back, just like the cook does when I am choking, and said my nose was another degree out of joint, but I know better this is the third time she told me so, and it is no more out of joint than it ever was. She's a hateful, joggle-eyed old maid-that's what she is.

I saw it, too. It's got a little round head, without any hair, deep wrinkles instead of eyes, and when it cries it opens its mouth as if it would swallow itself. Pa helped me up on the side of the bed and told me to kiss my dear little sister; and when I wouldn't, and called it a horrito kiss my ma at all; I knew better than came. I climed up on the bed and hugged and kissed her, but all the time I had my

It might be a nice thing for them if they could stay little always, but they have to grow big after a while, and they ain't no better off than the rest of folks. I rather think that if I was a baby, I'd ask the Lord to send me where I'd not grow any bigger, then I'd have nothing to do but lie on my back and chew my toes, and have folks say I was the "darlingest, cunningest little creature they ever laid eyes

The Maiden's "Psalm of Life." Tell us not in idle jingle, "marriage" is an empty dream, for the girl is dead that's single, and things are not what they seem. Life is real, life is earnest; singld blessedness a fib; "Man thou art to man returnest," has been spoken of the rib. Not enjoyment and not sorrow is our destined end of way, but to act that each to-morrow finds us nearer marriage's day. Life is long and youth is fleeting, and our hearts, though light and gay, still like like dumb driven cattle-be a heroine, be a wife. Trust no future, how'er pleasant, let the dead past bury its dead, act, act to the living present; heart within and hope ahead. Lives of married folks remind us we can live our lives as well, and departing leave behind us, such examples as shall "tell." Минеке 36. The Diamond Ring Dodge-A Pawnbroker Badly Sold.

TERMS:

The very latest dodge in Louisville is that of the diamond ring. Thus far we have only one case of it, but that does not clearly show that there have not been others. We give all the facts in our possession in regard to it.

The pawuhroker sat in his easy chair on Third street. His name is H.

may have been smoking at the time, A genteelly dressed man with a troubled look came in "Good morning, Mr. H 1 have a little business with you, sir, this morning. Look here, here is a diamond cluster ring that I paid $350 in gold for. I wouldn't part with it for anything. I'm in some thing of a strait today, and want, say $150. I'll leave this ring with you for se-

The pawnbroker looked at the ring. It was a splendid piece of work. "Very weel," he replied to his customer. The $150 was immediately forthcoming, and the genteelly dressed man with the troubled look pocketed it with the air of one who had just paid the undertaker, and then he strode out in his tragic, melancholy way. Indeed, the pawnbroker, had that worthy man of business been a matter-of-fact business man, might have been led to the comfortable inference that the genteelly-dressed man with the troubled look was on his way to a morphine drug store, in full contemplation of the personal oblation so many unfortunate men with diamond rings have performed in other towns than Louisville, leaving lucky pawnbrokers in full possession of soaking jewelty.

The value of the ring, however, led the pawnbroker's thoughts in another direction. There could be little doubt that the genteelly dressed man with the troubled look would come again. In a few days he did come, redeemed the ring, and paid for the use of the $150. Again, after a few days, the pawnbroker sat in his easy chair on Third street.

Again he may have been smoking, Again the dark shadow of the genteelly dressed man with the troubled look passed his big window and filled his doorway.

time ago, he has not been seen. The pawnbroker has examined the cluster in the ring, and finds that the diamonds that glittered in the beautiful cluster, and upon which the loans were made, have been replaced by some base imitation. The ring is the same that was presented the first and second time, but the diamonds are gone. The pawnbroker is $125 poorer than he was .- Louisvilte Courier-Journ-

Horace Greeley's manuscript is notoriously bad, and it is said to require a printer of no ordinary skill to set up his copy if he happens to write in a hurry. The recent newspaper anecdote of an article headed, "William H. Seward," which Mr. Greeley had returned to him set up, "Richard III," is fresh in the minds all; but an occurrence still more funny is related, which happened in the Tribune of-nce, some years since: A compositor had made so many errors in setting "the philosopher's" copy that it irritated him to such a degree, that he wrote the typo a letter, discharging him from farther duty. The compositor, being unable to decipher the contents of the note, took it to the foreman, who explained to him that it expressed that he was "not a careful man, and Mr. Greeley dispensed with his services." The man laid down his stick, put on his coat, and left. The next day he applied for a situation as assistant foreman in a large printing office on the same street. The proprietor inquired if he could bring a recommendation from his last employer.

(All I have is this letter from Mr.

Greeley," said the young man, boldly, producing the document.

The worthy job printer scanned it some moments with a perplexed air. "H-m-m, careful man services signed, H. Gree ley. Yes, that will do; we will engage you." And he did, and never learned till two years afterward that the "letter from Mr. Greeley" was one of discredit instead of commendation, as he had supposed.—

The Haunted Scow of Lake Erie. Our readers will remember that on the first of July last, Patrick Shaughnessy, Gaptain of the scow Red Rover, was killed at Ten Mile Creek, about 10 miles below this city. After that sad, event, a man by the name of Connelly was placed in charge of the scow and has sailed her since that time until within a few days since that time until within a few days past, when he and the entire crew deserted the vessel under very peculiar circumstances. While on a recent voyage, the Red. Rover sprang a leak one which threatened to take her to the bottom in a very short time. All hands went to the pumps, and by working with all the speed at their command, soon made headway on the water and found that it was in their cover to seve the craft. By exerting power to save the craft. By exerting themselves to the utmost for a time, when their strength was exhausted they could rest for 10 minutes without endangering the safety of the scow. This system of long work and little rest lasted until the craft reached a point in the Lake off Monroe when the men, having become greatly fatigued and their strength being almost exhausted, went to rest. Scarcely had the bodies of the weary mariners touched the couch, ere all were wrapped in a deep slumber. Ten minutes passed and no one at the pumps. Twenty minutes—thirty minutes—an hour—passed and still the pumps were idle and the men asleep. Two hours passed with that leaky vessel rocking upon the waves and the crew slumbering, unconscious of the dangers surrounding them! At the end of the third hour, some unseen hand entangled its fingers in the uncombed hair of the Captain and he was dragged from his bunk. On looking at his watch and, discovering that he had slept three long hours, he wondered that they all were not at the bottom of the Lake. Hastily he aroused the crew and then looked to see what progress the water had made. To his utter astonishment their was no water in the boat! On in-quiry, he was unable to find any one who had pulled him from his bunk. For some time the mystery could not be solved; but finally the Captain and crew agreed that the ghost of the lamented Captain Shaughnessy had worked the pumps while Connelly from his bunk when they had slept enough. THE JUDGESHIP.

On Tuesday, the 9th of November the electors of the Second Judicia Circuit, composed of Berrien and Cass Counties, will be called upon to vote for a Judge, to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Bacon, and also to elect a Judge for the full term to which Judge Bacon was elected. It is hoped that the Convention will place a man of the strictest integrity in nomination. Several persons are talked of, among them we hear the names of Hon. H. H. Coolidge, of Niles, Hon. C. W. Clisbee, of Cass, and also A. J. Smith, Esq., of Gass, Hon. E. M. Plimpton, of Buchanan, Geo. S. Clapp, Esq., of St. Joseph, J. N. Chipman, Esq., of Niles, and Hon. Jacob VanRiper, of Cass. Whoever is selected, we hope it will be done fairly, and without wire-pulling. as is often the case. When this is done, the people can vote, feeling that no undue means have been used to force upon them a candidate they can not heartily support.

ANDY DEFEATED.

After all of Andrew Johnson's ef forts to be returned to Washington. his hopes and expectations were all crushed. The Tennessee Legislature, after a severe contest, concluded to consign him to political oblivion. Johnson and his friends felt pretty confident of his election, on the 21st. but on the morning of the 22nd, his opponents united on the Hon. Henry Cooper and thus defeated Johnson, the vote standing 51 for Johnson and 55 for Cooper.

It may safely be predicted, that Johnson's political career is ended, and the rest of his days, whether he will or not, must be spent in polifical oblivion. With this result, the counwill be well satisfied, having learned and suffered all that any people desire at the hands of a recreant ruler. It is said that Johnson took his defeat greatly to heart, and after he was informed of his defeat, he only admitted his most intimate friends. Those, however, who rejoiced in his overthrow, would not let him rest in peace, but proceeded to cheer for the victorious candidate under his window, and bearing banners incribed, "Moses under a Cloud." "The Real Dead Duck," "How about the pecket copy of the Constitution?" "Swingin' 'round the Circle," and other mottoes. The new Senator was formerly on old line whig, and upon the breaking out of the rebellion both he and his brother, Edmund Cooper, took sides for the Union. Gov. Brownlow appointed Henry Cooper one of the Circuit Judges of the State, which position he filled with credit until 1867, when he resigned and accepted the chair of Law Professor in the Lebanon Law School. Subsequently removing to Nashville, he was elected Senator to represent that District in the Legislature over W. L. Stone, the Stokes nominee, and then beat Andrew Johnson for the United States Senate. Judge Cooper was a violent opponent of the restrictive franchise measures passed by the Legislature of 1865, 1866 and 1867, and, in common with his brother, Edmund Cooper, was known as a conservative unionist.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

As the subject of railroads and raising money by taxation therefor is of peculiar interest to the citizens of Berrien County, as well as to many citizens throughout the State, we publish two important documents on the question. They are the most important, on the subject of the legal status of railroad corporations, of any thing we know of, and will bear a careful perusal by all parties, in favor of taxation for railroad purposes, and those opposed to the same. It is true, the opinion of the Hon. Senator, Matt. H. Carpenter, does not come with that force that a judicial decision does, but it comes with great weight, as there are, few men his equal in the definition of the principles of the law. The principle of the Legislature raising money or authorizing it to be done, in our own State, will soon or late be settled by an appeal to the judicial tribunals. If it does not come from Berrien County it will come from some county, and in view of the certainty of such reference, those Wisconsin documents possess peculiar interest to our citizens.

Alexander W. Randall, Postmaster General, reported at the last session of the Fortieth Congress, it will be recollected, an estimated deficiency in the Postoffice appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1869, of $3,700,000. The appropriation was made, and now the accounts for the year being closed, Postmaster General Cresswell shows an unexpended balance of $1,500,000. In other words, four months of Republican administration of the Department show there would have been no deficiency at all for the year, but nather a surplus of earnings over expenses, had it been during the fiscal year in the control of a Republican instead of a malcontent and Democraf.

THE RAILROAU QUESTION -- ITS LE-GAL CHARACTER.

Decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, on the power of the Legisha ture to raise money or authorize it to be raised by taxation for the purpose of donating it to a Corporation. The opinion of Hon. Matt. II. Carpenter, United States Senator, and one of the ablest Lawyers in the Country on the same question.

We give the following decision rendereil by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin a few months since, touching the power of the Legislature to authorize the raising of tax for the purpose of donating it to railroads. We give the decision in full as rendered by Chief Justice Dixon, Associate Justice, Cole, concurring. . As the question is one of importance to Michigan, at the present time, we lay this decision before our readers; and in connection therewith, publish the opinion of Hon. Matt. H. Carpenter, now United States Senator from Wisconsin, and who is acknowledged to be one of the ablest lawvers in the Nation. Senator Carpenter takes issue with the Supreme Court, on the constitutionality of such a law. The opinion of Senator Carpenter was first published in the Wisconsin State Journal, at Madison, and was called out in consequence of some remarks made by him in a late speech. These remarks involved him in controversy with certain parties, hence the letter to the State Journal explaining the principles of law upon which his opinion is founded:

SUPREME COURT DECISION. Warren Whiting appellant, is. The Sheboygan Railroad Warren Whiting, respondent, vs. The Sheboygan Rall-road Company and others, appellants. BY DIXON, C. J.

These are two appeals in the same action, the one by the plaintiff from a final judgment dismissing his complaint, and the other by the defendants from a previous order of the court denying their motion to dissolve and vacate a preliminary injunction which had been grant ed in the cause on the application of the plain nivary injunction which had been granttiff. The question involved in these appeals i the same as that discussed in the recent case of Curtis vs. Whipple, and after what was there said in relation to it, a very lengthy examination will not be necessary. The question is as to the power of the Legislature to raise money or to authorize it to be raised by taxation for the purpose of donating it to a private corporation. We there held that the Legislature possessed no such power, and the conclusion in that case we think follows inevitably in this, from the principles stated in the opinion. The cases are not distinguishable, except in the single circumstance that the corporation here, to which it is proposed to give the money, is a railroad company to which the power of eminent domain has been delegated by the State for the purpose of enabling it to secure the land over which to build its road. It is contended that this circumstance so completely separates the cases as to render wholly inapplicable to a railroad company, a fundamenta rinciple with regard to the power of taxation which controls, as to all other private corpora-tions and prohibits the making of similar donations to them-in other words that it changes the corporate character of such company and transforms it from a private into an altogether public corporation, so that the people may be taxed for the purpose of giving the money di-rectly to it. If this polition were correct, then undoubtedly the deduction would be, that the taxation is valid. But we deny the correctness of the position, and, on the contrary, affirm that though a railroad company may be, as to its capacity to assume and exercise in the name of the State the power of eminent domain delporation, yet in all its other powers, functions and capacities, it is essentially a private corporation not distinguishable from any other of that name or character. As to the use of the land for the purpose of a highway and the right of the public to pass and repass over it and to enjoy the advantages afforded by it for the transportation of the merchandise and productions of the country from one place to another upon the payment of reasonable fare or charges, the corporation may perhaps be said to be public, but in all other respects it is private. The public having power for itself to condemn the land on payment of just compensation and to build, equip and operate the road and to charge toll or fare for its use, or for the carriago and transportation of passengers and merchan dise, that power subject to the continued en-joyment by the public as a matter of right and not by permission of the corporation only, of the same benefits of carriage and transportation upon the same conditions as to payment of fare and charges, is delegated to a private corporution and so far changes its character, but no farther. That such is the true corporate character of a railroad company is a proposi-tion, we think, requiring very little argument or clucidation. It is plain to the mind of eve-ry intelligent person who has given the subject its rolling stock, its buildings, fixtures and other property pertaining to it, is private property, owned, operated and used by the company for the exclusive benefit and advantage of the stock-holders. This constitutes a private cor-poration in the fullest sense of the term, and were we to attempt to distinguish between any one not far more skilled in the subtelties of the law than we ourselves profess or ever expect to be. And if we examine any book of authority on the subject, we shall find that such is and always has been the rule of the law as to the corporate character of such companies notwith-standing the delegation of the power of eminent domain, and their consequent subjection in a certain degree to public use and convenience. They are always classed among private corporations such as banking, insurance and manufacturing corporations and corporations for the building of bridges, turppikes, canals, &c. Messrs. Angell and Ames in their work or corporations, section 40, expressly so classify them and speaking of them in connection with those last above named, say: "The latter kind have a concern with some of the expensive duties of the State, the trouble and charge of which are undertaken and defrayed by them in consideration of a certain emolument allowed to their members. As a matter of law the duties of railroad companies to receive and carry passengers and goods, differ very slightly if at a l from those of other common carriers such a corporation and an incorporated institu-tion of learning like that in Curtiss vs. Whipple, ation to be given to the former, but not to the latter, it would be a task which we should despair of accomplishing to the satisfaction of of passengers and goods, whether private indi-viduals or copartnership or incorporated bod-ies. All common carriers are bound to receive and carry when paid or tendered a reas-onable compensation. The public use and con-venience is the same with one class of common carriers as with another-the same with an incorporated stage coach or steamboat company as with a railroad company, and yet no one, we think, would pretend that taxation could be resorted to for the purpose of aiding the former, all the property, gains and emoluments belonging to the individual stockholders. All private corporations are more or less for public use. If they were considered of no public utility or advantage it is presumed they would never be chartered. It enters into the very definition of chartered. It enters into the very definition of a private corporation, that given in Bonaparte vs. the Camden and Amboy Railroad Company, I Said. G. C., 223, that they are for the public use and convenience. Mr. Justice Baldwin says: 'private corporations are for banks; insurance, roads, canals, bridges, &c., where the stock is owned by individuals, but their use may have the convenience. be public." And Messrs. Angell and Ames, sec. 21, after quoting this language, said: "In all the last named, and other like corporations, the acts done by them are done with a view to their own interest, and if thereby they inci-dentally promote that of the public, it cannot be reasonably supposed they do it from any spirit of liberality they have beyond that of their fellow citizens. Both the property and sele-object of every such corporation are essentially pri-vate, and from them the individuals composing the company corporate are to derive profit. But a railroad company, like a company for running stage coaches or for steamboats, might be incorporated, and the road built, equipped and operated, the public use and convenience being the same, without the delegation of the power of eminent domain. Money will secure the title to land, over which to build a road by contract with the owners, and it is a matter of policy on the part of the State whether it will delegate the power of eminent domain or not. If a road were built and operated by such a company, could money be raised by taxation for the purpose of the company? Or if a railroad were built by one cr more individuals, without any act of incorporation and without, the delegation of the power of eminent do-main, as it is conceived it might be done, could main, as it is conceived it might be done, could the people be taxed in order to give the money to such individual or individuals 2. Can a rail-road be huilt and put in running order by directions and them the whole property react taxation and them the whole property remainded and twenty six dushed and twenty six dushed and twenty six dushed property result in common advantage to the whole remainded the such and the such as a law fixing a tariff of rates for a railroad. A case involving this question would come private individuals, created for the purpose of to the Supreme Court. Here the precise imconstitutional.

receiving it? Or can a corporation composed of one or more individuals, be created for the purpose of owning and operating a railroad, and holding and enjoying allies gains and embl unerts, and ut the same time the chirer provide that the corporators or stockholders shall pay nothing, but that the road shall be built, equipped and put in running order at the expense of the people, to be defrayed by taxation? The majority of this court are constrained to believe that the legislature possesses no such powers, and that all these questions must be answered in the negative. Such proceedings, provided they were proper or could be sustained, would deserve the opprobrious epithet given to them by Judge James in Succe rs, Hardbert, 51 Barb. $16, where, speaking of an act of the legislature of New York precisely like that involved in these appeals, he says: "If this can be done, it is legal robbery; less respectable than highway robbery, in this, that the perpetrator of the latter assumes the danger and infumy of the act, while this act has the shield of legislative responsibility."

If, as we have supposed, the granting of the right of eminent domain to a railroad compamay so far change its corporate character and in consideration of the emoluments allowed to its members, charge it with the perform ance of a duty of the State, namely, that of providing suitable and proper thoroughfares through it for the benefit and convenience of the people, we have still endeavored to show that the character of the company remains in every other respect the same as if no such grant had been made. Nor is this mixed pub-lic and private character of the company anything strange or anomalous in the law of porations. It is well known, for example, that a State may take upon itself the character of a private citizen or corporation by becoming a partner or stockholder in a private trading company or corporation, and that public and municipal corporations may stand in respect to some things as grants made to them by the State or under its authority, on the same footing as would any individual or private corporation, upon whom a like special franchise may have been conferred. Angell and Ames on corp., s. $1, 32, 33, and cases cited. Our conclusion, therefore, is that though a railroad company may possess this single exceptional corporate characteristic it is, nevertheless, eacorporate characteristic it is, nevertheless, ea-sentially a private corporation, coming fully within the operation of the principles laid down in Gurtiss vs. Whipple, and that the taxa-tion complained of cannot be sustained. This conclusion is fully supported by the case of Hansen vs. Hernon as yet unreported in the Supreme Court of Iowa, December term, 1868, and the case of Sweet vs. Hurlbert, above referred to, which are the only cases known to us where the question here presented has been di-rectly raised and decided by the courts. The opinions in both cases are very able, and clear ly and fully sustain the postion taken by counsel in the able arguments made at the bar in It only remains for us to add a few words. if indeed the same can be thought necessary, by way of disninguishing between this and those numerous cases where it has been held that cities, towns and counties can subscribe for the stock in a railroad company, and discharge the debt thus incurred by the assessment and levy of taxes. The principle upon which such taxation has been sustained will readily appear by a reference to the opinion in Curtiss vs. Whipple. The city, town or county becomes a part owner of the road to the extent of the stock taken, and the work being one in which the public might have engaged as the sole owner and paid for entirely out of the public funds, it has been considered that there was no valid objection to its becoming a part owner thereof as a stockholder in a private corporation, which has undertaken to do the same work. To the extent of the stock taken, the city, town or county is directly interested and benefitted by the money expended in the work, the same being a mater of public concern, and it is, in our judgment, upon this principle and this alone that the taxation in that class of cases can be sustained. In saying this we of course do not intend to exclude the idea found in all the cases, that the road must be one situated within or passing through the corporate limits of the municipality to be taxed, and so promoting the general prosperity and welfare of the people who are to pay the taxes. The two sustain the tax, but the last alone which may be termed the benefit incidentally arising to the public is clearly insufficient for that pur-The property in the road having by the creation of the corporation and the franchises granted to it, been converted into private property devoted exclusively to the gains and emol ument of the individual stockholders, the inci-dental benefits accruing to the public by reason of the investment, can no more sustain a tax than the like incidental benefits arising to the public by the employment of the capital or labor of the citizens in any other business or enterprise of a purely private character. For if such incidental public benefits or advantages alone will support a tax for a donation of mon ey to persons or corporations engaged in one kind of private business then they certainly must in another, and if it should be shown, as it undoubtedly can, in numerous towns and places, that the establishment of mills and manufactories would be greatly beneficial to the in habitants, far more so perhaps than the building of a railroad, then it would follow that the people of such towns and places, could be taxed for the purpose of giving the money to persons or corporations proposing to build such mills or manufactories. This last is a proposition upon which no one will insist, and we are clearly convinced that that contended for this case is equally untenable. For these reasons the order and direction of this court is as follows:

1. The judgment appealed from is reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion. 2. The order refusing to vacate or dissolve the temporary injunction is affirmed.

Cole, J.—I fully concur in the opinion of the Chief Justice given in the above causes.

SENATOR CARPENTER'S OPINION. In his letter to the State Journal, Senator Carpenter says: "Now, a raitroad is either a highway, held by the corporation in trust for the public use, or it is mere private property, owned by the stockholders in absolute right. One of these theories must be true; and which ever is held to be true, it will follow that the other is untrue.

"Whichever is adopted, certain conclusions will necessarily follow. "(1) If it be a highway, then the Legislature can authorize a county or town, in its discretion, to aid in its construction, and raise money by taxation for that purpose; because the money raised for that is raised for a public purpose. And it also follows that as a highway it may be controlled and regulated by the Legislature. Its use may be controlled, and a tariff of rates may be

"(2.) If it be not a public highway, then the public have no control over it. When it is held to be private property, it follows that the Legislature have no more right to control it than they have to control the uso if any other private property. "If it be public property—a highway-one class of consequences must follow; if it be not a common highway, these consequences do not follow. Therefore, when the court solemnly decides to which category a railroad belongs, they do in effect determine what class of consequences are to follow in regard to such property. So the court evidently considered it. The particular question was, Can the Legislature authorize a county to aid in the con-struction of a railroad by taxation? But to answer this question it was necessary for the court to determine the question upon which it depended, viz: is a railroad a public highway, or is it mere private property? As this question should be answered, the question of the right to aid by taxation would necessarily be determined So the court proceeded to consider the question upon which the case depended, viz: is a railroad a public highway, or merq private property? This question the court determined against the theory tnat a railroad is a public highway, in the following unambiguous language: "The road, with all its rolling stock, buildings, fixtures and other property pertaining to it, is personal property owned, operated and used by the company exclusive benefit and advantage of the stockholders.' "Having settled this, then, of course, the court could answer the other question in only one way, viz: that taxation in aid of such road, was taxation for a private, not for a public purpose, and was therefore question would be, Can the Legislature pass a law regulating a tariff of rates on a railroad? But, as in the other case, this question would depend upon the question, is a railroad a public highway, or ig it mereprivate property? And the court would be compelled to say, "we settled this ques-tion in Whiting rs. Fond du Lac County. A railroad is mere private property. Therefore the court would be compelled to answer the precise question, can the Legislature regulate the tariff of rates, in the negative. To suppose that our Supreme Court will decide that railroads are mere private property, to exclude the power of taxation; and, in the next case, hold them to be public highways, to uphold the constitutionality of a tariff of rates, is to suppose that the court will treat adjudicated cases and the rules of logic "with an impartial contempt." But in the opinion of the Whiting case, our court gave their unqualified approval to a case in Iowa, where the court followed this doctrine to its logical results, in the following language: "It is to be remembered also that railway corporations are not organized for the purpose of developing the material pros perity of the State, -this is a mere incident of the business they prosecute. But they are organized solely to make money for their stockholders, and the Legislature has no more power over their property and rights than it has over the like property und rights of natural persons or other private corporations."

"Therefore the language of the Supreme Court of Towa, was adopted and indorsed by our court. It is a necessary result of the principle that railroads are private property and not public highways. And if Messrs. Bennett and Sloan do not like the conclusion they must abandon the premises.

"There are certain things so intimately so necessarily connected, that one cannot exist without the other. If you want sunshine, you must have a clear day; if you will not have a clear day, you cannot have sunshine. If you will uphold the right of the Legislature to fix a tariff of rates, you must hold railroads to be public highways; and if they are such, the power of taxation may be exercised. Everything in this world has its advantages and disadvantages. But if you will have the thing, you must endure all its consequences. "If we were not bound by the law, as it is, and were at liberty to make laws, ig noring logic and common sense, we might speculate as to which would be the prefering theory:

"(1) That railroads are mere private property, hence they cannot be aided by taxation, nor be regulated by the Legisla

"(2) They are public highways, and hence may be aided by taxation, and controlled by the Legislature. "The power of taxation, exercised by the representatives of the people, and confirmed as in this case, by a vote of the people to be taxed, cannot be abused, unless we admit that the people can neither trust their representatives, nor judge themselves of their own interests. Such an admission would overturn all free government. We may therefore safely say railroads are public highways; taxation may be exercised to aid them if the people are willing to tax themselves for such purposes; and the Legislature shall at all times have the power control the operations fix the tariff of rates.

"We cannot afford to say railroads are mere private property, and therefore their owners may exact such rates as they please, no matter how exorbitant and oppressive, and the Legislature has no power

It will be seen that Senator Carpenter disputes the decision of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, and holds that the Legislature may authorize the voting of ail to railroads, and may also regulate the tariffs of railroads, because he holds that such roads are public highways, and not private property.

CAPITAL CONVENTION.

The following are the resolutions reported to the Capital Convention at St. Louis the 21st inst., by Joseph Medill, chairman of the committee on resolutions, and adopted unanimously: Whereas, The present site of the national capital was selected as the most central point, when the people of this republic, only a few millions in number, inhabited only a narrow strip of country along the Atlantic coast: and Whereas, The population of the republic has increased thirteen-fold since then, and spread over a vast continent of which the States in existence, when the seat of government was located, formed only the eastern edge: and Whereas, The present location of the nation-I capital is notoriously inconvenient in times of peace, and, as the darkest pages of our national history demonstrate, in times of war or domestic turbulence is so dangerously exposed as to require vast armaments and untold millons of money for its special defence: and Whereas, All the reasons which induced the location of the seat of government where it now is have, by the enormous development of the country and corresponding change in the wants of the people, become utterly obsolete:

Resolved. That it is absurd to suppose that the handful of inhabitants in 1789, just emerging from colonial vassalage, before steamboats, allways, telegraphs, or power presses were dreamed of, or a mile of turnpike or canal was constructed, possessed the authority, or desired o exercise the power, of fixing the site of the capital forever on the banks of the Potomac, against the will and interests of the hundreds of millions who might come after them. . Resolved, That the people have endured the present illy located capital for three-quarters of a century, patiently waiting for the vast ter ritory of the union to be peopled and organiz ed into States, and until the center of population, area, and wealth could be determined when a permanent place of residence for the government could be selected; that the time nas come when all sectional issues are settled all dangerous domestic variances are disposed of, a new era has been entered upon, and a new departure taken.

Resolved, That, in the language of James Madison, in the congress of 1789: "An equal attention to the rights of the community is the basis of the republics." If we consider the ef fects of legislative power on the aggregate community, we must feel the equal inducements to look to the center in order to find the prop er seat of government. This equal attention has not been, and cannot be, given to the interests and rights of the people so long as the capital is located in an inconvenient section of

Resolved, That the vast and fertile region known as the Mississippi valley, must, for all time, be the seat of empire for this continent, and exert the controlling influence of the instion, because homogeneous in its interests, and too powerful ever to permit the outlying States to sever their connection with the union. 'This vast plain will always be the surplus ffood-producing portion of the continent, and the great market for the fine fabries and tropical productions of other sections of the republic. This immense basin must have numerous + outlets and channels of cheap and swift communication, by water and rail, with the sea-board for the egress of its products and ingress of; its

Resolved, That the natural, convenient, and nevitable place for the capital of the republic is in the heart of this valley, where the center of population, wealth, and power is irresistibly gravitating; where the government, surrounded by numerous millions of brave and unionloving citizens, would be forever safe against foreign foes or sectional seditions; and where it would need neither armaments nor standing armies for its protection.

Resolved, That while advocating the removal of the seat of government to the Mississippivalley, we do not mean to serve the interests of any particular locality, but that we urge congress to appoint a commission for the purpos of selecting a convenient site for the national capital in the great valley of the Mississippi. Resolved. That in urging the removal of the national capital from its present inconvenient, out-of-the-way, and exposed locality, on the ex treme border of the union, we are in earnest. and that we shall not cease in our efforts until the end is accomplished, firmly believing that the absolute necessity of the removal will become more apparent every day, and that the majority of the American people will not long permit their interests and convenience to be disregarded.

Resolved, That the removal of the national espital being only a question of time, we emphatically oppose and condemn all expenditures of money for the enlargement of the government buildings and the erection of new ones at the present seat of the national government as a useless and wanton waste of the property of he people. The following resolution, offered by Hon.

Sidney Clark, of Kansas, after discussion, was tabled: Resolved, That this convention do recommend and request all congressional nominating conventions in the various States to incorporate in their platforms a demand for the removal of the national capital to a more central and convenient locality.

Meanness. When one looks for exceedingly mean and dirty political tricks, he naturally turns to the Democratic party in the large cities. In Brooklyn, the Democratic party leaders, having the power, refused to appoint any Republicans on the board of registration. When the boards met to register votes, they sat. all day long in the Democratic wards, so as to register all the veters, and prepare for big Democratic majorities in those wards; but they met late in the afternoon, and adjourned for the day at noon in Republican wards, so as to register as few Republicans voters as possible

In Philadelphia, an injunction was is sued by an accommodating judge, which a Democratic Sheriff's officer attempted to serve on the judges of the election who were engaged in counting the returns. As he did not announce his business or office, and the law requires the room to be kept clear, the judges of election refused to admit him; and, when he forced his way in, they took him for a rowdy making an unauthorized intrusion, and turned him out. Thereupon he procured a posse of roughs. and forced an entrance, served the writ, and then attempted to arrest sundry per sons in the room, whom he charged with resisting him. He did arrest and take to the station a reporter, who had quietly sat in his chair, meddling with neither, party. Arrived at the station, the reporter was discharged, without any hearing, which he demanded; but no man durst make any charge against him. Afterward, one of the Republican judges, on his way home, was set upon by roughs, and beaten so that his life is despaired of. The plain object of this cowardly and very dirty trick is to delay, and render questionable, the official announcement of the result of the election. - Detroit Post.

Teachers' Institutes.-No. 3. Value of Institute Instruction.

The following article is adopted, with some modification, from the essay of Prof. Bates, late Deputy State Superintendent of Common Schools for Pennsylvania, on the same subject:

Teachers' Institutes have inaugurated a new era in the science and art of teaching. The impetus which they have given to inquiry and carnest thought is very generally felt in the sphere of public instruction. They occupy a place which cannot be supplied by any other agency; and though they do not furnish the solid nutriment, yet they supply the teacher the vital air which is equally indispensable to him. Wherever they have been most regularly and systematically supported, there have the abundant fruits demonstrated their necessity.

Previous to their establishment.

the methods of instruction were in many respects arbitrary and unphilosophic, and were very much allied to those which prevailed in the dark ages. A reason fit to satisfy a rational mind was rarely required .-"He has said it" was an ample explanation for whatever was intricate. The Teachers' Institute has provoked inquiry. It has taken methods of instruction and examined them by the light of philosophy, and rejecting the worthless, has shown the practical value of the good. It has discoverd new methods of proof and illustration, and entirely revolutionized the practice of primary teaching. Its plan of instruction is suited to the wants of every grade of schools. The superiority of the training which it has inaugurated is beginning to be realized. The teacher who sits at his desk and merely hears classes, preserving the same indifference toward the dunce and the brilliant scholar, is contrasted with him who studies the mental peculiarities of his pupils, who classifies them according to the power of thought which they have attained, and who puts his instruction in such a ight that it can not fail to elicit reflection, and induce healthy and vigorous development. The difference between the two systems is very marked. It is that between mechanically hearing pupils recite the words of a text-book, and that of intelligently instructing them in correct processes, of thought. The advantage to the pupil of this kind of instruction over the stereotyped methods pursued in many of our schools. s worthy of note. Even if a person is never intending to teach, but simply desires to obtain a thorough education, he can not fail to perceive the superiority of the former. He learns everything from a new stand-point. more elevated and independent. not only learns a lesson so as to be accountable for it in the class-room, but he must have it so digested and matured as to be able to teach it to others. This additional culture gives permanence and definiteness to his conceptions, and ripens his judgment. The objections which have been urged against Institutes and the prejudice which exists in some minds, have commonly resulted from mismanagement. The time when an Institute usually remains in session is very limited, and injorder that the best results be attained and the time be employed to the best advantage, it is duced to strict system. Three thousand Spanish troops have been ordered to Cubs.

Reports from Bejar, Spain, says that the insurrection there has been suppressed. It is said that Moneta Garibaldi is recruiting volunteers in the province of Calabria, Italy.

The wagon contained clothing, and was broken open, some $700 or $800 worth of goods being taken therefrom. The first clue to the thief and goods was obtained on Wednesday last week, as young Breckenridge was seen to get out of a wagon near Mr. Solomon of business. Send a $5,00 greenback if Rough's residence, and take a look at some goods hid under an old stump fence. The proper authorities were informed, who 'secured the arrest of Breckenridge. Mr. Julius obtained his goods, young Breckenridge confessing the theft, and disclosing where the goods were secreted. A box of goods had also been sent from the express office, in this village, by Breck-enridge, to some relative in Iowa. The box was stopped and ordered returned as stolen goods. Two of Mr. Stephen Scott's boys, also young men, were implicated by Breckenridge as employed or assisting in secreting the goods. OUR SUPPLEMENT.—Our supplement, last week, called out the folfowing reply from the editor of the to be brought into use in governing. Niles Republican:

In view of the fact that we made extra effort to send the call to the RECORD within an hour after the call was determined upon, when under no special obligations to do so, we submit that the above is slightly ungenerous and unjust. For evidence that we did try to send the call to the RECORD in advance of the mail, we refer to Major Warner, who was then in the city, and by Mr. Harvey Palmer. The Committee had no positive (official) knowledge when the election was to be held, until Tuesday, when a call was immediately determined upon.—We had the call "set up" immediately, and proofslips sent to the different Republican pap is in the County, and the gentlemen above named know that we sought an opportunity to send a copy to the RECORD in advance of the mail.-We now know how our efforts were appreciated in that quarter.

If members of a County Republican Committee, and those who do the arranging and calling Conventions, are not under any obligations to send the call to the Republican papers of the County in time for the Republicans to know of the Convention, who is under special obligations to do so? The facts are, the acting members are in the County, it shows that the duty had been entrusted to him. He knew that any notice appearing in the REC-ORD would be in time for insertion in all the other Republican papers in the County, of the same week. The Committee could have placed the call in our hands Tuesday night or Wednesday morning at the expense of $1.50, which sum we would gladly have paid, rather than to have worked off 1300 Supplements, which we had to do, in order to place the call before our readers in time. We could not wait till this week, if we did many of our readers would not have known anything of the County Convention till after it was past. And moreover, we would not have said a single word, but we were served the same trick at the call of the last Convention. It ignorance, in regard to the Convention, and thus injure the RECORD because it did not inform its readers of the Convention. "The Committee had no positive (official) knowledge of when the election was to be held, until Tuesday," says the Republican. That may be most done. By the indomitable energy of Messrs. Conally & Morrison, the grading has been mostly completed. Even now the echo of the steam whistle comes from true, but they did have that knowledge, if not official, a knowledge sufficiently definite to have made the call. But supposing they did not have offi-cial knowledge till Tuesday, still there was sufficient time to have let the RECORD know in time for the call to have appeared in the regular edition. If Mr. Duncan, the Editor of the Republican, the member who sent looks to us that it was designed to EXPERIENTIA DOCET.—Yes, surely experience teaches those who use Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, that it is better to take a medicine upon Pills, that it is better to take a medicine upon the first symptoms of disease, that will surely restore health, than to wait until the complaint has become chronic. EDITOR RECORD :- The railroad is almost done. By the indomitable energy of Messrs. Conally & Morrison, the grading the north, and Kris-Kringle has chartered an engine and train for a complimentary visit on Christmas eve.

Alas, for the soaring predictions of the RECORD'S esteemed correspondent—the Bellows of Three Oaks-who, aware that his wonderful town was, like a patent rattrap, of little practical account, yet imagined it quite sufficient as a sell, and expected to convince people that mud and swamps and marshes, without bottom, were a grand prerequisite, but like some other noted philosophers, facts were against him, and Charlotteville has become the central orb around which all such mooney planets as Three Oaks must re-WHITE OAK.

It is seldom that we use the columns of this any solicitation or promise of benefit from the proprietor or other interested parties. We simply do it as an act of duty towards those who are laboring under physical disability weakness, and the various complaints arising Bitters at the instigation of a friend, (and we confess, with some misgivings at the outset,) we found them a most valuable compound, and to our great satisfaction, accomplished the object for which they were used.

the name of Ned Brace, was once courting a lady either in Georgia or Carolina. She had refused him frequently, and he assoften renewed his suit. At one interview she became exceedingly annoyed at his importunity and stold him that she could not marry him, that their tastes, opinions, likes and dislikes were totally different; "In fact," said she, Mr. Bacon, I don't think there is one subject on earth upon which we agree.

"I assure you, madam, that you are mistaken," said Mr. Bacon, "and I can prove it."

"If you will mention one thing about which we agree," said she, "I will do it. Suppose, now you and I were traveling together, we arrive at night at a hotel, and there are only two beds yacant, in one there is a man and in the other a swoman, which bed would he other a woman, which bed would you select to sleep in?"

She arose indignatly and replied,
"With the woman, of course, sir."
"So would I," carnestly replied Mr.

Munday. Jem was generally considered a good feller. He went forth without a struggle, and sich is life. To-day we may be as peppergrass—mighty smart; to-morrow we are cut down like the cowcumber of the ground. Jem kept a nise store which his wife now waits on. His verchews was numerous to behold. Many is the things we bot at his grosery, and we are happy to state to an admiring public that he never cheated, especially in the wait of makrel, which was nice, smelled sweet, and his surviving wife is the same way. We never newed him to put sand in his shugar, the he had a big sand bar in the front of his house, nor water in his liquors, tho Pease to his remains. He leaves one wife, 7 children, T cow, a grosery store, and other quadrupeds, to mount his loss, but in the languige of the poit, "his loss was their eternal gain."

As a specimen of the precocity of certain classes of American youth who know more than their "daddies," ye have this, of a little street vagabond, who was recently brought up before one of the lower courts, to testify in an assault and battery case:

"She lives with father."
"Where does your father live?"
"He lives with the old folks:"

"Where do they live?" said the judge, getting very red, as an audible snicker went around the room.

WHO WILL CARE. Who will care? When we lie beneath t'e daisies, Under neath the churchyard mold, And the long grass o'er our faces Lays its finger damp and cold; When we sleep from care and sorrow, And the ills of carthly life— Sleep, to know no sad tomorrow, Who will care?

Who will care?
Who will come to weep above us, Lying oh! so white and still, Underneath the skies of summer,
When all nature's pulses thrill
To a new life gind and tender;
Full of beauty, rich and sweet,
And the world is clad in splendor That the years shall e'er repeat-Who will care?

Who will care? When Queen Autumn's flowers blossom, And she stoops in pity down, With a white flower for our bosom, Taken from her royal crown? Who will come to kneel in pity By our long and narrow bed,
When the wild winds sing their ditty
In the grasses o'er our head—
Who will care?

Who will care? When the Springtime's glad smile lingers
On the meadows, far and wide,
And she drops, from rosy fingers,
Bloom and leaf from every side;
Who will come, with tender yearning,
To the graves of those they miss? Who will sigh for our returning
To their presence and their kiss;
Who will care?

Who will care? Who will think of white hands lying On a still and silent breast. Never more to know of sighing, Ever more to know of rest? Who will care? No one can tell us; But if rest and peace befall, Will it matter if they miss us;

Or they miss us not at all? Not at all!

Works of Human Labor. Ninevah was 14 miles long, 8 miles wide and 46 miles round, with a wall 100 feet high, and thick enough for three chariots abreast. Babylon was fifty miles within the walls, which were 75 feet thick, within the walls, which were 15 leet thick, and 100 feet high with 100 brazen gates. The Temple of Diana, at Epheseus, was 420 feet to the support of the roof; it was 100 years in building. The largest of the Pyramids was 481 feet in height, and 953 on the sides, the base covers 11 acres; the stones are about 60 feet in length, and the largest are 203; it amplesed 302 000 the layers are 203; it employed 302,000 men in building. The Labyrinth in Egypt contained 300 chambers and 12 halls. Thebes in Egypt, presents ruins 27 miles round, Athens was 25 miles round, and contained 350,000 citizens and 400,000 slaves. The Temple of Delphos was so rich in donations that it was plundered of £10,000,000, and Nero carried away rom it 200 statutes. The walls of Rome were

13 miles around. Personal Iufluence. Blessed influence of one true loving human soul on another! Not calculable by algebra, not deducible by logic, but mysterious, effectual, mighty as the hidden process by which the tiny seed is quicken-ed, and bursts forth into tall stem and broad leaf, and glowing tasseled flower. Ideas are often poor ghosts; our sun-filled eyes cannot discern them; they pass athwart us in thin vapor, and cannot make themselves felt. But sometimes they are made of flesh; they touch us with soft, responsive hands; they look at us with sad, sincere eyes, and speak to us in appealing tones; they are clothed in a living human soul, with all its conflicts, its faith, and its love. Then their Presence is a power, then they shake us like a passion, and we are drawn after them with gentle compulsion as flame is drawn to flame.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Follow the Right. No matter who you are, what your lot, or where you live; you cannot afford to do that which is wrong. The only way to obtain happiness for yourself is to do the right thing; you may not always hit the mark; but you should nevertheless, always aim for it, and with every trial your skill will increase. Whether it will seemingly make you richer or poorer, or whether no other person than yourself knows of your action; still always, and in all cases, do the right thing. Your first lessons in this will sometimes seem hard ones, will grow easier, until finally, doing the right thing will become a habit, and to do wrong will seem an impossibility.

Hope. Hope is the sweetest friend that ever kept a distressed soul company; it beguiles the tediousness of the way, all the miseries of their pilgrimage. It tells the soul such sweet stories of the succeeding joys; what comforts there are in heauen; what peace, what joy, what triumphs, what marriage songs and hallelujahs there are in that country whither she is traveling that she goes merrily away with her pres-

The First Twenty Years.

Live as long as you may, the first twenty years form the greater part of your life. They appear so when you look back to them, and they take up more room in our memory than all the years that succeed them. If this be so how important that they should be passed in planting good principles, cultivating good tastes, strengthening good habits, fleeing all those pleasures which lay up bitterness and sorrow for time to come.—Take good care of the first twenty years of your life, and you may hope the last twenty years will take good care of you.

"Beautiful River."

Sabbath day is the beautiful river in the world of Time. The other days are troubled streams, whose angry waters are dis-turbed by the countless crafts that float upon them; but the pure river, Sabbath flows on the Eternal Rest, chanting the sublime music of the silent, throbbing spheres and timed by, the pulsations of the Everlasting Life. Beautiful river Sabbath, glide on! Bear forth on thy bosom the peor, tired spirit to the rest which it seeks, and the weary, watching soul to endless day.

Precious Promises. The Bible contains promises so great and precious that it is not possible for us tally to comprehend the vast extent to which they reach. We may talk about eternal life, an unfading inheritance, a crown of glory, about reigning with Christ, but we cannot conceive of the height, or depth or length or breadth to which such precious promises reach. One thing, however, is within our reach; we may believe the word which guarantees them; and we may all become heirs of the promised blessings.

Anger. If anger rises suddenly and violently, rst restrain it with consideration; and Self-respect.

That a man should be just and respect-ul towards all mankind, he must first begin with himself. A man—so to speak —who is not able to make a bow to his we conscience every morning is hardly has condition to respectfully suite the property world at any other time of the day.

To keepers of Cows this preparation is invaluable. It is a sure preventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk, and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Langs, Liver &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-shaft a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be eradicated or entirely provented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholern.
