Where, tell he where, are my little ones gone,
That used to be playing about my knee,
With their noisy mirth, and boisterous glee?
Who littered the carpets, misplaced the chairs,
And scattered their playthings all unawares;
Who called for their suppers with eager shout,
And while they were getting; ran in and out;
Who kept all the apples and nuts from spoiling,
And never saved jackets or pants from soiling;

No little troubles for mother to right,

No little garments to hang on the rack, No little tales to tell, no nuts to crack, No little trundle bed, brim full of rollick,

Silent the house is; no little ones here,

Silent and lone, silent and lone!

To startle a smile or to chase back a tear.

No little voices to shout with delight; "Good night, dearest mamma, good night, good

The Wedding-Ring Finger.

This is the fourth finger on the left hand. Why this particular digit should have received such a token of honor and trust beyond all its congeners, both in pagan and Christian times, has been variously interpreted. The most common explanation is, according to Sir Thomas Browne, "presuming therein that a particular vessel, nerve, vein, or artery, is conferred thereto from the heart;" which direct vascular communication Browne shows to be anatomically incorrect. Macrobius gives another reason, which may perhaps satisfy those anatomists who are not satisfied with the above. "Pollex," he says, or "thumb, (whose office and general usefulness are sufficiently indicated from its Latin deriva tive poello, and from its Greek equivalent, antichier, which means, ("as good as a hand") is too busy to be set apart for any such special employment; the next finger to the thumb, being half protected on that side, besides having other work to do, is also ineligible; the approbrium attaching to the middle fingers, called medicus, puts it entirely out of the question; and as the little finger stands exposed, and is moreover too puny to enter the lists in such a contest, the spousal honors devolve naturally on pronubus, the wedding finger. In the British Apollo, 1788, it is urged that the fourth finger was chosen from its being not only less used than either of the rest, but more capable of preserving a ring | 000, hereditary and acquired in his chair > education of children? "Why, sir, they have a vast deal to do with it, I assure you. I should as soon think of keeping them from school, as to withhold them from the newspaper; it is a little school in itself. Being new every week it attracts their attention, and they are sure to peruse it. Thus, while they are storing their minds with useful knowl edge, they are at the same time acquiring the art of reading. I have often been surprised that men of understanding should overlook the importance of a newspaper > in a family." "In truth, neighbor B., I frequently think that I should like them, but I cannot afford the expenses."

"Can't afford the expenses? What, let me ask, is the value of two or three dollars a year, in comparison with the pleasures and advantages to be derived from a well-conducted newspaper? As poor as I am, I would not for fifty dollars a year deprive myself of happiness I now enjoy of reading and hearing my children read, and talk about what they have read in the newspapers. And then, the reflection that they are growing up useful and intelligent members of society. Oh, don't mention the expenses—pay it in advance every year, and you will think no more

An Affectionate Farewell. The following is from the Albany Ex press, the publisher of which has adopted the cash system. The farewell to the sponges who had read that paper long without paying for it, is very expressive and affectionate, and so good that we reproduce it in our columns : "This week we struck from our list only fifty names who will not pay their due to the printer. In doing so, we take them by the hand and with tears in our eyes, bid them an affectionate farewell.-Good bye, old subs! Take care of yourselves. Snake Loose in a Bali Room. A very interesting and exciting scene occurred at a ball not twenty miles from this city, a few evenings since. Among the persons present was a young lady who had a great horror of snakes, and imagined-no matter what the season, if she experienced any unusual alarm-a snake in unpleasant proximity. After dancing awhile, she was greatly distressed by feeling a sensation as though a serpent had fixed itself beneath the folds of her dress. Grasping the head of the monster tightly, she screamed aloud for assistance. A hasty consultation among the game t of the ladies was held, when it was determined that a young disciple of Esulapius, who was present, should be called to their assistance. He was quickly on the spot, and being a man of uncommon courage, was not many moments within the circle of half-fainting temales before he had caught the tail of the snake, and wound it firmly around his hand, telling Miss M that she must let go the moment he jerked and to make the act as instantaneous as possible, he told her that he would pronounce the words one, two, three, and that at the moment he pronounced the last word, she must let go her hold, and he doubted not that he could withdraw the snake before it had time to strike. All stood in breathless horror, awaiting the act of life or death, and the moment the words were pronounced the doctor jerked out the longest and most diabolical looking bustle that ever was seen. The whole af fair was soon explained; the fastening of the machine had become loose during the dancing, and it had shifted its position in such a way that it dangled about, and induced the belief that it was a snake with an enormous head. The doctor fell down in his tracks, and couldn't be induced to undertake the capture of another snake on any conditions.—Omaha Herald.

Wealth of American Poets. A paragraph, lately published, giving the ages of American poets, suggests a statement of their property, and how in each case it was acquired:-Bryant is reputed worth $500,000, made chiefly by journalism; Longfellow is estimated at $200,000, the gift of his father-in-law, Nathan Appleton, besides the very considerable profits of his poems; Holmes is rated. at $100,000, hereditary. property, increased by lecturing and literature; Whittier, who lives frugally, is worth $30,600, inherited and earned by his popular pen; Saxe is reputed worth $70,000, inherited and earned in law, lecturing, and literature; Lowell is said to be worth $30,000 or $40. from bruises; having this one quality pe- as Professor in Harvard College; Boker euliar to itself, that it cannot be extended is rich by inheritance, and worth probably $100.000: Bayard Taylor is a man of independent property—the profits of his literature, lecturing, and dividends from his Tribune stock. Boxing Children's Ears.

practice of boxing children's ears! We had supposed, in this advanced age of civilization, that such barbarous punishments were only remembered as relics of the darker ages. But it appears that the practice is sufficiently common in some sections of the country to call forth a decided remonstrance. Beside being a brutal method of punishment, it is dangerous. The passage of the ear is closed by a thin membrane, especially adapted to be influenced by every impulse of the air, and with nothing but the air to support it internally. It any one designed to break or overstretch the membrance, he could scarcely devise a more effective means, than to bring the hand suddenly and forcibly down upon the passage of the ear, thus driving the air violently before it, with no possibility for its escape but by the membrane giving way. Many chil dren are made deaf in this way.

Charles I, a country girl came to London in search of a place as a servant maid; but not succeeding, she hired herself to carry out beer from a brew-house, and was one of those called tub-women. The brewer, observing a good-looking girl in this low occupation, took her into his family as a servant, and, after a short time married her; but he died while yet she was a young woman, and left her the bulk of his fortune. The business of the brewery was dropped, and to the young woman Mr. Hyde was recommended as a skillful lawyer to arrange her husband's affairs. Hyde, who was afterwards the great Earl of Clarendon, finding the widow's fortune considerable, married her. Of this marriage there was no other issue than a daughter, who afterwards was the wife of James II., and mother of Mary and Anne, Queens of England.

The Largest Vineyard in the World. California claims to have, in the Buena Vista estate, near Sonoma, the largest vineyard in the world. Some of the most noted vineyards in Europe do not exceed 20 or 30, or 60 or 70 acres. The Buena Vista has 800 acres suitable to the vine, and 450 acres actually covered now. There are on the estate some vines planted 30 years ago, but the bulk of them were set out from 1854 to 1858, and additions have been made every year since. This year the grape crop is light. The vintage sea-son will begin in mid October and continue nearly to the end of November, during which time this estate will employ about 100 men; Chinamen of course. California champagne is the principal manufacture of this vineyard, and the inventory of last November showed a stock of 126,000 gallons of sparkling wines, with 40,000 bottles of champagne, on hand at that time.

How Long a Locomotive will Last. It is estimated that a locomotive boiler will last until the engine has traveled over 350,000 miles. On some lines, however, the boiler, under favorable circumstances, particularly when pure water is used, may travel 400,000 or 500,000 miles before becoming unserviceable. Assuming that the life of the engine is determined by the endurance of the boiler, and that if, under favorable circumstances, it will last the 500,000 miles, then during that time it is estimated that the fire-box will probably require to be renewed at least three times,

THE SMALL HOUSE.

The "What a mite of a house," I said, cold, gray morning found me crouchlooking back from the garden, in ed beside a sofa, where I had moaned which I was walking with my husand prayed during the night. But outraged nature, at last, asserted her

"Not a palace, to be sure," he replied, also glancing toward the unpretending cottage we called home.

"I should think not," I retorted, with some bitterness. "Leave out one a, and make it a word of one syllable, and you will just have named it. It is a place, and nothing more, in which to pack all of my nice furniture; hardly leaving space enough to go around and take care of it. It was so unwise in me to select my household goods until I had seen the house that was to hold them. The grandpiano should have been a music box, the large, handsome carpets, a few yards of oil cloth or matting; the velvet covered chairs, camp stools; the paintings, seven by nine wood cuts, and you and I, two little bodies, to fit in any corner, instead of the tall folks we really are. Do you see | bed, I will tell you something pleasphrenologically, and a fine one artistically." "Thank you; but I was not angling for a compliment this time; only wishing to ascertain if I was becoming bald. I have bumped, grazed and mellowed my head against those low ceilings, while doing chamber work, until I really and truly feared I had worn it bare." "Do you need more help, Mabel?" "Bless you, no! Athousand times no! Whatever should I do with another in our small house? There is collision now, whenever I forget and hurry through a room where Norah is. Only yesterday we collided—she with a bowl of vinegar, and I with a package of soda. The freight was a wreck, of course; my gown and shoes ruined, and poor Norah half frightened out of her wits, because, being the heavier body, she stood her ground, while I fell back, receiving, thus, two blows to her one, and vinegar enough for a dozen bruises." Thus I rattled on, half in jest and half in earnest, never dreaming of the pain I was giving one whoise whole life had been one of self-sacrifice; first to an invalid mother, and now to a thankless, thoughtless wife. For I' well knew, when I promised to become his wife, that I was to marry a poor man, with only his profession—the law—to depend on for an income.

BUTLER OF TENNESSEE

The final disposition of the case of Butler, of Tennessee, is such as to make the people blush. It was in evidence that Butler received about $1,000 for the appointment of Gen. Tyler's son to the Military Academy. Two resolutions were presented by the Committee, one for censure and the other for expulsion. It would give us the greatest of pleasure could we say to our readers, the entire Michigan delegation in Congress voted for the expulsion of Tennessee Butler, but we cannot. Let honor descend upon the heads of those to whom honor is due. It does us good to name four out of the six Michıgan Congressmen who voted for the resolution of expulsion. These were: Austin Blair, of Jackson, 3d District; Thomas W. Ferry, of Grand Haven, 4th District; Omar D. Conger, of Port Huron, 5th District; and Randolph Strickland, of St. Johns, 6th District. unbiased mind to be a man of superior culture, generous, energy, and perseverence; indeed, I unhesitatingly say, a man of very large abilities. If he had not adopted so decided measures, at New Orleans, where would have ended the bloodshed and anarchy, those desperate traitors might have instigated? So bent were they upon insult and injury to our soldiers, the prompt acting, in a case of such emergency, should recommend him to all lovers of the Union. He was brave in war, but never reckless; universally beloved by his soldiers; never prompted to court tame, to the sacrificing his men, when defeat seemed inevitable; ever desirous to render justice—evidenced in the case of Sargeant Thaver, of Co. A., 6th Michigan Cavalry, and in numerous other instances. General Butler resigned a lucrative practice in Massachusetts, where he was respected and honored by his fellow-townsmen, to take up arms in defence of his country. Prior to the revolt on Fort Sumpter. General Butler called on President Bu chanan, to impress upon him the expediency of sustaining Major Anderson, at all hazards, with men and provisions, notwithstanding the threats of the Secessionssts, who stood ready to break out into open rebellion as soon as reinforcements should be sent him. But the imbicile old President took no active measures, giving the Southerners amply time to fortify has greatly quickened the conscience of these gentlemen, and there is much running to and fro to gather up the loose ends of questionable transactions, and cover out of sight some damaging exposures. Verily Diogenes, with his lantern, would have to search long and dilligently, to find the character he wished, among the Supervisors of Cook County. The general run of our local office holders are becoming as unenviably notorious as those of New York. The Grand Jury of the Recorder's Court, on Saturday last, presented an indictment against the Board of Public Works, and the two Architects who have had the supervision of the Court House wings. The special charge is that of establishing and maintaining a common public nuisance. The gentlemen composing the above named Board are among our oldest and most substantial citizens, and it remains to be seen whether this bold and unusual presentment can be sustained upon trial. But at the least it must be confessed this is indicative of a healthy reaction in public feeling, and a determination to probe these iniquities to the bottom; holding every public functionary to a strict accountability, no matter how respected The immense fall of snow which we had the beginning of the week, has resolved itself into vile slush and billows of liquid mud, which render pedestrianism a matter of peril and nastiness, such as is only found in a large city. By the way, what would your readers think of the luxury of sleigh riding at ten dollars an hour for a single horse, or twenty dollars for two? If there is any one thing in the world which has more elasticity than another, it is Texas; a bill passed giving a life pension to the consciences of city livery men; and if there be any greater fools in the world than the young bloods about town, who paid the above prices last Monday and Tuesday, your correspondent would like to see them. It is a pleasure to speak of whatever affords you peculiar satisfaction, and that which you know by actual experience is all it claims to be. Therefore you will pardon me if a recent visit to Messrs. Cornell Ward & Comings, No. 183 Lake St., suggests the statement, that the well known Willcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine, for which the above named gentlemen are General Western Agents, has no superior in the land. Indeed, all in all, it seems to be in advance, and stands par excellence among its kindred. One whose judgment from a thorough

EDITOR: - A communication in your paper of March 10th, signed "Adja," casts some reflection upon me, for retaining one Walton, a prisoner, in casts some reflection upon me. jail, without outhority. The facts are these: Some time in the month of Octo her, Walton was arrested by the authorities of St. Joseph, upon the charge of bur-glary. Upon which charge he admitted his guilt, and gave the names of John Casy, William Cloct and Frank Wallace as accomplices, (the circumstances show: ing that he had such.) He was sent to jail by the authorities of St Joseph in my absence, and Mr. Lord, the juilor and informant, and expected relative of "Adja," received and kept him during the whole term of his incarceration, without any conscientious scruples. When I returned, I visited the jail, and had a conversation with Walton, and he gave me the particulars of the bur-lary, and wished to remain in jail, until his accomplices could be caught. And upon that information, I went to Chicago and gave the matter into the hands of the police, with every prospect of catching them. When court set, I laid the matter before the court and Prosecuting Attorney, and they suggested that I should hold him as long as there was any prospect of catching the accom-plices. I have tried to do my duty, in all its convicts, and give any information relative to their treatment. L. F. WARNER,

I will say that he proposed, and it was carried, that at the next evening they should have an Oyster Supper, at the Church, begin ning at the usual hour of "divine service!" As might be expected, they had a larger gathering than at any previous meeting; and all proved, by their "strict devotion, that they were bent on saving the body, if not the soul. This is what might be called "practical religion," "fasting and prayer," "experimeneal." Should Brother Goodrich get his devise patented. Hearing the cry of fire, we strapped the little fellow on to George White, who happened to be present, and started out; jumped into a wagon and burried in the direction people were running. The fire was in a dwelling some distance above Doctor Montgomery's, consisting of a true stray unsight and consisting of a two-story upright and a one story wing. The wing was thoroughly on fire when we arrived, and our effort was at once directed to saving the upright. Forcing our way through fire and smoke we reached the chamber just as the flames were pressing through;—a partition door having that more than the same than the same that the s ment given way. #### Ruskin on Judas.

John Ruskin, in the Crown of Wild Olives, characterizes in his trenchant style, those who like to make money as imitators of Judas:

"We do great injustice to Iscariot in thinking him wicked above all common wickedness. He was only a common monev-lover, and, like all money-lovers, did not understand Christ; could not make out the worth of him or the meaning of him. He didn't want him to be killed. He was horror-struck when he found that Christ would be killed; threw his money away instantly and hanged himself. How many of our present money-seekers think they would have the grace to hang them-selves, whoever they killed? Juans was a common, selfish, muddle-headed, pilfer-ing fellow; his hands always in the bag of the poor, not caring for them. He didn't understand Christ, yet he believed in him more than most of us do; and had seen him do miracles; thought he was quite strong enough to shift for himself, and he, Judas, might as well make his own little by perquisites out of the affair. Christ would come out of it well enough, and he have thirty pieces. Now, that is the mon-ey-seeker's idea all over the world. He does not hate Curist, but can't understand him; he doesn't care for him—sees no good in that benevolent business, but makes his own little job for it, at all events, come what will. And thus out of every mass of men you have a certain number of bagmen-your 'free first' men, whose main object is to make money; and they do make it—make it in all sorts of unfair ways, chiefly by the weight and force of money itself, or what is called the power of capital; that is to say, the power which money once obtained has over the labor of the poor, so that the capitalist can take all the produce to himself except the laborer's food. That is the modern Judas way of 'carrying the bag,' and 'bearing what is nut therein.'"

Is There a God?

How eloquently does Cautebriand reply to the question, "Is there a God?"
"Is there a God?" The herbs of the valley, and cedars of the mountains, bless him; the insects sport in His beam; the birds salute Him in the foliage; the thun-der proclaims Him in the Henveus; the ocean declares His immensity. Man alone has said, "There is no God!" Unite in thought at the same instant the most beautiful objects of nature; suppose you see all the hours of the day and all the seasons of the hours of the day and all the sensons of the year; a morning in spring and a morn-ing in autumn; a night bespangled with stars and a night covered with clouds; meadows enameled with flowers and for-ests hoary with snow; fields gilded with tints of autumn, then alone you have a just conception of the Universe. While you are gazing upon the sun which is plunging under that vault of the West, an other observer admires him as he emerges other observer admires him as he emerges from the gilded gates of the East. By what inconceivable magic does this aged star which is sinking fatigued and burning in the shade of evening, reappear at the same instant, fresh and humid with the rosy dews of morning? At every instant of the day the glorious orb is at once rising, resplendent at noon-day, and setting in the West; or rather our sense deceives us, and there is, properly speaking, no East or West or South in the world. Everything reduces itself to a single point, from whence the king of day sends forth at once a tripple light in one single substance. The brightest splendor is that which nature can present—that is most beautiful; for while it gives us an idea of that perpetual magnificence and resistless

Beautiful Extract.

power of God, it exhibits at the same time a shining image of the glorious Trinity.

Do trees talk? Have they not leafy lungs—do they not at sunrise, when the sun is low, and the birds are caroling their songs, play a sweet music? Who has ever heard the soft whispers of the green leaves in spring time on a sunny morning, who did not feel as though rainbow gleams of gladness were running through his heart? And when peach-blossoms hang like rubies from the stem of the parent tree—when the morning glory, like a nun before the shrine of God, unfolds her beau-tiful face, and the moss-roses open their crimson lips, sparkling with the nectar that falls from heaven, who does not bless his Maker? When autumn comes—the season of the "sere and yellow leaf"—when the wheat is in its golden prime, and the corn waves its silken tassels in the air, how those who think, bow and remember the reaper Death! And then again in win-ter, when the bosom of Old Mother Earth is cold, and the white snow like a shroud, is on her breast, and the naked trees with leaves all fallen, stand quivering in the

Influence,

Some persons fall discouraged on the highway of life because they cannot be this or that eminent person. Why not be willing to be themselves? No person who has or who ever will live, is without influence. Why not make the most of that? Since you cannot grasp that which you wish, why let that which you have slip through your fingers? No person in the world is exactly like you. You have your own faults but you have also your excellencies individual to yourself. Let excellencies individual to yourself. Let them be seen. Because you are not a poet, should you not be a good merchant? Because you cannot go to college, should you, therefore, forswear the alphabet? Because you cannot build a palace should you not rejoice under your own humble roof, and that because it is your own? Will not the sun also shine into your windows, if you do not obstinately persist in shut ting it out? If you cannot have a whole hot-house full of flowers, may you not have one sweet rose?

Cure For Anger. Humility is the most excellent, natural cure for anger in the world; for he that, by considering his own infirmities and failings, makes the error of his neighbor or servant to be his own case, and remembers that he daily needs God's pardon and his brother's charity, will not be apt to rage at the levities or misfortunes or indiscre tions of another; greater than which he considers that he is very frequently and more inexcusably guilty of.—Jeremy Tay-
