

The Berrien County Record, D. A. WAGNER, EDITOR. THURSDAY MORNING, APRIL 7, 1870. THE GREAT EVENT.

The 33rd of March, 1870, will ever be memorable in the history of the United States, as designating the full development of the principles of the Declaration of Independence.

This amendment secures political equality before the law, and prohibits any discrimination on account of race or color. This act seems to us to be the crowning glory of the American people.

It is most gratifying to the friends of the Administration to learn, at the beginning of every month, that our nation is less in debt than was the case a month earlier.

It makes the blood of every true American boil with hatred, toward the government that has dealt so mildly with such an inhuman wretch as Captain Eyre, of the Steamship Bombay.

Ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment. Special Message to the Senate, Washington, March 30, 1870. To the Senate of the United States: It is usual to notify the two houses of Congress by message of the promulgation by proclamation of the Secretary of State of the ratification of a constitutional amendment.

This amendment secures political equality before the law, and prohibits any discrimination on account of race or color. This act seems to us to be the crowning glory of the American people.

CONGRESSIONAL. A bill was reported providing for the better security of the board steam vessels. It was introduced to prevent and punish collisions; a substitute for the House joint resolution relating to the collection of income tax.

Pulmonary Consumption.—Can Consumption be cured? This is a question of great importance. When we consider the lungs as a vital organ, and their close proximity to the heart, their importance is obvious.

On the first day of April, 1870, we commenced selling goods for cash only, and have put the prices down lower than the lowest.

The extreme scarcity of money renders collections on accounts almost impossible. Our debts must and shall be paid, and our stock kept up.

Now is the time to get great bargains. Goods at gold prices. We are bound to sell cheaper than anybody else.

Come and see, and you will surely buy. More particulars next week. New goods and more coming.

Sunday Reading. NAMELESS. There is no heart but hath its larger anguish. There is no eye but hath its tears more wet. There is no voice but hath been heard to languish. Over hours of darkness it can never forget.

Knowledge not Enough. Among all who have sought to render men moral by teaching them morality, no one is greater than Socrates. It was his prime doctrine that virtue is teachable, and he by day for thirty years, with unwearied patience he went through the streets, and shops, and schools, and public squares, teaching and discarding upon his favorite theme. His whole practical aim seems to have been to make men moral by giving them clear notions of morality. Does any one doubt that his instructions must have convinced the intellect of those to whom they were given? "What matchless clearness and subtlety and convincing power to these instructions will possess? And yet we have no evidence that they produced the least effect upon the social life of Athens, or the moral conduct of a single one of his disciples. The intellectual effect of the teaching of Socrates was prodigious. It reached to our time, and must penetrate all coming ages. But it does not appear that a single person has ever been changed in his moral bent, so as to become more virtuous or less vicious by it all. It is a very narrow reading of history, and a very shallow acquaintance with the heart, which has not yet taught us that something more than knowledge is necessary in order to virtue, that something other than light is needed in order to life. —Prof. Scoble's Election Sermon."

A Pithy Sermon to Young Men. You are the architects of your own fortunes. Rely upon your own strength of body and soul. Take for your motto, self-reliance, honesty and industry; for your star, faith, perseverance and pluck; and inscribe on your banner, "Be just and fear not." Don't take too much advice; keep at the helm and steer your own ship. Strike out. Think well of yourself. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Assume your position. Don't practice excessive humility; you can't get above your level—greater don't run up hills—put potatoes in a cart over a rough road and the small ones will go to the bottom. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that raise the world. The great art of commanding is to take a fair share of the work. Civility costs nothing and buys everything. Don't drink; don't smoke; don't swear; don't gamble; don't steal; don't deceive; don't tattle. Be polite; be generous; be kind. Study hard; play hard. Be in earnest; be self-reliant. Read good books. Love your fellow men as your God; love your country and obey the laws; love virtue; love truth. Always do what your conscience tells you to be a duty, and leave the consequences with God.

Cold Griddle-Take Christianity. We are amplified and refined as we go up and begin to hold in check all the physical endowments; all the social elements; all the interests of pride and vanity; all the degrading effects of organized social life. We are not Christians until we rise so high that it is not even the affections that rule any more—until we rise so high that the moral sentiments are supreme. It is love in all its benignities and beneficencies, it is faith in all its idealities and aspirations, it is hope in all its courage and cheerfulness and buoyancy, that constitutes Christianity. Christianity is not as flat as unworked beer, as many people seem to think it is. A man who merely does not do any hurt—is he a Christian? A man who is simply harmless—is he a Christian? Then a griddle-take is a better Christian than anything else. It does not do any hurt. Let it get cold and it will not even burn you. There are many who are flat, cold, stale, and unprofitable; and it is supposed, because they do not do any harm, that they are Christians. Not a Christian sparkles. It is full of fire, but it is the fire that does the work. It is full of energy; but it is a power that does not burn. It is full of life; but it is a life that envelops itself in higher and not in lower realms—in the things that go to make him a man in Christ Jesus.—Becher.

The Bible. Sir W. Jones, a most accomplished scholar, who made himself acquainted with eight-and-twenty languages, has left it on record, that amongst all pursuits the study of the Sacred Volume had been his constant habit. Sir Jones, the greatest of men, evidently had his mind most deeply imbued with the study of the word of God. Boerhaave, eminent as a natural philosopher, spent the first hour of every day in meditation on the sacred Scripture. Here no man can say that he has no pleasure. A most beneficent institution of our Creator has given us, for this duty a seventh part of our time, one day in every week, one whole year out of every seven.

We Pass for what We are. A man passes for what he is worth. Very little is all curiosity concerning other people's estimate of us, and all fear of remaining unknown is not less so. If a man knows that he can do anything—knows that he can do it better than any one else—he has a pledge of acknowledgement of that fact by all persons. The world is full of judgments, into every entrance in every man that he attempts, he is gaged and stamped.—Emerson.

Social Reform. The plainest Christian virtues, such as honesty, sobriety, frugality and peace, have more to do with promoting the true prosperity of a family or town, than any species of politicians or theories of socialists. Where these exist, the ungenial soil whose native products are little more than granite and ice, becomes Eden in peace and plenty.

"Phylograms." ALLUS COME DOWN STAIRS THAT WAY. The Erie Dispatch relates the following: A young fellow, respectfully connected, and all down here, had to get drunk. He was short before Brown's. He was closed, he was one day as usual, under the influence of beerine, and stumbled at the head of the stairs, landing from the landing to the front door. Down he came, heels over head; bumping from step to step, until he was landed in rather a promising-looking heap. A stranger who was just entering the hotel, thinking the fellow had sustained serious, if not fatal, injury, ran to pick him up; but the drunken man majestically waded him off, staggered to his feet, and in response to the proffered assistance, roared out, "now you see I'm done." "What do you mean?" "I'm done down stairs that way."

He was closed, he was one day as usual, under the influence of beerine, and stumbled at the head of the stairs, landing from the landing to the front door. Down he came, heels over head; bumping from step to step, until he was landed in rather a promising-looking heap. A stranger who was just entering the hotel, thinking the fellow had sustained serious, if not fatal, injury, ran to pick him up; but the drunken man majestically waded him off, staggered to his feet, and in response to the proffered assistance, roared out, "now you see I'm done." "What do you mean?" "I'm done down stairs that way."

"Phylograms." ALLUS COME DOWN STAIRS THAT WAY. The Erie Dispatch relates the following: A young fellow, respectfully connected, and all down here, had to get drunk. He was short before Brown's.
