Story.

THE DISENCHANTED LOVER.

"And so he is coming to-night, Clara?" Lyman Palmer asked, standing, just at sunset in the porch of Mr. Townley's fine, broad-fronted residence in L- Clara Townley stood beside him, and a very tearful look stole into her deep-blue, lustrous eyes, as she answered the question.

note this morning, saying that he | mistake,' o'clock train." "Your father is as determined as ever, I suppose, about this affair of-of the marriage?" Lyman Palmer's look was averted from Clara while he pronounced the words. One of his white slender hands played rather nervously with a seal-ring on the finger of the other. They were delicate enough, both in shape and hue, those hands of Lyman Palmer's to have belonged to a woman; his face, also, devoid of beard or moustache, and glowing with the fullness of healthful beauty, entirely lacked (he was only twenty-two) the element of manliness. It was a face that Lyman Palmer's enemies—had he really possessed any -would have been very likely to call insipid and girlish. But they could not truthfully have said the same of ageous gentlemen.

"Determined!" Clara Townley exclaimed, in answer to her lover's last would die of rage, I think, were my resolution known to him."

"And that resolution is, Claraancing of two children in their cradles merely because their parents happened to be friends. And then this creature, Richard Livermore, is a perfect fiend of homeliness, if you will pardon my intense style of rhetoric, Lyman. The photograph which he sent me, through papa, is just about the most frightful thing I have ever beheld. He has passed his whole life, you know, in some obscure place out west-all places out west are obscure, in my opinion—and, to all appearance, he has the manners of a regular clod. He actually had the impudence to speak of me, in his last letter to papa, as the "sweet Clara, whom he longed passionately to behold,' and whom he fondly believed to be 'a picture of womanly grace and loveliness.' I've never told you this before, Mr. Lyman Palmer, for fear of making you ungovernably angry at your unseen ri-"We ought not to be called rivals," Lyman Palmer answered, in a voice wherein there was much more of despondency than anger—"his chances are so far, far above mine."

"Nonsense, Lyman!" "How, 'nonsense,' Clara?" "Do you believe in proverbs?"

"Why do you ask?" "Because I do." Clara Townley's face wore a look of very firm determination as she spoke. "To what particular proverb do you have reference just now?" asked Lyman Palmer. "To one which says, 'Where there's a will, there's a way.' I think that adage a remarkably true one: And I think, Lyman, that you and I may test its truth, if we are so inclined.

"Is Mr. Townley at home?"
Richard Livermore asked the above question of Mr. Townley's servant, and," receiving an affirmative reply, was shown into a small sitting room on the ground floor of the house.
While the man is seated, a waiting the appearance of his host, we have time to observe that his face, and figure of ure are scarcely the face and figure of a gentleman. "The obscure place out west" has evidently left its impress upon the general hearing of Mr. Livermore. Presently the door of the sitting room opened, and a servant—Clara Townley's private maid, as it happened—entered the room. "Mr. John Townley has been unwell for several days, sir, and as he has lately fallen into a doze, his daughter, Miss Townley, does not consider it advisable to awake him. But Miss Clara will be very happy to see Mr. Livermore herself, provided he wishes "Of course—of course—by all means—certainly," stammered Livermore, to whom the immediate prospect of beholding his flance was thoroughly overwhelming. "I shall be most happy to see Miss Clara Townley. Be good enough, won't you to tell her

He was gratified not long afterward, by the appearance of a tall young lady (who struck him, the more he looked upon her, as a very unnat-urally and disagreeably tall young lady) attired in a rather short, ill-fitting dress, and wearing, upon a countenance full of broad-blown comeliness, red and white, about the most thorough from ear to ear sort of smile that Mr. Richard Livermore ever remembered having seen. "How d'ye do?" said the gigantic virgin, accompanying her salutation with a rather vacant-sounding laugh. "Hope you're well. You're Liver-more, of course? Well, Livermore, I don't like your looks a bit. How message to Clara's father. "In hoc do you like mine?"

" murmured Livermore, in would surely be here in the eight amazement. "I-I-understood Miss Townley was to-"

"Well, I am Miss Townley." "Impossible!" "You're complimentary, I'm sure! But perhaps you mean that I disappoint you agreeably, Mr. Livermore. I hope I don't. I dare say you're a good enough kind of fellow, but then you're decidedly not the fellow for me. Saw that the instant I clapped eyes on you, Livermore, if you'll pardon so vulgar an expression. I'm the sort of girl that likes plucky sporting men with lots of 'go' in them, and a general air of being 'up to snuff.'-Now you're not that sort of a chap, Livermore, as I saw at a glance."

"No!" exclaimed poor Richard Livermore, who had grown pale by the time, and with something which was not embarrassment-"no Miss the man himself. He was every inch what his youthful appearance failed to sliow—a high-bred, honorable, courageous gentlemen.

"Our girl told you he was asleep, didn't she?" was the young lady's inremark. "Why, papa is so bent upon didn't she?" was the young lady's inmy becoming Mrs. Livermore, that he different answer, searching for something, as she spoke, in the pocket of her dress. "Besides, Livermore, as you've come to stay several days, and "To give Mr. Livermore plainly to have brought your portmanteauunderstand that the times we live in there, for that purpose, any time will are not those which tolerate the affi- do, I suppose, at which to hold confab

Mr. Richard Livermore seemed to be regaining his self-possession. "Since I cannot see your father, Miss Clara Townley," he said, stiffening visibly in manner, "it is better that I should at once take my departure."

"And why so, Liv?" "Liv!" Could Richard Livermore believe his own ears? Was this vixenish, hoidenish, overgrown female the Miss Clara Townley whom he had worshipped in dreams as his future wife? Had her father been mad, to write as he had written concerning her? He would rather die-the man was already telling himself-than become the husband of so hideously ogreish a creature.

"I have no reason to give for leaving so abruptly," he now said, insharp, cold tones. Miss Townley made some odd sound between a giggle and a chuckle.— "You don't like me; confess you don't!" she cried, and taking the unsuspecting Richard Livermore thoroughly by surprise, she performed the action properly known as a poke in the ribs.

"Miss Townley!" gasped the un-happy gentleman thus maltreated; 'do you intend insulting me?" "Pshaw! not a bit of it. Only in fun. Have a cigar, won't you?" "Heavens!" exclaimed the bewildered Richard Livermore, holding up both hands and stumbling backward in his astonishment: "you can't possibly mean that you smoke?"

"Certainly I do," was the reply of Miss Townley, biting the end off a very nice looking figare as she spoke. Mr. Livermore once again, and as "And often and often I have retthat article, and, having bowed to his score of 47 to 1. But two facts are certain, viz: his deep indignation on reading Livermore's message, and his ultimate consent to Clara's marriage with Lyman Palmer, the man of her choice. So much for the clever disenchantment of Clara Townley's favorite maxim-"Where there's a will, there's a way."

l Young Boy Elopes with a Middleaged Married Woman. -

A most heartrending case of seduction ecently occurred in the vicinity of New York. A milliner, ectat 35, who, under the specious form of woman, nourished the heart of the tiger, ensuared the heart of a boy, over whose bead scarcely sixteen summers had passed, and who was the unsuspecting apprentice of a neighboring house and sign painter. The fiend in hu, man shape had a husband whom she had sworn to love, honor and protect, and who looked up to her as the be-all and end-all of his earthly joys. But little did the thought of him interfere with her nefarious designs. By arts with which every seducer is but too well acquainted, she laid her snares, till finally the boy was en-trapped and fled with her to parts unknown. The rage and grief of the innocent and unsuspecting husband can be bet-ter imagined than described, for it was soon ascertained that on the eve of the elopement the base woman had sold his coats and pantaloons and with the proceeds thence accruing had purchased a be-coming trousseau for her victim. She had even taken her old man's shirts, and altered them to fit the body and circumstances of her victim. Detectives are on the trail, and it is hoped will soon be able to return the poor child to his heart-stricken parents, who will receive him with open arms. Such cases of infa ay are becoming altogether too common, nor much longer will society tolerate them. A halter and short shrift would be too good for the heartless seducer who calls herself a

A volume could be filled with the strange delusions entertained by madmen—the remarkable pertinacity and cunning they display in carrying out the whims of their disordered minds. In their wild freaks, maniacs frequently evince a method til their planning, an adroitness and cool-ness that would do credit to the shrewdest sane person. We give below a thrilling incident which actually occurred as related, one of the parties to it having been a prominent army officer:

wanted to see the doctor. The visitor was standing by the fire when I entered. He was a tall, powerful man a pertect giant compared to my "five feet six," and his great and bushy black hair and whiskers were well fitted to the monstrous form.

"If you are at liberty, doctor, please come with me. .It is but a few steps and I put on my coat and hat and followed him. It was my first call in . L _____, and I fondly hoped it was the forerunner of lined with books of every name. "Take a seat, doctor; I will step out a moment. Take this chair by the fire; it's a bitter cold night."

The chair was a great unwieldy thing, but exceedingly comfortable. I threw my feet upon the fender, and leaned back on the cushion, very well satisfied to warm a little before seeing the patient. I heard the man approach the door, which was directly back of where I sat, and heard the door open and close again. I supposed he had gone out, but did not look around to see. Indeed, I had no time, for a stout cord was thrown over my wrists and across my breast, and a handkerchief bound over my mouth so quickly that I could not prevent it. When I was perfectly secure, my con ductor stepped in front of me and looke! with much interest at my vain attempts to free myself.

"Good, stout cord, 'isn't it?" he asked. It has never been broken and many a stouter man than you has tried it. There, now, be quiet a while, and I will tell you what I want." He went to a cabinet that stood in the corner of the room, and taking a long, wicked-looking knife from one of the drawers, ran his thumb over the edge, and felt of the point, all the while talking in the most commonplace manner imaginable. "I have studied the art of guessing; for years," said he. "I can guess anything; that is my guessing chair that you are sit ting in now; I take great pleasure in imparting my knowledge to others. This is what I want of you to night. I did intend to make you guess that, but I have thought of something better."

He had become satisfied with the edge and point of his knife, and was pacing up and down the room, giving me a full history of the world, interspersed with facts relative to the art of guessing, at which times he always stopped in front of me. "Did you ever study it, doctor? I know you haven't: I am the only one that ever reduced it to a science. Since I left my noble yererans, I have devoted my whole time to it; and now I am about to initiate you into its mysteries, if you

ed to mark the effect. "Yes |—yes, doctor! But what is it?"
he exclaimed again. "Thirty seconds!"
Great God! What would I not have given for a clue to that madman's fancy i Thirty seconds, and how short a second is! The knife was raised higher, that it might gain momentum by the distance. His body was braced for the stroke, and his eye upon the mark.

"Ten seconds more. What is it?" There was only one hope for me, and that was to guess. I felt that he considered himself some great man; as he had spoken of veterans, some great military chieftain. I thought of our own heroes, and the names of many of them were upon my lips, but I dared not utter them. It was the greatest chance game that I had ever played-my life depended upon the guessing of a name. I thought of all the European generals, but cast them atioagain, and came back to our own side of the water. "Two seconds!" screeched the lunatic. Without a thought, almost without a volition, I spoke a name, breathing a prayer that it might be the right one:

"Napoleon Bonaparte!" "Right!" said the madman, throwing aside his knife, and undoing the cords that held me. "I was mistaken, in you, doctor. You have true genius; this is your first lesson; come at this hour every evening and I will teach you the beautiful art -the way to immortal fame." As I arose from the chair, weak and trembling, the door opened softly, and four strong men entered and secured the maniac. I started for home well pleased that I had got through with my first guessing lesson, and fervently hoping that I should never be called upon to take another.

Elective Affinities.

A gentleman who came up the read from Fort Scott tells us a pleasant story of men and things as they exist at Mound City, which is a station on the Gulf road. We give prominence to the affair, not because we were an eye-witness of villat we relate, or because we feel a particular interest in it, but because in this age of "affinities," we like to show how be ively the thing works. The story may or new not be colored. On that point it would be rash to express an opinion. The day of a faithful reporter is to give such perionlars as may have come to his observation at the latest moment. This we do and narrate the following: "My dear," said a married man, stepping up affectionately to his wife, the other morning, "I have found much solare lately in the doctrine of 'affinity,' and I think, without intruding on your privacy, that I have observed a similar peculiarity in your own sensitive soul. Let us obey our instincts." "Love," murmured the lady, 'you look into my heart as into mir-ror." That night the contliner That night the gentlemen came home and found his pillow occupied by the head of a neighbor. Like a good husband he stepped away softly for tear of disturbing his wife, and sought the wife of the man who was occupying his hed, and in whom he thought it probable he might find another "affinity." On finding her, however, he was surprised to discover that her londness for "affinities" had been appeased otherwise. He now began to hink that the doctrine was spreading quite rapidly, and that he was to be left out in the cold. Not wishing to run all around the town, and dispairing of finding a lady who had not an "affinity" already to her hand, he betook himself to a hay stack where he slept all night, and got back to find his wife ready with a hot breakfast, her hair all nicely smoothed down, and looking as fresh as a peach. That is the way the "affinity" dodge works .- Leaven-

An important suit has recently been decided in the Lenawee Circuit Court, at Adrian. Barbara E. Beatty recovered a judgment of $100 against Charles M. The recovery was made under the prohibitory liquor law of the State, upon the ground, we presume, of want of consideration, intoxicating liqnors not being property, and the sale there-of being in violation of the law. THE RAIL ROAD QUESTION. The most perplexing question to be satisfactorily adjusted for the interest. of the people is the rail-road question. To our mind there is more danger, to our Republican institutions, to be feared from the immense rail-road corporations than from all other causes combined. That rail-roads are a benefit to the country, and especially to the region through which they pass, there is not a shadow of a doubt But the immense influence wielded by these wealthy companies, over the legislation of our country, is what I the people have to fear. The tremenduous power brought to bear on ! Congress to secure almost boundless land grants to aid in constructing new lines of road fully illustrates the workings of these great powers in the land. A power, we fear, unless speedily checked, will soon so control the legislation of our States and general Government that every de-people. We are now spending at the rate of from three to four hundred millions of dollars annually for the construction of railroads. This vast sum, together with our national debt, makes no small amount of taxation and burden on the people. It does appear that it was time for Congress to pause a moment and consider, before giving away all the public domain to rich corporations for the purpose of building railroads. It is time for the people to stop and consider, before fastening upon themselves heavy burdens to aid wealthy railroad interests.

mand, looking to rail-road interest,

The day will as surely come, if the railroad mania continues, when all will sensibly feel the effects of the oppressive rail-road taxation. The mania now is for a railroad to every little burg in the country. This can never pay. Somebody will have to lose. The little roads will be swallowed by the larger ones, till a few immensely wealthy corporations will control our Legislatures, both State and National. It is almost so now, and a few years will see the prediction verified. Too late then to remedy the evil, if it is not already too late now.

CAPT. EYRE.

It will be apparent to any one reading the opinion of the United States Naval Court of Inquiry, held at Yokohama, on the Oneida disaster, that Capt. Eyre was a guilty inhuman wretch. Now that the matter has been investigated by an American Court, it is to be hoped that the Government will take such steps as are necessary to a full satisfaction of the matter. Let Congress take such a course as right and justice demands, with a full determination to back up their action. Such an unprincipled inhuman wretch as Capt. Eyre has proved himself to be, should be forever prohibited from command upon the high seas. This, it appears to us, is the least that our Government can demand as far as Capt. Eyre himself is concerned. Then Great Britain should be made to pay the entire valne of the Oneida, together with a reasonable sum for the families of the brave officers and men who were so cruelly sent to a watery grave by the heartless Captain of the Bombay.

THE VANDERPOOL CASE. A New Trial Granted-The Case to be Tried in Kalamazoo.

From a special dispatch to the Detroit Post, dated Manistee, May 6th, via Muskegon, May 7th, we learn that the argument on the motion for a new trial in the case of The People vs. George Vanderpool continued through Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Mr. Van Arman's argument occupied about one day.

The case was submitted to Judge Ramsdell about 3 p. m., Wednesday, and he held it under consideration till 10 a. m. to-day, when he read a long and elaborate opinion, holding, first, that the motion was timely; second, that he had the power to grant the motion, notwithstanding sentence was passed and in execution, and third, that the reasons alleged for a new trial were all substantial but one, and that there was reasonable doubt. Therefore the verdict rendered was set aside and a new trial granted.

The counsel for Vanderpool immediately made a motion for a change of venue, naming Jackson as the county to which it should be removed. The motion was supported by the affidavit of T. J. Ramsdell.

The prosecution interfered a written objection to the court sustaining the motion, on the ground, first, that the motion required the personal presence of the respondent; second, that the motion should be supported by the affidavit of respondent, and not of counsel alone; third, that to obtain change of venue, attempt should first be made to obtain a jury here; fourth, that the affidavit in support of the motion showed no valid reason for a change of venue. The motion was argued this afternoon by Messrs. Van Arman and Church, and then granted, and the cause ordered to Kalamazoo County for trial.

THE MCFARLAND TRIAL.

The McFarland case is nearing its close, if it is not already disposed of. The arguments in the case were all expected to be closed by yesterday at farthest. The case will perhaps go to the jury to-day, and how long it will take the jury to bring in their verdict is very uncertain. If the jury acquits him, it will be on the grounds of insanity no doubt, yet it is evident that of it as unparalleled in cruelty. McFarland's insanity was such as often afflicts jealous husbands and wives. A kind of insanity that is very unreliable, and a poor excuse for the commission of murder.

A special correspondent from Montreal writes that Rielle is so elated with his greatness that he has dropped his scheme for annexation to the United States, and will be satisfied with nothing less than an independent nationality. During and since the war, the American carrying trade upon the seas has greatly declined, so much so that the alarming condition of the shipping interests of this country have been no small source of alarm. The matter, however, begins to look up a little, and, it is to be honed, ere long, that America may again be represented by her sails_on_every_sea.. In speaking of the prospects ahead, on this subject, the New York Tri-

"There are certain encouraging evidences that the condition of American Commerce is slowly but surely recovering. Applications for signal letters for new merchant vessels pour into the Bureau of Statistics, not less than sixty-five having been made during the first five days of the present month. If this activity is observable under the present discouragements, may we not reasonably hope for a quick revival of American Commerce under the encouragements proposed in the pending bill of the Committee on Navigation Interests? We look forward hopefully to its early adop.

This speaks pretty well for the administration of Grant thus far, and inspires confidence among the people.

The Oneida Disaster.

Finding of the United States Naval Court. The following is an extract from the opinion of the United States Naval Court, consisting of Capt. Rome, Lieut. Com. Mullin, and Paymaster Lyons, convened at Yokohama to investigate the cause of the collision between the Bombay and Oneida. It was received by the Navy Department on May 2d, and forwarded to Congress: It appears fully from the evidence that the Oncids at no time saw the red light, but constantly saw the green light of the Bombay, and that her own lights were properly placed and in full burning order. It also appears that officers and crew acted with coolness and discipline and at no time acted in doubt or hesitation; but that when the Bombay was about five points on the Oneida's starboard bow, or three points forward of her starboard beam, the Bombay put her helm hard a port and went directly at the Oneida, when the latter vessel at once flung her own helm hard a-starboard, and it was in that position, and the ship was rapidly paying off to port, when the Bombay struck. At this time the Oneida headed as high as eastby-north and the Bombay headed north-east-bynorth to north-east. It is also shown that after the collision the executive officer of the Oneida, Lieut.-Com. Stewart, hailed the Bombay several times, calling to her to lay by as the Oneida was cut down, and this when the Bombay was within a few yards of the Oneida's stern; that this was unanswered and unheeded; that three or four heavy guns were fired from the Oneida as signals of distress with a full service charge of six pounds of powder, and these signals were also unheeded. It is also shown that at the moment of collision the Bombay stopped the engines for a very few moments, but that she did not once lose her headway, but, after crushing through the quarter of the Oneida, rending a breach so wide that persons in her cabin looked out into the open sea through a space of 15 to 20 feet or more, and yet the Bombay kept on her way direct: that she passed out of sight of the officers and men, who were hailing and looking at her, in five to ten minutes, and anchored safely in Yokohama harbor at 7:45 p. m. of the same evening. The Bombsy neither offered nor asked for assist ance, or communicated after the collision. The Court therefore totally exonerates and exculpates the Oncida and her officers from any blame for this horrible disaster, and find that they acted promptly, that the Oneida was skillfully handled, and that the international rules of the road were, carefully and intelligently obeyed. The Court at this point observes, however, with deep pain, that the Oneida had lost her gig by the collision; that the dingeyboat had been broken into some time before sailing, and that during a typhoon some months previous she had lost her two largest and most serviceable boats, thus leaving her in an hour of supreme distress with but two boats to save her people. Had the Oneida replaced her boats and gone to sea with a full complement of them, it is morally certain many more valuable lives would have been saved. The Bombay, on the other hand, acted either gressly ignorant or willfully reckless. After ounding Kanow-Saki light to the eastward of it, then passing it so as to show her masthead and green light to the westward of it as seen from the Oneida, she had no reason to stand so far to the eastward as the Oneida was shown to be: nor could she have passed to the castward of the Oneida's position, at the time of the collision, at night, as she seems to have endeavored to do, without endangering her own safety by going ashore at Saratoga Spit; nor can the plea be made or sustained, of a narrow channel-way, for at this place the shortest distance between the two points of danger, east and west, is some three to three and a-half nautical miles; moreover, the land on the west side is very high and steep, too, while on the eastern side, where the Oncida was, there was a dangerous shallow, without a landmark to be seen at night. Hence, the Bombay crossing so far over to the eastern shore, with the green light of the Oneida in full view, as it must have been, is an action so extraordinary as to stagger a common sense of safety and duty, to say nothing of regulations and seamenlike knowledge. A line due south by east. quarter east, drawn through the Saratoga Spit buoy, and another at a point to westward of Kanon-Saki light, in a direction south by west, half west, after rounding the light, which is the pilot's course, shows how impossible it was for the Bombay to have come in collision with the Oneids, unless, indeed, she ran directly at the latter's green light, as several witnesses testify she did. The cause of the collision, then, is altogether and entirely due to the Bombay, whose commanding officer is to blame beyond excuse. Again, the conduct of the Bombay after the collision, in passing out of sight, in of the Oneida, disregarding the signal of her steam-whistle, which was kept blowing until

But her actions which the charitable attribute to a species of insanity, caused by grief, after the death of Mr. Lincoln, worked a strong prejudice against her, so much so, that the original resolution as determined upon in committee, giving her the salary of her husband, for the full term, which was cut down to that of one year, or $25,000, which was paid her. Since that time, efforts have continually been made to grant her a settled pension, by act of Congress, as under the existing laws she could receive only thirty dollars a month, the highest pension paid. She is now in Germany, and claims to be in actual destitution and want; pleading that the honor of the American people demands that they should grant her, at least, $3,000 a year. Mr. Sumner takes the same view, and has proposed to make the amount $5,000, undoubtedly, from what he considers the effect will be abroad; while other Senators are edecidedly opposed to any such measures. It is claimed that as Brigadier and Ma-jor Generals, General and Lieut-General are entitled to no more pension than a Lieut Colonel-$30 per month, justice does not require that Mrs. Lincoln should receive ten times as much as would Mrs. Gen. United States. The extent to which the money order system is used, in the transmission of small amounts of money, on account of its certainty and convenience, is astonishing. Since its organization, in 1864, with 141 offices, the number has been increased to 1685, exclusive of the 400 suon to be added: and there has been issued nearly five millions (5,000,000) orders, amounting in the aggregate to over seventy-five millions (75,000,000;) of this vast number, not exceeding one in a hundred thousand has been paid to the wrong party. Where it has been impossible to arrest the forger and force him to refund, the Department has issued duplicate orders. Although comparatively simple, when understood, Post-masters have been slow to comprehend their duties, and fulfill the requirements of this branch of the public service; but I am informed that since the advent of the new administration, there has been a marked improvement. By conversation with the clerk in charge of Michigan it is ascertained that the Niles office. as conducted by Mr. Palmer, had no superior. During his entire term, hardly an error, even of one cent, was discovered against him. The manner in which the Buchanan office is conducted has been very favorably commented upon and Mr. Merrill is regarded as an ornament to the profession of Post-masters. The present Representative has never made application for a single Money Order office; and if any offices desire the privilege extended, application should be forwarded to the "Superintendent of the Money Order Office" at once.

From Pentwater. May 3, 1870. Mr. Editor:—We are having beauti ful weather here at present, and times are more business like.—Messrs. Brown & Philips are going to close up their books and pay cash next week, and all other firms will be compelled to use the cash system, and it is time a change was made in that direction.—Farmers are getting ready to plant their corn, and garlens are all made.-The country here was thrown into a state of great excitement, last Wednesday night, as three children, two of Henry Webb's and one of Charles Whitingdon were lost, or supposed to be lost in the woods. All turned out to aid in the search, but, as the night was dark and rainy, nothing could be done towards finding them until morning, when they were found at a neighbors, at about eleven o'clock, where they had been taken by a man who was working in the woods.—The vessel, A. B. Ward, of this place, owned by J. Smith, was found capsized a few days since, near Milwaukee. She was lozded with potatoes and shingles from here. Not one of the crew has yet been heard from.-Rumor says that a man was murdered on the Beach bottom between here and Stony Creek one day last week.

—A railroad election held here, the 16th ult., voted aid to the Grand Rapids & Lake Shore railroad. The election was carried by a large majority. Another road, the Gardner road was carried. Both roads will be sure to come to this place. The builders hgreed to have them here by the 1st of January, 1871.—Pentwater is improving very fast; building going on in all parts of town, and will, undoubtedly, be a business place in time. · Various manufactories are needed and would do well here, as there is a great quantity of the best of timber of all kinds.

- A Good Idea.

As a very good Boston notion, worthy of consideration in other quarters, we notice that two at least of the Boston newspapers now hardly make a pretense of reporting the speeches in the Legislature at all; contonting themselves generally with a correct summary of the business actually accomplished. This may be a severe discouragement to the honorable gentleman for Bunkumville and those of like ambitions loquacity; but the loss, if there be any, is all their own, and the saving of paper, types, ink, and labor (to say nothing of the patience of the roader) is uncommonly great. We have sometimes found ourselves asking, if the suppression by law of The Congressional Globe would not have a wholesome effect upon the law-

Educational Matters. "Original and Selected. By M. A. Ford, County Superlatendent.

Reading-No. 8. II. Intellectual Reading. — This signifies reading as a mental exercise, for information or amusement, notnecessarily accompanied by pronouncing, or vocal-reading. It is far-the-most important of alkreading. By its aid we enter the portals- and explore the_recesses_of_all-knowledge,-in-itswritten forms. So important was it deemed by the ancient Romans, that they were accustomed to say of a manheld in contempt: "He can neither swim_hor read.!"

vim nor read!"
No vocal reading should be taught in the schools without an accompaniment of vigorous intellectual exercise. Every form-word read-should correspond to a sound-word -already known in its meaning and uses. Pronouncing without knowing is actually harmful. It gives a baseless conceit of knowledge, blunfs instead of sharpening the understanding, obscures the powers of expression, and makes had mental habits inevitable, sending the pupil into the world quite unfitted for self-education through literature. A parrot can pronounce, but can not read. It is easy, but ruinous, to make a parrot of a child. The grand, invariable rule, for either vocal or silent reading, should be: Read to the sense. One ought not to undertake the perusal of any book whose language he does not understand, or who has not means at hand for learning it. The teacher should assign no lesson whose words or thouhts the pupil can not comprehend. No word can be safely pressed upon its mere pronunciation, unless the teacher is already assured that the pupil attaches a definite idea to it. In all cases, he should be accustomed to look for a meaning in every word, sentence, and paragraph read. Vocal reading is monotonous, ineffective, and expressionless without this. No knowledge of value is gained from the exercise, unless this is attended to. The best labor of the teacher should be expended upon it.

Words may be grouped into these classes: What we understand, and habitually use; what we understand and do not use: what we neither understand nor use. The teacher, in preparing the lesson and conducting a reading exercise, should keep this classification in mind, and lay especial stress upon the teaching of the second and third classes, aiming to imprint indelibly the signification of terms not kept familiar by habit.

The meaning of words may be learned: 1. By direct observation of of a cloud, an engine, etc.; 2. By which may suggest its use there; 3. journed until Monday. tive words, the meaning of their parts being already known or separately ascertained, and then united to form a definition of the whole; 4. By obtaining a simplified expression, in terms previously known. The third method is a very interesting and effective way, for which some knowledge of other languages is desirable, but not indispensable. In this and the fourth method, the assistance of a defining dictionary is invaluable. Teachers should question their reading classes persistently. The pupil will read, in school and out of it. as he is taught. If compelled to link every word to its proper idea, he learns to read with thoroughness and profit. His preparatory studies should anticipate a careful examination as to his knowledge of the terms and subiect-matter of the lesson. Older pupils may give its moral, if any. Notes in the Reader, explaining allusions and proper names, will have their substance memorized by the diligent student, and books of reference or well informed persons will be consulted. Everything accessible, that illustrates the lesson, will be laid under contribution. The questioning should be carefully adapted to the grade of the pupil. Good questioning is a fine art. The examination of the lower grades should mainly tend to stimulate the perceptive powers and memory; of the intermediate grades, the imagination; of higher grades, the judgment and reason. The attention of young children should be particularly called to the pictures, and to the meaning of the lesson as indicated by them. Terms should be defined, if possible, in lan guage applicable to sensible objects. Older pupils may especially observe the relations of words in the sentence, give synonyms for the more important, and recite the lesson in their own language, or furnish a written abstract of it. The most advanced pupils should also criticise the style, notice figures of speech, and discuss the sentiments of the author.—They may advantageously be taught how to use books in the investigation of special topics, and how to keep a note-book and index

Gen. Lee's Fire Company.

Gen. Lee is not without public honors. One of the Savannah fire companies recently elected him an honorary member, and his letter of acceptance was received by the runners of the machine with chullient enthusiasm. Now, if the General will only write another letter to his new associates, he may prove himself a blessed brother indeed. We want him to advise them whenever they meet a red hot, unreconstructed Rebel, with a morbid appetite for eating fire, to play upon the unfortunate salamander until they have thoroughly quenched them. Just think how refreshing to Dives would have been a full stream from a fire engine! We do not think that an unrepentant Secessionist can be much less feverish than Dives was; and, for his case, we can think of no better cure than the water-cure, without one drop of allaying whisky.—N. Y. Tribune.

The Big Horn Expedition.

Indian Commissioner Parker officially reports that the Big Horn expedition does not propose to go upon any of the In-dian reservations lands, and that the Big Horn valley and mountains are not within any reservation. Yet Gen. Sheridan says the Sioux threaten war, if the Big Horn expedition starts, and he thinks they will dition moves. These Indians claim to own the whole country, reservations and all; and they object to allowing any more white men to settle anywhere in the West. The New York Tribune calls upon the Government to stop the expedition, not withstanding the President and Gen. Sherman have already examined the matter, and given the expedition leave to

Now this situation raises the question whether the United States are prepared to submit to Indian dictation as to where peaceful expeditions of our citizens may, ind may not, move through our own territory, or settle therein; while the New York Tribune's position raises the question whether the Government has any legal or moral right arbitrarily, and without action by Congress, to forbid American citizens from travelling wherever they choose on the territory of the Republic, or from ex-ploring any part of such territory which is not especially set apart by act of Congress as an Indian or military reservation. As for curselves, we do not believe that it will be either politic or honorable to submit to Indian dictation; and we do not believe the president, or the military authorities, have any legal right to prevent the expedition from going wherever it chooses, so long as it does not trespass upon any Indian reservation duly set apart by act of Congress.—Detroit Post.

The Postal Telegraph System.

The Hon. Horace Rublee, our Minister to Berne, writes to Mr. Washburne in favor of the establishment of a telegraph system by the Government, and thus speaks of the working of the system in Switzerland: "It seems to me that the results of the governmental administration of the teleraph in Switzerland are such as to afford ery strong encouragement to the proposition to adopt the system in the United States. The cost of a message of 20 words-date, address and signature are counted-from any station in Switzerland to another is something less than 10 cents. This might be doubled or trebled in the United States, and still it would fall much below the rates now exacted there by the private corporations. One thing, at least, is certain—it is improper for the Government to undertake the delivery of letters and newspapers if it is improper for it to undertake the administration of the telegraph. The principle involved in the two. cases is identical, and those who oppose the postal telegraph should demand the manufacturers in Washington.—N. Y. that i only suspended his license for six steamer Telegrapho. The owner sues the in a barn. Temp Tribune.

Supreme Court Decisions. The Supreme Court has decided that, under the provisions of the act of 1824. in civil actions in the courts of the United States, no witness can be excluded because he is a party to, or interested in the case. A decision has also been given that loan ing money to the Confederate States, when subscription to the loan was extorted by fear, and becoming surety on official bonds of Confederate States officers from motives of triendship, in enable such officers, being conscripts, to remain at home with their families, were not acts giving aid and comfort to the reliellion. The decision also determines that parties who have taken the imnesty oath in such cases are entitled to ecover. A large number of minor decisons were made by the Court previous to ts adjournment, Friday, until October 31.

The sample is of a fair quality of brown sugar, and has a little peculiar taste. SCHOOL MEETING .- We notice a call posted up for a School Meeting to be held at the Village School House on Saturday evening next, at 7 p. m., for the purpose of voting money to huild an addition to our present School House. Every one interested in school matters should attend, and thus let a fair expression be had on the subject. It is time that harmony and co-operation should be had in our school affairs, and not contention and strife. It is hoped then, that the patrons of the school will come together in the

GRADING UP .- We notice that Dr. P. B. Myers is making decided improvements in the appearance of his lot, on the corner of Main and Third Streets, by grading it up some four or five feet. When completed and the new house erected thereon, that corner will present quite a different appearance to what it has done for the spirit of conciliation.

> COUNTY FAIR .- If it is the design to have a County Fair at this place this season, it is time that the Premium Lists were being prepared, so that people may make their calculations to attend and have a full representation of the Agricultural and Mechanical productions of the County on exhibition. We notice in some places the time of the Fairs, and the premium lists are already out. There is nothing like being on time. Much is lost every year at our county Fairs by not having things ready in time. It is just as easy to get ready at one time as

> POTATO BUGS .- The Potato Bug is already on hand in great abundance, and the prospects bid fair for more damage to be done by them than in any previous year. They can, however, be destroyed with Paris green. It has been thoroughly tested in this vicinity the past two years. Take a small paper box, perforate it with needle holes, and with this dust on each hill, where there are bugs, or as soon as the worm makes its appearance, a very small portion of the Paris green, and in a few days you will have the pleasure of looking on many dead bugs and worms. DISCRACEFUL.—It is stated one of the Hackley boys (colored) of this village, went to St. Joseph Sunday evening last, and with others commenced a disturbance tear the room where religious exercises were being held by some of the colored people of that village, and that some one throw a stone through one of the windows of the house, whereupon the meeting was partially broken up, and a number came outside to enquire the occasion of the disturbance. Whereupon an altercation commenced between Hackley and Bob Cross. Hackley, it is said, struck Cross with a slung-shot, inflicting a terrible gash in the head, which it was thought at the time was fatal, but we believe Dr. Stratton dressed the wound, and that the man is likely to recover .- Benton Harbor Fire.—Two barns-were burned in the Third Ward on Wednesday. Onebelonged to Jackson Hand and one to a Mr. Vincent. The fire originated who had probably spent a portion of the day, at least, studying animated nature. Amusing Decisions .- The following cases in Justice Court transpired not a thousand miles from the village of New Buffalo, and are illustrative of how justice is sometimes dealt out by those who have little reverence for Coke and Blackstone:

In a case of assault and battery, the other day, where a fellow got tremendously pummeled, the defondant's counsel put in a plea of justification on the ground that the plaintiff "talked sassy." Result, defendant was acquitted. Some time ago, before the same Court, a negro was charged with killing another. The evidence of his guilt was complete, the body being found. The decision rendered was as follows: "My opinion is, dat dis nigger petter go and bury dat det nigger, and den run away." So the defendant went and did according to the opinion of the Court.

Prom Three Caks. May 9th, 1870. Mr. Eritor: Three Oaks is in the midet of jyr. Business matters in general, are not so srick, as to be the cause of this jubilent state of society, for commerce might be materially increased. But a certain ling of business is brisk. There are severel new firms, recently organized, in our notice. Partnerships are being extensively entered into, by a large number of our citizens. This branch of trade is very likely indeed. It is little conditions.

Wely, indeed. It is light employment, and, I presume, proves very agreeable, and at the same time is quite profitable. Possessing all of these advantages, it is still, apparently, within the reach of all: as it does not require any capital, no business experience, and but little energy to start in this line. Recently, this branch of business has all been confined to the younger portion of our community, and the role now in use. And this mania seems to have reached such a stage, and taken hold of the minds of the people to such an extent, that it is very difficult for a person, who is not lately married, or just about to be, to retain and hold his or her position in respectable society.—The Baptist Society here have just received a new organ, which experienced judges pronounce to be a very fine instrument. Both the Baptist and the Congregational societies are exerting themselves to make their meetings interesting to all that may attend them. The Sabbath Schools are both well attended, well conducted, and very in-structive; and yet the majority of the children in our country do not attend Sab-bath Schools. The children follow the example of many of the older ones, and spend the Sabbath about the streets in any amusement that offers itself. I overheard a couple of quite small boys, last Sabbath, sir; I tell you our red rooster did lick Dave's all to pieces, and pricked all the hair off his neck, too."

Mr. Editor:-I have no news of importance, except to say that some of the young folks are marrying each other for weal or woe. Whenever I hear of a marriage, I always think of the story of a couple that married, and after retiring for the night the gent says, "put your little footies up to mine and get them warm." Mark the change. In one year from that time he says, "take your miserable cold feet away

Now, Mr. Editor, "Stranger" has written his novel, and it is concluded, and as I have taken quite an interest in the story, and know something of the history of the individual "Stranger," and of his travels, I now propose to write the sequel to his story. Wishing to know something of the country and its people at the north, I started forth on my journey, and after traveling for a time, entered the deep forest, therefor. Now we trust that Society will erect a new front to their house, as it will certainly add enough to its appearance to fully compensate for the expense.

As I approached the summit I saw an individual sitting on a log. As I approached him he appeared to have been an inhabitant of the woods for some time past, judging by the looks of his beard, yet it appeared to me that he might look and appear much better were it not for the sad and despondent look which pervaded his entire countenance. I hailed him by calling him "Strangcr." He replied very gentlemanly, when took a seat beside him. We soon entered into a deep conversation. He appeared quite talkative, and had many questions to ask. I asked him if he was locating a homestead. "Oh, no," he said; "if I wanted land I would go farther south-say about Three Oaks. It is not land I am after." He voluntarily said: "You see, my friend, circumstances have not favored mo of late, and I left the business world and the hum of city life, and came here to collect my thoughts, and perhaps to start anew in the journey of life. I should like to know more of the history of the County south, and of its most noted men." I said, "You appear to have traveled considerably, and could now write quite an interesting history of this section of country and its people. And I dare say there are publishers who would be glad to get the history and publish it, and it would be read by many; and as for myself, I would study, learn and inwardly digest the whole subject, and perhaps I would write the sequel to your story." He consented to have it published, and then proceeded to give me a short sketch of his history. He said: "In the year 186-, a great Convention was held in the city of Chicago, and at that time there appeared to be a secret organization which was known by many aliases, but more particularly as "Knights of the Golden Circle," who wished to make a change in American affairs, and in such a way as would surprise the people, especially around Camp Douglas. They had been told the Devil was dead, and there would be no punishment for what they were about to do; yet, at a certain time, they began to smell a mice, and fearing the Devil might not be dead they all "vamoosed the ranch," and he had occasion to travel. He said the Devil had favored their cause, yet he was inclined to think the Devil might not be dead, and would yet show his fiery head. I informed him the imaginary being had been dead some five or six years, when he seemed to cheer up for some cause, and appeared altogether different. Yet, he mourned the loss of that imaginary being, and sympathizing with this orphan Stranger, I said to him, "you are the first orphan of the kind I ever met. I cheer-

In a sermon on the text, "These are they who separate themselves," Jude 19, we find a very strong expression for open communion. This, in the American edition, is one of the mutilated sermons; but the English edition, beside other pungent sentences, contains the following:

"There is not a Christian beneath the scope of God's heaven from whom I am separated. At the Lord's Table, I always invite all Christians to come and sit down and commune with us. If any man were to tell me that I am separate from the Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, or the Methodist, I would tell him that he did not know me, for I love them with a pure heart fervently, and I am not separate from them. This bears rather hard on our strict communion Baptists. I should not like to say anything hard against them, for they are about the best people in the world; but they really do separate themselves from the great body of Christ's people. They separate themselves from the great universal Church. They say they will not commune with it; and if any one comes to their table who has not been baptized, they turn him again. they turn him away. The pulse of Christ is communion; and woe to the Church that seeks to cure the ills of Christ's Church by stopping its pulse. I think it a sin to refuse to commune with any one, who is a member of the Church of our Lord Jesus Christ. I should think myself grossly in fault, if at the foot of these stairs I should meet a truly converted child of God, who called himself a Primitive Methodist, or a Wesleyan, or a Church-man, or an Independent, and I should say: "No, sir, you do not agree with me on certain points, I believe you are a child of God, but I will have nothing to do with you." I should then think the text would bear very hard on me. These are they who separate themselves, sensual, not having the spirit."

The Bible and Nature.

The Bible will not be less, but rather more prized by our occasionally turning from it to open another and equally divine volume, read some pages of the Book of Nature. Both are good books, and both are God's books; and he only looks on this great world aright, who, valuing it for something more valuable than the gold men draw from its rocky bowels, the flocks it pastures, the rich freights borne on its waves, and the harvests that wave on its fields, behold there, as in a glorious mirror, the wisdom and power of God-the good ness that shines in every sunbeam and falls in every shower.—Dr. Guthrie,

Envy.

Envy is one of the most despicable of fashions. There is scarcely a crime to which it will not lead its victims. It was envy that robbed the poor Naboth of his vineyard, and added murder to the theft. It was envy that led the guilty Absalom to desire the throne of his father David. It destroys all that is best and noblest in character. So subtle is it in its workings that we learn on the highest testimony that "Envy is rottenness of the bones;" it eats out all honor and manliness; it gives sleepless nights and restless days. Moreover, envy is utterly useless; it helps nobody, it effects no alteration, it wins no goal. As we read in Job, "it slayeth the silly one; and all sensible people must feel that there is marvelous silliness in envy.

Constant War on Evil.

A Church should be like an iron-clad battery, with a full tier of guns always loaded and out at the port-holes, driving straight into the harbors of iniquity, and besieging the Devil's strongholds. A person who believes it of supreme importance to fear the Lord and obey his command-ments, should carry himself with no complaisant and accommodating spirit of deference to every sort of opinion and passion that prevails in community, but as a vigi lant and open-eyed sentinel of righteous ness, expecting to find abominations in his progress, and intending to bring against them so much of the force of character and influence as he is able to employ.

A Word to Boys.

Begin in early life to collect libraries of your own. Begin with a single book; and when you find or hear of a first-rate book, obtain it, if you can. After a while get another, as you are able, and be sure to read it. Take the best care of your books: and in this way, when you are men, you will have good libraries in your heads as well as on your shelves.

Unprofitable Discourse.

Unprofitable discourse robbeth us of much time. Some simply employ their tongues in telling fabulous and filthy stories; others in discoursing of parties and opinions, and in talking of the faults and miscarriages of other men; some about the times, and inquiring after news. But let Christians, when they converse, imitate their Lord: the words that proceeded out of his mouth were gracious words.

Immortality of Thought.

Beautiful it is to understand and know that a thought did never yet die; that as thou, the originator thereof, hast gathered it, and created it from the whole past, so thou wilt transmit it to the whole future. It is thus that the heroic heart, the seeing eye of the first times, still feels and sees in us of the latest; that the wise man stands ever encompassed and spiritually embraced by a cloud of witnesses and brothers; and there is a living literal com munion of saints, wide as the world it-self, and as all the history of the world.

If You Believe, Act. I do not believe that any one ever had a religious spirit that came from heaven and conveyed the soul thither, without striving to let it be known by an active and consistent application of its principles to the duties of daily life. I do not believe any one ever sincerely loved the Savior, and understood the plan of salvation as the redeemed understand it, without experienceing a controlling desire to convey the same knowledge and wisdom everywhere among his friends and companions. I do not believe that anybody who has opinions which will be worth so much as a farthing rushlight in the day of trial and death, will abandon the right of holding and declaring these opinions on account of any bigotry, or intolerance or superstition that may be brought to beer against them.

MRS. ALLEN'S

Hair Restorer & Zylobalsamum Are so uniformly grateful and beneficial, that they are with justice called the natural strengtheners of the human hair. They are two entirely separate and distinct preparations; not to be used together at one time.

Mrs. Allen's Hair Restorer Never fails to satisfy the most refined and cultivated. A guarantee goes with every bottle, that it will quickly restore gray or white hair to its original youthful beauty, gloss and color, afternians a few times the hair will grow thicker and stronger. It will stop its falling and induce a healthy and luxuriant growth. It is an exquisite hair dressing, agreeable, harmless and healthy. Entirely different from most other preparations for the hair, its com-position and ingredients are nourishing, giving life and vigor to the Roots.

Mrs. Allen's Zylobalsamum This exquisite preparation is free from any sediment, and is a toilet treasure. The urgent want of a simple Hair Dressing, for the youth of both sexes, first induced the manufacture of the Zylobalsamum, and the sale of it is perfectly immense, not only in this country, but in Europe. EXTRACTS FROM A FEW LETTERS.

"Your Zylobalsamum is used by every member, young and old, of our family, and we consider it invaluable. Should any gray hairs appear, we shall try your Hair Restorer, which we hear very highly spoken of."

"Father and mother use your Hair Restorer, and are delighted with it. It soon restored their gray looks to their youthful color, but daughters and son still find in the Zylobalsamum all their hair requires." hair requires."
