Poetry. CRUISING. BY CARL SEIGNER. What are the days but islands, And sleep the sea of silence The flows about them all? There, when the moon is risen, The peaceful waters glimmer; But rosy-plashing, blithe! It is the soul that falls!

Every day's an island, A green or barren island, A lowland or a highland, That looks upon the sea. These fruitful groves are crowding; These barren cliffs are frowning; These channels, winding, The little boats that flee.

How many are the islands, The teeming, talking islands, That in the sea of silence The roving vessels float? Their number no man knoweth; They are the currents' secret; The tide returns less often, As each is left behind.

The sailors long to tarry— For rest they long to tarry— When at some island of fairy song they come ashore, With songs of island pleading They follow fate unending, And with the tide's ebbing Are drifted as before.

But sometimes in the sailing, The wind and waves sailing, The land upon the hillings, Of land upon the sea; The lowlands and the highlands, And the islands, and the islands, Behold the sea of silence— Behold the great white sea.

STORY. YENI, VIDI, VICI. BY RUBY MORRIMER. I was an only child, willful and selfish, so you may take it for granted I was a very disagreeable girl when I wanted to be. My nature was not wholly bad, for I had a good, true heart at the bottom of it all; it was only my luxurious surroundings that had made me what I was. I made many friends, but my wretched temper was the means of alienating many of them. For all that, I had a lover, Grant Wilder by name, a great, tall, handsome fellow, who vowed he loved me dearly. But how could such a noble, generous hearted man love a spoiled, obstinate girl like myself? It was utterly impossible, and I told him so. Oh, how I tried his patience! I wonder now, when I look back, that he did not leave me then and there.

You all talk about patient women, but never give the men credit for any patience. I tell you men are just as patient as women, and in some things a great deal more so; and if you don't believe it, just try one as I did. One of Grant's old schoolmates, Clinton Raymond, was going to give a grand ball, previous to his departure for California, and Grant insisted that I should go. It proved to be one of those fashionable, crowded affairs, where every one is bored to death, and you may rest assured that I arrived at home in no enviable state of mind. "And how did you enjoy it all?" asked Grant, drawing an ottoman up by my side, and sitting down.

"How could any one enjoy anything there?" I replied. "But it is just what I expected. Your friends are all such humbugs. I suppose you include yourself among the number?" "I assure you I am no friend of yours."

"Something dearer, then, perhaps?" "No, nothing dearer."

"Now, Rose, you know you love me," "I don't know anything of the kind, sir."

"But I do."

"You are very presuming, and I detest you, for it."

"No you don't," said he, coolly. "I tell you, I do."

"But you see, I know better."

"I will not stay another moment and listen to such small talk," said I, angrily. "So good night, Mr. Wilder."

"Good night," said he, arising and holding the door open for me to pass out.

"Was ever a man so provoking?" I exclaimed, as soon as I reached my room. "I don't believe he cares for me one bit." And having arrived at this conclusion, I sat down and had a good cry all myself. After that I felt better, and resolved that the next time Grant came I would treat him kindly and ask his pardon for what I had said. "Yes," said Florence; "I see he is much more attentive to me than he used to be; and besides that, he is so handsome that I know I shall be an object of envy to half of the girls in our circle."

"Dear me, Florence, how cooited you are! I never knew Mr. Wilder was so very dear to you as the ladies."

"You would not own it, if he was."

"And why not, Miss Impudence?" "Because you care so very for him yourself."

"Indeed, I think I have taken a very poor way to show it, if I do."

"Oh, that is your style of doing things."

"You forget in your haste to be so kind and attentive."

"Yes," said Florence; "I see he is much more attentive to me than he used to be; and besides that, he is so handsome that I know I shall be an object of envy to half of the girls in our circle."

"Dear me, Florence, how cooited you are! I never knew Mr. Wilder was so very dear to you as the ladies."

"You would not own it, if he was."

me, too. Well, Florence must leave or I would, and I told them so. "I can't insult her, Rose, dear," said mother; "bear with it a little longer. She will soon go home."

"But, mother, see what mischief she may do before she goes. You know Grant is with her constantly."

"Well, but if you don't care for him, what does it matter?"

"I felt like saying something naughty, but instead of that I walked away and tried to read. I had been there, perhaps, half an hour, when I heard voices, and Grant Wilder and cousin Florence entered the room. My first impulse was to leave, but I could not do so without Grant seeing me, so I remained where I was. Presently, I heard Florence say, 'Do you know, Grant, Rose quarrels with me almost every day. She is so angry because you call on me.'"

"I could not stay and listen to that, so I walked out and said calmly, 'Please take Miss Rose's name from a conversation she does not wish to adorn.'"

"They both looked surprised, but said nothing, and I left the room. I think Florence must have been afraid I should tell father what had passed, for she came to me, as I was coming down stairs next morning, and said: 'I was not going to say anything very bad about you, last night, Rose. I meant you no harm.'"

"I trust I know you well enough by this time," said I, coldly, "to understand what your motive was; no explanation is needed whatever."

"You are a cross-grained old maid," said she, sharply.

"And if I am, pray, what are you? You are the oldest," I replied.

She did not answer, and, happily, the rest of the day I was left in peace.

The next evening I knew Grant was coming, so I dressed myself with more than usual care, and went down in the parlor. Florence was there, and invented several plans to get rid of me, but all to no effect, for stay I would. Grant came after a while, and greeted me very cordially. In fact, he scarcely took any notice of Florence. I played and sang for him, and was my pleasant self once more. Grant saw the change, and looked pleased. I don't know but that I might say I was astonished, when Grant went to leave, to hear him ask me if I would not go as far as the gate with him.

"Can't I go, too?" chimed in Florence.

"No, not to-night," said he, pleasantly, "I only want Rose."

I knew it was wrong, but I could not resist the temptation of turning around and laughing at her when she said she would go, and I refused to go anywhere with Florence.

I grew lonesome in my room after they all had left, so I went down to the library, and taking a book, curled myself up on the sofa, and prepared to read, but I grew tired at last and fell asleep, and was awakened by hearing voices in the hall.

"Where is Florence?" I asked as mother and father entered the room.

"Oh, I left her back there with Mr. Wilder. They will be here directly."

"Mr. Wilder?" I exclaimed.

"Yes." And father gave me a look which plainly said, "I told you so."

Well, she should not see how great her triumph was, so I rushed up stairs and went to bed, but not to sleep, for I lay there listening to their voices, that floated up from below, until he went away. Have you ever been COMMERCIAL RATING. The trial in St. Louis against the Bradstreet Commercial Agency has brought out facts that should put merchants and commercial men, everywhere, on their guard.

From these statistics the Agency rates all the merchants in the city and surrounding country. The standing of parties are denoted by the combination of letters.

In the case before the St. Louis Courts, it appears that a Mr. A. A. Moller, a prominent merchant, discovered that his rating had been changed from "C. D. R." to "D. E."

Other testimony was presented showing the iniquitous proceeding of the Bradstreet institution. If this Agency is a sample of Commercial ratings the sooner they are all discarded the better for the business public.

Many of the States hold elections this fall. These elections are important as in many instances the Legislature will appoint United States Senators, and they are also important as preliminary to the Presidential elections.

The State will go Democratic of course, but the Republicans are wide awake and actively at work and confident of a decrease in the majorities heretofore polled by the Democratic party in that State.

On the 4th of September, Vermont and California hold their annual elections. Each State elects a Governor, State officers and a legislature.

A special election will be held in Texas, on the 4th of October, to elect four Representatives to congress. It formerly stood three Republicans, and one Democrat.

CHICAGO PURIFIED. We would not be understood as writing of the moral status of the great commercial mart of the Northwest, but of its stagnant pools and summer stench.

The canal in Chicago, for years has been, "how to purify the Chicago River," and thus remove the filth of the city that drains into that stream.

The Illinois and Michigan Canal, at the highest rating given to any merchant, and "D" the lowest.

The testimony now taken by the Congress Committee on Ku Klux, has been of such a character and amount that no doubt remains as to the actual condition of this organization, and the purpose they wish to accomplish.

IN PURSUANCE of an act of the Legislature, the people of Texas, at the ensuing election, will vote upon a proposition to divide the territory of the Commonwealth into three States.

According to accounts received at the War Department a very unhappy condition of affairs exists at present, among the Indians of northern California and Nevada.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES. At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the village of Buchanan held July 24th, 1871, there were present J. M. Roe, President; Messrs. Howe, Ross, Pease, Harris, and Graham, Trustees.

IN relation to granting of licenses within the village, it was, on motion, ordered by the Board that the license for the purposes herein mentioned shall be as follows, to-wit: All non-residents occupying a room as a saloon or for the sale of liquor, $100 per annum; for the sale of beer, $25 per annum; for the sale of wine, $25 per annum; for the sale of spirits, $25 per annum; for the sale of cigars, $25 per annum; for the sale of tobacco, $25 per annum; for the sale of lottery tickets, $25 per annum; for the sale of patent medicines, $25 per annum; for the sale of humbugs, $25 per annum.

ON motion, the account of Alonzo Sherwood for $46.15, for 3,660 feet of pine lumber, was allowed.

W. D. KINGSLEY, Clerk.

BERRIEN SPRINGS.—We never paid a visit to this village without being impressed by its beautiful location and the richness of the farming country surrounding it; but never were its beauties so fully appreciated as on our recent visit to it, than on last Friday. The merchants in this town enjoy a large trade, and some of them have been in business in the place for over twenty years. We spent a few hours very pleasantly in company with the County officials. Found them all busy, but found none of them actually working with a will, except his Hon. Judge Chapman. We would not fail to mention the excellent accommodations and conveniences we found provided at the DeLafayette House. "John" also rendered us valuable assistance in our work while in the village, for which he will please accept our thanks.

ACCIDENT.—We learn of a sad accident and death to the wife of John Rowe, who resides in the northwest part of Pipestone township. It appears that Mr. Rowe was securing his crop of hay, but was short of hands. His wife, on Tuesday last week, went out to drive the mower, but the horses taking fright became unmanageable, and she was thrown from her seat to the ground in front of the sickle. Her feet and lower limbs were so terribly cut and mangled that before a physician could be summoned from Keelerville she had suffered such a loss of blood as to cause her death, which occurred on Saturday.

THE DULL SEASON.—The dull season—the duller of the year—is now about over. Business men should not get discouraged, if their trade is short at this time, "There's a good time coming," and it will be here as soon as farmers sell their grain and the money they receive is put in circulation among us. Now is the time to prepare to do business. Our merchants will consult their own interests and the interest of the town, by putting their prices down to the very lowest figures, so that the place will secure more than ever before of the Fall trade.

UNION SCHOOL.—The following is the list of Teachers for the Buchanan Union School for the coming year: Prof. J. G. Laird, Principal; Miss Nash, Principal's Assistant and Preceptress; Miss Millard, Preceptress; Grammar School; Miss Alice Terriere, 1st Intermediate; Miss Maria Sampson, 2d Intermediate; Miss Edith Long, 1st Primary; Mrs. S. B. Strong, 2d Primary.

THE 2d Intermediate and 2d Primary rooms will be continued down town through the Fall term. It is expected that the new School House will be ready for occupation by the commencement of the Winter term.

STEAMER BURNED.—We neglected to mention, last week, of the loss of the steamer Joseph Barber, which left St. Joseph for Chicago on Tuesday evening of last week, with a cargo of fruit, and 32 passengers. When about 35 miles from St. Joseph she was discovered to be on fire, and in a few minutes she was completely enveloped in flames. All but the working crew were in their berths, and the passengers rushed on board almost despondent of clothing. Every portable object was thrown overboard and seized by the frightened fugitives. The steamer Corona was attracted by the flames and arrived in time to save 18 of the passengers, and the propeller Van Hootel, which also went to their assistance, saved 12. Two persons only were missing, a deck hand and the watchman. The cause of the fire is unknown. The vessel was valued at $21,000; insured for $7,000. She was owned by Mr. Chapman, and commanded by James Snow.

DIED.—A Mrs. Bradbery, living a few miles south of Niles, in this county, died on Thursday last week, at the advanced age of 81 years. She was buried in the dress in which she was married, 60 years ago, and her head was laid on a pillow which she had used in the cradle for all of her children.

CHILDREN AND UNRIPED FRUIT.—It would seem that nothing need be said to parents to have them prevent their children from cramming themselves with green apples, green cucumbers, and other unwholesome fruit which is abundant at this season of the year, yet, physicians say that three-fourths of the cases of sickness among children, which are growing quite numerous, are directly traceable to this source. Parents and guardians should teach children to exercise some restraint over their appetites for such unwholesome "trash."

THE GOOD TEMPLARS of Galien will hold a picnic near the village of Galien, on Thursday, August 3d. Mrs. Mansfield, of Buchanan, and others are expected to be present, and a good time is anticipated. The friends of the Temperance cause are cordially invited to attend.

T. N. CHILSON, Sec.

THE following is a pretty correct test of a man's business prosperity, though in some instances it may not be correct: A New York wholesale grocer, who has become rich in his business, has lately made the following revelation: He says his rule always was when he sold a bill of goods on credit, to immediately subscribe for the local paper of his debtor. So long as his customer advertised liberally and vigorously, he rested his advertising space, he took the fact as evidence that there was trouble ahead, and he invariably went for the debt. Said he, "the man who feels too poor to make his business known, is too poor to do business."

THE withdrawal of an advertisement is an evidence of weakness that business men are not slow to observe and act upon.

MR. WILCOX of the Milwaukee Sentinel, says: "Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder and Special Flavorings are the best, without exception, that are made in this country. They are growing daily in popular favor, and in every case where they are used give decided satisfaction. We are using them in our household, and speak from a knowledge of the case. These articles are not put into the market to compete in price with those of a low grade and inferior quality—they claim superiority in usefulness. Let those who read give them but a single trial and be satisfied."

WILCOX'S Anti-Periodic is infallible in the cure of Chills and Fever and all Fevers of miasmatic origin. It is essentially a specific and is no quack medicine. It is used in the Hospitals in New Orleans and by leading medical men throughout the South and West.

WILCOX'S Tonic has been used in the South for the last ten years by Dr. Wilcox, the discoverer, with the happiest results, and has been sold extensively for the last two years, by the present proprietors, throughout the Southern States, and has never failed in a single instance to effect a speedy and permanent cure. It is economical, because the dose is small, but a sure, and one bottle will cure two or more ordinary cases of Chills and Fever.

KINSON beats them all on Groceries.

PIANOS.—Every dollar expended in that which will make home attractive, the children happier, and add to their accomplishments and social abilities, is well invested. We must all have a certain amount of recreation, and especially do children require it. Economical people invest in that which yields the greatest amount of pleasure and social enjoyment out of the least amount of money investment. Viewed in this light, a good piano or organ would be the most profitable investment a man could make. A good piano will last a life time, and the revenue of pleasure which it returns every day to those owning and using them will more than compensate for the investment besides the property is as substantial and valuable to one as anything one could have. Of the pianos offered for sale, none are better toned and more durable than those of James A. Gray & Co., of Albany, N. Y., and sold wholesale and retail by Messrs. Whitney & Carrier, of Toledo, Ohio. A large number of these splendid instruments have been sold within the past few weeks in this county and so far as we can learn, all those who have bought or seen and heard them are unanimous in their praise.

It is a safe rule to buy of a responsible house whose warrant is of sufficient indemnity against loss. Messrs. Whitney & Carrier have the most extensive and complete establishment in the west. We commend them to our readers as gentlemen of unquestionable character and integrity. Those who patronize them will be honorably and liberally dealt with.

Burlington.

Leaving the East and arriving at Chicago or Indianapolis, how shall we reach the West? The best line is acknowledged to be the C. & M. Railroad, together with the B. & M. Railroad by the Iron Bridge at Burlington, and called the BURLINGTON ROUTE.

The main line of the Route running to Omaha, connects with the great Pacific Roads, and forms to-day the leading route to California. The Middle Branch, entering Nebraska at Plattsmouth, passes through Lincoln, the State Capital, and will this year be finished to Fort Kearney, forming the shortest route across the continent by over 100 miles.

Another branch of the B. & M., diverging at Red Oak, falls into a line running down the Missouri River, to Kansas City, and then to St. Louis, and thence to New Orleans, and all Kansas. Passengers by this route to Kansas, by a slight divergence, can see Nebraska also.

Lovers of fine views should remember the Burlington Route, for its towns "high-gleaming" from afar its tree-fringed streams—its rough bluffs and quarries—its corn-oceans stretching over the prairies further than the eye can reach.

Land-buyers will be sure to remember it, for they have friends among the two thousand, who have already bought farms from Geo. S. Harris, the Land Commissioner of the B. & M. R. R. at Burlington, Iowa, or among the four thousand homesteaders and pre-emptors who last year filed claims in the Lincoln land office, where "Uncle Sam" is rich enough to give us all a farm.

The best Teas in town are at H. Kinyon's.

County Correspondence. FROM THREE OAKS. The Martin Anniversary. July 24, 1871. In olden times, it frequently happened that the parents of a large family of children lived to see a numerous number of descendants gathered around them, but of late years such instances have been rare. Three Oaks can probably boast one of the largest family circles in the State. The picnic which is held annually by the descendants of Mrs. Catherine A. Martin, of this place, in honor of her birthday, was attended a few days since by about one hundred and fifty persons, mostly her descendants. The lady, on that day, arrived at the mature age of ninety-one years, and surrounded on that occasion by her numerous posterity, she enjoyed a truly happy day. The day has been observed for many years by the family, and Grandmother (as she is called) always enjoys them, and looks forward to their coming with pleasure. The exercises opened with singing, short speeches were made respectively by Rev. Mr. Hackney, Rev. Mr. Taylor, Rev. Mr. Bayd, and by Isaac W. Martin, one of the lady's grand children, who is a finished speaker, and one of the best orators in this portion of the country. On this occasion, he gave a historical sketch of the family, which was very interesting. After the speeches, came the dinner, which was enjoyed by old and young, and the rest of the day was spent in a social family visit.

It has been customary, each year, while celebrating Grandmother's birthday, to number her descendants. Last year, the number was one hundred and twenty, and strong hope was entertained that by this year they would be able to reach the round number of two hundred. Up to a few days previous to the anniversary, they were only able to number one hundred and ninety-nine, but just in time, news was received announcing the birth of another great, grand child, making the desired number of two hundred, and all hands rejoiced accordingly. Her posterity number as follows: Children, 12; grand children, 62; great grand children, 24; great, great grand children, 2. The number of living descendants is 138; the number married into the family is 55; making, at present, a family circle of 193 persons. Among this number there are six ministers, six merchants, and two doctors.

The given name for the family, for many years, was Isaac. As the result of that, it has been hard, lately, to distinguish the different Isaac Martins, and they are now designated something in the following manner: Big Isaac, Little Isaac, Old Isaac, Young Isaac, something's Isaac, Aunt Polly's Isaac, &c., &c. It is needless to say, that, for the present, at least, the mothers have caused to name their little Martins, Isaac.

Grandmother was born in Hunterdon County, New Jersey. Her father was a Revolutionary soldier, and she was a young lady about nineteen years of age, when the death of Washington occurred. She attended at that time one of the numerous funerals, which were held all over the land, in memory and honor of that great man, and now distinctly remembers the text from which the sermon was preached on that occasion.

She has witnessed, during her life, great and vast changes in our country, and in the world. At her birth, our Government was only four years old. From a population of only three millions, she has seen it increase to forty millions. From a weak and trembling Republic, scorned by foreign nations, she has lived to see it become a strong and firm Government, so knowledgeable and respected by the whole world. She has lived a careful, consistent, Christian life, and for sixty years has been a member of the church.

What a great influence a mother has. "Train up a child in the way he should go," and in her descendants it has been clearly proven, that "what he is old he will not depart from it," for in this family there are eighty-four professors of religion, and among the whole number there is not a single drunkard, nor has the peace of the family been disturbed by a single quarrel.

Although a widow of the past 26 years, she has lived a pleasant, untroubled life, and she can now look back upon a life that has been well spent, and with the fruits of her labor all around her, now occupies a position of the highest respect in the hearts of her descendants. KIRK.

FROM "BEND OF THE RIVER." July 24th, 1871. EDMOND RECORDED.—My statement in last week's Record of Mr. Valentin had thrashed seven acres of wheat from which he got 217 bushels, an average of 81 bushels per acre, may be considered as something "big" by the farmers of the western and northern parts of our county, but will certainly not be regarded as anything extra in this part of the county.

I have, myself, raised as high as 82 bushels per acre on land that had received no extra preparation. One of my neighbors had a field of 87 acres this year from which he gets about Sunday Reading.

KNEELING AT THE THRESHOLD. I'm kneeling at the threshold, weary, faint and sore; Waiting for the dawning, for the opening of the door; Waiting till the Master shall bid me rise and come To the glory of His presence, to the gladness of His home.

A weary path I've traveled, 'mid darkness, storm and strife; Bearing many a burden, struggling for my life; But now the morn is breaking, my toil will soon be o'er; Kneeling at the threshold, my hand is on the door.

methinks I hear the voices of the blessed as they stand, Singing in the sunshine of the far-off sinless land; Oh, would that I were with them, amid their shining throng, Mingling with their worship, joining in their song!

The friends that started with me have entered long ago; One on the left me struggling with the foe, Their pilgrimage was shorter, their triumph surer won; How longingly they'll hail me, when all my toil is done!

With them the blessed angels, that know no grief or sin; I see them by the portals, prepared to let me in; O Lord, I wait Thy pleasure, Thy time and way; But I'm wasted, worn and weary; O Father, bid me rest. —Gladie.

LIFE'S DUTIES AND PLEASURES. To suppose that individuals live and have a right to live for their own pleasure and enjoyments, is an absurdity that refuses itself. A lifetime is scarcely a distinguishable atom in the revolving ages; and is no more worthy of attention as a part of eternity than is a particular grain of sand on the sea beach. If persons were content to live for their own pleasure; they might as well—indeed, it would seem better, not have been created at all. A life devoted to pleasure and enjoyment loses all its interest and significance the moment it is ended; it is a blank, empty when it is ended, leaving nothing behind. We all have a right to such reasonable comforts and enjoyments as we can secure to nullify the trials and hardships of our condition; but to make the pursuit of pleasure, wealth, and honor, and the enjoyments of these, the object of life is to waste it entirely. Our sojourn here is only a probation for a life that will last forever, and the true view of life is in the solemn and awful reflection that what we do now will cast a coloring on our condition through all eternity. We are accustomed to wish for our friends a career of unmixed happiness and pleasure; but such wishes are both vain and foolish. Trials and hardships are as necessary to the perfection of our nature as fire is to the tempering of steel, and though they are hard to bear, sometimes, they are genuine blessings in the end. The richest experience of our whole lives are those shadowed and darkened by bereavements, disappointments and afflictions; these trials and these alone can extract the real gold from the dross of our natures, and prove what we are worth.

One Object. There is a kind of greediness in the complaint that we cannot have all kinds of pleasures at once. Some are utterly incompatible with others. Much material good must be resigned, if we would enjoy the full happiness springing from moral excellence, and more spiritual joys must be relinquished, if we determine to take risks to gain material advantages. It is well for each one to look this truth fully in the face, and to decide what shall be the permanent object of his life. Having thus decided, it is equally essential that he courageously accept his chosen portion, cheerfully resigning whatever advantages are incompatible with it. Many fail from just this clear sightedness about their aims. They desire wealth, they wish for a good name, they want friends and leisure, and ease; they like self-indulgence, yet they prize health, strength and vigor; they also wish for a good conscience, and for the joys which spring from a virtuous, self-denying life; but they have never deliberately made up their minds as to which of all these they prize the most, or which they are resolved to possess at all hazards. When this is really done, and the mind fully made up to sacrifice any or all other advantages that may hinder the attainment of the one supreme object, life may be said to be truly begun.

The Trustful Spirit. God has marked implicitness and simplicity of faith with peculiar approbation. He has done this through the Scriptures, and does so daily in the Christian life. An unsuspecting, unhesitating spirit he delights to honor. He does not delight in a credulous, weak, and unsteady mind. He gives us full evidence when he calls and leads; but he expects to find in us a disposed heart. Though he gives us not the evidence of sense, yet he gives us such evidences as will be heard by an open ear and followed by a disposed heart. "Thou art, because thou hast said so, thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and yet believed." We are witnesses what an open ear and disposed heart will do in the world. If wealth is their pursuit; if a place present itself before them; if their persons, families and affairs, are the object, a whisper, a hint, a probability, a mere change is a sufficient ground of action. It is this very state of mind with regard to religion which God delights in and honors. He seems to put forth his hands, and to say, "Put thy hand into mine; follow all my leading; keep thyself attentively to every turn." —Cecil.

Brighten Up. This is the best direction, whenever the skies lower out of doors or in. Nothing lightens labor like cheerfulness, and nothing makes the wheels of toil drag so heavily as a sullen or angry spirit. There is no grace that can equal it in a woman, and with all our daughters' accomplishments, let us strive to make this one of the chief. It is almost as contagious as bad temper, but not quite.

To things which you bear with impatience you should accustom yourself, and by habit you will bear them well.
