Poetry. OVER THE HILL FROM THE POOK-HOUSE.

A Sequel to "Over the Hill to the Poor-House, by Will M. Carllon. BY RACHEL A. SMITS Over the hill at the poor-house, In the twilight so dim and gray,

A woman is quiet,y lying, And breathing her life away. All alone in the sick-ward, With nobody near to ald,

And no one to care but Our Father Who heareth the prayer she said · God bless thee, my heartless children; They can't help but feel remorae, When they look at the shrowd and white windings

That cover my stiffened corse. "They'll some on 'am come to the funeral-My Charley and his pretty wife-And they'll wish, as they cry by my coilln, That I could come back to life

Parewell to my dearest children, I did just the best I could: I know that I reised em all thritty.

I tried hard to raise 'em good,

"Bat children will never lister To half what their mother says And may be I whipped 'om too soldom, And gave 'em too ready praise."

The last fend excuse was spoken And still was the wintry air. But the spirit had left the poor body, And only a corpse was there.

The poor-master sent the message To each of the children five, "Their mother had somehow, right lately, Been grumpy and didn't thrive.

"And so she had died that mornin'-Would be buried the followin' eva-And any might come to the funeral Who could most conveniently leave."

But Charles and his wife were traveling,

And said "that he never could stand it

To be among folks so low? Rebecca and Iko were distant, And Susan would go if she could,

While Thomas was 'shame to go,

But then they were usin' the horses To hand the winter's wood." Over the bill from the poor-house

There were those in the neighborhood who

But the boy laughed, and turning on his heel, walked away. Two day's afterwards he left home for a week's hunting in the mountains but the second night after his depart ure the neighborhood was aroused by the startling news that old Mr. Mer cer had been murdered by his nephew. One of the servants passing the house at night, heard a cry, and sceing Eating House and Ice Frank's window open he sprang in and walked across the hall to Mr. Mercer's chamber, from whence the cry came. Lying upon the floor was the old man, dead, while near him HAS fitted up rooms in Dunbar's Rick, second door east of the Bank, where she intends to keep an East of the Bank, where she intends to keep an East of House and an Ice Cream Salcon.

The knife with which Mr. Mercer was killed was one he had given to Frank some days before, and was a large dirk knife encased in a silver scabbard. Pale as death, but showing no signs of fear or guilt upon his handsome face, the prisoner sat unmoved by his sentence, which was to die on the gallows. When asked if he had aught to say, Frank arose, and looking around the court room, in a clear voice answered:

"I have! Circumstantial evidence has condemned me! I admit it looks as if I did the deed, but I am guilt-less of murder! Dropping my percussion cap-box in a mountain stream, I returned home for more; for without caps my gun was useless. It was a lovely night, and I determined to enter the house by my room window, get the caps, and return without awakening my uncle. I tied my horse to the fence, sprang into the window, and then heard a loud crash, a call out, and a shriek in the direction of my uncle's room. I rushed thither—a dark form dashed by me in the uncertain light of the roomand I fell over something upon the floor. With fear in my heart, I arose, lighted a candle, and saw my uncle's body covered with blood, gold scattered upon the floor, and my own knife, which had done the deed, lying near, and thus was I found by the negro, and seen by the peddler. As God is my witness, I did not murder the good old man, who has protected me throughout life, and whom I loved as though he was my own father. I am guiltless of the deed, but submit to my

A silence fell upon all; there were, however, but few who believed the youth's statement; among the latter was Mr. Dewe's and his family, who, through all, remained staunch friends. Frank Mercer was to be hung; to lows, and hundreds flocked to the littake place, and see him die. How were they disappointed to find that the night before he had escaped! How, no one knew, but he had left a note addressed to the jailor, thanking him for the kindness shown him while in his charge and his regret that his escape might cause him trouble, but saying he had an opportunity of escaping, and took advantage of it, for he had no idea of dying an ignominous death for an act he was not guilty of, merely to gratify the curiosity of a gaping crowd. Freedom was offered him, and he accepted it, and he hoped he would yet be able to prove his in nocence. This was about the substance of the letter, and when it was published in the local paper, there were some who were glad that the boy had escaped the gallows.

Mr. Mercer's property was, in his will, all left to Frank, and it was found to be considerable. Trustees assumed charge of it, and before long the quiet community had settled down to its usual routine, and the murder and escape were, in a short time, almost forgotten.

Ten years passed away, and no word of the fugitive had been heard, and people believed him dead. One exception was Mary Dewes, now grown to womanhood; she had never believed him dead, and through her life had treasured Frank's image in her inmost heart, the mystery that hung around him but adding strength to her regard. Her sisters had married, her mother was dead, and, together with her father, they had lived at the old Business calling Mr. Dewes to Havana, he took Mary with him, and they set sail from Charleston in a fine ship running South. They had been some days at sea, when, in the dead of night, the fearful cry of "fire" was heard, which aroused all from slumber. In vain were efforts made to quench the flames: The seamen in fright rushed into the only available boat, and it sank with them, and left them struggling in the ocean, borne away by the wind and the waves, while Mr. Dewes and Mary, the captain of the ship and a few others, were huddled away upon the stern, awaiting the fearful doom that must to all appearances overtake them.

"Sail, ho!" The joyous cry came from the cap tain, who had been straining his eves over the ocean, in hopes of seeing some vessel coming to save them.
Swiftly flying toward them came a low, rakish three-masted schooner, which ever and anon sent up a light, to prove to those on board the burning ship that succor was near.

Hark! the deep boom of a gun is heard, and as the captain listens he exclaims, "Miss Dewes, we are all right now; cheer up, for there comes a vessel of war to our aid." "Ship ahoy!" came inringing tones from the schooner, as she came near the burning ship, which was being driven rapidly along by the wind. "Ahoy;" answered the captain.

The trial came off and the charges | table, and as he entered, Mary sprang towards him. "Frank Mercer! Oh! it is you-

One glance at the beautiful girl and although years had passed, Frank nized the playmate whom he had loved so well, and whom he had never ceased to think of. Mr. Dewes came forward, and what a joyful meeting was there; but seeing a cloud, as if of bitter memories, come over the young captain's face, Mr. Dewes said, "First let me relieve your mind of one thing. Your innocence in Virginia has been fully established; for a negro runaway, hung the other day for killing a woman, confessed just before his death that he had murdered your uncle, and your arriving when you did had prevented him from getting the gold, but made him escape from the house. He knew your uncle kept a large amount of money, and you being away, as he thought, he pro-cured your knife, and with it committed the fatal deed!"

Frank listened to Mr. Dewes, almost breathless, and then, when he had concluded he bowed his face in his hands and wept like a child.

"But, come in," said Mr. Dewes, at length, "we are hungry and need breakfast; and are dying to know how you became a captain in the Mexican

. "My story is easily told, my dear friends; for, after escaping from prison through your kindness, I went to Mexico, entered the navy, and, having rendered some service, rose to my present command, which has been the means of saving your lives." Little more can be added.

Frank resigned his commission and returned home, where he was lionized by the entire community. He came in possession of his estates, which were greatly increased in value; and in six months afterward, in the very town where he was to have had the hangman's halter placed around his neck for death, he had the noose of matrimony thrown around him for life, and the bride was Mary Dewes. Thus his life had been both dark and bright in a remarkable degree.

A Seven Years' Search for an Reir to 8150,000—Re is found in a CityPrison, Locked for Being a Common Drunk-

Many years ago there lived in the State of Delaware, a family of the name of Fisher, who commanded the respect of all who knew them, and were well-to do in a finan cial point of view. There was one son in the family, who was a very wild and "devil-may care" sort of a fellow of about twenty-four years of age, who, ten years since, left home to "see the world." little over two years he found himself in New York City, friendless and pennyless: wine, bad women, and fast company having in that short space of time brought him down to one of the lowest rounds in the ladder of life.

About this time, the war of the rebellion broke out, and he feeling himself disgraced by his conduct, and being ashamed to return to his family, enlisted in one of the first regiments of volunteers which left the Empire City to battle for the Union. He followed the flag through thick and thin, and when Richmond had fallen he did not lay down his musket, but lent his service to Uncle Sam again, and joined the regular army.

After he left his home no tidings were had or him. Shortly after his absence his father died. Several years ago, the mother diel, and when her will was admitted to probate, it was discovered that she had left to her truant son real estate and money at interest valued at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The executors of the will did everything in their power to discover the whereabouts of the heir. Letters were sent to persons far and near who had known him; advertisements were inserted in the newspapers, but no satisfactory responses were received, and all hope of ever seeing him again was at last given up. When he entered the army he never wrote to his relations concerning the step he had taken, and the result was that no search was made for him in that direction.

A few days since a visitor from the East, while on a tour seeing the sights of San Francisco, chanced to visit the city prison, and while looking at the occupants of the different cells, he saw a face, that of a man about thirty-five years of age, pressed hard against the iron bars. He watched the features for a few moments, and then addressing the owner of the face, asked him his name and place of nativity. The party addressed replied that it was Fisher, and that he was from Delaware.

"On what charge are you here?" asked the visitor. "Common drunk," curtly replied the prisoner.

A few words more were exchanged, and the visitor became satisfied that the prisoner was the missing heir for whom the sum of $150,000 was waiting. It appears that Fisher, after enlisting in the regular army, found his way to this country with his regiment, and a couple of months ago was discharged, his term of enlistment having expired. He immediately took to drinking to such an extent out medicines injurious to the constitution, the necessity of abandoning business or involving great expense. Many object to call on me because I travel and visit appointed places, having been imposed upon so often by traveling quacks. I am not of that class of pretenders as you will perceive by my writings. I adhere strictly to the principles of honor and integrity. My visits have been made regularly for years, and will be so continued. . I claim no more knowledge than may be acquired by any intelligent physician by the same experience, time, and entire devotion to the treatment of this class of diseases. The great difficulty is patients wait until they have tried every nostrum before they call on me; their constitutions are then run down, and it embarasses a cure, but notwithstanding these retarding influences my success is unparalleled. My system of treating diseases harmonizes with nature, my first principle is to remove the cause, having done this, in the early stages of disease, there is no difficul-ty in effecting a cure. The sick are invited to call, an unbiased opinion invariably given. Consultation free, and no encouragement of a cure unless there is a known chance for recovery. In my future publi-cations I shall speak more particularly of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Lung and the other day a little son of a well known bank officer in Wall street lost his purse while coming from Central Park, and a stranger, seeing his discomfort, paid his railroad fare, three cents. The boy, thanking him, said, "If you will tell me your name, sir, I will bring it to you to-morrow." "Oh no," said the gentleman, "never mind about it." The boy persisted, saying his father never allowed him to run in debt. "I will not give you my name," replied the gentleman, "but I live at No. — on — street." The next morning the door bell rung at that house, and our little hero told the amused servant maid his errand. "Which of the gentlemen is it?" said she, "there are several in the family." The boy twisted on his heel, and after a moment's thought said, "Have you a photograph book in the house?" She brought it, and turning over its pages, he said, pointing one, "That's my man. Please give him these three cents, and tell him the boy who borrowed it in the cars yesterday left it to pay his debt." Don't be too Sensitive.

There are some people-yes, many people-always looking out for slights. They cannot carry on the daily infercourse of the family without some offense is designated. They are as touchy as hair triggers. If they meet an acquaintance on the street who happens to be pre-occupied with business, they attribute his abstraction in some mode personal to themselves, and take umbrage accordingly. They lay on others, the fault of their irritability. A fit of indigestion makes them see impertinence in everybody they :come in contact with. Innocent persons, who never dreamed of offense, are astonished to find some unfortunate word or some momentary taciturnity, mistaken for an insult. To say the least, the habit is unfortunate. It is so far the wiser to take the more charitable view of our fellow-beings, and not suppose a slight is intended unless the neglect is open and direct. After all, too. life takes its use in a great degree from the color of our mind. If we are frank and generous, the world treats us kindly. : - It, on the contrary, we are suspicious, men learn to be cautious to us. Let a person get the reputation of being touchy, and everybody is under more or less restraint; and in this way the chances of an imaginary insult are vastly increased.

Another Remarkable Surgical Feat. A few weeks ago we choronicled the particulars of a frightful accident to little Freddy Giles, a bright lau of five or six years of age, at the Galt House. Freddy was playing upon the stairway in the hotel, and tell a distance of seventy feet, alighting upon a stone floor, and was picked up apparently a lifeless, shapeless mass. The lad fell a distance of seventy feet, striking in the fall the projecting corner of a staircase, breaking an inch board across the grain, and then further down breaking an oak baluster one inch in diameter, and finally landing upon the stone floor. Nine separate and distinct fractures and a wound upon the head similar to the scalp wounds of the Indians, were produced by

into his lungs 900 lbs. of Oxygen; into his stomach I,500 lbs. of water, and 800 lbs. of solid food; 3,200 lbs., or over one and a half tons. This one and a half tons is discharged from the body through the intestinal canal, kidneys, lungs, skin and mucous membranes. During the passage of water and food through the intestina ed by the lacteals into the thoracic duct, and is emptied into the blood before it enters the lungs. The Oxygen which enters the lungs at every inspiration is absorbed into the blood, and the Carbon in the blood is given off to the atmosphere at every expiration. The blood then returns from the left ventricle, laden with all the materi als for supplying the tissues, and is distrib-

removal. In youth, the supply is greater than the waste, and the body increases in weight. In middle age, the supply and waste is about the same. In old age, the waste is greater, than the supply, with few exceptions. The perverted action of the waste and supply of the system is its diseased condition, and pain is the result .-The approximate and remote causes of disease are numerous, and the work of man, and not his maker. In support of this assertion, it is only necessary to refer to final causes to establish the fact that pain, sickness and premature death were ends contemplated in the creation, is a supposition with all that nature elsewhere teaches of the benevolence of the Creator, from the fact that wild animals and reptiles are almost or wholly exempt from disease, although many of them inhabit regions more filled with missma(l) than any of the abodes of men. &c. And the maladies of the human race are found to surpass those of the brutes in number, complication and fatality, to a degree fully as great as that in which man's habits are more artificial and unnatural than theirs. Still farther, those among the human species who lead the most artificial life, are ever the most subject to disease.-There, then, is proof written in sunbeams! There we have a regular series of results,step by step departing from the condition of simple nature; and by the same steps, departing from the highest strength and happiness, and sinking into an atmosphere of pain and premature death. Diseases then are not chargeable on "chances," or "Nature," or "Providence;" they are the results of unnatural habits and conditions of life Man brings disease upon himself from inattențiou, recklessuess or ignorance on the ness, anger, excitements of the feelings, deep emotions, excessive indulgence of the passions. This last cause produces more incompetency for successful exertion and leads to more diseases, a hundred fold more, than is ever dreamed of by the mass of community. The person who abuses the gifts God has given, indulges to excess, frequent in fits of passion, easily angered, without patience fails to control their temper must perish prematurely. For all these wear out, consume, and abstract from the powers of life faster than by rest and nourishment, we can add to, repair, and reinvig-orate them. TORIES. The expectation of all those who go west to purchase land is that as soon as manufactories are established the price of land will be inhanced from 25 to 50 per cent. Such an advance in the price of real estate is not altogether speculative, as has been proven many times from the earliest settlement of our country down to the present day. The introduction of seen a day without rain while in the manufactories into agricultural com- country. munities anywhere and everywhere brings together the essential elements which comprise a wealth-producing enterprise. The farmer and manufacturer each has a need of the other's supply, and the closer the connection between the two the less will be the our journey behind, and I am sure cost of exchanges, and of course the the conclusion we arrive at in Amerigreater the saving to both parties. ca, as regards pool our grain could be bartered for Ireland, is all bosh. cloth at a manufactory within sight of the field where it grew, that would same grain to Liverpool to pay for cloth woven at Yorkshire.

Home factories add value to the farm by affording a home market. A home market saves the cost and expenses of transportation, and the profits of intervening traders, and besides, saves the time and delay in the returns. Manufactories and agriculture, when they go hand in hand, besides securing the advantages we have mentioned above, bring together a diversity of pursuits, stimulate in-dustry, attract a desirable immigration, and in many ways promote the welfare of the place. The future of a place is considered the most hopeful and promising where you find a combination and development of these two great leading interests.

In the settlement of this country the movement was characterized by a rude society, struggling with hardships and privations, and leading a semibarbarous life, and for the comforts they did enjoy were compelled to ship off the best the land produced. The South, owing to the existence of slavery, has also adopted an expensive and wasteful system of agriculture, and relied chiefly upon the exports of | will not. a few staple products.

In the further settlement of the "great West," and in the recent change inaugurated in the South, better things are expected. Our railroads are penetrating the wilderness possible to at once occupy the lands with all the arts of civilization. There farmer and manufacturer, side by side, which is the key note to American progress. The right spirit was evinced by the Minnesota farmer, who was told that it would cost him a bushel of wheat to get a bushel to New York market. Said he, "We don't intend to ship our wheat to New York. We are going to build grist mills, and manufacture flour for home consumption." Let us do all we can to encourage and sustain our home manufactories.

THE COLLECTION OF TAXES.

Most of the Western States have provided for the collection of the annual tax in mid-winter. This is the season of the year when the greatest amount of private paper matures; the avenues to market are principally closed, and the prices for all kinds of produce at their lowest ebb. The months of January and February are the most inconvenient of the year for the drawing of large sums of money from active circulation. The policy of collecting millions of dollars in the State, County and Township at this time may well be questioned. It would seem that the better plan would be to collect taxes when business is the most active, and to give the tax payer the privilege, if desired, of paying half his taxes semi-annually, instead of being compelled to pay the whole at once. This system has been adopted in Ohio, and it works admirably. The semi-annual settlements are fixed for the 15th of February and the 20th of August, and the taxes fall due on the 20th of June and the 20th of December of each year. The citizen can pay all his taxes at once, or only one-half at a time, as is most convenient. The advantages of this system are that the disbursements are made whenever occasion may require. At no time is a large amount in hands of depositors. It is kept in circulation, and the people have the use of their money the most of the year. By the old policy large amounts of money are especially appropriated, and frequently a long period of time elapses between the collection of the taxes and the return of the money into general circulation. Most of the Western States are actually stripped of funds at the very time when the money is most needed. The markets are the best in the spring, and shortly after harvest. The worst and most inconvenient season for the collection of taxes is at the time of the year when they are now made. A change of the time of the settlement and collection of taxes is every way desirable, and the subject is one well worthy of attention.

Letter from Scotland. By permission, we are enabled to lay before our readers the following letter from Mr. A. F. Ross, of the firm of Ross & Son, to his father in this place. It will be read with interest by "Frank's" numerous friends:

THE QUEEN'S HOTEL, GLASGOW,

_ July 15th, 1871. DEAR FATHER:-I arrived in this city, last evening, at 10 o'clock, and, since I last wrote you, (I believe from Killarney) I have had a very pleasant time indeed. Have visited all the points of interest in Ireland, such as old castles, Giants Causeway, Dublin, Belfast, &c., &c., and am very glad to leave Ireland behind, as we have not

I find all the available land to be in a high state of cultivation, and the roads, by far, superior to our own. The people, as a class, are jolly, good natured and witty. We all think we are leaving the pleasantest part of ca, as regards poor, down-trodden Belfast is one of the finest cities we visited, and is great for its manuevidently be better than to ship the factories of linen, &c. The streets are wide and clean, and kept in splendid condition. The buildings throughout the country are not as fine as at home, but of a more substantial construction-all built of stone, and the ornamented part quite heavy. All the cities are of this description, except Belfast, which is a city of brick; one brick is about equal to two of ours, and the joints between twice as large.

The Bank of Ireland, at Dublin, the largest building of the kind I have ever seen. It is in the old Parliamentary Hall, and the room where the "old boys" held the meetings vet remains as when used hundreds of vears ago-same furniture, tables, &c. There is a guide furnished you, who points to all the objects of interest, and, on leaving, you pay him a sixpence. The Botanic and Royal Zoological Gardens, at Dublin, are very grand, perhaps, now, the finest in the world, since the ones at Paris have been destroyed. There are plants, woods, animals, &c., from every part of the world, all of which live, with the exception of toads and snakes; they

There are no busses run plant the producer and consumer, the from the hotels, and most of these are run by landladies; and, in fact, the servants, waiters, &c., are girls, and men are of but little use only as porters. .

This morning, after breakfast, we took carriages and visited the parks, Cathedral, and the immense ship building, the largest in Scotland. Here is where most of the ocean steamers are built. All the parks have statues of Queens, Princes, Sir Walter Scott, and other notables of ancient and modern times, and pronounced by everybody as being very fine, as indeed they are. We are seeing the city at a great disadvantage, on account of its being a holiday now and places of business will be closed the entire time. But one thing we notice here the same as in Ireland, and that is, almost every other building has a sign over the door, of Wines, Spirits, &c. The better class of peo-ple are out of town to some of the many watering places, and the streets and parks are thronged with the working people, and the greater portion of them pretty full of Scotch whisky. It is their "4th of July" now, and they are allowed to do about as they please. We shall leave here in the morning for Edinburgh, and from there to a few small places, and then for London. Should you write me, direct to Grand Hotel, Paris, as we shall be there in three or four weeks. I am feeling first-rate; never better. Eat four or five times a day, and take lots of exercise on foot and walker's line. My love to all.

Your affectionate son, FRANK.

HARTFORD, July 24th, 1871. Editors of the Record.—Our pleasant summer has more than half passed away, and we have not had much overpowering heat, and although the dry weather in spring greatly injured our grass crop, yet latterly, showers have been more frequent, and prospects are more favorable, though the grass crop is everywhere very light. This is not a fruit growing country, but there is an unusual scarcity of apples this season. Strawberries were 35 cents a quart, and other small fruits in proportion. Our Michigan farmers would soon be out of debt, if they could sell at the prices here.

The statement in your paper concerning the population of Hartford, should have been 40,000 instead of 50,000, and also, that the park contains over 40 acres instead of 100 acres. The legislature, which holds its session in Hartford this year, commencing the first of May, is about to close this week, having had a longer session than usual, on account perhaps, of the contention of the rival parties taking so much time. It lies by the sidewalk, as near the spot as can be, for the carriage road now passes over where the tree stood. A company of soldiers from New Haven, once visited the tree, and tried how many could pack themselves inside. Twenty-five succeeded in getting into it at one time. Another tradition is, that some unlucky boys got inside, and built a bonfire, but were detected in season to save the tree. A patch of zinc was then put over the hole, and a strong fence placed around it. When it was prostrated by a gale of wind, the city bells tolled as for the loss of a great friend.

Terrible Accident at Nashville-Young Lady Burned to Death.

Yours respectfully.

About 1 P. M. Monday the 24th, the cry of fire was raised in the street at Nashville, the kitchen of the house occupied by J. M. Roe, Esq., being enveloped in smoke, and giving terrible promise of bursting in a brief moment or two, into uncontrollable flames. The excited populace rushed to the house and by indomitable exertions, succeeded in reducing the fire before the main building had been much damaged.

While the most of the people had been laboring to subdue the flames, a few had been giving their attention to a young lady named Bliss-a resident of Charlotte -who had been the cause of the accident and of her own death. As nearly as we can learn the circumstances, they are as follows: The family had just concluded their noonday meal, and Miss Bliss had gone to the kitchen for the purpose of washing the dishes. Needing some warm water, and the fire not burning very briskly, she seized a can containing kerosene, and began pouring some into the stove. In an instant, the can exploded, throwing the blazing fluid around the room, and completely saturating the clothing of the unfortunate girl, whose haste thus proved her own destruction.

Blinded with the flame, her hair and clothing all ablaze, her naked arms covered with the insatiable fluid, she ran into the room in which Mrs. Roe had just lain down with her little child, who was seriously sick. Mrs. Roe in her efforts to extinguish the flames which were rapidly consuming the clothing of the frightened girl, burned herself severely and will long be a sufferer thereby. Staying in the house but a moment, Miss Bliss ran into the open air, and when first seen by those who were hurrying to the place of the catastrophe, the flames were burning so high around her, as to render her almost invisible. When they were subdued, and the few remnants of her clothing removed, it was found that almost the entire surface of her body, excepting from her knees downward, was burned until the skin hung in loose folds therefrom. So severe were her injuties, that she never fully realized them, and without suffering, apparently, to a very great degree, she lingered until about

3 P. M., and died. Her parents were sent for, and on the next train, to behold a sight that must forever be present to their anguished memories. They have the deepest sympathy of all who were witnesses of the terrible event which deprived them of a daughter, and hung the lurid pall of sadness over the pleasures of a happy house-

We cannot conclude this notice of this sad occurrence, without again calling attention to the daily and almost universal, criminal use of kerosens. Every week our exchanges bring accounts of accidents similar to this just recorded, varying only in the nature of their terrible accessories —the result being ever the same—the death of the one who caused the accident.

So often has the press called attention to the uncertain nature of this dangerous compound, that it can hardly be deemed an accident where persons defiantly dare the consequences of an explosion. We have ceased to expect that they will heed even the lesson of such a bitter experience as this, and next week for some other "rashly importunate," in some other locality, we shall have to enter a record not for ten days. All the manufactories | unlike the one we have just made of the catastrophe in Nashville.—Hastings Ban-

Ku-Klux.

The main points of the report of the Ku-Klux Sub-Committee which visited South Carolina, will be as follows: 1. That in all the insurrectionary States, and generally diffused, though not found in every county, is an oath-bound, secret organization, working only at night, and its members always in disguise, with offi-cers, signs, signals, pass-words, and all necessary paraphernalia, with the pledged and sworn purpose of putting down the Republican and putting up the Democratic

2. That this organization came into being a few months previous to the last Presidential election, during which can-vass it was in its most vigorous condition, but is now, through all the South, with more efficient discipline and effective direction than ever, reviving in preparation for the next Presidential campaign,

3. That this Ku Klux organization is a premeditated and determined scheme for carrying the South at the next election of President, and so, by securing the entire electoral vote of that section, make sure of the election of the Democratic nominee. 4. That officers and establishers of these "dens" as they call the separate bands, are leading and active Democratic politicians of the South. 5. That the scheme has the hearty good will of a large section of the Democratic party in all these States, and the acquiescence of nearly the entire party.

A suit was commenced Friday in the Morgan county (Ill.,) Circuit Court by Rebecca W. Vail, Wm. H. Carson, Nancy Roe, Mary Baker and eight others, against Kitty Flynn, Thomas M. Carson, Thomas Roe and fourteen others. The bill alleges that on a day too remote to be. mentioned with certainty, but about one hundred years ago, one Wm. Roe, of the State of Virginia, became possessed, by discovery, of a diamond worth $800,000, and that this stone is now in possession of Thos. Carson, of Jacksonville. The plaintiffs ask that the defendants be compelled to bring this gem into court, and that a receiver be appointed by the court to sell it and distribute the proceeds among the heirs. The value of this stone was but

The cause of the bridge falling, it is said, was that the rapid current in the North channel had undermined the piles upon which rested upon which one end of the draw should rest when in place, was so far thrown out of line as not to give the stringers any place upon which to rest. Accidents of this kind are becoming so common that many deem it expedient that the use of kerosene be entirely abandoned. Three-fourths of the deaths that occur from the use of kerosene are clearly attributed to care- | sunrise and noon, and a slight shortlessness and negligence.

us to state how the Chicago Weekly Post can be furnished to clubs for one dollar a year. We will answer this question very briefly: The publishers of the Post print a daily, tri-weekly, somi-weekly and weekly. Some of the matter which appears in the daily, without the cost of re-setting, appears also in the tri-weekly, semi-weekly and weekly. Nearly the entire read ing matter in the weeklies is found in other editions of the paper. They can well afford to furnish the weekly for the cost of paper and the cost of running it through the press, as there is but little expense for setting type, and it serves as an advertisement for the other publications of the paper. This advantage enables them to offer their paper at a very reasonable price. We advise every one, after he has subscribed for his home paper, to take a weekly, semi-weekly, tri-weekly, or even a daily, if he can afford it, of one of these leading newspaper publications of the country. They will all of them tell him, however, that for local matters he must depend on his county paper. They cannot have reporters in every township in the various counties, and if they should, they could not publish such news as is given by the local paper, as it is not of interest to the general reader.

THE NEWS .- Our towns-people have all been on the qui vive during Saturday and Sunday, and up to the present writing, in fact, to discover what the excitement of the present week should be, and sure enough, here it comes rushing rapidly upon us like an avalanche, or a thunder bolt from a clear sky. No horrible murder, dear reader; no elopement; no scandal in high life, nor even among preachers; not even a "gentle squeezing of the hand" of a gushing damsel of forty-five; nothing of the sort, but a more melancholy, sadder scene. Alas! that it must be recorded, and yet, as faithful journalists, it becomes our duty to publish facts. Long may it be ere a similar scene occurs upon the usually quiet streets of our village. We allude to the altercation that ensued in front of the business house of Binns & Rose, on Monday morning, house. The brick are about all laid, when one of our leading men, promitown, (so the ladies say,) with eyes rolling in frenzy, hatless, and with disheveled locks floating in the morning gale, approaches one of our oldest and most respected citizens, John Buckles, (who is a little deaf,) and fiercely shaking a paper in his face, and with loud voice and wild gesticulation, remarked, in words to this effect, "We will let money, on approved security, from 30 to 60 days, at 10

> New Troy School. The Fall term of the Weesaw Town ship High School, located at the village of New Troy, will commence on Monday, Sept. 11th, 1871, and will continue three months. We desire to call the attention of the public to the above mentioned institution. Our building, completed at an expense of about six thousand dollars, is new, handsome and commodious. It is furnished with all the modern appliances, such as seats, desks, &c., of a first class school, and as we design that its past reputation be sustained in the future, we have secured the services of competent teachers, and can offer fine facilities, either to those students who desire a thorough English education, or to those who wish a more extended culture in French, German, Latin, Greck, Higher Mathematics and the Sciences. Special attention will be given to the preparation of students for college, and of teachers. Our terms of tuition are moderate, and arrangements are being made by which those who prefer it can board themselves, while others can obtain boarding in the village at moderate prices. For further information apply to M. H. Nye or E. P. Morley, of New Troy, or to James DuShane, Principal.

Answer to Query. BERRIEN SPRINGS, July 31, '71.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In answer to W. G. B.'s query—"Why does the sun shine upon the north side of a house in this latitude, when he is only 231 degrees north of the Equator?"it may be stated, that the reason is simply because the sun is then about forty millions of miles north of the Equatorial plane, whereas the house is only about twenty-six hundred miles north of that plane-it being borne in mind, that degrees and minutes, or rather the sines of angles indicated by degrees and minutes, represent the relative distances of objects from a equal. Such being the case, and the house being caused by the earth's rotation to present its different sides to the sun, there is nothing more mysterious or inexplicable in the fact that the sun shines upon the north side of a house, than that he shines upon the south side. Indeed, it can be proved, that when a surface absolutely faces the south—that is, when it is perpendicular to a line in the direction of the south celestial pole—the sun cannot shine upon it at any time while 22d of March and the 20th of September. To practically test this,

By many it has been neglected until the hair has become thin, gray, or entirely fallen off. Messrs. Hall & Co., Nashua, N. This wonderful preparation acts upon the glands, which support and nourish the hair, restores gray hair to its original color, makes the scalp white and clean, removes and prevents the formation of dandruff and all cutaneous eruptions; and, by its tonic and nutritive properties, restores the scalp to a healthy state, and creates a new growth. EDITOR'S RECORD :- On Saturday last an individual claiming to be a disciple of Esculapius, made his appearance in our city. It was soon discovered, however, that as a "doctor" of poor whisky he was infallible, his assertions that he was the "smartest man ever lived except Lincoln, to the contrary. Quite early in the evening he put in an appearance at the Bond House, and asked to be shown a room, and from the manner he counted the steps leading to the room assigned him, he was gloriously "full," which was fully verified next ance he had not only used it for a spittoon, but also as a receptacle for a large quantity of the "oil of joy" he had imbibed during the day previous. When he settled his bill, the landlord charged him one dollar exthe condition he had left the bed in. His anger suddenly rose to fever heat for thus being so "outrageously swindled" as he termed it, and the adjectives he heaped upon the devoted head of mine host, fully demonstrated he and in a measure assuage his outraged feelings. upon removing the dusters from the biliard tables, a rent over a foot in length was discovered in the cloth on one of the newest tables. The landlord, Mr. McKay, immediately started in pursuit, accompanied by an officer. This morning Marshal Chambers received a telegram stating the rascal had been captured at Galesburg. The "Doctor" is about five feet nine inches, gray hair and side whiskers, with keen, piercing black eyes. He looked as if he might be fifty years of age, although he acknowledges to be only forty-three. He had some three or four hundred dollars in his possession, which he took particular pains to exhibit to the gaping crowd around him. He gave his name as L. B. Coe. If the charges can be proven against this first-class rascal and villain for perpetrating so contempible and dastardly a trick, it is to be hoped that he will receive the full benefit of the law.

Dan Marble, strolling along the wharves at Boston met a tall, gaunt looking figure, a "Digger" from California; and got into conversation with him. "Healthy climate, I suppose?" Healthy! it ain't anything else. Why, stranger, you can choose there any climate you like—hot or coldand that without traveling more than fifteen minutes. Just think of that the next morning when you get out o' bed. There's a mountain there, a Sawyer Nevady they call it, with a valley on each side of it—the one hot, the other cold. Well, get on the top of that mountain with a double barreled gun, and you can without movin ed gun, and you can without movin' kill either winter or summer game, jest as you will." What, have you ever tried it?" "Tried it! Often, and should have done pretty well but for one thing." "Well, what was that?" "I wanted a dog that would stand both climates. The last dog I had froze off his tail while pintin' on the summer side. He didn't get entirely out of the winter side, you see. Trew as you live!" Marble sloped.

Here is a curious example of 'taking time by the forelock." My grandmother once awoke my grandfather in the middle of the night, and told him she much feared their son Willie had been deranged, as she had been listening to him for some time speaking loudly and rapidly to himself. Her husband listened, came to the same conclusion, and they forthwith hurried into their boy's bedroom to know what was the matter. Willie's explanation was, that as they were going to the seaside next day, he wished to save time, and was saying his prayers over and over to last him during the holidays.

A gentleman was seated with other persons in a room where a country girl sat bolt upright and utterly silent. Silence, indeed, fell upon the entire party, and the gentleman first alluded to said, in what he supposed to be an almost inaudible tone of

"Well, Mister," exclaimed the indignant country lass, jumping up, you'd have awful paws, too, if you had to do the scrubbing that I do."

An exchange says that the napit of chewing gum grows on a son who indulges in it as much as does that of drinking liquor, and the sudden breaking from it is as injurious. A young girl who has chewed regullarly for years, swore off last week, and since that time she has had regular jim jams, and has to be set up with every night. A young man sits up with her, however, and she don't mind it much. Girls that want to be set up with had better quit chewing.

An exchange says a Detroit man went out shooting pigeons, and took a flask of brandy with him. On returning home he struck a racingtrack in the suburbs of the city, and walked around it all night, wondering why he didn't get to Detroit. At daylight the matter was made plain to him and he has sworn off. That night on a inile track was the best temperance. lecture he ever heard.

One exceedingly warm day in June a neighbor met an old man, and remarked that it was very hot. "Yes," said Joe; "if it wasn't for one thing; I should say we were going to have a thaw." "What is that?" inquired the friend. "There's nothing froze,"

My dear boy," said a lady to precocious youth of sixteen, "does your father design you to trend the intricate and thorny paths of a pro-fession, the straight and narrow paths of the ministry, or revel in the flow-ery fields of literature?" "No, marm, dad says he's going to set me to work in the tater field."

An Indiana girl who had been loving a fellow not wisely but too well, and fearing her mother would find out what was the matter, rode twenty iniles, with a revolver in her hand, to where the fellow was chonping in the woods and told him that if he didn't marry her she would make a tunnel through him. The wedding came off that afternoon. He said that he would never quarrel with a woman about a little thing like

Mrs. Bella French's lecture on "Corsets, Tobacco, and Whisky," has worked a remarkable reform up in Minnesota. One of the papers says: "Every man in our 'village has left off wearing corsets, and most of the women have quit chewing tobacco and drinking whisky."

You say, Mrs. Jones, that the prisoner stabbed the deceased. Was it in the thorax or in the abdomen?" No. sir; it was in the street. I seed it with my own blessed eyes." "That II do: Call the next witness."

A gentleman expressed to a lady his admiration of her toilet. She said she supposed he had been impressed by her angels sleeves. He answered with effusion, "No, but he'd like to be." A drunken man can rarely walk in a straight line. He's more used to ryc-tangle. Johnny was telling his ma how he was going to dress and show off when he got to be a man. His ma asked: "Johnny, what do you expect to do for a living when you get to be a man?". "Well, I reckon I'll get married and board with my wife's pa."

A LITTLE THING. It was such a little thing, One slight twist of crimson string; But twas stealing, all the same; And the child who took it knew That she told what was not true, Just to screen herself from blame First a theft, and then a lie, Both recorded up on high.

Sunday Reading.

It was but one little word,
Softly spoken, scarcely heard,
Uttered by a single breath;
But it dared to take in vain
God's most high and holy name,
So provoking wrath and death.
Soon the lips, once fresh and fair,
Opened but to curse and swear.

It was but one little blow,
Passion's sudden overflow.
Scarcely heeded in its fall;
But, once loosed, the fiery soul
Would no longer brook control;
Laws it spurned, defied them all,
Till the hands love clasped in vain,
Wore the marderer's crimson stain.

Ah! it is the foxes small, Shyly climbing o'er the wall, That destroy the tender vines;
And it is the spark of fire,
Brightening, growing, curling higher,
That across the forest shines. Just so, step by step, does sin, If unchecked, a triumph win.

Doubt Whom? A young Christian was asked a few nights since, by one whose long experience should have made her a teacher rather than a learner, "Do you not sometimes doubt?" "Doubt?" was the ready exclamation of faith; "Doubt whom?" Let us have a lifelong doubt, and even despair of our-selves, but none of our Savior and

His mercy. Do not many Christians doubt their own salvation, and think they are doubting themselves, not Christ? They would be shocked if they thought they were doubting Christ, yet is not this just what they are doing? Is not the whole work of salvation Christ's own work, not ours? And, if we doubt whether He will save us, and save us now, and save us wholly, is it not doubting Him, not ourselves? If Christ has really borne our sins, and we doubt whether we are free from their condemning power, who is it that we doubt, Christ or ourselves? If it is Christ's own ascension gift to bestow upon us the Holy Spirit, to make clean-sing application of His blood to our souls, and we doubt whether He will do it, and do it now, who is it we doubt, Christ or ourselves? If the power to keep is Christ's own, by the same blessed Spirit, and we doubt whether we shall be kept—whether He will take us as we are and keep us henceforth-are we not doubting Him as well as ourselves? Is there no room for doubt of our salvation at all, without doubting Christ? - Christian at Work.

We Must Work.

Every man builds his own house; builds it many-chambered, fresh-ventilated, picture-hung, vine-wreathed, guest-full; or low-pent' bare-wall, flowerless, inhospitable—just in accordance with his inner nature. Precisely as the internal force of affinity in the Mollusk lays hold of and aggregates round itself the fine lime par-ticles in the sea water, so does the internal force in the human soul lay hold of and aggregate around itself what it wants. The surrounding ocean holds in solution knowledge, pleasure, meat, drink, wit, wisdom, friends, flowers, God; and out of this wealth we secrete our shells—clam-shells or nautilus-shells, as we are clams or nautili. We find what we crave—fun, if we have a zest for the funny; friends, if we long for friends; beauty, if we love beauty; thought, if we tend to thought. Slowly we build up our house, small or large; if we are refined it is refined; if we are roomy,

Character. Be scrupulously honest and transparently candid. To drive a doubtful bargain is to cheat yourself, no matter whether you make or lose financially. The proper leading aim of a business life is to build up manly character, and commercial practices inconsistent with that aim result in infinite loss, although the ledger may show a thriving business. Never misrepresent facts, nor permit subordinates to do so for you. A clerk who lies in his employer's interest will ulitmately steal in his own interest. Be energetic and industrious. Both these traits can be cultivated where they do not already exist: hence their absence is inexcusable. Without them no one deserves success, with them few fail.

No man is a man until he is tried; till he has passed through deep water and scorching fires. A man surrounded with comforts, friends and relations, food and raiment; whose barns are filled with plenty, and whose presses gush out with new wines; who eats his fill; sits and reads, doles about, taking his ease and pleasure; smoking his pipe and chewing his cud; is he a man? Far from it. A man is not a man until he is proved—has passed the ordeal—drank the bitter cup; risen above life's conflicts; mounted the billows of the wave:

Thistles in the Heart.

Bad habits are the thistles of the heart, and every indulgence of them is a new crop of weeds. A few years ago a little boy told his first falsehood. It was a little solitary thistle-seed, and no eye but God's saw him as he planted it in the mellow soil of his heart. But it sprang up—oh, how quickly—and in a little time another and another, each in its turn bearing more seed and more thistles. And now his heart is overgrown with this

God did not take up the three Hebrews out of the furnace, but He came down and walked with them in it. He did not remove Daniel from the den of lions; He sent his angels to close the mouths of the beasts. He did not in answer to the prayer of Paul, remove the thorn in the flesh, but He gave him a sufficiency of grace to sustain him.
